The intelligence now received confirms the statement already conveyed by telegram, that the late Shiogoon, though not restored to his former office (which indeed appears to be altogether abolished) has been recalled from banishment, his confiscated estates in great measure restored, and he himself offered a seat in the Cabinet. The Japan Times thus announces the sudden change in the position of parties that has led to this event:—"The political news we have to send hence is of considerable importance, for we seem to be approaching the beginning of the end. In our last summary we reported a rather quieter state of things in Yedo and its neighbourhood, and in a leader upon the situation we pointed out the extreme probability of a speedy adjustment of existing difficulties by a compromise; 'an amnesty' (to quote the exact terms), 'an amnesty to all now in arms against the Mikado's Government—the restoration to the Tokugawa family of the bulk of its estates in the K'wanto (the eight provinces round Yedo) and the offer of a seat in the Cabinet to Yoshihisa, the late Shiogoon.'"

This is the accommodation which, since the first success of the Southerners' plot, we have been recommending, and urging our representatives to recommend, to the victorious party, and we are happy to be able to announce now its approaching realisation. The only part of the programme we sketched out which seems to present any difficulty is the grant of an amnesty to Aidzu, who is so deeply committed as to have made his pardon legally impossible. We have little doubt, however, that this too will be adjusted, but for the moment it delays the completion of the arrangements notified. Meanwhile both sides are securing peace by the best possible means—completely preparing themselves for war, and the trade in arms has been exceedingly brisk during the fortnight.

The Japan Herald says:—"Amongst other things offered to the North to promote the re-establishment of peace between the contending parties, we may announce the recall of the ex-Tycoon to Yedo, and the revocation of the edict of confiscation which deprived the Tokugawa chief and clan of their hereditary territories and revenues; the restoration is to comprise three-fourths of their former possessions, one-fourth remaining for the present in the custody of the Mikado. We thus see a fulfilment of our predictions concerning the late Tycoon, who, too clever a statesman and prudent a politician to be destroyed by the faction arrayed against him, will doubtless ere long have a prominent position assigned him in the council of Daimios, and may yet, as President of that assembly, hold some considerable voice and rule in the direction of the Government of the Empire.

The following is a translation of the document which announces the fact to the officers of the Mikado:—"Instructions have been issued by the Dai-sosai (Prime Minister) that, in view of Tokugawa Yoshihisa having retired to Mito and repented of his late offence with unbounded reverence proceeding from the bottom of his heart, it is the Imperial will, in the exercise of extraordinary clemency, that he be recalled to the castle of Yedo, and that hereafter he be summoned to Kioto. It is therefore the order of his Imperial Highness the Commander-in-Chief that the Imperial forces which have advanced in every direction do quickly return to head-quarters."

Like most other parts of the world, Japan seems to be suffering this year from an abnormal state of the elements. "We have had a most unusually wet June. It would appear almost as if the S. W. Monsoon were in great force this year and were reaching higher than its usual latitude, for we have something very like Hong Kong weather at this season for the last month in Yokohama. Naturally this damp atmosphere, combined with the filthy condition of our undrained streets, has been the cause of some sickness; rheumatism and relaxed sore throat being the prevalent complaints. Nothing but our proximity to the sea saves us from fevers of the typhoid type."

Some foolish letters having been written last year to his Australian friends by a visitor from the colonies, in which Japan was represented as the new land of promise, a number of unfortunate people have lately arrived at Yokohama in the Albion steamer, to be followed by others in the Hero, daily expected. Of course they are all disappointed in their expectations, and to avert the threatened influx of similar adventurers both the local papers devote some space to explanations of the true state of affairs at the Japanese ports. The Times has a long article entitled "Advice to persons about to immigrate," which clearly shows how unsuitable the country is to such a class of persons as are likely to come from Australia.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

A correspondent at this port writes:—"The Peking Government have at last taken a step which I fancy cannot fail to bring the rebellion speedily to an end. It has been very evident to them for some time back that the southern soldiery, under the southern generals, Le-hung-chang and Tso-tsung-tang, were not capable of crushing the rebellion, and that it would be necessary to take other measures to do so; they therefore came to the determination, taking into full consideration the nature of the rebel forces (all mounted men), to employ mounted men against them—namely, Mongol cavalry. On the morning of the 17th June we consequently learnt that the Emperor had commanded Le-hung-chang and Tso-tsung-tang to repair to their original posts—the first to Hookwang, where he is Governor-General, and the second to Shanse and Kansuh, where he is Governor-General; that his Majesty had appointed Too-hing-ah, lately General-in-Chief at Moukden, to the post of Commander-in-Chief (Kinchai-tachen) over the northern armies; and Chung-how, Vice-President of the Board of War, and Superintendent of the northern ports, to be second in control over the northern armies. Both these officers are Manchows. Rumour speaks very highly of the first officer as being an energetic and able man. Of the energy and ability of Chung-how we can speak from actual observation during the trying times he has passed through since the opening of the river this year, in making arrangements for defending this city against the rebels; he being the chief officer here. He was to be seen every day and night at his post, and whenever danger required his presence. If the Emperor was as well served by his other high officers the rebels would long ago have been destroyed and subdued. His brother is Governor-General of Szechuen, I think; and he and Chung-how stand in great favour at Court. Taking into mind his late excellent management in defending Tientsin, it is not to be wondered at that he should have received the present appointment. On the 18th of June, the news reached us that Too-hin-ah, with a considerable body of Mongol cavalry, had arrived at Tsungchow, and that several other bodies were en route to join him at the seat of war. The Emperor by the Peking Gazette summoned Too-hing-ah to Peking on the — May (17th day 4th moon); and as he arrived there shortly afterwards, we imagine that since then the Peking Government have been taking measures to rid this province of the southern soldiery, and devising means by northern men and Mongol cavalry to keep them under control. We are waiting anxiously to see the results of this new policy in Chihle, but I have no doubt of its succeeding satisfactorily for the Government. It is only to be regretted that the Peking Government had not adopted this policy immediately after the failure of Le-hung-chang in Shantung, when he had the rebels cooped up on the east part of that province, and allowed them to break through his lines and move into Honan."

CHEFOO.

A report reached this place on the 29th June to the effect that some gold mines about sixty miles off had been opened, and that some 10,000 Chinamen were at work, defying the authorities and declaring their intention of turning rebels if interfered with.

Glowing accounts (says the North China Herald) continue to reach us of the metallic wealth of Shantung. Instead of dispelling the rich vision disclosed last year in Mr. Williamson's sketch of the province, further inquiry tends more and more to show his accuracy, and to justify hopes once ridiculed as chimerical of an active future for Chefoo. There have been two obstacles hitherto to a realisation of these dreams. Confirmation was wanted of the actual existence of the metallic wealth described, and official consent to its development. Both difficulties are now nearly overcome. The existence of gold, lead, silver and coal in large quantity has been amply confirmed; and there is every reason to believe that Government will consent to the working of the mines, wherever the Fengshuy can be conquered. A correspondent, describing a recent trip to the gold district, says, "the whole country for miles round is auriferous, and deeper digging only is needed to ensure a handsome return." There are traditions of donkey-loads being found in single masses, which will be probably classed with celebrated accounts of Eldorado; but some Cantonese and the foreigners who are now working on the spot will probably soon give a reliable estimate. We have in our possession a specimen of the dust, casually washed, which is unmistakably pure. The particles are small, but more careful research and deeper digging will no doubt disclose large ones. One great advantage is the proximity of the metallic districts to Chefoo. It is an easy twelve miles from that port to the gold-fields, and five miles only further is a mine of argentiferous lead, from which larger quantities of ore have lately been extracted. The Cantonese who is working it finds great difficulty in getting labour, the mandarins having already swooped on and carried off one whole gang of coolies. Our informant saw certain indications of other mines in the vicinity, so the existence of gold within twelve, and lead and silver within seventeen miles of Yen-tai may be taken as an established fact. It is to be sincerely hoped that the Chinese will carry out Tsen-kwo-fan's suggestion, that mining by foreigners be permitted, in an unrestricted sense. If they are wise they will do so quickly, and thus secure a guarantee, by foreign Ministers, of responsibility for the doings of their nationals. But in any case, we venture to prophecy that the mines will be in full working before this time next year—if without the sanction of Government the latter will probably get a rude lesson on the wisdom of timely concession. It needs only that California should be well assured of the existence of gold in respectable quantities, near Chefoo, for hundreds, ay, thousands of miners to come across and dig for it. Let an "excitement" be at once got up, let a few hundreds of the hardy, reckless men who have there made mining a profession determine to change the scene of their labour, and China—Shantung at least—will be opened up with a vigour that will considerably astonish mandarin diplomacy.

SHANGHAI.

Dates from this port are to July 4. The French mail of April 18 arrived out on June 30, with London telegrams to June 5, but via Kiachta advices had been received to June 6. From the North China Herald and other local papers we gather the following items of news :—

Sir Rutherford Alcock has replied to the letter of the Chamber of Commerce, recently published in these columns, upon the question of seizures of cargo having been made by the Chinese when there is only suspicion of wrong declaration. His Excellency's despatch points out that the previous despatch which he wrote relative to confiscations, and which crossed that from the Chamber under reply, answered the points, inasmuch as the rules do not permit of the Chinese effecting seizures upon bare suspicion, without immediate reference to the Consular authorities; but one of the local papers state that it would be glad to see some modification or correction in the Customs notification, embodying this principle.

The most interesting item of local news consists in the revival of the question of an extension of the Bund in the Anglo-American settlement, which has been brought before the notice of the public by a communication on the subject from Mr. Consul Winchester to the Municipal Council. The matter was, as the older residents in China are aware, fully debated in the year 1865, but the scheme was given up as unnecessarily expensive and not absolutely requisite. When formerly advocated by Mr. Clark, then engineer to the Council, the grounds taken up were scientific, an idea having become prevalent that the various obstructions in the river would, in consequence of the soft nature of its bed, cause it gradually to fill up and to become unnavigable. Whether this view was correct or not it is of course impossible to say; but at all events it did not very seriously affect the public mind, and in view of the fact that the conservancy of the river rests with the Chinese Government, and that consequently a portion, if not the whole, of the expenses were considered as justly falling upon them, the idea was gradually given up. The reasons now assigned for reviving the scheme are entirely of a commercial nature, and as such seem more likely than those formerly advanced to meet with public approval. The French settlement, by the erection of wharves, has gained a very great advantage; and it is suggested to combine with the extension of the bund the erection of wharves and jetties in a way which it is probable will prove equal to the necessities of trade, and will render the Anglo-American settlement comparatively independent in this respect. As a kind of prelude to the new state of affairs, Messrs. Russell and Co. have obtained the sanction of the Council to erect a pontoon jetty opposite their house on the Bund; and they have agreed to leave it open to the use of the public except on special occasions, when they desire it clear to admit of the landing of passengers from the tugboat Tautlee, which is to be employed to take passengers to and from the Ningpo steamers.

We are glad to say that two of the threatened libel cases are got rid of. That brought by Mr. Stevens against the Recorder was dismissed at the preliminary hearing; and Mr. Tarrant's application to appeal against the magistrate's dismissal of his case against the Daily News has been rejected. In England there is no appeal from the decision of a magistrate on an application for committal, and it would be strange if a different rule prevailed here. It is, however, in the discretion and power of the law secretary, acting as magistrate in this court, to certify that there is a fit case for re-hearing, and to state a special case upon the facts, whenever he sees room for doubt or is not satisfied with his own opinion. But it is seldom, of course, that this occasion would arise.

The following is, we believe, an accurate sketch of changes to be soon introduced in the Harbour-Master's branch of the Custom's service. There is to be a marine department at Peking, which is to supervise all matters connected with lighthouses, port regulations, &c. This is to be presided over by an officer who is expected to arrive shortly from England. Three divisional inspectors are to be appointed under him. M. Viguier will have charge of the northern division, which will include Chefoo (his head-quarters), Tientsin, and Newchwang; Mr. Hockly will have charge of the central division, which will include Shanghai (his head-quarters), Ningpo, and the Yang-tsze; Mr. Bisbee will have charge of the southern division, which will include Foochow (his head-quarters), Amoy, and Swatow. Each port is, we believe, to have also a harbour-master. We hope that, under the new system, steps will be taken to remedy the existing want, in every direction, of lighthouses and buoys.

An American subject has been fined 50 dols. for locking up, in his godown, a coolie who was caught thieving in his premises. The act was, of course, illegal. He ought, as the stereotyped phrase goes, to have taken the culprit before the proper tribunal. But the punishments inflicted by the Mixed Court are so absurdly inadequate that it is simply waste of time to go before it.

The annual persecution in the matter of the Poll-tax is going on. A number of gentlemen were summoned before the Chief Judge on Monday last, for having neglected to register themselves, and underwent the ceremony of being ordered to pay. Two did go so far as to delare, in court, their intention of submitting to distraint rather than pay; but even they yielded to subsequent persuasion, and their fines were remitted. Stray protests and desultory opposition of this kind must fail in any useful effect. The best plan will be either to hold a public meeting and draw up a memorial embodying a resolution of remonstrance, or to form a fund for the purpose of appealing the matter to the Privy Council, and sifting the legality of the tax. The following rather remarkable anomaly has cropped up in connection with the late trials. Out of a number of people summoned, some elected to pay the tax and the cost of the summons, rather than appear uselessly in court. Others held out to the last, and were let off in court, on payment of the tax only—the judge no doubt wisely desiring to avoid increasing the burden of an obnoxious tax. The result, however, is that men who resist to the last get off scot free, while others who pay directly they are pressed are find 1.50 dols.

At a land sale held at Messrs. Cowie and Co.'s, a plot of land situated on the Soochow Creek, and measuring about 4 mow 8 fun, was knocked down at 3,000 taels. This property a few years since was purchased for 18,000 taels, and has remained unoccupied ever since.

We are requested to state that the monument to the late Bishop Boone has arrived, and has been erected in the old cemetery. It is said to be a very handsome and costly one.

The British ship Maitland struck on the Ariadne Rock on her way out, and damaged her bottom so much that she had to put back and be beached at Woosung, with five feet of water in the hold. She has since been brought up to Shanghai to be docked. Her cargo is only slightly damaged.

The wreck of the Benares has been sold at auction for 550 taels, and the cargo for 50 taels. The chances of raising the hull are, we presume, null, otherwise the P. and O., with their large appliances of material and money, would not have abandoned her. It will be next to impossible to break her up, as she is iron, and two of her masts are iron. There is the chance of getting at the machinery and cargo, but the first purchaser does not appear to have estimated this chance highly, as he resold her for 100 taels. She was subsequently again put up for auction, and sold for 220 taels. The new owner is, we believe, sanguine of raising her by means of lighters. The last of the silk saved from her has been sold by auction, at prices ranging from 80 to 255 taels—a very good sale considering that it was badly damaged.

In political news we have nothing new to notice; nor is there any intelligence of importance from the outports. Admiral Keppel has gone up to the Amoor in the Rodney, and it is stated purposes to remain there during the hot weather. The Salamis is to join him.

It is stated that a complimentary dinner is to be given to Mr. Winchester before his departure for Europe, and a Committee has been formed to arrange it. Mr. Winchester returns by the American Mail route.

At Hankow the foundation stone of the Church of St. John the Evangelist was laid on the 24th June by Mr. Medhurst, H.B.M. Consul. A large number of the residents were present, and Mr. Medhurst delivered an impressive address.

We hear that Mr. Gibbs, of the Imperial Customs, has been ordered to Peking to assist Mr. Hart. There are now about six or seven assistants at the capital. It is interesting to inquire what great work connected with Customs' business is being matured there.

We (Supreme Court Gazette) understand that Mr. George H. Fitz-Roy, commissioner of Customs at this port, who some time ago left this place for Japan, is compelled, in consequence of failing health, to return to Europe, and has resigned his appointment in the Custom's service. Another link with the past is thus severed, and few, looking back at the commercial history of this place, will regard the cessation of Mr. Fitz-Roy's connection with it without some feelings of regret. The earliest associations of many in Shanghai are connected with the career of this gentleman. He occupied the post of commissioner at this port during the most difficult times through which the Custom's service has had to pass, and many will recall to their minds the days when, shortly after the ratification of the Tientsin treaty, the novelty of his functions, and the difficulty in procuring efficient assistance, made the operation of clearing goods at the Customs one of no slight trouble on both sides, requiring mutual forbearance, courtesy, and good will. In these qualifications Mr. Fitz-Roy eminently excelled, and, notwithstanding the many changes that have taken place, a large number of the residents in Shanghai recollect with pleasure the kindly and considerate manner in which that gentleman acted, and regard him somehow as par excellence the Commissioner of Customs at this port.—[We regret to add that our obituary to-day contains the announcement of Mr. Fitz-Roy's death at Nagasaki, where he had gone for the benefit of his health.—Ed. L. and C. Telegraph.]

The registration nuisance has again come before the Court, with the following results:—Mr. Michie, formerly a partner in the firm of Lindsay and Co., now of Chapman, King and Co., and one of our Municipal Councillors for the current year, objected on principal to pay the five dollars fee, and would rather have his goods dis-trained than submit to the mulct. This Judge Horaby told him would be the case, and fined him ten dollars—costs 1½—Mr. Robison, silk inspector, similarly obstinate was similarly dealt with. Mr. Gwyn, secretay to the China Fire Insurance Society, had offered to register as an artisan and pay one dollar only, the objector affirming that though secretary to a fire insurance company he was truly an artisan—for was he not foreman of a fire-engine? Messrs. Cromartie and Fisher, assistants in the house of Jardine, Matheson and Co., were each willing to register as artisans on the one dollar fee scale. Mr. Broom, broker, and Mr. Bennett, clerk in the China Fire Insurance Company, each made like allegation, viz., they were willing to pay one dollar and be called artisans, but would not pay five dollars for a paper giving them no designation at all. Whether costing one or five dollars, the sheets were of equal inutility either in the settlement or out of it. Without assigning any particular reason for his decrees, the judge fixed all the fees at five dollars each, Messrs. Michie and Robison being the only two who said they would stand out for further operation of the law.

The Friend of China of June 30 contains the following editorial announcement:—"OURSELVES.—With to-day's number of the Friend of China we complete our eighteenth year as proprietor and editor of the journal—the only newspaper we ever had connection with, and most likely the last. Our object in purchasing the property in 1850 was to gratify a desire to keep before the public the malpractices of certain officials in Hong Kong, and, and at times, following out this object, we have obtained for Hong Kong an amount of attention at the hands of those Secretaries of State who followed Earl Grey in office, which the colony otherwise never would have had. Eighteen years of incessant work have had their effect, however, and when we add to them fifteen preceding years of residence in this trying country, readers will require little to induce them to believe in the prudence of our medical adviser's suggestion, viz., that we drop the editorial pen and seek repose out of China for a while. In stating thus much we do not desire to have it inferred that with the quarter commencing to-morrow we cease from work on the Friend altogether, but we desire it to be understood that before the year is over we hope to be able to effect a sale of 'the Institution' and a transfer of the editorial mantle to other shoulders. If possible, we shall remain in the North of China and work on the paper until we see the completion of the furthest period for which subscription has been taken—say to the end of the year."

HONG KONG.

From this port we have advices to July 10. On the 29th of June the outward mail of May 22 arrived, with London telegrams to June 9; subsequently, however, later telegrams, to June 13, were received via Calcutta. There is absolutely no local news of importance, the papers being entirely filled with police reports and extracts from the northern and Japan papers. We extract the following items from the Overland Trade Report:—

The Hong Kong community has to deplore the death of Mrs. Brunker, the wife of Ma'or-General Brunker, in command of Her Majesty's forces in China and Japan. This distressing event, which has been the source of widely-spread and very acute regret, took place on the 1st of July at Head-Quarters House.

Mr. A. P. Sinnett has resigned the secretaryship of the Hong Kong Association, as he is leaving the colony for Europe almost immediately.

Some movement is going forward amongst the European officers of the Chinese Customs department. Mr. Fitzroy, the Commissioner of Customs at Shanghai, has resigned, and judging by a very passionate outburst of indignation directed in the Shanghai Recorder against Mr. Hart, by a writer who speaks in the highest possible terms of Mr. Fitzroy, one is led to conjecture that the departing Commissioner does not give up his service on the best possible terms with his chief. The veil of secrecy and mystery which hangs over the proceedings both of the foreign and the Chinese dignitaries at Peking, prevents impartial observers, uninfluenced by personal bias, from having an opinion about such differences as these. Mr. Hart has a great deal of ascendency over the Chinese Government, and is exceedingly unpopular with most European merchants in the north. Mr. Fitzroy is a popular man in Shanghai, where he has succeeded in fulfilling his duty to the Chinese Government without having any difficulties with the community. If Mr. Hart should be really contemplating an arrangement which has been suggested, namely, that if Mr. Burlinghame succeeds in his mission as a pilot balloon, he (Mr. Hart) should make himself ambassador to everywhere, and get rid of Mr. Burlinghame; then it is intelligible that he should want, in the first instance, to get rid of Mr. Fitzroy—intelligible, that is to say, on the common theory about the dispositions of the two men. Mr. Hart would naturally want a very docile successor if he determined to leave Peking. He would remember that his predecessor, Mr. Lay, went home on a special mission, leaving him in charge of affairs at Peking; that before very long the Chinese Government transferred its affections altogether to him (Mr. Hart), and when Mr. Lay returned gave him the cold shoulder. All this is the vaguest conjecture, but no doubt Mr. Hart would shrink from leaving anyone behind him at Peking who might be treacherous enough to supplant him in his absence.

The China Mail has the following remarks on the insulting reply addressed by the Governor to the remonstrance of the Chamber of Commerce on the "Gambling Ordinance":—

"We can scarcely own to a feeling of surprise at the silence of the Chamber of Commerce respecting the recent document which emanated from his Excellency the Governor in regard to the gambling farm. There are times when insult is best met by silence, and it may be that the Chamber deem themselves placed in so strong a position by the mere publication of his Excellency's reply that they consider any further correspondence as unavailing as it certainly is unnecessary. They are placed in a somewhat awkward position, as, if they attempt to point out the peculiarities of that singular composition, respect, to say nothing of the law, prohibits them from 'slanging back.' To express a hope that his Excellency's public despatches and private correspondence 'are not always conducted on a system which has no better foundation than the glaring misquotations,' the undignified 'chaff,' and the total absence of reasoning power which distinguish the 'document,' might verge on the impertinent, and we should be the first to condemn language which, however justifiable, was disrespectful to the local representative of Government. In common fairness, however, to a body of gentlemen whose opinions weigh much regarding colonial matters, it behoves us to point out the cogent reasons which we venture to surmise have hitherto induced the Chamber to maintain silence under imputations which are devoid of foundation. So little do Hong Kong affairs attract the attention of the home public that there is a possibility of his Excellency's despatch being read without the proverbially large allowance of salt which his previous documents on the same subject have required and received. We, therefore, address ourselves in the very limited space at our disposal to a more particular examination of this composition than it has hitherto received at our hands, remembering that 'Art is long and time is fleeting.' We are able, however, to deal but briefly with the more prominent heads of the despatch.

"Before taking the paragraphs seriatim we would observe that no refutation whatever has been advanced by his Excellency of any assertion made by, or in, the Chamber; and the sentence which leads up to the quite uncalled for announcement that their opinions call for 'a public refutation'—(uncalled-for because unfulfilled)—implies an insult to that body which has been duly appreciated and resented. The title of the Chamber is 'respectable,' quoth his Excellency! It feels grateful for the implied deduction, which, however insulting might have been pardonable had any presumption in its favour been advanced. As it now stands, it is simply an unwise and undignified way of being clumsily sarcastic. In the matter of misquotations we have an abundant crop, but the most obvious to the least careful reader is his Excellency's statement that 'one gentleman indeed asserted that trade, to his knowledge, had fallen off 25 per cent.,' &c. But a reference to the published report of the Chamber, and upon which his Excellency's despatch is founded, shows that Mr. Hitchcock, the gentleman in question, said no such thing. He said that 'a native merchant had said that trade had in many cases fallen off by 25 per cent.'—quite a different statement. It is very bad to tell 'fibs' in despatches not meant for the public eye. But it is very foolish to tell them when all the world has an opportunity of disproving them a few hours after they appear. We must confess that we had hitherto credited his Excellency with a habit of carefulness in advancing curious statements, however derogatory to our character for penetration the confession may be. We believed him to be an able diplomatist. But our 'image lies shattered on the ground,' and we have to mourn double disaster. His Excellency does not read reports carefully, and we, as regards belief in his qualifications are nowhere."

H.M. gunboat Drake, which left here for Deep Bay a few days since, has returned. The object of the Drake's cruise was to go to one of the villages at the head of Deep Bay, and there release two Chinamen belonging to a coast village some distance off, who were being detained to effect a "squeeze pidgin." The commander of the Drake having taking a mandarin on board at Kowloon, left for the offending village, and on arrival there demanded the release of the two men. This was at first refused, and 300 dols. demanded, but in three days the men were unconditionally given up to Lieut.-commander Crowdy, and brought to Hong Kong.

The Supreme Court of Hong Kong keeps up its reputation for an entire absence of that dignity that is supposed to characterise the judicial bench. The following incident is recorded by the China Mail:—"One of those little outbursts of feeling, judicial and otherwise, which occasionally show themselves in the Supreme Court, occurred this morning during the hearing of the childstealing case. The hon. the Chief Justice, while commencing to charge the jury, said that the prisoner was charged on four counts; when the Attorney-General corrected his lordship, by saying there were six counts; after carefully looking at and turning over the information, his lordship asked when the additional counts had been added to it. The Attorney-General said that he signed it, but he did not know who wrote it and he had nothing to do with the service. His lordship then asked Mr. Huffam, in whose handwriting were the additional counts; to which the deputy Registrar at once replied that it was that of the Attorney-General. His lordship then, turning to the jury, warmly remarked that the writing was the Attorney-General's own, that the information was most slovenly written and endorsed, and that the writing on the back had misled him. The Attorney-General here asked to look at the information, and remarked, on examining it, that it was dated the 23rd and served on the 27th June for the session of the 3rd July. He was sure Mr. Huffam would say that it had been the custom so to draw up informations. His lordship, remarking that it was a very bad habit, appealed to the Deputy-Registrar whether he had ever seen an information so written and endorsed. Mr. Huffam replied that he had not. His lordship at once followed up this answer by warmly informing the jury that here was an information written in the Attorney-General's own hand, of which the Attorney-General had said he knew nothing, and which was written and endorsed in a most slovenly manner; it was in fact such a document that ought not to have been filed in this Court; similar documents at home were written and endorsed on parchment, and written with the greatest care. The Attorney-General, in a sharp tone, said, "Here let the matter rest;" when his lordship, still addressing the jury, concluded the little wordy fracas by saying that he had been interrupted by the Attorney-General, and would not have made those observations had he not been so interrupted. The Chief Justice then resumed his charge to the jury; but on the Attorney-General again rising to make a suggestion to the Court, his lordship said, "Really, Mr. Attorney, I had much better hand over the charge to you, if I am to be so interrupted." Mr. Ball then begged his lordship's pardon, and the judge proceeded with his address to the jury.

THE NIENFEI.

We have been favoured with a copy of a document containing much information of an authentic and valuable nature concerning the movements and character of the Rebels, or rather Banditti, that are devastating Shantung.

COPY OF A LETTER FROM THE REV. J. LEES, TIENTSIN, TO CONSUL MONGAN.

SIR,—At your request, I have much pleasure in placing at your disposal such information as I have lately gained respecting the movements of the rebels in Shantung, and the state of the district generally. It may conduce to a clearer comprehension of the various details if I (1) say a word or two upon the geography of the country we have traversed; then (2) give you in brief a description of the number and character of the rebel bands, as received from the people; (3) indicate the course prior to entering Shantung; (4) their route through Shantung, up to the date on which we last met with them; and, (5) lastly, relate a few incidents which fell under our own observation.

1. As to geography, going south from this city along the course of the Grand Canal, it would, until recently, have been found that from a point just beyond the city of Lin-ching, in Shantung, the canal bed was dry, at least as far south as the prefecture of Jung-chang, near to which city the Yellow River crosses it. The officials have lately filled this dry channel for stratgetic purposes, by breaking the south bank of the river at this point, thus diverting a large body of water in a north-easterly direction, and thereby separating this part of the seaboard from the interior. The enclosed district has well defined boundaries, having the Peiho on the north, the canal upon the west, the Yellow River upon the south, and the sea upon the east (the Yellow River has adopted the bed of the river variously known as the Ta-chi, Taching, or Yon-ho, and thus pursues a north-east course north of the provincial city of Chi-ugon, passing the cities of Chi-yang, Chi-tung, Pu-tai, and Li-chu, all of which are on its banks, and falls into the gulf beyond Li-chin). The northern part of this district is the least interesting; near the sea it is marshy and sparsely peopled, but the southern half is very fertile and studded with villages; it is level as a chess-board—the very place for military evolutions. The mass of the population are poor, but there are many wealthy proprietors, and a fair average of educated men. Excepting Te-chu, Lin-chang, Tung-chang, and Wu-ting, the cities are comparatively small, and more or less decayed. Many of the market towns, however, are of considerable importance.

2. In speaking of the number and character of the rebel force, it may be well to premise that of necessity the accuracy of most of the following statements is dependent entirely on native testimony; but then, in all the main points that testimony was confirmed again and again by multitudes of persons widely separated from each other, so that little doubt can exist as to its substantial truthfulness.

The insurgents who are now in Shantung appear, so far as we can learn, to be in part at least the relics of the old Taipings. One of their leaders, known by the sobriquet of Siau-yen-wang, is said to be a relative, I think a nephew, of the former leader of the Nanking rebels. Whatever may be their ultimate aims, he and his followers are now simply a most dangerous banditti. Their lack of foreign firearms, with which they know the Imperialists to be well supplied, makes them cautious of attempting anything beyond a sort of guerilla warfare. For the same reason they do not seem to be strong enough to attack or hold cities. Still they are doubtless growing both in number and daring; and unless speedily suppressed may perhaps in a few months develop the power, as they have doubtless the will, to meet whatever forces are sent against them.

As to their numbers, it is difficult to speak with any feeling of certainty; the mandarins admit them to be 8,000 to 10,000 strong, but others report them to be ten times that number, while almost in every place we passed the people spoke of them as 50,000 or 60,000 at least. That the movement is far from being a contemptible one is evident from the fact that—again to quote official statements—no less than 70,000 Imperial troops have been in pursuit of them for more than twelve months. Again, the statement of natives as to the length of time taken by them to pass a given spot, although moving in a dense mass, points to the same conclusion. Moreover, we heard at Ching-an-fu that they actively besieged that city for two days last year; and even granting that they have lost considerably since then, it is possible that their losses have been more than made up by subsequent accessions. All are said to be mounted upon the hardy ponies and mules of the country, and many are first-rate horsemen. They are mostly armed with spears and heavy swords, but some have old double-barrelled pistols and muskets, doubtless Imperial spoil. Cannon they do not wish for, as their weight would be an incumbrance. Occasionally they have taken guns from the troops, but only to destroy them.

They travel with great rapidity, swooping down upon the place they have resolved to visit like an eagle upon its quarry. When on the march the main body is reported to keep close together, but scouts selected from their swiftest and most daring horsemen scour the country in every direction, those in front being usually about a day's march in advance. The poor villagers flee upon the first appearance of these fellows, carrying off their most valuable movables, and leaving their houses to their mercy. Nothing can be more pitiable than these droves of wretched fugitives. Often, of course, they are overtaken and mercilessly plundered. The thieves, however, appear to be discriminative in their choice of plunder; horses, silver, expensive clothing, and opium are the things principally sought for; they do not care for mere necessaries. Young men are seized and imprisoned whenever possible, and girls are also carried off in numbers for the vilest purposes. Occupying night after night some thirty or forty villages, they do not need tents, and food is always to be had in abundance, while their animals are turned to graze in the ripening cornfields. We heard indeed many details which may or may not be true; such as that they have no fewer than 700 women amongst them, that two of their band are led by females, that they butcher the poor creatures whom they have violated if they do not wish to retain them, that in some places they have been known to fill wells with bodies still alive, and when the wells become choked, to pile fuel upon their mouths, and having soaked it with oil, set fire to the horrible pyre; and that their boy captives are often employed as executioners to inure them to bloodshed. One would prefer to disbelieve at once such atrocities as these, but, making full allowance for exaggeration, in many cases doubtless the result of fear, we must believe that the poor people have ample cause for terror.

Sometimes, by gifts of animals or silver, a village will purchase exemption from pillage; but if the slightest opposition is offered, and above all, if any of the mandarins are killed, a fearful retribution is exacted; a favourite plan of defence is for a number of villagers to unite in the erection of a rampart and ditch around some central spot, to which the women and children, cattle, and other valuables are removed upon the first alarm, and in the absence of cannon, many of these wutos, as they are called, are quite strong enough, if fairly guarded, to ensure security. Should the rebels effect an entrance, however, either by stratagem or force, no mercy is shown to either sex or age, and many sad tales of suffering are told of some of these fortified villages, as well as many amusing ones of the tricks resorted to to gain admittance to them.

3. With respect to the course traversed by the insurgents prior to their appearance in Shantung, I am indebted for some particulars to Mr. Wellson, one of the colporteurs in the employ of the British and Foreign Bible Society, who, accompanied by several intelligent natives, has lately spent more than three months in the province of Shansi. The information thus obtained enables us to understand and reconcile many of the rumours which have reached us from time to time during the past half-year, and also to identify the body of rebels now in Shantung with that which in March last threatened the capital. There seems to be no doubt that they are the whole or part of the force which has for years been ravaging Huan, and with whom I was unlucky enough to get into disagreeable proximity in the extreme north-west corner of that province, nearly ten years ago. They were at that time anxious to cross the Hwang-Ho; foiled in this, whether from the rapidity of the stream or otherwise, they retraced their steps towards the south, appearing, as I afterwards heard, upon the banks of the Han. The next notice I have of their route is that brought by Mr. Wellson. By some means or other they seem to have crossed the Sun-ling mountains on the south of Singwan-foo, and so found a clear course up Shansi. The tributaries of the Yellow River, which come from the west, are small, and would not check their advance. The country, too, cannot possibly have recovered yet from the utter desolation caused by the formidable Mahometan rebellion four years ago. At any rate they accomplished their object—the passage of the Hwang-Ho—not far from Chi-chiu (Ky-chow, lat. 36 deg.). This was at the close of December or the beginning of January last; they had carefully timed their approach, and yet they might probably have succeeded better had they delayed a week or two longer. It was during the first frost, and it seems that the ice broke, and many are represented to have been drowned, while numbers of those who got safely over were compelled to throw away their arms; they were thus to a large extent unarmed on entering Shansi, and this helps to explain their aggressively aimless wanderings. Evidently their first wants were horses and arms, and to gain these, and at the same time add to their numerical strength, has been their uniform effort. I append a list of the places showing their line of march after crossing the Hwang-Ho, south-east to Chiang-shin, north-east to Taiping-hiu, across the Fen River northward to the east of Ping-yan-fu, to Chau-ching (north of Hong-tung), where they were repulsed; south to Fu-san-chu-un-Nien, I-ching-Yang-ching, across the Chin River, across the Ta-hung mountains in the neighbourhood of Ho-nan-fu. At Ching-hwa-chiu, a market town hereabouts, and famed for its bamboo, they largely supplied themselves anew with weapons; passing Hwa-chiu-hiou (Hoi-kiu), Wei-kwui-fu (Wu-hui), and Chang-ti-fu, they reached Chili in the spring, going, as we knew, to within a comparatively short distance of Peking. Retreating, they appear to have done little more than retrace their steps. This was in March; arrived in Honan-fu, the Yellow River could not be recrossed, and accordingly they struck boldly across Chili for the fertile plain of Shantung. It is right to say that this last visit is an inference only, but there can be no difficulty in thus identifying their band in Shansi and Shantung, since the period of their departure from the former province coincides so nearly with that of their appearance in the latter. Their conduct, too, in Shansi seems to have been very similar to what it was in Shantung; there also clothing, horses, and silver were their constant demand, and they seemed systematically to avoid the cities. Nor does it seem as though they could be confounded with the Kansu insurgents, subsequently visiting Hing-hien, in north-west of Shansi. Mr. Wellson heard of the latter at Ching-sun in Shansi (Chin-moo), where they had recently committed great excesses, retiring laden with the spoils to the mountainous country upon the north.

4. The details of their route through Shantung were gathered by myself and companions in travel by constant and careful inquiry; though it was impossible for us actually to learn it for ourselves, we did cross it in parts, and I have considerable confidence in its general accuracy.

They entered the district described, by crossing the old dry bed of the canal between Tung-shang-fu and Liu-ching-shen. Marching north, they left Te-chen a little to the west, and passed within four miles of Ning-ching-hui on the 21st April. They then took Nan-pi, occupying it two days and one night (April 23). The main body was observed to be more than half-a-day in passing a small town eight miles further north, on the morning of the 24th, keeping a little to the east of Tsang-chew and Ching-hai-hien. They at length encamped near the town of T'sang-kwan-tun, N.E. some thirty odd miles from Tientsin, while a portion of the force advanced within sight of the walls of the city. This was on the 24th, 25th, and 26th of April. Then turning, they went S.E. to the west of Yang-ush to Yen-san, which they occupied, the mandarins having fled. Still going south, they passed between Ching-un and Lanling to the western side of Wu-ting-foo; then struck, S.W. through the district of Shang-ho to Liwi, near which city they had an engagement with the militia, 1,000 (many said 2,000) of whom were slain. Returning to the neighbourhood of Tung-chang-fu, they may perhaps have been prevented from accomplishing a retreat by the way they came by finding that the canal had been flooded during their absence. At any rate it is certain that they turned again to the north, going to Liwi-hein (according to some) a second time, thence close by the western wall of Taiping, from which they were watched to Ningching, where there was some fighting. The date of this was probably May 9th or 10th. On the 10th and 11th we ourselves met their scouts in the district of Lanting, the whole of which was in a state of intense alarm. On the 11th the rebels must have once more changed their course, travelling south or south-east, for subsequent reports were to the effect that on that day they burnt, or at any rate they attempted to burn, the gates of Lanling city, and during our direct journey south we heard continued rumours of their being upon the west of our route, besides which on our voyage down the Yellow River, after leaving Cho-ngan, we found they had just reached Chi Yang (Sunday, May 17th), and were within six miles of the city, many fires having been seen from the opposite bank the night previous. Ten days later (May 27th), when in the neighbourhood of Chanwha, the rascals were again reported within thirteen miles of us, and the people were again seen in flight.

5. It is not necessary that I should go into the details of the journey through the infested district lately undertaken by the Rev. J. Innocent and myself. I will just include our route and then close with one or two statements of facts. Starting, then, on May 7th from Tientsin we travelled on the west of the canal as far as Chinghai, then along the east bank to Tsangchin, which was reached on the evening of the 9th; then we were compelled to return to the west side by the near neighbourhood of a large camp of soldiers and the impossibility of crossing a sluice lately opened by which the canal was connected with the sea. The object of this appears to be to confine the rebels within still narrower limits. (The opening of this stream and the presence of ten thousand Imperialists upon its north bank may explain the sudden change of point upon May 11th.) We recrossed finally a little to the north of Nanpo, striking in a pretty nearly direct line S.E. for the district of Lanling (May 10th). On the 11th, in our endeavour to avoid the rebel scouts, we advanced within eight miles of Lanling city, but then turned due south past the city of Taiping (May 13th) to Lueken, on the banks of the Yellow River, and five miles from the provincial capital, where we passed the night of the 15th. Then taking boat we reached the mouth of the Hwang-ho on the evening of the 19th, and after a delay of some days succeeded in leaving on the 28th for Taku, where we arrived on the evening of the 29th.

(a.) One of the first facts which was forced upon our notice in this journey—and each day's observation only deepened our conviction of its truth—was that the Imperialist troops are even more fearful scourges than the rebels. We had hardly left the walls of Tientsin before the villagers living on the outskirts began to tell us of their excesses. It is the southern soldiery which is the worst, and especially those troops who were formerly in the Taiping service, and who are known among the people as the Manjing, or Hairy Braves. So furious are these men, and so little discipline is there among them, that in many places the people are quite unable to distinguish between them and the insurgents, and everywhere the villages are deserted at their approach.

If the rebels are like the plague of hail, these wretches may well be compared to that of locusts. They literally eat up everything. Of the state of the country through which they have passed some idea may be formed from the fact that between Tientsin and Tsang Chen, a distance of no less than eighty miles (much further indeed by the route we were compelled to take) we did not see a single fowl, and only one or two pigs—while east of the canal there did not appear to be any larger cattle left. Of course many had succeeded in conveying their draught bullocks to safe places on the west, but a large proportion had been killed, as the heaps of bones, &c., by the roadside too plainly proved.

Much of the destruction caused by the troops seems inexplicable, except as springing from a wanton love of mischief. They resent all opposition just as fiercely as the rebels, and are represented to be as much given to assaults upon women, and even to the burning of property. But as robbers they are even more dreaded. Again and again did we hear, "We would rather see the rebels than the troops; they have some conscience, the soldiers have none. They strip us of everything, even smashing up our crockery, tearing the old cotton cloths from our backs, and breaking our cooking pans before leaving." What will civilised nations say to atrocities like these, committed too by those who are professedly the defenders of the people? It seems to me that a Government which shows itself thus unable to govern its own soldiery should not only forfeit all confidence, but have its right to govern disallowed. Can nothing be done by way of protest to rouse the officials to the danger of the present state of things? Ere long the most peaceable will be goaded into resistance, and then all chance of saving the country will be gone.

(b.) Another fact which seems pretty certain, is that the troops have never yet fairly tried to put down the insurrection. We did not hear of a single battle having taken place between them. The militia in various places have fought, and the villagers have often succeeded in defending themselves, but the Imperial army seems to have contented itself with following pretty closely the rebel force (always at a safe distance), reserving their valour for contests with the people. As might be expected, conclusions are drawn from such conduct by no means flattering to the Imperial leaders. "Oh," say some, "they are rebels themselves, and will openly join the rest soon;" or, "It would not suit either officers or men to put down the thieves. They are making a good trade of it. The mandarins are pocketing the pay allowed by the Government to the men, and the soldiers are getting rich by plunder." I give you such remarks for what they are worth.

(c.) I should state that it was certainly far from our intention to venture near the rebel lines; according to our constant practice, we made repeated inquiries on the 9th and 10th as to their present position, and had we not heard that they were at a considerable distance, we should not have proceeded on our journey.

Before crossing the canal near Nan-pi we met a large body of Imperialists, who assured us that the road to Lanling was quite open, the rebels being far away to the south, and when only 30 li from where we actually fell in with them; as to the market town of Keu-chang tsai tse we found no signs whatever of alarm; and, according to the most reliable information we could gain, they were in the prefecture of Tung-chang, eighty or ninety miles distant. This was during the afternoon of the 10th of May. That very evening we found ourselves within two miles of their scouts, and west and north of the village where we slept villages were in flames, while the roads in every direction swarmed with fugitives. Heavy rain fell, adding greatly to the sufferings of the people. Our first object the next day was of course to get away. The road along which we had come was already closed; the west and south, at first, equally so; in fact, we were apparently surrounded. Rebel scouts were seen on every side. We resolved to make for the city of Lanling. En route we were overtaken, and I was robbed of the horse I was riding. We made no resistance; it would have been folly to do so. Within eight miles of Lanling it became evident that this was the very route the insurgents were taking; and we accordingly turned south, and thus gradually got clear of them.

(d.) We had from time to time not a few opportunities of seeing traces of the events of the past few weeks. Between Tientsin and

Tsung-cheu many bodies were seen in the canal, and corpses frightfully mutilated were common enough upon the roads. Town after town passed through was all but deserted, a score or two of frightened people being all that remained of a formerly busy population. Wounded men often came to us asking medical aid. At a place called Hsiue-ugan, south of Tei-ping-hien, which lays in the route of the insurgents from Wuting-fu to Tungchang-fu, five hundred bodies had lain unburied for some days, and the people tried to dissuade us from passing through it. We found that they had been interred the day before our arrival, but the truth of the story was vouched for by the state of the air, which long before we reached the town gave unmistakable evidence of the carnage. In this neighbourhood, too, we crossed the actual line of march of the main body of insurgents, and so had some chance of personally guessing at their numbers. We found it no less that ten English miles in breadth, the marks of the horses' hoofs thickly covering the land. (Signed) James Lees.

A VISIT TO THE CHAITANG MINES.

Mr. James Henderson, of Tientsin, sends us the first instalment of a most interesting account of his last journey from Peking to the Chaitang coal mines, which was performed in May last.

The spring of this year, 1868, has been of a favourable character for the agricultural prospects of the Peking plain. The autumn sown wheat promises a good harvest, and, covering the surface far and wide with a vivid green, presents a most agreeable appearance to the traveller, who gladly leaves one of the dustiest cities of "this dusty world" to spend a few nights and days on the neighbouring hills. Peking wealth has dotted the hill slopes and dells with not a few extensive monasteries, where lazy priests dream away a monotonous existence. Here the trickling of a living stream soothes the ear of the stranger, while his eye is gladdened by a view of the plain, embracing the massive towers of Peking, the ornamental pagodas of the Imperial pleasure-grounds, and many a square mile of richly cultivated fields, assuring to the husbandman an abundant return for his toil.

It is at a distance of thirteen miles from the foreign Legations, and ten from the walls, that the plain ceases and the hills begin. On the way we met a large company of soldiers and attendants returning from the funeral of one of the Queens of the Emperor Tau-kwang. She died nineteen years after the decease of her husband, and is buried at Tientsun, a village to the west of the metropolis, nowhere near his tomb (it would be a desecration for women to be laid near an Emperor), but in a cemetery set apart for the use of the wives of "the glory of Reason." The coffin was accompanied by 250 soldiers and as many attendants (Tang-chai-ti), all the poorer ones dressed in coarse red gauze, put on for the occasion to cover their rags with something of a more pleasing colour, and impart a factitious and transient respectability to the coffin-bearers (sixty-four in number) of a Queen. Red is to Queens and princesses what green is to princes and yellow to the Emperor.

From the temples, the favourite summer abode of the foreign residents in Peking, we wended our way at the base of the hills to Woo-li-to, near a hurdle-bridge, across the Hwun-ho, or Muddy River. Here we passed the night, and procured mules for the morning to take us to and from Chaitang, about forty English miles to the north-west.

Proceeding along the road by which during all the year, except in the summer months, trains of camels are engaged in carrying coal and lime to Peking, we saw signs of the influence still excited in the people by the Bhuddist religion. A Manchu, thirty-two years of age, dressed in red, was on his way to the temple of a female deity to fulfil a vow made by him while ill. He had promised to walk to the temple and back, thirty-three miles distant, in chains. Vows of this nature are encouraged by the priests, who keep chains for the purpose, and arrange with the devotee the amount of self-imposed suffering he is to undergo. He looked weak in body, and it was as much as he could do to move forward under the weight of the chains which pressed heavily on his hands and feet.

After crossing the Muddy River, which here in a broad valley comes down from the north-west from its tortuous path among the hills, we skirted the hill range to Fang-shan, going through a very productive lime district, where an active trade is carried on in lime. This circumstance explains the name of the place, Hwei-chang, "the lime depot." Our route was south-west, which is also here the prevailing direction of the hill chain and of the band of limestone three or four miles broad, which forms its outer limit. The same formation is crossed by travellers at Nankow, on the road to Kalgan, and at Jehol, in Tartary, north-east of Peking. This north-east and south-west direction of the limestone recalls the view recently propounded by Mr. Pumpelly of the geological history of this part of China. The rivers flow from the great plateau of Mongolia south-east to the sea, and such is the direction of the valleys. The limestone and coal and sandstone strata lie north-east and south-west, and such is the direction of the mountain chains and the coast lines from the Amoor to the Yang-tsze-kiang. The cause of this was an upheaval which took place after the deposition of the coal.

Just before coming to Hwei-chang we passed some coal mines, where black clay, Tsing-hwei, is procured. This kind of clay is much used in Peking for making a waterproof cement by mixing with lime for roofing houses, pointing walls, &c. It is also used as a colouring substance to paint walls black or blue. A long account of it is given by Collas in the eleventh volume of the Memoires Concernant les Chinois.

On the city gate at Fang-shan, where we stopped on the last night of April, was a proclamation from the Governor-General of the province against combinations of ten, twenty, and thirty men for mischievous purposes. It was arranged in lines of six words each, so as easily to be committed to memory, and it threatened death to the chiefs of such bands, and lighter punishments to the subordinates. In disturbed times such are the precautions taken by the Government.

At Fang-shan there are extensive coalpits of ordinary anthracite. These we did not visit. They lay to the west, and our course was, for the time, northwards across two shoulders of the mountains into the Tsz-kia-wo valley. Five miles' travelling brought us here. A little stream called the Tsing-ho here winds its way to the south-east into the plain. Camels come down the valley with the better kinds of anthracite called Hung-mei, and proceed with it either to Lieu-li-ho, where it is consigned to boats for Pau-ting-fu, Tientsin, &c., or to the bridge at Lu-keu-chiau (fourteen miles), by which Peking is soon reached.

The situation here is very picturesque, and was early chosen by one of the eight hereditary princes who assisted the imperial family to conquer China to serve as a burying place. It is embosomed in a grove of pines, sophoras, and cypresses. The white barked species of pine is a noble tree, with wide-spreading branches and thick lofty trunk, looking as if it had been white-washed. It is not found beyond the limestone formation. Abounding in the Peking plain, where the soil is everywhere impregnated with lime, it disappears at the transition to the sandstone, and doubtless owes its colour to the presence of lime in the soil about its roots. Six generations of the family have been buried here. The dragons on the monumental stones were beautifully carved. The emperors who have successively filled the throne have written encomiums on each individual of this line of princes, and these much-coveted words are engraved on marble, are covered with yellow tiled roofs, and the approaches to them consist of marble steps and balustrades. The prospect from this cemetery embraces a lovely valley, with hills all round, and some villages inhabited by tillers of the soil and a few shepherds, who watch sheep and goats browsing on the grass-clad heights.

Going up the valley we noticed traces of inundations, and were informed that last year, in the autumn, the water rose forty feet. The houses are built on the hill sides, on spots sufficiently lofty to secure them from all ordinary floods. The difficulty of constructing roads in the hill district is much increased by these autumn floods, occasioned by the great extent of hill surface open to the rainfall, and the narrowness of the valleys.

At a point thirteen miles from Tsz-kia-wo we reached Hung-mei-chang, the "red anthracite depot." Here the mules that bring down coal from the pits resign their loads to the camels, which carry it a distance of thirty-five miles to Peking.

From this point the road winds with the stream eight miles to Tai-an-shan, a busy town on a hill side, situated on the coal strata, and constituting the centre of the red anthracite mines. This anthracite has a shining cleavage, is easily kindled, burns without flame, and leaves very little ash. It is found between the ordinary anthracite and the bituminous coal. First comes the limestone, with quarries for lime and marble on the edge of the hills, and in a south-west and north-east direction. Within this occurs the ordinary anthracite found at Fangshan and Men-teu-keu, at one hundred li and fifty li respectively south-west and west of Peking. Then comes the red anthracite—so called from the good red fire it makes—at Tai-an-shan, and near Chaitang; and after this, further to the north-west, is found the bituminous coal at Chaitang. On account of this order in the coal strata the excellent parlour coal of Chaitang—called by the Chinese smoky coal—is nearly sixty miles from the Peking market, and by the cost of carriage it becomes very expensive.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

Dates hence are to the 18th July. The outward mail of the 5th June was delivered on the 7th July; the French mail of June 18th was daily expected. London telegrams extended to the 27th June. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:

Our last summary mentioned an expedition to Acheen by the Senior Naval Officer, Captain Stevens, in the Perseus, and our Acting Colonial Secretary, Captain Playfair, in the Pelho. The object of the expedition was, not to inquire into the Mydin Box tragedy, but to obtain satisfaction for the plunder of a British schooner, the Good Fortune, a Penang trader. This object was obtained quietly and successfully, without any force having been necessary. The petty chief who committed the outrage was delivered up by the Rajah to Captain Playfair, and full value of the stolen goods in hard dollars paid up to the owner to his entire content. The expedition will doubtless have a beneficial effect on the Penang trade with Sumatra, as the turbulent Achinese chiefs will think twice hereafter before meddling with a British trader.

News has been received of the appointment of the Rev. J. A. Beckles, of Tobago, as successor to our present respected chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Waterhouse, who has elected to return to India. News is expected by next mail of who is to take the Hon. Mr. Cairn's place as acting Lieut-Governor of Malacca.

There have been numerous failures lately in the bazaar, which is altogether in a most unsatisfactory state—and this has not tended to increase the cheerfulness of our young heads of houses.

The petition to the Secretary of State for the Colonies in regard to the Supreme Court Ordinance did not go home by last mail as stated in our summary. It has been sent in to the Governor in accordance with official rule, and will go forward this mail with his Excellency's remarks thereon. We append a copy of the petition with the signatures attached. Nearly every mercantile house and all the banks are represented by the signatures, and it may be fairly said that the petition gives expression to the decided convictions of the great majority of the whole community. From the papers to hand yesterday from Penang we learn that the inhabitants there are getting up a similar petition. The sheriff there, like the same official here, refused to call a public meeting to consider the Supreme Court Ordinance, and this has excited the wrath of the Penangites to a considerable degree, not so much at the sheriff as at his Excellency Sir Harry Ord.

We append further the reply of the Governor on his receipt of the two copies of the petition, from which it will be seen that his Excellency takes exception to the statement in the petition, that our judges have hitherto enjoyed a position of dignified independence of the Governor, because under the old charter the Governor and the Resident Councillor were judges of the Court as well as the Recorder, had equal power with him, and their decisions were binding even if in opposition to that of the Recorder. Now, this has never been denied by the petitioners; on the contrary, it is because under the old charter the Governor was a judge of the Court, whilst the Governor under the new arrangement is not a judge of the Court, that such vehement objection is taken to the Governor now having any, the slightest, power to touch or affect the judges in any way whatever, far less to have the power to suspend a judge. The Governor before could not meddle with the Recorder per se as Governor, and neither could the Governor himself or the Resident Councillor be meddled with as judges.

THE PETITION.

To his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, K.G., &c.,
Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies.

May it please your Grace—We, the undersigned inhabitants of Singapore, have learnt with great concern and alarm that the power possessed by the Governor of the colony to suspend public officers extends to judges of our Supreme Court.

Ever since the establishment of that court, now sixty years ago, the Straits Settlements have enjoyed the inestimable advantage of having justice administered by judges entirely independent, not only of the local Governors but even of the Governors-General of India; and that position of dignified independence secured to the judges the entire respect and confidence of the various communities, both native and European.

We deem it essential to the pure administration of justice that this independence should be preserved intact, and that the judges should never be in a position in which they might be suspected of being under the influence of the Executive; any change in this respect we should consider deeply injurious to the best interests of the colony.

We therefore pray that your Grace will take such measures as may be fitting to restore that complete judicial independence which we enjoyed under the Government of India.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c.

Government-house, Singapore, 15th July, 1868.

Gentlemen,—I am directed by the Governor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 14th inst., calling his Excellency's attention to certain resolutions passed at a public meeting held in the town-hall on the 22nd June, copies of which are given in your letter, and enclosing a petition which has been prepared by you in accordance with these resolutions, and which you request his Excellency to transmit to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies.

2. His Excellency's instructions require him to transmit documents of this description to the Secretary of State with all reasonable despatch, accompanied by such report as their contents may appear to him to require, and his Excellency will have much pleasure in forwarding your communication and the petition to his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies by the mail of the 18th inst.

3. In the report which it is his Excellency's duty to make on these documents it will be necessary that he should call his Grace's attention to the circumstance, that they proceed upon the assumption (1st resolution) that the people of the settlements have long had the advantage of having the judges of the Supreme Court independent of the control and interference of the Executive Government, and that this judicial independence (Petition) will not be preserved if the Governor be entrusted with the power possessed by all Governors of colonies of suspending the judges of the court.

4. It is of course open to question whether the independence of the Judges is in any way affected by the existence of this regulation, but his Excellency must point out to his Grace the error which has been committed in assuming that the Judges have hitherto enjoyed a position of dignified independence of the Governor.

5. A reference to the Charter which defines the duties and position of the Judge will show that the Judges of the Court were the Governor, the Resident Councillor of the Settlement, and the Recorder and that the two former not only possessed equal authority and power with the Recorder, but that their decision in any judgment, rule, order or act of authority or power whatsoever was binding, even though in opposition to that of the Recorder.

6. The Governor thinks it due to the signers of the petition that they should be made aware of the exception he is thus compelled to take to one of its prominent statements.

7. His Excellency has not failed to observe and will bring to his Grace's notice that with the exception perhaps of the members of the legal profession the petition is signed by a large majority of the principal European inhabitants unconnected with the government, as well as by the most influential of the Arab, Chinese, and native traders, resident in the settlement.—I have the honour to be, Gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

Henry F. Plow, Private Secretary.

A. T. Carmichael, Esq., and others.

We learn that Captain Ord, Mr. Cairn's locum tenens in Malacca, is performing the duties of Lieutenant-Governor merely temporarily and by virtue of the Government notification issued in July, 1867 (No. 80), as he is the Senior Magistrate of the Settlement. The Acting appointment has not been made, and none will be made until instructions, which are expected by next mail, are received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

At a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce two members of Committee were elected in place of two members who have returned to Europe. A communication was read from the Governor in regard to the adulteration of gambier and other produce, and requesting the Chamber to furnish his Excellency with any suggestions they might have to make with a view to the proposed legislation on the subject. A rough draft of various desirable clauses was agreed upon, and the secretary was requested to forward the same to his Excellency for his consideration.

The Straits Times publishes a translation of the text of the treaty concluded last year by the French Government and the King of Siam. "It will be seen that his Majesty of Siam solemnly recognises the protectorate of the French over the Kingdom of Cambodia, and renounces for himself, his heirs, and successors his hereditary right to tribute from that kingdom. On the whole, the King of Siam may be content to have all matters of dispute definitely settled with his powerful and unscrupulous neighbour. Although Cambodia has been tributary to Siam for a long time it has been more nominally so than really, and the Siamese Suzerainty has been the source of endless contests as opportunities offered, and the tribute has had to be exacted time and again at the point of the sword. The clause in the treaty which provides for the boundary line between the two kingdoms being definitely marked out with posts by Siamese and Cambodian officers in the presence of French officials, and mapped down, will, or ought to, prevent any occasion for any future dispute, and will effectually prevent any wrongful encroachments on either side.

Dr. and Mrs. George Shearer left Liverpool on Tuesday afternoon, the 11th inst., by the steamship Nestor, for China. Dr. Shearer goes out as medical missionary in connection with the London Missionary Society; and the sphere of labour assigned to him is Hankow, a city of immense population, and an extensive field for missionary labour. Four other missionaries (Wesleyan) and their wives proceed by the same steamer to Shanghai, at which port they separate to their respective posts. Dr. Shearer's departure from Liverpool is deeply regretted by a very numerous circle, including the members of his own profession, with whom he stood in the highest respect for his character and talents. He will also be greatly missed by the sanitary reformers.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The chief feature worth mention in the market during the fortnight had been a demand to some extent for Grey Shirtings, inducing a slight improvement in price. Yarns had remained in inquiry as reported in our last, and prices had again advanced. In other Cottons we had no business to report, and in Woollens business had quite ceased for the time, quotations being consequently nominal only. We hear of considerable re-exports of Lead, but on the spot all metals were dull. The business in Arms was assuming quite a staple character, and some merchants were turning large capital in this direction. It was still, however, by many regarded as an "illegitimate" branch of trade. The quotations were:—Cotton Yarn—Nos. 16 to 24, $50.0 to 51.0 per picul; Nos. 28 to 32, $54.0 to 55.0; Nos. 38 to 42, $53.0 to 54.0.—Cotton Piece Goods—Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.30 to 2.35 per piece; 8.4 lbs., $2.90 to 3.0; 8.6 to 8.8 lbs., $2.95 to 3.05. White Shirtings: 56 to 60 reed, $3.10 to 3.20 per piece; 64 to 66, $3.50 to 3.70; 68 to 72, $3.70 to 4.10; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.90 to 2.0 per piece; 6.8 to 7.0, $2.10 to 2.30; Turkey Red Cloth, 24 yards, 32 inches, $2.80 to 3.10; Spotted Shirtings, White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Brocades, White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Velvets, Black, $9.50 to 10.0; Assorted, $8.0 to 9.0. Iron, Nail-rod, $3.0 to 3.50 per picul; Hoop, $4 25 to 4.50; Bars, $2.75 to 3.50; Pig, $1.30 to 1.50; Wire, $6.50 to 7.0; Lead, $7.0 to 7.75; Tin, $17.0 to 18.0; Tin Plates, $8.0 to 8.50; Window Glass, $2.50 to 4.0 per box.

SHANGHAI.—Soft Goods.—A fair business had been transacted in Grey Goods since the departure of the last mail, though the prices paid by buyers had been much on a par with those then quoted. Sales of Grey Shirtings during the fortnight were estimated at 60,000 to 65,000 pieces from first hands; but the quantity of damaged goods placed at auction had been much above the average. In fact unsound cargo had gone towards supplying the local demand, and had to a certain extent interfered with the sale of undamaged goods. In the value of 7 lbs. and 8 lbs. there was little change to note, but prices for 9 lbs. and 9 12-7 lbs. Cloth might be called fully 5 cents per piece higher. T-Cloths have been in good demand at about last mail's rates, the best class of goods having commanded most favour. Sales were estimated at 25,000 to 30,000 pieces, and a considerable quantity of damaged had been placed at auction—8 lbs. Cloth had been in more inquiry, and rates were a little firmer. The stock of Grey Shirtings was estimated at 650,000 pieces, inclusive of all late arrivals. This estimate can, however, be only approximate, as the true cargoes of several vessels had not yet been made up by the Customs. White Shirtings: Considerable sales had been effected at low rates—but many holders were content to wait for a bona fide Northern demand. Drills: Transactions in both English and American had taken place at irregular rates. Best English had commanded as high as Tls. 4.25 per piece, but only for small lots; while a good line of Americans had found buyers at an average price of Tls. 4.27½ per piece for best and second class. Large imports of American Cloth had arrived from Hong Kong, and more were said to be expected. Sheetings: Had declined in value—sales of American having been effected at Tls. 4.10 per piece for cash. This class of goods was for the time out of favour. Fancy Goods: Were dull of sale. A few dyed Brocades had changed hands at Tls. 2.75 per piece, and there was a small demand for best goods at slightly over this figure—but holders generally were far from anxious to realise. Velveteens: 18 in. were asked for at quotations, 26 in. were very scarce and wanted, while 26 in. in Velvets were in over-supply and difficult to move. Woollens: Figured Orleans were in most limited inquiry, and quotations were almost nominal. Spanish Stripes had been in little demand and prices showed an upward tendency. Sales of the best assortment C.P.H. Goods were quoted at 63 cents per yard; but it was difficult to find buyers for H.H. at 60 cents per yard. Camlets: Rates showed no material change, but holders seemed to rely on a marked falling off in the export from England. Long Ells: A foreign speculative inquiry had resulted in considerable sales from first hands, buyers chiefly preferring scarlet to assorted colours. In Fancy Woollen Goods the firmness of holders has precluded an extensive business. The market for Metals and Coals was extremely quiet. The current quotations were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs. per picul, Tls. 1.8.6 to 1.9.2; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2.2.4 to 2.3.0; 9 to 9.12 lbs. Tls. 3.0.0 to 3.3.2; White Shirtings, 56 reed, Tls. 1.9.5 to 2.0.0; 60 reed, Tls. 2.1.0; 64 reed, 2.2.0; 66 reed, Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3.5; 72 reed, Tls. 2.6.0; 80 to 84 reed, Tls. 3.0.0 to 3.1.0; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., Tls. 1.4.5 to 1.8.5; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.7.0 to 2.1.3; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.7.0; Camlets, English, S., 56 yds., Tls. 13.0.0 to 13.5.0 per piece; S.S., Tls. 12.2.5 to 13.2.5; S.S.S., Tls. 9.0.0 to 10.5.0; Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.5 to 0.7.0 per yard; Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloth, Tls. 0.8.0 to 1.1.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds., H.H., per piece, Tls. 6.9.0; Scarlet, C.P.H., Tls. 6.8.5; Assorted, H.H., Tls. 6.9.0 to 6.9.5; Assorted, C.P.H., Tls. 6.7.0 to 6.8.0; Lastings, 30 yds., Tls. 11.5.0 to 12.2.5; Crape Lastings, 30 yds., Tls. 8.0.0 to 8.5.0; Crape Lustres, Tls. 4.5.0 to 4.7.0.

HANKOW.—A fair amount of business had been transacted, cottons receiving most attention. Of Grey Shirtings large sales had been effected, but at the close of business prices for 8¼ lbs. goods were slightly lower; 7 lbs. cloth had been inquired for, and rates were steady. Heavy makes had continued in great request. Closing quotations were Tls. 2.2.4 to to 2.2.8 for 8¼ lbs., and Tls. 1.9.4 to 1.9.6 per piece for 7 lbs. White Shirtings had been sold more freely, at lower rates however. T-Cloths of light weights had been in most favour, and values had improved 5 candereens to 1 mace per piece. Drills had been in good demand at former rates. Camlets had been in limited inquiry. Lastings had been quite neglected, Long Ells had been in good demand, and rates well supported. Spanish Stripes and Medium Cloths showed no signs of improvement.

FOOCHOW.—The following are the transactions reported during the fortnight:—4,950 pieces, 8¼ lbs, Grey Shirtings, at $3.40 to 3.50 per piece; 500 pieces, 7 lbs., Grey Shirtings, at $2.90 per piece; 1,600 pieces, 7 lbs., T-Cloths, at $2.65 to 2.75 per piece; 1,380 piculs Lead, at $11 to 11.50 per picul.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular contains the following:—Cotton Yarn: Former rates were fairly maintained during the early part of the interval, but latterly some concessions have been made, and sales are now difficult even at the reduced figures. Cotton Goods: Quite a number of auction sales of damaged goods have taken place, and many of the small dealers have supplied themselves thereat, while the large buyers have purchased but sparingly at private. Grey and White Shirtings, T-Cloths, Turkey Reds, and 40-yard English Drills are down 5 cents per piece. 30-yard English Drills are firm at last quotations, and holders of American Drills are demanding prices slightly over those at which former sales were made. Quotations for Jeans and Shirtings are still quite nominal. A parcel of 1,200 pieces of 40-yard Dutch Drills has been placed at $4.80. Woollens.—Scarlet Long Ells and Blankets are firm, but all other descriptions are again lower, though there are few sellers at quotations. Metals.—A good business has been done in both Nail Rod and Bar Iron on easier terms. Hoop Iron, Wire and Steel are unchanged; Lead and Tin lower; Tin Plates firm; Quicksilver weak. Considerable additions have been made to the stock of Lead. Coal.—Arrivals have been 1,700 tons English, 1,000 tons Sydney to consumers, 425 tons Sydney, and 1,700 tons Anthracite for sale. There are buyers of Welsh Coal "to arrive" at our quotations, but English and Sydney are not wanted. Sydney has been offered at $10.50 per ton without finding a buyer.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been some activity in the market since the departure of last mail, and settlements were considerably more than they had been for some time previously, amounting to about 2,400 piculs, including most grades from common to fine; but consisting principally of medium and good medium sorts. The quality of the new Tea was considered to be rather poor, no musters of really fine Teas having arrived. Supplies having been equal to the demand, stocks remained unchanged. The weakness in prices advised in our last report had resulted in a decline in quotations, which will be found to be from $2 to $3 under those last quoted, viz.:—Common, $16 to 20 per picul; Good Common, $20 to 22; Medium, $22 to 24; Good Medium, $25 to 28; Fine, $30 to 31; Finest nominal, $33 to 35; Choice, $36 to 45.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Settlements in the market during the fortnight showed a considerable increase, although transhipments still formed the bulk of the business. Teamen had been anxious sellers, and all except finest teas had declined about three taels in consequence. Settlements for the fortnight, 16,000 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 44,000 chests; stock, 111 chops, or 44,000 packages. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 3d. per tael, and freight at £4. 10s. per ton, were:—Hohow, Common to Fine, 1s. 3½d. to 2s. 2d.; Oonam, 1s. 5d. to 2s. 3½d.; Ningchow, Fair to Extra Fine, 1s. 7½d. to 2s. 5½d.; Oopack, Fair to Good, 2s. 2d. to 2s. 3d. Green: During the early part of the fortnight the market was cleared of the 8 chops in stock, at 36½ to 41. Since then 10 more chops had arrived, of which 2 had been settled at 37 taels all round, showing a decline of 1 to 2 taels. Some Shanghai-packed Hoochow teas were also on offer, but none had been sold. Settlements for the fortnight, 8,174 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 617 half-chests; stock, 8 chops, or 6,000 half-chests. The quotations were:—Gunpowder, 1s. 6d. to 3s. 10d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 8d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 2s. 10d.; Twankay, 10d. to 1s. 3d.

HANKOW.—Settlements had continued on a large scale, but prices, owing to the Foochow news, had been gradually declining, and it was considered that, except for Oonfas, a fall of about Tls. 3 had been established during the fortnight. The Chinese had shipped largely to the Shanghai market, and only 9,000 chests remained in stock. The supply of first-crop tea was estimated as being about 5 per cent. in excess of last year. The direct ships, including the Agamemnon steamer, had all left the port. Quotations were: Oopacks, medium to fine, Tls. 24.5.0 to 33.5.0, equal 1s. 9d. to 2s. 3d. per lb.; Oonams, fair to fine Oonfa, Tls. 17 to 33.2.5, equal 1s. 4d. to 2s. 3d. per lb.

KIUKIANG.—Arrivals had nearly all gone forward to Shanghai and Hankow, only 4 parcels having been settled on the spot since the previous fortnight. These settlements showed no change in rates. Quotations were:—Ningchows, fair to fine, Tls. 32 to 36. Hohows, common to fine, Tls. 22 to 34.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Rusden, Phipps, and Co. report as follows:—Congou:—On the arrival of the 8th May mail, Teas ranging from dust to flavoury advanced about Tls. 1 to 1½, at which large purchases were made. The first crop has now come to an end, and the musters of second crop Teas that have come down seem fully up to the average. We hear complaints of the quality of the better country Teas which have not yet arrived. Souchongs, at the beginning of the fortnight declined Tls. 2, and during the last week a further reduction of Tls. 2 has taken place. The lower grades from Tls. 22 to 26 are now rather more in demand. Pekoe: Since our last about 900 chests have been settled at very full prices. Oolongs: Large stocks are accumulating, the little business that has been done being at former rates. Scented: The scent is but slowly improving, owing to the late heavy rains. Settlements for the fortnight have been:—Congou, 49,315 chests at Tls. 8.8 to 50.8 ship off; Souchong, 12,931 chests at Tls. 20.8 to 45.8 ship off; Oolong, 785 ½-chests at Tls. 25.8 to 30.8 ship off; Scented Tea, 21,491 boxes at Tls. 9.8 to 37.3 ship off; Flowery Pekoe, 631 chests at Tls. 35.8 to 67.8 ship off. The above settlements of Congou were made at the following rates:—Dust to broken leaf kinds, Tls. 8.8 to 12.8 per picul ship off; low ordinary to common kinds, Tls. 14.8 to 20.8 per picul ship off; common to fair flavoury kinds, Tls. 22.8 to 27.8 per picul ship off; good flavoury to fine Kaisow, Tls. 29.8 to 34.8 per picul ship off; finest Kaisow (for a few small lots fancy boxes), Tls. 45.8 to 50.8 per pisul ship off.

AMOY.—Stocks had been increased to about 12,100 ½-chests Congou, and 17,200 ditto Ooloong, but the only settlements had been 1,350 boxes Congou (Contract), at $21 per picul for good common, and some few parcels Oolong, taken for shipment to England, via Foochow or Hong Kong, at prices that had not transpired. The quality of the Congous was decidedly inferior to last season's Teas, but most of the Oolongs to hand were desirable. Teamen were retaining Oolongs up country in order that they might be freed from the excess of dust.

Canton.—Settlements had again been on a limited scale, Teamen generally continuing to demand prices which buyers were unwilling to pay in view of the high rates of freight and exchange. Small parcels of both descriptions of Scented Teas had been settled at a slight reduction from former prices, but holders advanced their rates directly any disposition to purchase was shown. Two chops of country Congou had arrived.

SILK.

Yokohama.—For some time after the departure of the last mail the market for this staple was entirely closed, owing, it is believed, to some interference on the part of the native authorities. On the resumption of business the stock on the market, say 120 bales, was immediately bought up at about former rates. A few lots of new Silk had already come to hand and had realised $825 to 840 per picul; the quality of these parcels was inferior, and they were much mixed, both in colour and size. Really good hanks of the new season's crop were not expected to reach the market in quantity for fully a month. The settlements for the fortnight were estimated at 150 bales. This closed the export for the season at 12,300 bales. Silkworms' Eggs.—A few cards common quality have been brought down and obtained 4 to 8 boos; probably at least another fortnight will elapse before any quantity arrives, and there is every reason to fear that prices will rule higher than last year.

Shanghai.—Mr. Holdsworth's Circular, dated the 2nd of July, is as follows:—Immediately after the departure of the last homeward mail on 20th ultimo transactions were resumed at rates about the same as those ruling at the close of the mail. As the transactions daily increased the silkmen became firm in their demands for higher prices, and, notwithstanding the enhanced rate of Exchange, they succeeded in establishing an advance of fully Tls. 15 to 20 per picul on all classes of Silks, and the greater proportion of the settlements, estimated at 2,500 bales, have been purchased at this advance. For all good and classical Silks the Chinese are very firm in their demands for full rates, owing to the scarcity of these descriptions, it being reported that they are in less supply this year than last. It now appears true that the late unfavourable weather has caused the gathering of the second crop to be almost nil, but nevertheless the estimate currently given as the probable amount of silk available this season for export is fully 45,000 bales; this added to a probable export of 15,000 bales from Japan, and say 5,000 bales from Canton, with an increased European crop, should certainly lead to much lower prices than at present ruling, if any profit is to be made on shipments. Arrivals from the interior having been limited, the unsold stock is reduced to 1,000 bales. The careful manner in which the natives have thus far supplied this market with silk is worthy of note; they appear determined to avoid the mistake of former years of overstocking the market, and only bring down their stocks in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. The total receipts (as per customs' returns) from June 1, 1868, to date amount to about 6,900 bales, against 13,700 bales to same date last year; unsold stock is only 1,000 bales, against 6,000 bales last year. The quotations at the close were ruling as follows, at exchange 6s. 4d. per tael:—Tsatlee, Chop No. 1, 32s. to 32s. 6d. per lb.; ditto 2, 30s. 11d. to 31s. 5d.; ditto 3, 29s. to 30s. 11d.; ditto market 3 and 3½, 27s. 8d. to 28s. 9d.; Red Peacock and 4, 24s. 5d. to 26s. 7d.; ditto 5 and common, 21s. 9d. to 23s. 4d.; Karshing Taysaam, Chop No. 1, 24s. 11d. to 26s. 3d.; ditto 2, 23s. 4d. to 24s. 2d.; ditto 3, 21s. 9d. to 22s. 3d.; ditto 4, 5, and common, 19s. 1d. to 20s. 8d.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 1, none; ditto 2, 21s. 9d. to 22s. 3d.; ditto 3, 20s. 8d. to 21s. 3d.; ditto 4 and common, 19s. 1d. to 20s. 2d.; Yuenfa and Hainings, No. 1, 26s. to 27s. 1d.; ditto 2, 24s. 11d. to 25s. 6d.; ditto 3, 23s. 4d. to 23s. 11d.; ditto 4 and common, 21s. 9d. to 22s. 10d.; Hangchow Tsatlee, medium, 21s. 6d. to 22s. 3d.; Sewhings, No. 1 and 2, 20s. 2d. to 20s. 11d.; Laeyongs, 19s. 7d. to 20s. 2d.; Throwns, none; Re-reeled Hainings, 32s. 6d. to 33s. 1d. ditto Tsatlees, 31s. 5d. to 32s. 6d.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At Yokohama.—To London: £4 per ton of 50 cubic feet. To New York: £3 5s. to £3 10s. per ton of 40 cubic feet.

At Shanghai.—The rate to London remains at £4 10s. per ton.

At Foochow.—Rates to London have declined to £3 15s. to £4 per ton.

At Hong Kong and Canton.—There has been less inquiry for tonnage, and rates for home show a slight decline—viz., £4 and £4 2s. 6d. per ton. The Circular of George Holmes estimates the number of disengaged vessels in harbour at thirteen (exclusive of Siamese), representing 8,308 tons.

At Manila.—To London: The quotations are—£4 12s. 6d. to £5; dry sugar, hemp, £5 5s.; leaf tobacco, £5 10s.

At Singapore.—The New Brunswick and the Meridian are fully engaged for London at £3 5s. per ton for dead weight and light freight; the Diomed has taken about 60 tons of tin for London at £1 per ton.

LITERATURE.

The China Magazine; a Weekly Miscellany, Illustrated with Photographs. Conducted by C. Langdon Davies. Hong Kong: Noronha and Sons.—This interesting publication has now reached its twelfth number, completing the first volume. In the last few numbers there is marked progress, both in the quality of the contributions and in the excellence of the photographs, but this is only what might have been expected. The establishment of a weekly magazine of this class in such a place as Hong Kong was a bold experiment, and we had at first many misgivings as to the possibility of continuing it. It was manifest that the number of contributors must of necessity be limited, and there must have been difficulty of keeping up the supply of illustrations. These considerations must have had weight with the proprietor, for we find that in future the magazine is to be increased in size, reduced in price, and issued at longer intervals—monthly instead of weekly, we presume. It is also proposed to introduce some important improvements, which will of course be acceptable, though it is undeniably good as it stands. The sketches of travel (such as "Yokohama to San Francisco") are shrewd and observant; and the "Chronicle of Passing Events" is well compiled. The photographs are not uniformly good, but in such a climate perfection cannot be looked for. As a rule, the groups are better than the views; some in the later numbers—the "Chinese Fruitseller," "Professor Petruske and his Pupils," &c.—are very well executed. We are glad to see that the difficulties encountered have not discouraged the projector, and that the China Magazine is not to disappear, like the China Punch, at the close of the first volume. It may be obtained in London of Messrs. W. Allan and Co., and the annual subscription is two guineas.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S MAIL SERVICE.

We have much satisfaction in confirming the information given in our last issue with reference to the re-establishment of the Penang mail service, an item of news that will be hailed with joy in the Straits Settlements. We have already recorded the offer made by the P. and O. Company to resume it for an additional payment of £5,000 per annum, which was at first summarily rejected by the Government; subsequently however, after the usual amount of circumlocution between the Colonial-office, the Treasury, and the Post-office, an amended tender to perform the extra service for £4,000 per annum was accepted, and arrangements were accordingly entered into which will take effect with the outward mail of the 28th August. The company cannot fairly be included among the obstructors, for their original contract was framed without reference to Penang, and but for a desire to fall in with the wishes of the public, they would not have been willing to accept this reduction on their already moderate tender. The time allowed for the extra call is twenty-four hours; the outward mails, therefore, will in future reach Singapore and the China and Japan ports one day later than the date given in the present time-tables. On the homeward route the new arrangement will commence with the steamer leaving Yokohama on the 9th, Hong Kong the 15th, and Singapore the 28th of October, from which time the homeward mails will leave those ports one day earlier. The company has also decided not to take the monsoon allowance of four days between Bombay and Suez after the steamer of the 15th September, and a revised time-table will be issued accordingly.

MR. BURLINGHAME AND HIS TREATY.

In our last issue we reproduced the text of the new Treaty between China and the United States, as it was originally signed by Mr. Burlinghame and Mr. Seward. In the process of ratification by the Senate it has undergone some slight modifications, which, however, but slightly affect its general tenour. Of the nine articles, one has been expunged altogether, namely, No. 7, which recognised the principle of an unity of money and weights as important aids to civilisation. It was thought that this subject had better be reserved for future consideration. The only other alteration of any moment consists in the remodelling of the next clause (which now becomes the seventh), stipulating for mutual educational advantages. As it originally stood, this article gave to Chinese subjects admission to all American schools and colleges without any political or religious test; but it was found that in some of the institutions included in this, such tests had always been enforced, and could not well be abolished for the special benefit of Chinese scholars. So the article is now altered in such a manner that Chinese are simply placed on the same footing in regard to public education as "citizens or subjects of the most favoured nations."

According to the last advices from New York, Mr. Burlinghame and his colleagues were making a short stay with Mr. Seward prior to their departure; but before coming to this country they intended to visit Quebec and Montreal, taking Niagara on the way. It was lately announced that the Embassy would leave for England on the 19th inst., but this tour may delay their departure somewhat. In any case, however, it appears probable that Lord Stanley will have returned from Switzerland before they reach London.

COAL IN CHINA.

It is satisfactory to observe by the latest advices from North China, that a practical step is about to be taken by the English and American residents towards working the coal mines in these provinces by the improved means and appliances of European mining, so as to utilise it for steam purposes in the country. Looking at the present large and increasing fleet of merchant steamers and steam vessels of war in the China seas, the supply of coal for these alone has become a matter of great importance to the foreign traders, irrespective of the consumption on shore at the different ports. And when we consider that, with the exception of the small and inferior supply from the Japanese mines, all these steamers have to depend upon importations of coal from England, America, and Australia, it seems a most absurd anomaly that this necessary article of fuel should be brought from places 7,000 and 15,000 miles distant, while it is to be found abundantly on the spot. Not only is this the case, but there is every indication of China being one of the greatest undeveloped coal regions in the world. From native accounts, and the descriptions of foreign travellers, we know that coal has been found and used by the inhabitants throughout every province in China. At the same time, the inefficient means used in working the mines; the abandonment of those where fire-damp has appeared, or the workings become flooded; and the absence of encouragement by the authorities, if not their prohibition to work the mines—have from time immemorial prevented any development of mining enterprise. From these data we may conclude that the richest coal seams of China are untouched, and that these are of extensive formation.

Of the coal mines open and yielding profitable returns, those at Chai-tang, to the westward of Peking, which supply that city with this kind of fuel, are best known to Europeans; having been described by the British Consul at Tientsin, and also by Mr. Michie, in his narrative of a journey from Peking to Petersburg." This mine, however, has been recently visited, for the third time, by Mr. Henderson, of Tientsin, with the view of making arrangements for facilitating the transport of the coal to the port of shipment. At present it has to be conveyed over the greater portion of the distance by mules, and owing to this wretched mode of transit it cannot be sold in Tientsin to pay a moderate profit under 12 taels per ton, while at the pit's mouth it costs but one tael. This places it about on a par as regards price with the best English coal; and it is only by making either a rail or tramway, or a good waggon-road, that this enormous cost can be reduced to something like a reasonable figure. Apart from political difficulties—which alone would be insuperable if the Burlinghame treaty were to be accepted as it stands by the European Powers—the natural obstacles to the construction of a regular railway appear to be very great, for a considerable portion of the route is through a rocky country, where much tunnelling would be requisite. Mr. Henderson therefore devoted his energies to the more feasible plan of getting a good cart road constructed, by which he calculated that the cost of transit would be diminished at least 25 per cent.; and in the event of the Chinese Government being unwilling to do this at their own cost, he was prepared, with the aid of some Shanghai merchants interested in the coal trade, to undertake the expense of it on receiving permission to do so; for which permission he made due application through Mr. Wade to the Tsong-li Yamen, being supported also in his request by the British Minister. At first all seemed favourable; the local Mandarins, when visited by Mr. Henderson, freely admitted that the proposed road and the development of the mines would be beneficial to the district, and the owners of the mines addressed Mr. Henderson, strongly urging him to persevere in his endeavours. Meanwhile, a commission deputed by the Tsong-li Yamen was sitting to consider Mr. Henderson's proposal; and when its decision was given, it proved to be most unreasonably hostile. He was enjoined to abandon all hope that the Imperial Government would either make a road, or permit others to make it. The obstacles alleged were, firstly, that the engineering difficulties were too great (which need not have troubled the Chinese, seeing that foreigners were willing to take the risk); secondly, that the local popular feeling was adverse, which Mr. Henderson's own personal observations proved to be untrue; and, thirdly, that the "Feng-shui" interfered—this being as foolish an objection as the first two were false. This road question, although a very important one in itself, is still a small affair in comparison with all that we have a right to expect on the revision of the Treaty; but its result shows very plainly the determination of the Chinese Government to concede no demand, however reasonable, unless under compulsion. After all, it is perhaps as well that this disposition has been so clearly manifested just now; it will teach us the true meaning of Mr. Burlinghame's deceitful utterances. It is thus that "China asks to be left free to unfold herself;" this is how "China does not wait to be approached, but comes out and extends to us her hand." Doubtless Mr. Burlinghame, when the case is brought to his notice, will find some unctuous platitudes with which to justify his employers; and perhaps he will then coolly ask the English nation, as he asked his own countrymen, "What complaints have we to make against China?" To which we may reply that they are too numerous to mention, but the last, and by no means the least, is that she has inflicted upon us—Mr. Burlinghame.

To return however to our text—Coal in China. According to a report on the quality of some of the Chai-tang coal lately tried by local steamers, it is equal in steaming power to Newcastle coal, and even superior to it in some respects, such as producing less smoke and less ash. For the present, however, we must look upon the Chai-tang project as a failure, but this does not apply to other mines in China situated more conveniently, and at shorter distances from the ports of shipment. We learn that at Chinkiang there are indications of good coal seams in the environs of that port, as well as in the vicinity of Kelung, in Formosa. It would be more judicious for the first attempts at foreign coal mining in China to be made at such places where it would be possible to furnish coal at from thirty to fifty per cent. below the cost of English coal. At present there is a considerable number of sailing vessels employed in the coal trade to China, and it would be damaging that interest without an equivalent in cheap Chinese coal, if the native article could not be produced at less than foreign coal. These however appear to be only preliminary steps, which may undergo considerable modification before the initiatory process is commenced practically. The mercantile community interested in steam shipping are so far greatly indebted to Her Majesty's Consuls at Tientsin, Chinkiang, and Kelung for their able reports upon the coal mining industry carried on in their districts, and to Mr. Henderson for his energetic attempts to make the Chai-tang mines available. Of course the ultimate result depends upon the terms on which foreigners will be allowed to work the mines under the authority of the Chinese Government. From the report referred to we have already learned that the British Minister at Peking is favourable to the project; and as even the ultra-Conservative Tseng-kwo-fan is disposed to look favourably on this branch of enterprise, we may still hope that a clause will be introduced into the Treaty bearing on this point when it comes under revision.

THE COLONIAL SOCIETY.

A few weeks since we chronicled a meeting of gentlemen interested in the various British colonies, held for the purpose of forming an Association for mutual support, and for the development of the interests of those dependencies, under the title of The Colonial Society. A provisional committee was then appointed to take the requisite preliminary steps for forming the Society, and their Report was presented at a second meeting held on the 11th inst., at Willis's Rooms. Its character appears most satisfactory, and the new Society has every prospect of soon commencing a career of usefulness. Lord Bury was elected President; the Duke of Manchester, the Marquis of Normanby, Lord Lytton, Lord Milton, Sir S. Northcote, and Mr. Chichester Fortescue, Vice-Presidents; and the Council includes other influential names. Fellows of the Society will pay (on election) an entrance fee of £3, and the annual subscription will be £2; but the subscription may be compounded for by a single payment of £20. We have already explained the general features of the Association and the chief objects with which it has been started; it is only necessary to add that a rule has been introduced to the effect that "no paper shall be "read, nor any discussion be permitted to take place tending "to give to the society a political or party character." This regulation, while in no way restricting the beneficial influence it is sure to exercise on Colonial interests, will prevent the Institution being used for party purposes, and enable persons of all shades of political opinion to join in promoting the general welfare of our numerous dependencies.

NEW LINES OF TELEGRAPH.

The completion of a continuous line of electric communication between Europe, America, and China can no longer be considered a dream of the remote future; in fact there are indications that it may be accomplished at no very distant date. Not that any great progress is being made by the eastward route. Certainly, the new cable of the Anglo-Mediterranean Company will be laid in the course of next month, and after this, it is stated, the construction of a new Red Sea cable will at once be commenced; each of these will be a step towards China, and every link thus gained is something towards the long chain required. But in this direction our aspirations hardly extend, for the present, beyond a rapid and reliable line as far as Galle. It is to the Western route, perhaps, after all, that we shall have to look for the full realisation of our wishes. The problem of an Atlantic cable having been solved, why not a Pacific cable as well? This, laid from San Francisco to Japan and China, would at once place both England and America in direct communication with those countries; and a project is actually on foot for laying such a cable via the Aleutian Islands. The success of the new Franco-American Cable is doubted by no one, although it consists of a far greater length of wire than even our own Atlantic cables; and it is hardly too much to say that its completion will be the sure precursor of a similar one across the Pacific. In the meanwhile, it seems likely that the company already formed to connect the various ports on the China coast will have carried that scheme into effect, having been reorganised under a highly influential direction.

A JAPANESE PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE.

An interesting report has been published of a discussion in the Japanese House of Assembly at Kioto, on the subject of the colonisation of Yesso, in which island there are immense tracts of land very thinly populated, while others lie entirely waste, though capable of reclamation. The report, which is said to be translated from the eighth number of the Kioto Government Gazette, gives the opinions expressed by various Daimios and high officials as to the best means of reclaiming and peopling these districts. Most of them were brief and to the point; while those members who had formed no opinion on the question, or did not think themselves competent to discuss it, said so with remarkable candour. Two Princes—Nakane Sekko (Echizen) and Inouye Iwami (Satsuma) delivered their opinions in writing. The former urges the necessity of appointing an officer as Governor who takes a real interest in the northern island, and who would be prepared to devote his entire life and energies to the work. Satsuma, in his communication, lays great stress on the advantage of supplementing human labour by machinery, and being asked by the Government for a further elucidation of his plan, writes a second memorial (published in the tenth number of the Gazette) in which he recommends the use of steam machinery both for manufacturing and agricultural purposes; and at the same time points out that as its introduction will take some time, water-power should be availed of wherever it exists, instead of obstacles being interposed, as at present, in the way of persons who wished to erect water-wheels &c. The same number of the Gazette contains a formal approval of these sensible suggestions, which are to be carried forthwith into effect. We have repeatedly pointed out the immense benefit that must accrue to the country from the accession of such enlightened Princes as Satsuma and Echizen to a share in the Government; and here we have most satisfactory evidence of the justice of these anticipations.

The steamer Japan sailed from San Francisco on the 3rd inst. for Yokohama with 272 passengers, a cargo valued at $90,000, and specie to the amount of $878,000. Mr. J. Ross Browne, the new American Minister to China, was among the passengers.

It is officially announced that the Duke of Buckingham, Secretary for the Colonies, has appointed the Rev. Julian Moreton, at present chaplain of Labuan, to be colonial chaplain of Penang.

NORTH GERMANY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

HAMBURG, Aug. 16.

According to annual custom the official tables of the trade and navigation of this port for the year 1867 have been published by the Board of Trade, and are made up with their usual perspicuity of detail. It continues to be a matter of great regret that this valuable work, compiled with such a vast amount of exactness and labour, should again be defective in one of the most important branches of the local trade, I mean the exports, about which it is totally silent, and on previous occasions I have explained to your readers the motives assigned, which are, that in the absence of any custom house duties merchants are not required to make any declaration of their shipments, and thus the authorities are deprived of all means of ascertaining the extent and value of any one single article of export as well as of the country to which shipped.

As regards the imports, they exceed both in quantity and value those of any previous year on record, and even show a considerable increase over the next best year, which was the previous one of 1866. Thus in weight they amounted to 50,637,887 centners of 50 kilogrammes each, against 47,269,932 centners in 1866; and the value is given at 819,316,060 marks Banco, against only 779,088,010 marks Banco in the previous year.

With regard to the navigation, the total number of vessels that arrived in the port of Hamburg in 1867 was 5,055, against 5,185 in the previous year, but there is a considerable increase in the amount of tonnage; for whereas in 1866 they contained 599,077 Hamburg commercial lasts of three tons each, in 1867 they had risen to 636,037 lasts, showing an increase of 36,114 lasts, or 108,342 English tons. Of the total number, 568 vessels, with a tonnage of 99,929 lasts, came from transatlantic places, being 10,000 lasts more than in 1866. Among the outward-bound vessels the number was not so great as in the previous year, being 5,071 against 5,210 in 1866, but there is a considerable increase in the tonnage; for whereas in 1866 it amounted to 592,250 lasts, it had risen in 1867 to 637,583, showing an increase of 45,333 lasts, or 135,999 tons, which proves that the use of larger vessels is gradually making its way. As the ships exhibit a larger tonnage, there is also a corresponding increase in the number of hands employed in them; in 1866 the vessels that arrived were manned by 61,194 men, and those that sailed by 61,198, whilst for 1867 the numbers were respectively 63,858 and 63,862.

With special reference to the navigation with the Far East, these tables show among the arrivals nine vessels of 1,379 lasts from China, being two more than in 1866; two from Manila, four from Netherlands East India, and twenty-two from Akyab, Bassein, Rangoon, and Singapore. Among the departures were eighteen vessels of 3,054 lasts to China (fourteen to Hong Kong, one to Hong Kong and Shanghai, and three to Shanghai), being eight more than in 1866; one to Japan, two to Manila, five to Netherlands India, one to Bangkok, and five to Singapore; besides which were two to Nicolayefsk, one to the Navigators' Island, one to Honolulu, and two to Australia.

In my next letter I propose to give your readers a few extracts from the tables.

We learn from St. Petersburg that out of the sum about to be paid to Russia for the sale of her territory in America to the United States, four millions of roubles will be given to the Russian American Company as an indemity for the loss of their trade. This is considered so favourable—and indeed it is by far the best stroke of business they ever made—that the shares in the company, issued originally at 150 roubles each, and never sold above par, have risen to 310 roubles.

Dr. Petermann, of Gotha, has received the first accounts of his North Pole Expedition (which sailed on the 24th May), sent home by a whaler, the dates reaching to the 20th of June, all well. The Germania had made the coast of Greenland off Sabine Island, but got fast in the ice and was drifted down with it three degrees of latitude. The little vessel behaved like a trump, and Captain Coldewey writes in high spirits and full of hope for the success of his undertaking. Whilst locked up in the ice they shot six Polar bears, which gave them a supply of fresh meat and warm wrappers, to say nothing of a good stock of bear's grease. Though still among the ice the weather was fine and the thermometer had not been below the freezing point. When the letter was closed the vessel was in 73 deg. 20 sec. N. lat., and 16 deg. 18 sec. W. longitude.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVED.—San Francisco, from Akyab (10,000 bags rice); George Shotton, for Saigon; Victoria, for Rangoon (8,770 bags rice); Spartan, for Bangkok (7,310 bags rice).

SAILED.—Elise, to Macassar and Hong Kong.

The Leopold, Hamburg brig, 273 tons, last from China, has been sold by auction in this city for 15,000 marks Banco.

ARRIVALS AT BREMEN.—Bonnie Lassie, from Bangkok (15,520 bags rice); St. Vincent, from Calcutta (10,132 bags rice); Fetisch, from Saigon (16,875 bags rice); Fairy, from Bangkok (9,393 bags rice).

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, August 16.

A letter from Java, published a few days ago by the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, has caused much sensation in our political circles, not only by its description of the actual condition of our East India colonies, but more especially because the necessity is urged that the Government should be authorised, as in 1816, to send one or more commissaries-general to India, with authority to assume the Government. As this letter had not been received directly by the paper, a great number of conjectures have been made respecting the person to whom it was addressed. The general opinion inclines to the belief that an ex-Minister, who once desired eagerly to be appointed Governor-General, and who is, according to the last Java paper, much liked in India, is the author. It is not very probable that our Government will follow the counsel of the letter-writer, Mr. E. de Waal not being a friend to the introduction of measures on behalf of India, for which reason his appointment was viewed with satisfaction there. Some of the papers have called him to account for not making more haste to lay the India budget for 1869 before the members. A delay of some months has been caused, and the only excuse is that the rooms of the Second Chamber of the States-General are to be restored, so that the members cannot meet before the end of September, when the session will be closed.

Mr. Roest van Limburg still holds the Portfolio for Foreign Affairs, but declines to be appointed as definitive Minister. According to the Handelsblad the Cabinet has succeeded in finding another Minister for the post, but the name of this statesman has not yet transpired.

All the Ministerial Departments are busy with making up the several budgets. It is ascertained that many reductions will be made. The number of functionaries will be decreased largely—in the Colonial Department alone not less than eleven out of fifty will be pensioned, and the vacant places will not be refilled. For the budget of the War Department no credit will be claimed in behalf of camps, and a great many of the corps tirailleurs will be abolished. The reduction in the Marine budget is said to be of great importance, likewise that to be made on the budget of the Home Department. On the other side, the Minister of the Finances will propose some measures to decrease the revenues of the State. In the first place, it is rumoured, he will introduce a uniform penny-postage, and secondly, he wishes either to decrease or to entirely abolish the paper-stamp duty.

A provincial paper calls attention to the festivals to be held at Batavia next year to celebrate the jubilee of the establishment of Batavia, and suggests the advisability of celebrating the event in the mother-country by a national festival.

The prospectus has been issued of a company for the cultivation of silkworms. Messrs. L. C. E. E. Fock and M. Wolff, at Amersfoort, suggest that a capital of 150,000f. be subscribed for by three hundred shareholders. In the first three years only 15 per cent. of this capital will be required, and the managers will then meet with the shareholders to decide if the results are satisfactory enough to continue operations. Dr. Fock says that he has been occupied for some time with the cultivation of silkworms, that his costs for mulberry trees were 1,200f., whilst his worms produced 70 kilo silk, which were valued at 40f. per kilo, representing an amount of 2,800f., or 133⅓ per cent. profit. He hopes that this result will induce the public to subscribe the required capital.

The King remains in Switzerland; his return is expected shortly. I regret having to state that her Majesty the Queen is suffering from fever.

The heat is still very intense; and throughout the whole country there is a great want of water. The crop of grain is very satisfactory, but there is little food for cattle, so that great fears are felt for the prospects of the forthcoming winter.

It has created much astonishment that our principal review, De Gids, contained in its last number an article upon India, written by a liberal ex India functionary, Mr. H. van Alphen. It is a plea in favour of the culture system, and Mr. Van Alphen is of opinion that the Netherlands cannot exist without the millions produced by a system which must be condemned by everyone.

Messrs. Van Zeylen and Decker are laying up the colossal vessel Utrecht, which is bound for Batavia. This ship, launched some weeks ago, measures 2,000 tons and is especially designed like the Gravenhage, to carry passengers to Java. H.M. steamer Djambi, commander Captain-Lieutenant J. E. Buys, will sail on the 1st September for Java.

The official paper, the Staats Courant, publishes a Royal decree by which the honorary title of Minister-Resident is granted to Mr. D. de Graeff van Polsbroek, Consul-General and political agent in Japan.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The Trading Company has announced that its next auction will be held on the 18th, when 125,900 b. Java, Padang, and Menado will be offered. The market is very dull and inactive, and the transactions only include 596 b. Padang, ex Peking; 700 b. Java, ex Nereus; 480 do., ex Ortelius. Stock on the 1st inst., 607,600 b., against 525,500 b. in 1867.

RAW SUGAR.—There is some demand, and several parcels have changed hands—viz., 400 mats Samarang, ex Vyf Vrienden, No. 14¾, at 33¾f.; 236 mats Sourabaya, ex Clio, No. 14, 32¾f.; 389 do., ex Maria Regina, No. 14, and 542 do., ex do., No. 8 14, at ¾f. under July; 365 mats Samarang, ex Clio, No. 15¼, at 33¾f.; 976 do. do., ex Anna Sophia, No. 14, at 32f.; 618 do., ex do., No. 8¼. 29f.; 1,065 mats Passaroeang, ex Fagel, No. 16½, at 1f. under July; 925 do. Sourabaya, ex Catharina

Elisabeth, No. 13¾, at 33f.; 694 mats Probolingo, ex Imperator Alexander II., No. 8, at 28½f.; 386 do. Sourabaya, ex Ellen, No. 12½, at 32½f.; 549 mats Sourabaya, No. 18, ex Anna and Sophia, at 34½f. The total stock of raw sugar in bond was, on the 1st inst., 45,618,584 kilo. The unsold stock of the Trading Company, 34,676 mats, against 31,325 mats in 1867.

Rice.—The market is more inactive. The few transactions include 605 b. Java, ex Jacoba, at 9½f.; 1,751 b. ditto, per Emilie, 1,046 b. ditto floating, per Maarten van Rossem, at 8¾f.; and 1,153 b. Java, ex Samarang, at 7½f.

Spices.—In waiting for the auction on the 27th the market is inactive. The Trading Company will offer then its whole stock, viz., 1,780 casks nutmegs, 550 casks mace, 250 casks cloves, and 1,812 b. pepper.

Tobacco.—The trade is inspecting the quantity of 8,505 b., which will be offered on the 16th inst. The stock is 23,955 b. Java. The stock of Manila is totally exhausted.

Manila Cigars.—There is no stock of Cortados, whilst Habanos of 1866 may be bought cheaper.

Drugs.—The Trading Company announces its auction for the 25th inst, when the following quantities will be sold: 50 Colli Gummi Elasticum, 80,000 kilo. Gutta Percha, 109 ch. Gummi Damar, 43,000 kilo. Gutta Percha, 60 ch. Gummi Damar. Camphor firm at 80c., but buyers decline to operate. Cubebs: 154 b. damaged, ex Golden Age, were sold at 18½c. to 22c. Long pepper is sold at 16c. Preserved ginger 70c. to 80c.

Rattans.—The Trading Compary sold in auction 52,750 bundles equal to 7,233 piculs. 1,458 bundles Borneo were paid with 9f. to f.10.30; 3,700 ditto Banjermassing, f.8.90; 3,523 b. Padang, at f.11.50 to f.14.50; 928 b. Koetie, at f.7.10; 18,788 b., f.6.50 to f.10.50; 2,896 b. Banjermassing, f.8.50; 4,940 b. Padang, f.14.70 to f.16.90. The whole quantity was sold, besides the following parcels: 190 pic. ex Nieuwland; 116 pic. ex Samarang. 175 pic. ex Nereus; 115 pic. ex Maria Diederika; 55 pic. ex Willem Kroonprins der Nederlenden; 150 pic. ex Leopold Graaf van Limburg Stirum.

Indigo.—The market is very firm, but the stock is unimportant. 300 chests lately arrived will be soon in the market.

Hides.—500 pieces Sourabaya Rinder, ex Staatsraad Van Ewyck, were sold by inscription.

Banca Tin.—Nominal at 54¾f. to 54½f. Billiton, 53½f.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

The appearance of the market for public securities is more favourable, but the business is principally confined to foreign stocks, which are in consequence decidedly firmer. The supply of money is so abundant, that it must keep the prices of stocks and shares at a full point. The demand for money at the Bank is not very active, nor in the open market have the operations been very extensive.

Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents., 57⅛; Three per Cents., 66⅜; Four per Cents., 88½. Trading Company, 131.

Exchange.—London, 3 mo., f.11.84½; 2 mo., f.11.86; short, f.11.91. Paris, 3 mo., f.47.05; 2 mo., f.47.12½; short, f.47.35. Hambro', 3 mo. f.34.92½; 2 mo., f.34.97½; short, f.35.10.

Rotterdam, Aug. 18.

Rumours are circulating in the Hague to the effect that the Minister of the Colonial Department, Mr. E. de Waal, intends to resign, and that his place will be taken by Mr. Mirandolle, one of the editors of the Tydschrift voor Nederlandsch Indie. Although I cannot with certainty declare this rumour to be true, I have reason to believe that it is well founded. Of course this news will be received with delight in India.

How bountiful the late Cabinet was in its gifts of orders is now proved by the fact that the credit of f.2,000 which was granted, was not sufficient. This sum is not only totally exhausted in behalf of the insignia, but a further amount of f.2,643.60 is asked for to cover the deficit.

According to the Handelsblad the rank of medical officers, 3rd class, is to be abolished both in the army and navy. This measure will take effect in the navy very shortly.

The illness of H.M. the Queen is abating.

There is no commercial news except that 1,047 b. Java coffee, ex Leopold graaf van Limburg Stirum, sold at 41c. Trade is in general very dull.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

Departures.—Aug. 11, from Brouwershaven, for Melbourne, Nederland; 13, from Hellevoet, for Macassar, Candati.

THE CHINESE IN CALIFORNIA.

The following remarks on the condition of the Chinese emigrants in California are abbreviated from the special correspondent of the Standard. We believe the description is by no means an exaggerated one, and it shows the absolute necessity that existed for some extensive measure of reform in the legislation regarding Asiatic immigrants.

"Among the reconstruction measures of the Fortieth Congress the public have not yet learned to place the treaty just concluded with China. It is true it has no reference to the black man, and only the most indirect interest for the South at present, as the number of coolies there is very small, and the experiment of the Louisiana planters has not been satisfactory enough to prove contagious. But the negro of the Pacific coast is the Chinaman, in all save the absolute condition of servitude, and the treaty which Mr. Burlinghame has effected overrules the last and the worst instance, in the history of the Free States, of class legislation based on a tacit denial of human equality. The laws of California relating to the Chinese are only to be compared with Carolina legislation concerning the free people of colour, and they owe their origin to undisguised selfishness and fear of competition in industry, or rather in gain, since it was at the mines that the indefatigable and economical Chinese first displayed their admirable powers of acquisition. The result has been, inevitably, that the actual treatment of the Chinese has been far worse than the legislation that discriminates against them, and which, for instance, prohibits their testifying in court against a white man, holding real estate, &c. Under this general branding of inferiority, the mean, the brutal, the unscrupulous, have cuffed and defrauded the poor Asiatics without let or hindrance, and with the full connivance of the police; while the victims, who in meekness and long-suffering closely resemble the Africans, have peacefully pursued their innumerable avocations, and have overcome for the Pacific Railroad the most formidable physical obstacles to its construction. Their immigration has been as providential for the Western Coast as that of the Irish, in days gone by, for the Eastern; but except as furnishing labour when most needed for the development of a new country, there is a vast difference between these opposite accessions to the population of America.

"The California statutes now abrogated by the Chinaman being put on the footing of the most favoured nationality, have a shadow of excuse in the apprehension with which men regarded the introduction of so novel an element into the body politic. . . . So exceptional a class was likely to be subjected to exceptional legislation; but the stringency of the laws, combined with the system of coolie immigration, aggravated the original evil, and kept away the better sort of Chinese, whom it is to be hoped the treaty will now tempt across, as bonâ fide settlers. The number of Chinese on the Pacific coast is estimated at 50,000, of whom San Francisco has at least a third. Among these are some women, but I do not know the proportion—not enough, I fear, to keep them from being mostly prostitutes; indeed, shiploads have been imported for that purpose. Elsewhere, in Cuba, for example, among 35,000 coolies, there is not one woman for every thousand men, and the frightful immorality which this suggests is in danger of being engendered in California.

"Perhaps I should say was in danger. The treaty offers every inducement for the voluntary emigration of families, and the most important provision, after the equal protection of the laws, is that which admits the Chinese youth to the educational privileges of this country. This is undoubtedly the first and greatest step towards denationalisation and permanent residence, and it is only through this instrumentality that the problem of absorbing the Chinese as American citizens becomes capable of solution, like the German problem. By this means, or our theory of government is good only for Caucasians, the Chinaman may in two or three generations take his place, and with respect, on the jury, at the bar, and in any office within the reach of talent and popularity. . . . Then in religion, we shall have what we now have, toleration of pagan idolatry in the midst of a Christian community, with perhaps the Greek Church side by side with the Catholic. The modest figure of 1,000 Chinese immigrants a month—immigrants and no longer coolies—will soon be exchanged for some significant figure per week or per day, and though the nucleus will probably always be on the Pacific coast, as that of the Irish is on the Atlantic, we may expect to meet them in all parts of our domain, and to treat them as human, if not as civilised beings."

ANGLO-MEDITERRANEAN TELEGRAPH (LIMITED).

A general meeting of this company was held last week at the offices, Palmerston-buildings, Bishopsgate-street; Lord W. Hay, M.P., in the chair.

The Chairman having moved the adoption of the report, Sir J. Anderson seconded the motion, and it was carried unanimously.

The Chairman then said he had to bring before them the arrangement proposed to be entered into with the Lords of the Treasury with reference to the shore line between Malta and Alexandria. The original intention of the company was that this line, which was in rather a dilapidated condition, should be picked up by the Telegraph Construction Company, and this company undertook to pay to the Government for discontinuing the use of that line a sum of £2,000 for fourteen years. They considered it desirable, if possible, to utilise this line. The arrangement which had been come to with the Treasury would allow the company to use it as a duplicate line, which would give them two strings to the bow. The great obstacle in the way of concluding this arrangement was the possibility of having to repair the line at unseasonable times; but the Lords of the Treasury had consented to an arrangement that they should only have to repair it in convenient seasons. The payment for the use of the line was to be a minimum of £2,000 a year, rising to a maximum of £5,000 a year, after paying 10 per cent. to the shareholders and 10 per cent. for reserve fund, in exchange for which payments they would receive, in the first place, a duplicate line, and in the second valuable stores at Malta, and the benefit of very considerable local traffic, which had hitherto amounted to £4,000 a year, a sum sufficient to pay the expenses of the line.—The Solicitor having read the heads of the arrangements,

The Chairman moved a formal resolution approving the heads of arrangement, which was carried unanimously.

The Chairman then stated that a portion of the cable would leave on the 1st of September in the ship Chiltern, and there was every reason to believe that the line would be laid before the middle of next month. With regard to the Susa and Modica line, it was now in working order, and on the 1st of September next a reduced tariff—namely, from 50s., as proposed in the prospectus, to 30s.—between this and Alexandria would come into operation. They all knew that it would be of immense benefit to the company's line if it were extended to India. Every person, whether engaged in commerce or politics, who had turned his attention to the subject, admitted that it was not only desirable, but indispensably necessary. Therefore, there was every reason to hope that it would be accomplished before long. He had no doubt that it would pay extremely well. The moment they had a thoroughly reliable line between this and India—a line independent of a Power like Russia—there was almost a certainty that other lines would be formed, connecting India with China, Australia, and other places. About 90 per cent. of the telegraphic messages came now from Bombay, from Calcutta, and from Galle—that was about 30 per cent. from Calcutta, 40 per cent. from Bombay, and 21 per cent. from Galle, which 21 per cent. represented the messages which now came from India and China by the steamers. If this line were made to Bombay, and other lines were extended to those places, there was no doubt that the percentage would be enormously increased, and would flow into the line made to Bombay.

Captain Sherard Osborn said that there were only 250 miles of deep water from the Malta bank until they approached the African shore, so that the risk of laying the cable was considerably reduced. A gentle slope into the deep water was now assured. (Hear, hear.)

The proceedings concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

The Highflyer, 21, screw corvette, Capt. T. S. M. Pasley, arrived at Spithead on the afternoon of the 12th from the China station. She came through the Needles, and when off Osborne exchanged salutes with the Victory, flag-ship of the Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Sir T. S. Pasley.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LARGE COLLECTION OF CHINESE BOOKS AND MSS.

A collection of more than eleven thousand books and manuscripts, made by the Russian Councillor of State, M. Sskatschkow, during a residence of fifteen years in China, is now on sale at St. Petersburg. It is said to contain more than a thousand engravings on wood, many of them rare, and some of them unique, not to be found in even the largest Chinese libraries. The scientific establishments of St. Petersburg are said not to have funds disposable for the purchase of this collection, which is likely to be bought by an American amateur for the sum of nine thousand pounds sterling.

THE TRADE OF SARAWAK.

The territory of the late Rajah Brooke appears to be upon the whole making progress, but there is hardly a consular report received this year from any part of the world that has not to tell of depression of trade. The British Consul at Sarawak states that the imports at that port have declined from £114,590 in 1865 to £83,844 in 1866, and £67,605 in 1867; but this is attributable to a fall in prices, a transfer of trade to the outports (at which the imports and exports in 1867 reached about £80,000), temporary over importation, and increased home supply. The exports from the port of Sarawak in 1867, £74,967, were fully equal to those of 1866, though considerably below the amount in 1865. The coasting trade has increased largely. The exports of 1867 include no timber. Yet several kinds grown here are invaluable for shipbuilding, and some are known to resist all attacks of white ants, and remain sound for years in mud and water. The magnificent water communication, extending all over the country, should make transport no difficulty. Trade is for the most part entirely in the hands of Chinese, only one European firm being established here; the Chinese traders are, with one or two exceptions, possessed of little or no capital, nor do the usual facilities of procuring such exist. Interest rules sometimes as high as 2½ per cent. per month, and, with first-rate security, one per cent. per month can always be obtained; it is therefore evident that until money, or the means of obtaining it, become more abundant, the trade of the country can only progress but slowly. That large profits are made in the produce market is proved by the high rates paid by respectable dealers for temporary accommodation. The capabilities of this country for supplying the various articles of produce now exported, and of many others, such as coffee, indigo, pepper, and gambier, are quite equal to those of the neighbouring countries; it cannot therefore be doubted but that Sarawak offers in every respect one of the most favourable fields for industry of all kinds that exists in the Far East. In agriculture extensive improvements have taken place within the last three years. Gambier and pepper plantations have been established, coffee gardens have been commenced, and on the estate opened out through the beneficence of Miss Burdett Coutts extensive preparations are being made for the cultivation of indigo, pepper, palm oil, &c. Attention has also been directed to the silk culture, and the attempts hitherto have been attended with fair success. The great want of labour, however, makes the establishment of farms and estates impossible to any but capitalists; the natives are very willing to clear jungle and forest, and make excellent lumberers, but are disinclined to work as agricultural labourers, and these latter require to be imported. Experienced men, willing to commence tropical agriculture, are generally without sufficient means to carry on successfully unless facilities for obtaining accommodation are at hand; it is therefore evident that no rapid improvement in agriculture can take place until this vital principle is firmly established in Sarawak. The establishment of a regular system of operations, based upon the formation of a local bank or general credit company, prepared to make advances at moderate rates for all industrial purposes, would give such an impetus to trade and commerce that, without exaggeration, the export trade would be increased fourfold in the space of twenty years, and the import trade improved in a corresponding ratio.

BRITISH SHIPPING.

A Parliamentary paper with this heading, moved for by Mr. Ingham, has appeared. The returns contained therein show that on the 31st of December, 1867, there were registered in England 7,522 sailing and 858 steam vessels of and under 50 tons, and 12,516 sailing and 11,360 steam vessels above 50 tons burden; in Scotland, 1,007 sailing and 138 steam vessels of the former class, and 1,935 sailing and 363 steam vessels of the latter class; and in Ireland, 971 sailing and 52 steam vessels under 50 tons, and 1,046 sailing and 150 steam vessels above 50 tons. During the five years 606 timber and 70 iron sailing vessels were built in England, and 44 timber and 120 iron steam vessels, and the total number of vessels built in the United Kingdom and British possessions was as follows:—1,521 timber and 138 iron vessels, 69 timber and 235 iron steam vessels. A total of 900 timber and 357 iron vessels were registered as new ships during the year, representing additions to our merchant navy amounting respectively to 145,880 and 166,344 tons. There were 1,151 vessels sold or transferred in the United Kingdom, 842 were wrecked (of which 800 were sailing and 42 steam vessels), and 117 vessels of various kinds were broken up, representing a total of 27,088 tons. There are 38 colonial-built and 73 foreign-built vessels registered in the United Kingdom. During the year 34,427 British and 24,511 foreign vessels entered inwards, representing respectively 11,197,865 and 5,140,952 tons, and a total of 33,502 British and 24,847 foreign vessels cleared outwards, representing 11,172,205 and 5,245,090 tons.

Monetary and Commercial.

There is a persistent falling off in the demand for means of remittance to the East. At the recent biddings for bills on India the amounts allotted were to Calcutta, £185,400, and to Madras, £14,600, the minimum price being fixed as before at 1s. 10½d. per rupee on both presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 10⅝d. will receive about 2 per cent., those above that rate will be allotted in full. No tenders on Bombay were invited.

A momentary rise in the price of Mexican dollars was caused by a small order for China, but they relapsed immediately to the former quotation of 4s. 10⅞d. Bar silver is unchanged at 5s. 0⅛d., with no demand for the East.

At the meeting of the Anglo-Mediterranean Telegraph Company, it was stated that the ships will sail with the cable on the 1st of September, that the company will possess a duplicate line in consequence of having leased that of the Government, that they will be earning a revenue within four months of the day the contract was signed, and that so soon as this portion of the undertaking shall have been completed they will commence the construction of the Anglo-Indian.

The report of the Indo-European Telegraph Company, which was adopted at the general meeting held on the 7th inst., contains an account of the progress of the company. At a meeting of the continental directors at Berlin the route was somewhat altered, especially the Black Sea portion; and it is also mentioned that the Indian Government have determined to construct a complete alternative line between Bushire and Kurrachee, so that the full benefit may be obtained from the new line. As the work is now in active operation a call will shortly become necessary.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Ceylon, from Southampton on the 22nd inst., was in gold, to Bombay, £500; to Galle, £100; to Madras, £1,040; in silver, to Hong Kong, £14,781; to Shanghai £10,650; total in gold, £1,640; in silver, £25,431.

EXPORT OF COTTON GOODS TO THE FAR EAST.

The following is a summary of Mr. Sam Mendel's tables for the present month, which contain details of the quantities of cotton manufactures and yarn shipped from the ports of London, Liverpool, Southampton, and the Clyde, to Hong Kong, Shanghai, Japan, Singapore, Batavia, Manila, and Ceylon during the month ended 13th August. The shipments during the eight months ended 16th August, 1868, compared with those for the corresponding periods of 1867 and 1866, are also given.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The Produce Market Review of Saturday says, "A sale of over 25,000 packages of China Tea has been held this week, the greater part of which consisted of common Congou. So large a sale, following close upon others of equal magnitude, and after the forced sales which have taken place from recent arrivals, had caused the market to be very weak for this class of tea, and a fall in prices was therefore expected. The demand, however, was apparently fully equal to the supply, and the prices obtained were quite up to private contract rates. It is certain, however, that this result was in a great measure due to the practice of 'buying over,' now extensively adopted by many brokers. This highly undesirable system has been largely developed during the last two years; and although some portion of the trade may be benefited by it, it is, on the whole, a pernicious practice, and tends more than any other cause to bolster up a falling market, and thus to mislead merchants, who naturally mistake these purchases for a genuine demand from the trade, whereas no such demand exists at the time, and a large quantity of the tea bought over is not disposed of for weeks and even months. The amount of business transacted by private contract this week has been extremely small, and a good deal of the tea placed on the market has been withdrawn. It may appear astonishing, but it is nevertheless true, that some merchants are impressed with an idea that they will eventually succeed in extracting better prices from the trade; that they will be disappointed we have no doubt, for as we have before pointed out, tea cannot advance in the face of continuous heavy shipments from China. Several thousand boxes of new season Canton Scented Tea have this week arrived per Overland Mail; the quality of these, for the most part, is disappointing. The trade has shown no disposition to pay the fancy prices asked; consequently only a few breaks of the Caper have sold, and we can only hear of one or two small sales of the Scented Orange Pekoes. The truth is, that the high prices lately ruling for Scented Capers have materially diminished the demand, and the market has for a long time past been glutted with Scented Pekoes. In Green Teas there is no material change, but there is rather more disposition to sell. The quotation for common Congou is 1s. 1¼d. to 1s. 1½d., with a firm market. Broken Leaf Tea has sold from 9d. to 9½d."

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

Manchester Markets, Aug. 22.—The market throughout the week has shown increasing firmness, and with it an increasing difficulty in selling. The cotton market has been active with advancing prices, and the small import during the week (though abundance of cotton is known to be on the way from India) has favoured the views of speculators. Up to Thursday the advance in the price of yarns and cloth was slow and gradual, with but an exceedingly limited business; but yesterday there was rather more business in yarns, especially for manufacturing purposes, and sellers of cops were enabled to realise something over the ¼d. advance established on Tuesday, with more disposition on the part of buyers to operate. Cloth has advanced, but the market is very inactive, and has been all the week. Offers have been made by buyers from day to day, but generally at prices which could not be accepted. Manufacturers and spinners were placed under contract to a great extent recently, at low prices, for short periods, and hence their rather free purchases of cotton at Liverpool which have been made to cover these contracts. The distrust which leads people to purchase cotton so immediately to cover their contracts is a matter of regret, because it sends up prices and in part defeats its own object. Shirtings, printers, mulls, jaconets, T-cloths, long-cloths, and domestics are all dearer. Long-cloths have been in rather more demand this week for the Levant trade, and the home trade houses have been operating rather more freely; but the advanced prices check business. For India and most of the leading foreign markets the business has been on a restricted scale. The market is quiet, with very little change.

ABSTRACT OF THE REPORT READ AT THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING OF THE STOCKHOLDERS, HELD IN PARIS ON THE 28TH DAY OF JULY, 1868.

The total amount of business transacted by the Comptoir for the period between the 1st of July, 1867, and the 15th of June, 1868, has been... ... F.2,279,561,150 or £90,627,320

The increase over the preceding year amounts to ... 378,588,624 or 14,968,327

Or about 16 per cent.

AGENCIES.

The transactions of the Agencies are the following:—

They make advances on produce, or on imported goods, also on bullion, Mexican dollars, rupee paper, &c., &c.

They buy drafts with documents attached, or issued against credits.

They draw on any commercial places, and transact all customary banking operations.

The first Agencies were established in China and India in 1860 and 1861, and have now secured the advantage resulting from an experience of eight years.

The operations of the two first years were only of a preliminary character; and although during three years the Agencies had to pass through the most severe commercial crisis, and lastly to feel the effect of the panic of 1866, the following is the result of their operations, and the amount of the nett profits realised since they were established:—

Year.	Interest.	Profits.	Total.
1860-61 ...	F.195,396 00	—	F.195,396 00
1861-62 ...	414,950 90	F 74,535 20	489,486 10
1862-63 ...	1,049,055 73	177,034 81	1,226,090 54

Total profits for the eight years	F.16,378,443 ...	£651,863
Besides this profit all bad debts from 1863 to 1866 have been provided for, amounting to	6,126,756 ...	243,850
To provide for outstanding unsettled and doubtful debts the Agencies have to the credit of their respective accounts a surplus of	1,622,901 ...	64,593
This shows that the nett profit realised by the Agencies in the first years of their establishment have amounted to	F.24,128,106 ...	£960,306
The total amount of the operations of the Agencies for the year past (1st July, 1867, to 15th June, 1868) has been	F.994,647,223 ...	£39,587,960

As follows:—

PROFIT AND LOSS—GENERAL ACCOUNT.

The total amount of profit realised this year by the Comptoir is	F.7,475,852 ...	£297,536
Less expenses, re discount on bills, &c.	1,940,766 ...	77,236
Nett profit	F.5,535,086 ...	£220,300

Which being distributed among the Stockholders of the old shares gives them a dividend of 10 per cent. nett., besides interest at 5 per cent., which has been paid to the new shares according to the time of the date of the paid up instalments.

The Report ends by observing that the low rate of interest during the last year has rendered it impossible to make large profits. Fortunately the beneficial result of the operations of the Agencies have more than compensated for the deficiency of the home transactions; and the shareholders are congratulated that during a year of such stagnation and depression, so fair a dividend as 10 per cent. has been obtained.

(Directors of the Company, 1866-8.)

AT a GENERAL MEETING, held on TUESDAY, the 12th day of MAY, 1868, the following resolutions were passed, relative to the continuance of the Company for a further period of three years from the 1st January, 1869; and notice is hereby given that applications for shares in the annexed form will be received at the offices of the Company until 31st October, 1868.

Applications for shares from persons not resident in Shanghai must be accompanied by a power of attorney to their agents to sign the deed of settlement in their behalf, and generally to represent them in all matters connected with the Company.

In accordance with the resolution passed at the meeting of 18th November, 1867, a separate office of the Company will be opened in London on 1st January, 1869.

By orders of the Court of Directors,

JOHN S. MACKINTOSH, Secretary.

Shanghai, 15th May, 1868.

Form of Application for Shares.

No.

To the Provisional Committee of the North-China Insurance Company.

Gentlemen,

hereby request that you will allot to shares in the above Company, and agree to accept such shares, or any less number you may allot to ; and agree to pay the first call of Tls. 200 per share, and all subsequent calls, and to subscribe the deed of settlement whenever required to do so.—Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

Resolutions referred to above.

Res. I. That a company to be called the "North-China Insurance Company" shall be formed for a further period of three years, from 1st January, 1869, to 31st December, 1871.

Res. II. That the Directors for the time being of the present Company be appointed to act as a Provisional Committee to organise the new Company.

Res. III. That this meeting recommends that the Provisional Committee should adopt as the basis of the new Company that the capital should be Tls. 1,500,000 in 1,500 shares of Tls. 1,000 each; paid up capital, Tls. 300,000, or Tls. 200 per share, and that the Committee be authorised to issue a prospectus inviting applications for shares and to proceed with the allotment.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE BORNEO COMPANY (LIMITED).

Singapore, April 6, 1868.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz, engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. Paterson, Simons and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WM. CLOUGHTON, Managing Director.

New Harbour, Singapore, June, 1868.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

Unerring Precision.—When the health is breaking down from the continuance of some weakening discharge, when ulcers refuse to heal and extending mischief is threatened, then is the time to try the potency of Holloway's healing Ointment and purifying Pills. No treatment for giving ease and safety tending to a cure can be compared to this. The Ointment cleans and cools the foul and angry sores, diminishes the inflammation, reduces the swelling, prevents the growth of proud flesh, and spares both pain and danger. Thousands testify from their own personal experience to the unvarying success attending the use of Holloway's medicaments in cases of ulcerated legs, enlarged veins, scurvy skin, and swelled ankles.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

From Osaka we learn that the Japanese Government has made every reparation demanded by the French for the murder of their countrymen at Sakhai. The Hiogo and Osaka Herald says:—Business is not so flourishing as could be desired, and the only thing that this can be attributed to is the unsettled state of affairs in the Japanese Cabinet, joined to the limited confidence native merchants seem to place in foreigners and the Government now in power, confident as they appear to be in the troubles which sooner or later must burst out. It is, however, probable that after the rainy season is over and we have a few fair days that the produce of the country, such as silk, tea, wax, &c., will be brought down, when trade, if not resumed with activity, will at all events be better than the general depression now experienced. It is a matter of difficulty in these times to come to any conclusion as to market rates. Three or four weeks ago, while fighting was going on, and even at the time of the rumoured approach of Aidzu, no demand whatever was made for arms, and the mere fact of enquiries being made for that article, now that we are led to suppose that peace has been established, shows that there is something in contemplation beyond our reach.

Private letters from Hiogo are not so cheerful in tone upon tradal matters as could be wished. Our correspondent, under date the 6th July, says:—"Business for the last month has been at a standstill here, owing to the rainy season, which stops communication with Osaka. . . . The rainy season here, which has already lasted five weeks, has put a stopper on business. The whole place is like a swamp, and we cannot move about. The natives say that a favourable change will take place in about ten days. What with wars, rumours of wars, floods, &c., there is no business in the place. I shall give it a fair trial during this half-year, and if affairs do not improve, sell off my stock and return to Hong Kong. Japan will some day be a great country, but I fear not in our time. When affairs are more satisfactory here I will again forward you correspondence for the China Mail."

Owing to heavy floods communication between the two ports was entirely suspended. Numbers of Japanese had been killed through the capsizing of native boats crossing the bar.

The editor of the Hiogo and Osaka Herald has, under instructions of his principals of the Japan Herald, at Yokohama, made a public apology for some articles he wrote on the recent visit of Sir Harry Parkes to the Mikado.

Sanction has been given by the Prussian and Italian representatives to their subjects to proceed to Neegata for trade, but Sir Harry Parkes still prohibits British subjects from doing the same, till affairs in Japan assume a more settled aspect.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices by the present P. and O. mail extend to the 12th of July. The outward mails of the 18th and 22nd May were received on the 5th and 10th July respectively. The following summary of news is from the Japan Times:—

In our last we announced with great pleasure the news of the recall to power of Yoshihisa, the ex-Shiogoon. Some have adapted to this Hotspur's sceptical habit of thought with respect to Glendwyr's boasted power "to call spirits from the vasty deep," and Yoshihisa, or rather Yoshihisa's friends, seem to be giving them unreasonably good reason. For, encouraged by the apparent disunion among the foreign Representatives, none of whom have imitated our own in utterly committing himself and his country with the Mikado, the ex-Shiogoon's friends persist in believing that after all, France or America, or that strong naval Power, Prussia, or his important new ally Denmark, will not throw him over—or that some deus ex machina will interfere to stop the Mikado and Sir Harry—and will not allow the head of the Tokugawa family to accept the terms offered by his master. Thus they try to prevent his return to Yedo, which they attempt to occupy themselves. But the Southern party have among them some who have learned this much from the school—that two particles of matter cannot occupy the same space at the same time—and as they want Yoshihisa in Yedo, they have proceeded to turn out his friends. This operation was commenced on Saturday, July 4th, and was conducted in this wise. In a part of Yedo, almost the remotest from the foreign legations which are, so to speak, at our end of the town, is a cemetery of the Shiogoons called the Ooyeno. This is situated on a rising ground, defended on the right flank by a small lake, and approachable only, as is the case with most Japanese temples or sacred places, by long straight roads. The place is thus naturally strong, and being moated and surrounded by sufficient walls, is easily defensible by a determined garrison. And the determined garrison was there. For the Ooyeno is in the very centre of a district filled by the discontented, disbanded hatamotos (lesser retainers) and soldiery of the Tokugawa family. These made the Ooyeno their head quarters, whence they have for some weeks been in the habit of sallying forth in small parties and materially harassing the southern nominal garrison of Yedo. This will not seem anomalous to the London mind, if it substitutes for the Ooyeno Norwood or Highgate-hill, and imagines the main points of the capital to be held by a garrison not sufficiently strong to protect all the suburbs. Reinforcements having arrived, however, it was determined to attack this position, and a complete victory has been the result. The Tokugawa men fought like demi-gods, and aided by the strength of their position and a battery of three guns they had in the Ooyeno, which commanded the main approach to the place, held their own through a summer's day. But artillery was brought up on the other side on the following morning—the 5th, and the Ooyeno was successfully stormed. The moral result of this victory of the Southerners is immense. They are, for the time being, so completely masters of the situation that men are even afraid to bury the dead Tokugawa men, whose bodies are allowed to lie, the prey of the wild dogs and the fowls of the air, in the sacred precincts of one of the holiest places of the defeated clan. The Tokugawa men are literally swept out of Yedo, and no man dare harbour one on pain of death.

There is an episode of this affair with which we need not long detain our readers. One of the Mikado's uncles, a Mia, had his official residence in the Ooyeno and has been, carried off by the fugitives. It is stated, but not yet on good authority, that it is the intention of the Tokugawa clan to set him up as a competitor for the Imperial Throne, its present occupant being, as they allege, not a free agent. But this requires confirmation. That he is in the hands of the northern party is certain.

We had news three days ago from the West Coast to the effect that Nee-e-gata would shortly be occupied by the Imperial forces, who were reported to be within fifty miles of it. Should this intelligence be confirmed, the objection to formally opening the port, now entertained by the British Minister, would be removed. The Prussian and Italian Representatives persist in their intention to open it for their countrymen in an informal manner on the 15th instant. We cannot but think Sir Harry Parkes wrong in not going with them on this point. Both Yedo and Nee-e-gata might have been opened, and should have been opened, on the date fixed, April 1st, and declared neutral ground, as we declared Yokohama neutral. This would have stopped the fighting and renewed our import trade. But at the same time, it would have been necessary for the foreign representatives as a body, to have declared for the Mikado, and this is what some of them will not do, clinging to the belief that they can restore the old regime against the declared will of Great Britain. "Against stupidity the gods themselves fight in vain."

We have to mention the return of the Ocean from a cruise south, in the course of which she exhibited her iron sides and big guns to our friends in Kagosima for a week.

A sudden change of wind from the south to north, culminating in a rather heavy gale, did considerable damage in the harbour and something on shore, on the night of the 27th June. Ships came into collision in the bay, and half-built houses went down on the bluff, and the bund was injured to some slight extent. Fortunately no serious damage was done. Another account says, "Much damage was done both ashore and afloat by the typhoon and floods of 27th to 29th June. The P.M.S.S. Company were great sufferers. Their sheds were blown down bodily, a total wreck, not a stick left standing. The Colorado, too, had a portion of her upper gallery and one of her saloon cabins stove in and a boat or two crushed. The steamer Albion's bows were scraped by the barque Italy, her figure-head knocked off and bowsprit broken. Many other minor accidents happened to the shipping. The bridge at Nungi was swept away bodily, and ferry boats made a harvest by keeping up the communication between Yokohama and Kanagawa sides."

Our new municipal director has inaugurated his tenure of office by inviting tenders for a thorough system of surface drainage of the settlement, a most necessary improvement.

NAGASAKI.

The native Christians at Nagasaki have, it seems, at last been sentenced to suffer death, and a body of about 150 of them were, on the night of the 10th July, hurried on board the steamer Sir Harry Parkes, to be taken out to sea and there drowned. Some fifty more, chiefly women, were to await another Japanese steamer, and suffer the same fate. Directly they heard what was in contemplation the Foreign Consuls jointly addressed a stirring remonstrance to the Governor, urging him to rescind such a cruel order, but the only reply they received was a recommendation to mind their own business. Another meeting of the Consular body for the discussion of this matter, though too late to do anything towards effecting the safety of the doomed ones on board the Sir Harry Parkes, was to be held on Saturday, the 11th July. Surely the authorities of Christian nations will, by some means or other, be able to bring it within the scope of their duties to prevent such atrocities as these. The Jesuits, we believe, claim some forty thousand converts in Japan; if the slaughter has once commenced where will it end? Are the whole of these converts to be sacrificed to the fury of their Heathen rulers?

The following is from the Nagasaki Times, a newly-established weekly paper published at this port:—

"We hear that Captain Roper, of the gunboat Commodore, has patented an improved screw propeller, and experimented on it in Nagasaki harbour with the steam launch of H.M.S. Sylvia, in the presence of the engineers of the fleet. It is said to be a complete success, an average increased speed of 1·92 being obtained. The principle of the patent consists of two screws on the same shaft, one inside and the other outside the rudder. This plan seems to have an advantage over the twin screws, as the same engine drives them and no extra boiler power or machinery is required. The screws being set at right angles, there is more continual hold in the water, consequently less slip. We wish Captain Roper every success."

CHINA.

NEWCHWANG.

A correspondent at this port writes as follows:—

Mr. Williamson, a missionary well known for his travels in Shantung, has just returned from a journey to the confines of Chinese territory in the north. He tells me that he met with great hospitality from the natives everywhere, but I hope he will give us an account of what he saw, which, to judge by his papers on Shantung, could not fail to be interesting.

The foreign custom-house, under the able management of Mr. Macpherson, has always worked well at Newchwang, and the port has been well cared for in the respect of buoys and a lightship, which have made it, instead of the most dangerous, one of the safest places on the coast for the visits of foreign vessels. The new pilot regulations, by which every vessel is compelled to take a pilot, are both successful and popular, and, what is morally important, have made the pilots a better and steadier class of men.

Messrs. J. M. and Co.'s oil and bean cake mill, under the care of an active and able agent, is rapidly rising on land that was a few years ago washed by the tidal flow of our great river. An iron godown is going up around it, and it will certainly be ready to commence operations before the close of the season.

Newchwang enjoys a beautiful climate. For its scenery the less said the better for its reputation. If it has a redeeming feature, that is to be found in the hills to the north, distant some fifteen miles, on which the wearied eye rests with deep relief after wandering over the intermediate flats. In this regard it has the advantage of Tientsin, where, far as the vision ranges, you seek for change in vain.

SHANGHAI.

Advices from this port are to the 18th July. The outward mail of May 22 was delivered on the 5th July.

The following items are from the North China Herald:—

It is currently reported at Soochow that Li-hung-chang, disgusted at the treatment he has lately met with, intends to throw up office and retire into private life as soon as his campaign against the northern rebels has ended. But another strange rumour is that Liu-ming-chuen, one of his favourite generals, who has lately retired from command to Anwhey, which is also Li's native province, is said to have summoned his division to join him at the end of the current month. What he can want 20,000 men for in the heart of Anwhey it is difficult to conceive.

Some further particulars regarding the track of the late French expedition from Cambodia have been published. The English expedition from Rangoon to Yunnan is progressing, but has met with much difficulty, and does not promise to result in much commercial advantage.

After a brief period of decay Chinkiang threatens to rise like a phœnix from its ashes. We have already spoken of its carboniferous wealth; we now learn that among some minerals which Dr. Macgowan lately analysed for the Taoutai is a very pure specimen of graphite, transmitted from Chinkiang by Mr. Sands, American Consul at that port. The Chinkiang graphite is as valuable as that of Brazil, being almost pure carbon, having but a trace of iron in its composition. Borradaile graphite—Cumberland—which is the best in use, contains four per cent. of iron. In some years the net produce of the six weeks' annual working of that mine has amounted to £40,000. How far the Government of China will be able to protect the mineral wealth which foreigners are bringing to light remains to be seen. We hope these treasures will not, through a want of wisdom on their part, prove to be a calamitous gift of nature.

The new steamer Hongque, built by Mr. J. P. Roberts, made a successful trial trip on the 13th inst. She is to be employed on the Yang-tsze, by Messrs. Olyphant and Co.

Two amusing notifications have been issued by the Shanghai Chih-hien, inculcating female propriety. One of them strongly recalls a recent utterance by the Pope on the same subject of ladies' dresses.

At Chefoo further preparations are being made to push forward the working of the mines. The principle is a wise one—to work them first, and ask permission afterwards.

The Supreme Court and Consular Gazette says:—"During the past week there has been scarcely a single occurrence of importance to notice in Shanghai, and the news from the outports has been of little moment. The Chefoo goldfields are likely to be worked, two foreigners having made arrangements to enter upon operations. Beyond this we have not any news from the North of a definite nature; but it does not appear that affairs are becoming more secure. The Shanghai Recorder states that a Tartar general of high standing and reputation, by name Too-Sing-Qua, has been appointed to the position of generalissimo of the forces in Chili, and has full powers of a dictator conferred upon him, being able to inflict the punishment of death without referring to Peking, and also that the authorities at the capital are taking steps to condemn Li-Hung-Chung for leaving his post without suppressing the Nienfei rebellion.

"It has been decided by the Chinese authorities to convey the usual rice tribute, this autumn, to Peking via Tientsin, in foreign steamers.

"A rumour has gained considerable currency among the Chinese, that arrangements are being completed for obtaining the assistance of Europeans in the six Government boards at Peking. Mr. Hart's lengthened stay at the capital, is not improbably the origin of this statement; but although it may indicate that some improvements of this natnre are in contemplation it is evidently an exaggeration upon whatever fact is at bottom of it.

"Chun, the magistrate at the mixed court, who it was rumoured has been degraded on the appointment of Yeh, Che-Hsien, to the post of Hai-fang-Ting, is to be appointed Tung-Chi, and will, therefore, continue to act in his former capacity.

"We hear upon good authority that the China branches of the Agra Bank will in all probability be again opened."

The Shanghai Recorder has one or two items of interest:—"We hear that considerable feeling has been manifested relative to the erection of the jetty opposite Messrs. Russell and Co.'s, and that a protest against this action of the Council in granting the permission, as being in excess of their authority, will be circulated for signature.

"We are informed, upon good authority, that Sir Rutherford Alcock purposes returning to England during the present year. It is not stated whether he intends to resign his office, or whether, as is not improbable, he may return home for a time with the object of 'assisting' in the revision of the treaties. If he adheres at home to the principles which he has advocated out here, he will certainly be of more service to the Chinese than their paid Minister, Mr. Burlinghame."

A new building for purposes of amusement has been opened at Shanghai. The "Alhambra," as it is called, is quite suitable for the purpose for which it is intended—well lighted and ventilated and sufficiently capacious. The formal inauguration of the music-hall, forms, we think, a noticeable epoch in the social era of this settlement.

Messrs. Kroes and Co.'s line of steamers from Shanghai to Nagasaki and Hiogo has, we hear, been strengthened by the purchase of the steamer Mona, which is intended to run in turn with the Fee-loong and Osaka. The latter steamer will, it is said, lie up for a time for necessary repairs as soon as the Mona takes her place on the line.

The news of Mr. Fitz-Roy's death at Nagasaki had reached Shanghai, and the Herald has the following tribute to his memory:—"From Nagasaki we learn with great regret the death of Mr. Fitz-Roy, late Commissioner of Customs at Shanghai. The news will be received by the service and by the community as a calamity. During the time of his residence in the settlement Mr. Fitz-Roy had won the regard of the residents of all nationalities. His patient attention and habitual courtesy towards all those with whom he was brought into official contact, and his general kindliness towards those who knew him more intimately, will not easily be forgotten. Up to March last Mr. Fitz-Roy's health had been good, but latterly he has been gradually weaker, and since his departure for Japan the news transmitted to his friends has been less and less hopeful. He had seen much work in various climates, and had never spared himself in the discharge of his duties. He was appointed Commissioner of Customs in his Imperial Majesty's Service at Canton, July 1st, 1859. Mr. Fitz-Roy has since served in our midst, and, throughout the whole period of his tenure of office, exhibited the warmest interest in the welfare of the service. His death makes a gap which it will not be easy to fill, and his memory as a high-minded Christian gentleman will be cherished alike by his kindred, by his friends, and by the public."

The Herald concludes an article on the tea trade with the following sentence:—"We fear, however, that as long as the buying continues to be spread over so large an area no radical change will be made, although until such a change is made a return to a steady and safe trade cannot be hoped for." Apart from the considerations offered above, the concentration of markets is the only remedy; and were Hankow closed to-morrow, and the Yangtze steamers run alone on Chinese account, our present lamentations would rapidly give place to confident auguries of a happier future—for tea.

The following Hydrographical notice is published:—On and after the 18th day of July, 1868, the lightship moored at the entrance of the Yang tsze-kiang will exhibit, between the hours of sunset and sunrise, a "Red Revolving Light" at intervals of twenty seconds. The light is 38 feet above the level of the sea, and is visible 12 miles from a ship's deck of 16 feet elevation. The light vessel is painted red, has one mast surmounted with a ball. A gun is fired from her to attract attention when a ship is observed running into danger; and the signal, by Marryat's code, of the course that should be steered is then exhibited. In thick or foggy weather the "Fog Bell" (worked by clock-work) is set going, striking every sixteen seconds, and can be heard in calm weather at a distance of two miles.—J. M. HOCKLY, harbour-master.

DINNER TO MR. CONSUL WINCHESTER.

A public dinner was given to the above-named gentleman prior to his departure from Shanghai, at the Shanghai Club. It was very well attended, about ninety guests, including the leading members of the mercantile community, sitting down to table. Several members of the Consular body and other gentlemen of note were present. Mr. F. B. Johnson (of Jardine, Matheson, and Co.) presided.

The principal feature of interest was of course Mr. Winchester's reply to the speech in which the Chairman proposed his health, which we therefore give in full:—

Mr. Winchester said he should be very cold and insensible if he did not appreciate the kindness and compliment shown him by those present, in asking him to meet them that evening. Though he could not excuse the inadequacy of his words by the plea of being unaccustomed to public speaking—for they knew it was ofttimes his duty to address them on themes not so pleasant as the present; themes on which one would much rather not have to speak—yet he felt that no terms could sufficiently express the feelings which caused this to be the proudest moment of his life. Though he was conscious he was not worthy to be spoken of in the handsome terms employed by the chairman, and though he felt he had done little to merit this testimony of their regard, he could say that if he had not so, he had at least tried. When he first heard of the intention to pay him this compliment, it had set him thinking of what had taken place during the past three years, and he had come to the conclusion of his critic in the Evening Express, that he had done very little to merit their approbation. He had connected his name with no striking object. He had been unable to help forward any important public improvement, not that he had not done all that he could do, more especially in public matters, because he knew that there was there no clashing with private interests—but he felt the kindness (of his hosts) was greater than his deserts. He was also conscious that, however much he had tried to conciliate all his countrymen, he had nothing of that natural faculty for acquiring popularity which was an essential gift. It was not as though they heard the joyous peal of his worthy colleague Markham resounding through the hall, calling up a brighter look on every one's countenance. But he at least could not accuse himself of having sought, either in the press or out of it, by the arts of those who seek popular favour, as an end in itself, to keep his name constantly before them. He valued their kindness as setting a seal of approbation on his earnest desire to do his duty justly towards all men with whom he came in contact. If he had succeeded in convincing them that this was the object of his desire, he had been successful beyond his hopes. There might be something, too, as the chairman had remarked, in his name having been now before the public for nearly a quarter of a century. He was pretty well known in China, if only by those who read the northern newspapers. When he landed in Hong Kong in 1842 he came to meet a generation of merchants, whose names had passed into household words. There were the Alexander Mathesons, the T. A. Gibbs, the Lancelot Dents, the Duncan Fletchers. These had been all gathered to their fathers, or had disappeared from China. They had been succeeded by another generation bearing the same patronymics, and these had been in turn succeeded by others, of whom the chairman and others present that evening were not unworthy types. So he could say he had known three generations here. It was not everyone could boast so long a knowledge. But after their kindness to him it would ill become him to detain them by an egotistical speech detailing the changes he had seen. He could, he dared say, keep them by the quarter-hour in talking of Hong Kong before it became a royal colony; when the only merchant's house on it was a godown occupied by a brother of his friend whom he saw sitting at this end of the table. At Canton there was then only a factory where no one was permitted to live save the servants of that great Company whose legacy to their country had been one of the finest empires in the world. He might tell them of his arrival in Amoy, where he had landed with a box of stationery to grope his way to what were then ill-understood duties. But these reminiscences, however agreeable to himself, would not be so to those present. He would ask them, therefore, to let him thank them once more for the honour they had done him, and to assure them that when the last glimpse of China faded from his views he would not have taken his last leave of his friends there. Wherever he might be, his thoughts would turn to them and their kindness. It was impossible for a man to have received more support than he had done in this community. Never had he suggested a useful object for which he had failed to get assistance. If he spoke, therefore, with gratitude, he did no more than was due from him. If he were now permitted to retire, he should carry into the seclusion of a Highland cottage ardent recollections of his friends in China.

THE LATE EXPEDITION TO KOREA.

Mr. F. H. B. Jenkins has been tried in the U. S. Consular Court, for being concerned in the unlawful expedition to Korea. The prosecution broke down, failing to connect Mr. Jenkins distinctly with the case, though he advanced money to its actual promoter and accompanied the expedition. A steamer was chartered and a number of men taken, with the object, according to the prosecution, of exhuming the body of a deceased sovereign of Korea. Whether it was expected to find treasure in the grave, or whether the body was to be used to extort money from the Koreans, does not clearly appear. At any rate they failed to get at it, and retired. Mr. Oppert, a Prussian subject, who was prime mover in the expedition, declares his object was to endeavour to negotiate a treaty with Korea; but it is strange that he was not accredited by any Government. A French priest is also mixed up. Perhaps further inquiry by the Consuls of either of these individuals may elicit the actual facts.

The N. C. Herald has the following comments on the mysterious affair:—"Mr. Oppert's last voyage to Korea deserves to rank with that of Amyas Leigh to Mexico, and needs the pen of a Kingsley or an Edgar Poe to describe it as it deserves. There is material in it for a novel of the first water; just sufficient fact to build upon, and mystery enough to afford unlimited scope for imagination. All we positively know is that the China and a small steam tender were chartered for a voyage to Korea, that some hundred and fifty men besides the crew were taken in her, and that, on arriving at the Korean coast, Mr. Oppert and his bodyguard went off in the tender, remained about thirty-six hours, and returned discomfited. But of rumours as to what passed in the interval, of the object of this strange night excursion, of mysterious combats with the natives, of men wounded, of graves laid open, of treaties miscarried, of calves stolen, of kings exhumed, of golden coffins, and anticipated contracts for piece goods, there is wealth and to spare. Our readers can construct their own theory at will, after perusing the evidence given before the United States Consular Court, in the course of Mr. Jenkins' trial for setting on foot an unlawful expedition to that country. From the result of that trial it is evident that Mr. Jenkins was a wondering participator in these events, ignorant alike of the nature and design of the expedition which he accompanied. He certainly lent Mr. Oppert Tls. 5,000 and sold him some cases of muskets; but he neither asked nor was told the object of the loan or of the arms. He wanted a trip and went as a passenger, with a proper passenger ticket. There was certainly no jot of evidence to connect him more closely with the affair. We are simply left to wonder at his lack of curiosity and at Mr. Oppert's reticence. Even up to the present moment we have to rest content with the latter's assurance that the secret was not his to communicate, and to hope that further inquiry may disclose the original proprietor, from whom it may be eventually wormed out. Mr. Oppert does give us one hint. He says he went to make a treaty and establish an embassy. He was not apparently an authorised agent of his own or of the Korean Government, but he had reason to believe that the latter would come to terms, and, having carried his negociation to a successful issue, he hoped to make an immediate contract which was to remunerate him for the risk and outlay of the trip. On this slender prospect he was willing to incur the large and certain expense of chartering a steamer, and Mr. Heinsen so thoroughly caught his philanthropic fire, that he was willing to dispense with material guarantee for payment. He would have trusted Mr. Oppert implicitly, although believing him to have no money.

"What passed during that midnight excursion who shall disclose. Mr. Oppert will not. Diplomacy is privileged to shroud itself from the vulgar gaze. Stripped of its mystery, it would sink to the level of every-day business. So we are dependent on a Chinese member of the expedition for an account of its proceedings. He deposes to having gone a long way up a river, to having landed with his companions and marched some distance inland, to having come to a grave and dug deeply into it, until a big stone put a stop to further research. The irresistible inference is, that Mr. Oppert expected to find a treaty in the sarcophagus; and that, to the thickness of the superincumbent stone, foreigners may attribute their prolonged exclusion from Korea. Whether the treaty was an obsolete one, buried with the body of its royal author, or whether it were a new one, deposited in this secret spot by some timid official whose fears deterred him from personal communication with barbarians; whether the grave contained a talisman that was to induce an immediate desire to purchase piecegoods, at any cost, from its possessor; or where the specie was to come from which was to freight the China on her downward voyage—who shall now say. Mr. Oppert's effort has been frustrated, and Korea remains closed to the outer world. People ask, with interest, whether there is to be any further inquiry into this mysterious case. For, however convinced of the meritorious object of the voyage, they still want the mysterious connection of the golden coffin, the miscarried treaty, and the unsigned contract unravelled. They stand aghast, at present, before the daring combination of plucky speculation and philanthropic enterprise, which Mr. Oppert has disclosed. They fail to trace the action of the priest, who flashes like a meteor through the tale; and they want to know whether, in the pure interests of public curiosity, the Prussian and French Consuls are going to hold judicial inquiry into the circumstances of this wondrous voyage."

FOOCHOW.

A rumour, based, we believe, upon actual fact, has reached us to the effect that serious embarrassment is being experienced in carrying out the design contemplated by the projector of the Foochow Arsenal. The account given from one quarter, that operations had actually been suspended, is probably exaggerated, but there is no doubt that the expenses of so vast a scheme are telling seriously upon the resources of the local mandarins. The completion or abandonment of the project, however, is less interesting to foreigners in China—naturally excepting those directly interested—than the course of action to which repudiation by the Chinese would give rise on the part of France. That country, after having, conjointly with Great Britain, spent a little time, blood and treasure in enforcing the theory of "centralisation," so far departed from her avowed policy as to permit certain French subjects to enter into an engagement with the provincial authorities of Fuhkien for the construction of an arsenal and dockyard, without (ostensibly) securing any guarantee from the central Government that the engagements entered into would be faithfully performed. The point of interest to be developed in the case of the scheme having proved abortive is therefore the action which the French authorities will thereupon take. They would be somewhat in a dilemma. If they demanded compensation from the Imperial Government, and thereby recognised the centralisation policy, they would place themselves in an invidious position towards Great Britain and the treaty Powers, inasmuch as it would be obvious that they had sanctioned the formation of an arsenal and dockyard in China by French subjects, under French protection, a most decided violation of the "co-operative policy" as at present understood. If, on the other hand, satisfaction were to be demanded and obtained from the provincial authorities direct, that step, however admirable, would be in direct opposition to the "policy of centralisation." The third alternative, that of treating the French employes of the Viceroy as individuals who must stand or fall by the will of their employer, would, although unexpected, be not less a matter of great interest to all residents in China, when the designs with which France is credited are considered. For our own part we shall be unfeignedly surprised if this line of action be taken. It is not of course certain that there will be a necessity for action of any kind, as it is more than probable that the Imperial authorities would come to the rescue should the Viceroy find himself unable to carry out the comprehensive ideas which he has projected. But should cause of embarrassment occur the policy pursued by France in this matter cannot but materially affect the relations of all other foreign Powers with the Peking officials.

HONG KONG.

From this port we have advices to the 24th of July by the P. and O., and the 26th by the French mail. The outward mail of June 5 was received on the 14th July, with London telegrams to June 27. The Ellora, which brought the homeward mails down from the North, was caught in a severe typhoon at the mouth of the Yang-tsze-kiang, and had to anchor.

The only topic of local interest is an attempt on the part of the Canton Government to establish a cordon of Custom houses on the stretch of mainland immediately opposite Hong Kong, for the purpose of collecting a Le-kin (or war duty) on opium. The Overland Trade Report gives the most concise account of the affair:—"His Excellency Jui, Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief of the Two Kwang Provinces, has issued a proclamation, in which he refers to the very well-known fact that of opium imported into China from Hong Kong not one-eighth pays any duty whatever into the Imperial or provincial coffers, and points out that the revenue must no longer suffer from the abuses that have evidently prevailed hitherto. He further denounces the crime of those who, without authority, have attempted to levy these duties on the high seas, although, at the same time, he cannot sympathise with the sufferers who have only, as he says, reaped the just reward of their crimes in attempting to smuggle opium and piece goods into China. To put an end to all further difficulties as to the collection of the opium taxes, his highness announces the establishment of stations, one in the Cap-sing-moon, one at Kowloong, and one in the Ly-ee-moon, to which Chinese traders are invited to resort, pay their Li-kin, obtain a permit and other papers, and pass on free from all further imposition save the regular and import duty, payable at one or other of the open ports.

"If the Viceroy's proclamation meant nothing more than what it purports on the face of it to mean, and if it could be certain that no other duty would be levied at the stations named than the Li-Kin or war-tax imposed upon opium, there would be no just cause of complaint. When the Chinese Government legalised the opium trade, the utmost license was given them as to what duties they should impose on it, when once it had passed into the hands of Chinese. The transit duty clause does not apply to opium. The European merchant has no right to accompany it into the interior. It is not asserted for a moment by any one, even by those most opposed to the Chinese view of the case, that the Chinese have not full power to establish custom-houses on any part of their own coast, if only a stone's throw from our border. The danger is that these custom-houses, once established, will be used for other than the purposes indicated in the Proclamation of Jui, and that not opium alone, but piece goods of all sorts will have duties levied on them far in excess of those authorised by treaty. The native population of this colony are almost paralysed with fear, and for the time being all business is at an end.

"Perhaps the most noteworthy fact in connection with this affair has been the discovery, it is said, that with a degree of barefaced impudence to be found only among the Chinese, the Viceroy had authorised the establishment in this city of one of his opium-tax stations, and that a very well-known Chinese resident, Ho-Alloy, late interpreter at the police court, was in charge."

Inspector Daly, the pirate hunter, has already commenced to prosecute masters of junks who have not disarmed, according to ordinance. A junk-master and his crew were charged with having had a number of muskets and hand-grenades (or stink-pots) on board their junk, contrary to the third and fourth sections of the ordinance. Mr. Deane informed the Court that due notification in Chinese had been given. The master was fined twenty dollars, and sent to hard labour for fourteen days; while the crew were each fined one dollar, besides four days' hard labour. It is supposed that forfeiture of the junk and apparel will not be strictly enforced by Government for the first offence.

A gentleman has furnished us (China Mail) with an account of one of the most horrible of the many horrible incidents peculiar to the coolie trade which we have yet published:—"I drop you a few lines, which I am sure you will give space to. The Italian ship Theresa arrived in Macao yesterday morning, having left that port for Callao about five months ago, and brings with her one of the most dreadful tales of mutiny which I have heard for many years. It appears from the statement of the captain, Bolos, that she sailed from Macao, with 296 coolies and a general cargo of silk, tea, &c., on the 3rd of February last. Things seem to have been as usual, and after a passage of sixty-two days land was sighted, which proved to be New Zealand. While the men were employed in the fore part of the ship, a rush was made aft by the coolies to seize the cabin and arms, which they accomplished, and before ten minutes had elapsed twelve of the crew were killed, cut to pieces and thrown overboard; the second mate was also killed on the top-gallant fore-castle, while fighting manfully, by one of the ship's crew, who shot him with a rifle to save his own life. The mate had seventeen wounds, and was placed in irons, and after eighty days' torture, such as driving nails into his head, &c., was killed about two days before the ship arrived off the coast of China. But now comes the most horrid part of this story. The Hakkas and Puntis, after the ship was taken, had a free fight, and in less than two hours fifty were killed and their heads taken off; after which they were placed in boxes and put in the ship's hold. The stench after sixty days was dreadful, and to add to this the captain's wife was placed in the 'tween decks and not treated with the greatest kindness. There is no doubt but the greater part of the coolies were pirates, as they made the captain steer for the harbour of Tin-pack, and had quite a knowledge of the use of the compass and of the chart. The ship, after anchoring in the port of Tin-pack, was stripped of everything of value, and in this plunder we are informed the Mandarins gave every assistance. The ship's name was taken off all her boats, and after many trials she reached Macao Roads yesterday with a crew of about eight Europeans alive, including the captain's wife."

An earthquake was experienced on July 5th, at 7.45 P.M., which completely destroyed the walls round the British Consulate at Tamsui, but we are glad to hear there were no lives lost.

INQUIRY INTO THE LOSS OF THE "BENARES."

The following decision has been arrived at by a Naval Court held to enquire into the loss of the P. & O. S. Benares.

"The Court having carefully weighed and considered the whole of the evidence are of opinion:

"1st.—That although all due precautions were taken by the master to steer the Benares in the usual track of steamers, we consider that the influence of the tide took her somewhat out of her course at a place where it is not possible to ascertain with any accuracy either the set or velocity of the tide. Looking at the distance of the spot on which the ship struck from the usual track (only about 2½ miles), and bearing in mind that at least ten minutes elapsed, during which the vessel went at least a mile through the negligence of the officers on the look-out, and not of the master, Mr. W. McCulloch, and seeing that the master was during that time looking at his chart, the Court is of opinion that no blame attaches to Mr. McCulloch, master of the ship Benares.

"2nd.—Considering that Mr. Richard Cumberland, junior officer of the watch, did not use the ordinary and obvious precaution, after seeing the land ahead, of hailing to have the ship stopped, orthe helm shifted, but left the forecastle to communicate personally with the officer of the watch, whereby time was lost; and considering that Mr. Henry Hudgell, officer of the watch, who had been left in charge of the vessel, after the supposed land had been pointed out to him, did not at once either stop the vessel or shift her helm, as was his undoubted duty, but went leisurely down the ladder to look for the master, thereby losing time enough to have reversed, and in all probability have saved the ship, the Court is of opinion that the Benares was lost by the negligence of Mr. Richard Cumberland, junior officer of the watch, and Mr. Hudgell, officer of the watch.

"The Court doth therefore suspend the certificates of the said Mr. Cumberland and Mr. Henry Hudgell for a period of six months.

"And the said Mr. Richard Cumberland and Mr. Henry Hudgell's certificates are hereby suspended for six months, and the said Mr. William McCulloch, master, and the other officers of the ship, are hereby acquitted of all blame accordingly."

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Dates from this port are to the 1st August. The outward French and English mails of the 18th and 19th June arrived out on the 19th and 22nd July respectively. There is absolutely no local news worth recording, the only item of interest we can find being the following paragraph from the Singapore Daily Times:—

"The propriety and need of establishing a British Consul in Saigon have at last attracted the attention of Government. The question, we learn, has been submitted by H.E. the Governor to the Chamber of Commerce here for their opinion and suggestions, and they have unanimously approved of the idea, and recommended that a paid official should be appointed for that post without delay. There can be no two opinions on the point, and indeed it is a matter of marvel why a British Consul has not been sent to Saigon long before this. Saigon is large and important enough to have merited the distinction long ago. It is one of the most important outlets for this market, and certainly the interests of British subjects there require as much looking after and protection as they do in Bangkok, where a British Consular establishment has been long in existence."

THE EVER-VICTORIOUS ARMY.—The Pall Mall Gazette has a review of Mr. Wilson's new work on Colonel Gordon's campaign, commencing thus:—"This able and interesting volume, by a writer who has given close attention to Chinese affairs, and has had the advantage of residing for some time in the country, appears at an opportune moment. Just now peculiar interest and importance are imparted to everything bearing on the condition of China by the approaching revision of the treaty of Tientsin. In choosing a title Mr. Wilson has done his work some injustice, for while he paints a graphic picture of the Taiping movement and the feats of Colonel Gordon and his 'Ever-Victorious Army,' he also gives a full account of the social and political development of the Celestial Empire; and his book is therefore one of wide scope and varied information." This from the Pall Mall Gazette—a paper whose critics are difficult to please, and by no means sparing with the rod—is high praise indeed.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Since last report a long continuance of stormy weather, and some desultory hostilities at Yedo, had interfered with trade, reducing transactions to a very small scale. Grey Shirtings were still neglected, and Yarns rather lower in price; while nothing had been done in other goods. Deliveries were small, and stocks again increased by the arrival of the Grasmere with a general cargo. The quotations were:—Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., 38½ yards 39 inches, $2.45 to 2.50 per piece; 8 lbs., 4 to 8 lbs., 8 yards, $2.90 to 3.0; 9 lbs., 44 inches, $3.25 to 3.35. Cotton Yarn—Nos. 16 to 24, $49.0 to 51.0 per picul; Nos. 28 to 32, $51.0 to 53.0; Nos. 38 to 42, $51.50 to 53.0.

SHANGHAI.—Cottons: In Plain Cottons a satisfactory business had been transacted, and a stimulus to trade had been imparted by the reappearance of the Tientsin dealers as buyers in the market. Grey Shirtings, both 7 lbs. and 8¼ lbs., especially the latter, had been in good demand at higher prices; heavy weights had also met with good inquiry. White Shirtings had been freely dealt in, but at very low figures. Drills, both American and English, had continued in good demand at last mail's rates. T-Cloths, 6 lbs. and 7 lbs., had met with ready sale, the attention of buyers having been directed chiefly to good ordinary makes. Fancy Cottons, with but few exceptions, had been difficult to move. Woollens: Spanish Stripes had attracted a considerable amount of attention at former quotations. Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths had been sparingly dealt in. Camlets had been dull of sale. Long Ells had not commanded much attention, either for Scarlet or Assorted colours. Lastings had met with but little inquiry. Metals: Nail Rod and Bar Iron had been in good demand. Hoop and Pig had been dull of sale, and prices of such were lower. Lead had declined in value in the face of large importations. Tin Plates and Steel had been in small inquiry at quotations. Quicksilver had not been inquired for. Coals: There was little change in the state of the Coal market generally—prices were in some instances rather lower. The arrivals were: English, 3,900 tons; Australian, 1,489 tons; Japan, 400 tons; Keelung, 1,865 tons; total, 7,654 tons. The current quotations were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 38½ yds., 39 in., 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.9.5 to 2.0; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3.2; 9 to 9¾ lbs., Tls. 2.7.5 to 3.4.0; White Shirtings, 40 yds. 36 in. 52 reed, Tls. 1.7.5 to 1.8.0; 56 reed, Tls. 1.8.5 to 1.9.5; 60 reed, Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.1.0; 64 reed, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.2.5; 66 to 72 reed, Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.6.5; American Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.1.5 to 4.3.4; American Jeans, 30 yds. 30 in. 10½ lbs., Tls. 3.3.5 to 3.4.0; American Sheetings, 40 yds. 40 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.2.0 to 4.3.0; English Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 12 to 15 lbs., Tls. 3.8.0 to 4.2.0.; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., 24 yds. 32 in., Tls. 1.5.0 to 2.1.3; 8 to 8.4. lbs., 24 yds. 36 in., Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.4.0; Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.5 to 0.7.0 per yard; Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloth, Tls. 0.8.0 to 1.0.0; Camlets, English, S., 56 yds. 31 in., Tls. 13.0.0 to 13.5.0 per piece; S.S., Tls. 12.5.0 to 13.2.5; S.S.S., Tls. 9.0 to 10.0; Iron, Flat and Round, Tls. 2.4.5 to 2.5.0 per picul; Nail Rod, Tls. 2.5.0 to 2.5.5 per picul; Hoop, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.2.5 per picul; Pig, Tls. 10.0 to 14.0. per ton; Lead, 6.6.0 to 7.0 per picul; Tin Plates, Tls. 4.9.0 to 5.1.0 per box; Steel, Tls. 4.0 to 4.1.0 per tub; Quicksilver, Tls. 49.0 per picul; Coals—English, Tls. 9.7.5 per ton; Cardiff, Tls. 10.5.0 per ton; American, Tls. 13.0 per ton.

HANKOW.—Business in Piece Goods had been more restricted during the fortnight, but staple articles had received a fair amount of attention. Grey Shirtings had undergone no material change in values; closing quotations were Tls. 2.2.3 to 2.2.7 for 8¼lbs. and Tls. 1.9.3 to 1.9.6 per piece for 7lbs. White Shirtings had been difficult of sale, at a reduction in rates of 5 cand. to 1 mace per piece. T-Cloths had been in large supply, but former quotations, excepting those for the finer kinds, had been well maintained; 8 lbs. goods had been more enquired for. Drills, owing to large supplies, had given way in value slightly. Fancy Cottons had been in the most trifling enquiry. Camlets had been in very moderate request. Lastings had been most difficult to move, even at reduced quotations. Long Ells had not been so active, and quotations for Scarlet were 5 cand. to 1 mace per piece lower. Spanish Stripes had been more enquired for, but at low prices. Figured Orleans had not been wanted.

FOOCHOW.—The sales reported during the fortnight had been as follows:—1,600 pieces, 8¼ lbs., Grey Shirtings, at $3.40 to 3.50 per piece; 1,000 pieces, 7 lbs., Grey Shirtings, at $2.90 per piece; 600 pieces, 7 lbs., T-Cloths, at $2.75 per piece; 1,000 pieces, at 7¼ lbs., T-Cloths, at $2.60 per piece; 850 piculs, Lead, at $10.50 to 11.00 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s report dated 23rd July:—Cotton Yarn: Two parcels of 50 bales each have been taken by a foreign speculator, but native dealers have kept aloof, and prices are $2.50 per bale lower. Piece Goods: A moderate business has been done in 8.4 lb. Grey Shirtings, 6 to 7.2 lb. T-Cloths and Drills. 8.4 lb. Grey Shirtings are in very large stock, and all but the best chops are 5 cents lower. Of the sales reported, 15,000 pieces were sold some months since at $2.90 "to arrive," and resold at $3.00, but on arrival were refused by the purchasers as not equal to muster, and were sold some ten days ago to four large dealers combining as one buyer at $2.75. White Shirtings are not wanted, and are down fully 10 cents per piece. 7 and 7.2 lb. T-Cloths are 5 cents lower. In addition to the sales of Drills reported under our list of quotations, about 2,100 pieces Dutch Drills have been taken at $4.60 to $4.70. 30 yard English Drills are inquired for, and there is some little demand for American Drills, holders of which are very firm at our quotations. Woollens: Almost all descriptions show a further decline, the exceptions being Scarlet Long Ells, Spanish Stripes, and 10 lb. Blankets, quotations for all of which are, however, nominal. Metals: A moderate business has been done. Nail-rod Iron is again lower, and best qualities of Bar are down 10 cents per picul. Hoop Iron, Wire, Steel, and Tin Plates are unchanged in value. Lead is again lower. Quicksilver is saleable only at lower rates. Coal: Arrivals have been 1,013 tons Welsh, to consumers, and 900 tons Sydney. About 1,700 tons Anthracite have been taken at $12.15 and 600 tons have since been resold at the same figure, and 250 tons at $12.50. There are buyers but no sellers of Welsh at $14, and sellers, but no buyers of Sydney at $9.75 to 10.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The continued heavy rains having greatly interfered with supplies, the business of the fortnight had been considerably curtailed, and settlements were computed to be about 1,000 piculs, principally of leaf of medium quality, both for the London and American markets. Arrivals of new leaf had been very small, of inferior quality and much mixed with old; quotations for same, in the absence of stocks, must be considered nominal; parcels of last season's Teas had been settled at prices as last quoted. Stocks were much reduced, but large supplies were expected to arrive as soon as the weather improved. The Benefactress, 524 tons; the Alexandra, 306 tons; the Parmenio, 869 tons; and the Italy, 278 tons, were loading for New York, the latter chartered at £3 15s. per ton of 40 cubic feet. Quotations were:—Common, $16 to 20 per picul; Good Common, $20 to 22; Medium, $22 to 24; Good Medium, $25 to 28; Fine, $30 to 31; Finest nominal, $33 to 35; Choice, $36 to 40.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A very important business had been transacted during the fortnight. Large supplies, especially of Ningchow descriptions, had come forward, and natives had displayed much readiness to quit their holdings at declining prices. Common Teas had been bought at lower rates. The fall in prices since last mail was quite Tls. 2 per picul, but medium and good sorts were still Tls. 3 to 5 over last year's rates, and inferior kinds not less than Tls. 4 to 6. The market closed decidedly quiet, owing in a great measure to the very large purchases and shipments of the fortnight. The stock remaining was large. Settlements for the fortnight, 40,000 chests; re-shipment on owner's account, 32,000 chests; stock, 17 chops, or 36,180 packages. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 2¾d. per tael, and freight at £4 10s. per ton:—Hohow, common to fine 1s. 3d. to 2s. 0½d.; Oonam, common to fine 1s. 4d. to 2s. 0¾d.; Ningchow, Common to Fine, 1s. 4½d. to 2s. 2¾d.; Oopack, Fair to Good, 1s. 8d. to 1s. 9½d. per lb. Green: A fair business had been transacted at slightly easier rates, with the exception of a chop of new Hoochow tea, bought at Tls. 38½. The purchases of the fortnight consisted of Pingsuey descriptions, and prices of these had ranged from Tls. 35 to 41¾. Several chops of Hoochow Tea were on offer. It was stated that Fychow and Moyune Teas would arrive early this season, and first chops of the former kind were looked for in about three weeks. The stock on offer was increased. Settlements for the fortnight, 8,000 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 2,150 half-chests; stock, 16 chops, or 15,728 half-chests. Quotations, duty paid, exchange as above:—Gunpowder, 1s. 6d. to 3s. 10d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 8d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 2s. 10d.; Twankay, 10d. to 1s. 3d.

HANKOW.—Shortly after the departure of the last mail the market assumed a quiet appearance, and prices declined. Since then, however, second crop Oopacks had arrived, and these had been in much demand at Tls. 20 to 25 (1s. 7½d. per lb.). The quality of the second crop produce was, upon the whole, inferior to that of last year. Shuntamoor kinds had been bought at Tls. 16.6.0 to 18.2.5; Lyeling, at Tls. 20.5.0 to 21.5.0; and fair Oanfaas, at Tls. 23.5.0 to 25.0.0. Quotations were: Oopacks, medium to good, Tls. 20 to 27, equal 1s. 6d. to 1s. 10¾d. per lb.; Oonams, medium to good, Tls. 16.6.0 to 28.5.0, equal 1s. 3¾d. to 1s. 11¾d. per lb.

KIUKIANG.—A very moderate business had been done in Black teas at irregular, but, on the whole, lower prices. It was generally believed that the second crop would not be a large one, and a falling off in the shipments to Shanghai would soon be apparent. New Moyunes were expected to arrive in about a month's time, and, it is said, will cost laid down Tls. 3 over those of last season.

FOOCHOW.—The total settlements of Congous during the interval had been 28,567 chests, 57,298 half-chests, and 6,786 boxes at Tls. 7 to 34, or 7¼d. to 2s. 1¼d. (exhange, 4s. 7½d.). Messrs Rusden, Phipps, and Co. offer the following remarks:—Congou: Since our last, Teas that ranged from Tls. 19 to 22 have been steadily advancing in price, and we quote a rise of Tls. 2 to 3, business being chiefly for the Colonies and the Continent. Teas with quality are very scarce. The better district second crop musters are only now beginning to arrive. Souchongs: Prices are much on a par with those last quoted. Oolongs: The little business for these has been for England. The crop appears dusty. Scented: The leaf as the season advances becomes more broken, but the scent has improved; considerable settlements have been made at slightly easier rates.

AMOY.—The Congou market was opened on the 9th July, and some 15,500 packages in all had been settled at $19½ to 20 for inferior and common, $21½ to 22 for fairly clean, and $24½ to 28 for the best chops down. The first and second crop were both to hand, and contained an unusually large proportion of the better grades, which compared favourably with last season's Teas, but the lower grades were very inferior. Ooloongs were arriving freely, and were of much better quality than last year, and freer from dust than for some years past. About 1,000 packages had been taken at $30 to 35½ for good cargo to fine, or $3 to 4 in advance of last season's opening rates, and had been shipped to New York, via Hong Kong and San Francisco. Some 2,000 packages had also been taken for shipment to England at $28¾ to 43 for good to finest. Teamen's ideas had been much strengthened by those purchases, and some time must elapse ere any marked decline can take place. Sifting the Teas had enhanced their cost about $3 per picul.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Supplies had been restricted by heavy and incessant rain; arrivals in all about 300 bales, mostly new silk, every parcel of which had been quickly settled at from $770 to $850 per picul. Most of these parcels had been much mixed, and were, as usual, of medium quality. With fine weather, fresh supplies might be looked for from the interior. Settlements were estimated at 350 bales, including 50 from Hiogo. Stock nominal. Silkworms' Eggs: Had arrived somewhat freely, in all 60,000 cards to date; they are chiefly green cards, and had obtained 7 to 9 boos for fair quality. No eggs had been offered from the Oshu districts.

SHANGHAI.—London telegrams dated the 9th and 12th June had caused a settlement of about 2,000 bales, of which some 1,600 bales were shipped by the last steamer. Prices had ruled most irregularly, but as the mail closed the Chinese were anxious sellers, and rates were much weaker, so that taking the average of the business of the fortnight the advance in prices may be quoted at from Tls. 10 to 15 per picul. The stock on the market was daily on the increase, and lower prices were confidently expected. The last P. and O. steamer took 3,254 bales Chinas, and 129 bales Japans for London, 1,240 bales China, and 129 bales Japans for Marseilles, and 9 bales Japans for Rotterdam. P. M. steamer "Costa Rica" left on the 15th of July with 57 bales of Silk for New York. The M. I. steamer arrived from Yokohama on the 16th of July, bringing 208 bales.

CANTON.—A good deal of inquiry had existed for fine sized silk of both long and short reel, consequently very high prices were asked for these descriptions. The third crop was much better both in quality and colour than the second. Re-reeled Cumchooks being difficult to obtain had commanded much higher prices than those last reported. The following were the fortnight's sales:—Loongkong, No. 1, sales 170 bales, at $535 to 545; ditto, ditto, No. 2, 13 bales, at $520 to 530; Tsatlee, 100 bales, at $585 to 575; Kowkong, 110 bales, at $450 to 470; re-reeled Cumchook, 300 boxes, at $540 to 570.

Since the departure of the mail of the 10th July sterling exchange has steadily declined. The closing quotation for credits by last mail was 4s. 7⅛d., and for Bank Bills 4s. 6⅞d., while for this mail credits have been sold to a considerable extent at 4s. 7d., and at the close of business at 4s. 6⅞d. to 4s. 6⅛d. Rupees on Calcutta have been sold in advance for the steamers to leave about the 20th proximo, at 226½ to 226. The estimated amount of business by the present opportunity, exclusive of about £125,000, contracted for nearly a month since, but delivered for the Calcutta steamer which left on the 22nd inst., amounts to about £505,000, say £175,000 Bank Bills and £330,000 private paper, and fifteen lahks rupees.

Bullion.—There is no bar silver on the market, and the nominal quotation may be put at 9 per cent. premium. No business has been done in Sycee, but 7 per cent. premium is the nominal quotation. There is some demand for Clean Mexicans, suitable for the Shanghai market.

Shares.—There is scarcely anything to report in shares, the market having been exceedingly quiet throughout the fortnight. A few small sales of old and new Bank have taken place at quotations. One small lot of steamboats was settled at 2 premium, and a small lot of hotels at 40 discount. It is reported that the next dividend of the local bank will be the same as last, and that about $150,000 will be carried to the reserve fund. There is no chance of the share market getting any better until money becomes easier.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

SILK.—Since the 1st some heavy unloadings have come in, and prices have again been in favour of buyers, except in chop 3, which have again realised 30s.; a parcel of No. 2 Cat was sold at 25s. 9d. Red Peacock at 24s. 9d. and 24s. 6d.; fair 4 to 4½, 22s., 6d. and No. 5, 21s. 9d. Haiween Sen Shing Sat No. 2 has fetched 27s. 6d. and 27s. 3d; Skeins, 20s; Rereel Haiween, 32s. In Japans there has been scarcely a transaction. The tone of the market has been dull, and both at home and abroad consumers resolutely keep out, fully anticipating a further decline, when, by the end of the month, we shall have the bulk of the heavy settlements of the first two months.

THE TEA CLIPPERS.

IT is the fashion to call the Derby "the blue ribbon of the turf," and the annual race of China tea clippers may, with no less justice, be termed "the blue ribbon of the sea." Although we have now become familiarised with the wonderful closeness with which the contest is carried on, it has this year excited quite as much interest as on any former occasion, and even more in some quarters, from the fact of two new and untried ships—the Spindrift and Lahloo—having had a fair start with some of the favourites that had already won a first-class reputation for speed. Last year, it will be remembered, that the Taeping was the first to arrive, having docked on the 14th September; but the second to arrive, the Ariel, beat her in point of time by four or five hours, and was the actual winner of the race. This year the winning-post has been reached much earlier, the first ship, the Ariel, having docked on the 2nd September at one P.M., followed by the Spindrift and Sir Launcelot at midnight the same date, and the Taeping and Lahloo on the 7th.

The blue ribbon this year clearly falls to the Spindrift, a beautiful vessel of 899 tons, belonging to Messrs. FINDLAY and Co., of Glasgow, and commanded by Captain INNES, formerly of the Serica. The Sir Launcelot and Ariel were first to sail from Foochow, at 2.20 P.M. on the 28th May; the Taeping followed at 5.30 same day, the Spindrift at 3.30 on the 29th, and the Lahloo at 5.20 on the 30th. The Ariel took the lead and kept it, being docked in a little under 96 days; the Sir Launcelot followed closely, and docked at midnight, being beaten by only 11 hours; the Spindrift accompanied her, and having sailed 22 hours later than these two, beat the Ariel by 11 and the Sir Launcelot by 22 hours, having made the passage in 96 days 8 hours. The Taeping was off the Land's End on the 2nd, but was a long time getting up Channel, and only got into dock on the 7th (102 days). The Lahloo was off Falmouth on the 3rd, but like the Taeping was delayed in the Channel, and has only just docked (100 days). Apart from these nice distinctions, it must be owned that the result is most creditable to all five vessels and their commanders. From land to land the race was closer still, for the five ships sailed on three successive days, and were all reported within three days of one another. The Taeping and Lahloo, though defeated, are not disgraced, for in such a race as this even to be fourth or fifth is surely a triumph.

Mr. HOLT'S steamer Agamemnon, though of course not entering into the clipper competition, must be noticed as having made an admirable passage. She left Hankow on the 19th and Hong Kong on the 30th of June, and arrived at noon on the 4th, making the passage from the latter port in sixty-six days.

ROTTERDAM, August 28.

Some time ago I quoted a statement which appeared in the Handelsblad to the effect that general discontent had been caused by the Dutch Consul-General in Japan having appointed two employes of the Dutch Trading Company to fill vacant Consular posts. A correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant now writes to contradict this, at the same time asserting that the 'discontent' was confined to two Dutch residents in Japan who wanted the posts in question for themselves. He defends the nominations of the Consul-General, and concludes by quoting the axiom of Napoleon:—'J'ai toujours fait l'expérience que ceux qui demandaient des places en étaient les moins dignes.'"

The Conservative papers continue to urge that the Minister of the Colonial Department should resign, on the ground of his health being too precarious to admit of his effecting the very extensive and troublesome business of his department; the same papers, however, have ascertained that Mr. De Waal will not leave his post before producing his budget. As I stated in a former letter, Mr. Mirandoll is cited as his successor. Another rumour says that the Cabinet will recall the Governor-General of our East Indian Colonies, Mr. Myer, who will be replaced by Mr. Loudon, a former Minister of the Colonial Department. According to [the Handelsblad these on dits are put in circulation by the Conservative press merely to annoy the existing Cabinet, and it goes on to state that they will prove equally unfounded with the rumour that Mr. Roest van Limberg would not accept the portfolio of the department of Foreign Affairs, which he has since done; the Staatscourant of the 19th contained the decree of his appointment.

The papers confirm the statement that the Budgets to be laid before the members at the opening of the new Session will show a great reduction. Of course the Departments of War and Marine are able to economise the most, but the other departments will also organise a more judicious management of public affairs. What I told you about the dismissal of a great many functionaries has been confirmed; the reduction will be partly used to improve the salaries of the remaining functionaries. Among the new Bills to be laid before the members is one to regulate academical instruction. It is a satisfaction to find that the three academies will continue to be maintained. The academy for the instruction of medical officers will be removed from Utrecht to Amsterdam.

The King still remains in Thun, in Switzerland; and it is not quite certain when he will return. The strange assertion of the English papers that Her Majesty the Queen is also there is quite untrue; rumour reports that it was Madame Musard who paid a visit to the King; perhaps the correspondents may have taken her for the Queen.

Plenipotentiaries from England, France, Belgium, Germany, and Holland are in conference at the Hague, in order to regulate the sugar convention. Notwithstanding that no particulars have transpired, it is admitted that they have come to an agreement. The French and German papers continue to discuss the question of a commercial and political union between France, Belgium, and Holland. The dulness of political circles may, perhaps, be regarded as a reason for this obstinacy, for which even an official contradiction proved an insufficient remedy. I need not say that the plan is abhorred and detested in our country, which loves nothing better than its independent nationality.

A change will shortly take place in our corps diplomatique. Baron Gevers, now ambassador at St. Petersburg, will be appointed to that office at the Court of St. James.

I regret to state that the rinderpest has again made its appearance in this country. In Noord-Waddingsveen two cases have occurred. Of course the most severe measures will immediately be taken to prevent the spreading of this plague. Our flocks of sheep are at the same time attacked by smallpox.

A magnificent testimonial has been presented by the officers of the navy and the functionaries of the marine department to Mr. G. Fabius on the occasion of his resignation as commander of the East India marine.

Messrs. Heemskerk and Wintgens, members of the former Cabinet, have been pensioned. To the first named has been granted f.2,547, and to the latter f.416, yearly. In September, 150 soldiers will be despatched by the Noach II. (bound for Java), to reinforce the East India army.

His Majesty has approved of the appointment of Mr. H. P. J. van den Berg as Consul for Italy at Samarang, whilst Mr. F. P. Tombrinck is appointed Consul at Nagasaki.

It is the earnest wish of the Ministry to make the separation between the Church and the State a fait accompli. Several measures have been already taken with that object. A royal decree has been promulgated, which orders the suppression of the two Ministries of public worship, Catholic and Protestant. Religious affairs concerning the former faith will be henceforth attached to the Department of Justice, and those relating to the latter to the Ministry of Finance. The time is, however, not far distant when both administrations will be united in one bureau.

To day we received the sad news that Mr. J. van Lennep had died at Oosterbeek. He was born on the 27th March, 1802.

To Mr. E. de Waal, Minister of the Colonial Department, has been granted a leave of thirty days, in order to restore his health.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

General inactivity prevails in the market for stocks and shares, but it is believed that a slight change in business would have a very favourable effect on values. However, up to the present there is hardly a movement noticeable. Prices for the most part are steady. The home funds have not varied; they have met with but little demand. In foreign bonds firmness is apparent, although transactions are confined to narrow limits. In the discount market there is not anything special to notice.

Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents., 57¼; Three per Cents., 66⅛; Four per Cents., 88. Netherlands Bank, 248; Dutch Trading Company, 130 to 130¾; International Bank, 40; East India Company of Administration, 95 per cent.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The Dutch Trading Company held its auction on the 18th inst., at which 125,946 b. Java, Padang, Menado and Macassar were sold. The inferior qualities were sold at 1d. to 1½d. under valuation, but for the other parcels the valuation was paid in full, or even somewhat thereabove. Good ordinary, greenish Java was paid with 32¾c. to 33c. Since the auction the market has remained very firm, and there was especially a good demand for Menado and specked sorts. On the 1st of September, 12,000 b. Java, Padang, and Macassar will be offered for sale for private account.

RAW SUGAR.—Business in sugar since the last mail has not presented any very important features, the market upon the whole having been quiet. The transactions have included 1800 mats Cheribon and Sourabaya, ex Boanergos, No. 10-17, at 1f. to 1¼f. under July value; 960 mats Tjilatjap, ex Koophandel, at a price which did not transpire. The stock in bond on the 15th was 44,789,591 kilo.

TEA.—The general tone of the market was very firm, but inactive.

SPICES.—In waiting for the auction of the Trade Company there is nothing of any importance to mention, except that 327 b. Pepper (Batavia), ex Geertruide Maria, were sold at 17½c.

RICE.—A good business is doing at improved prices. The following parcels changed hands:—2,538 b. Sourabaya, ex County of Bute, at 7⅛f.; 900 do. Sourabaya, ex Burgemeester van Middelburg, at 6⅞f.; 930 b. Java, ex Gerard Pieter Servatius. The 2,562 b. Sourabaya, ex Laura and Adele, which were offered were not sold.

TOBACCO.—(Java leaves). The trade is busy with inspecting the parcels of the forthcoming auction, which will be held at Amsterdam on the 26th, when not less than 13,047 b. will be offered for sale, whilst on the 28th about 5,000 b. will be offered, besides 38 b. Manila. Of course, the transactions now are of but very little importance, so that only 500 b. Java Kotta ex Burgemeester van Middleburg were sold.

DRUGS.—The Trading Company sold in auction 122,000 lbs. Gutta Percha from 50 to 195 ct.; 45 pieces of India-rubber at 86.75f.; five coll. Getah Gitang at 67f.; 169 ch. Gum Damar from 13 to 43 c.; 70 ch. Cocoanut Oil Soap, 1st quality, 153 ct., 2nd quality, 152 c.; Cassia Vera at 51 to 51½ c.

INDIGO.—The market continues quiet, but prices rather favour the sellers, so that improved prices perhaps will be paid for those parcels, which will be offered by inscription on the 25th next.

TIN.—The general tone of the market is somewhat firmer, and there is a good export demand. 2,850 slabs Banca were sold at f.54¼; and 500 slabs Billiton at secret prices.

HIDES.—287 Batavia Buffalo, and 261 do. (dam.), ex Willem Kroonprins der Nederlanden, at 30¼ cents.

RATTANS.—The following parcels have been sold: 850 pic. ex Fagel; 150 pic. ex Gerard Pieter Servatius; 100 pic. ex Catharina Elizabeth; 70 pic. ex Jan Van Brakel; 111 pic. ex Maria Regina.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—Aug. 15, at Brouwershaven, from Tjilatjap, Koophandel; at Texel, from Batavia, Waterloo; 16, at Brouwershaven, from Passaroeang, Bastiaan Pot; 21, at Texel from Java, Almelo; 24, at Brouwershaven from Batavia, Mary and Hillegonda; at Texel, from Tjilatjap, Mathilda; at Flushing, from Batavia, Honigby.

DEPARTURE.—Aug. 16, from Texel for Batavia, Bellatrix.

PASSENGERS OUTWARD.—For Java, per Madura, Messrs. P. A. F. Willems and famiy, M. v. d. Kerkhoff, Mrs. van Driessche and family, Mrs. de Jager and family; per Bellatrix, Messrs de Witt and family, C. Bakker and family, de Nys, M. Halewyn, Miss J. Grym.

PASSENGERS INWARD.—From Java, per Bastiaan Pot, Messrs. Kruithoff, van der Wall and family.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE.

Among the numerous papers read at the recent meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Norwich, which embraced almost every conceivable subject, there were three that have a special interest for our own circle of readers; we accordingly give an abstract of each of them. Some comments on Mr. Waddington's scheme for an inter-oceanic railway across British North America will be found in another column; and we shall shortly have occasion to refer to General Waugh's report on overland communication between India and China, in connection with Mr. Clement William's recently published work, "Through Burmah to Western China."

THE BUDDHIST FAITH.

Dr. Fergusson delivered an admirable and highly interesting address, and (as he remarked) the subject being an Indian one, and consequently one upon which much ignorance existed in England, he was enabled to give a great amount of information, which, besides being in itself interesting, had the additional charm of novelty. He first referred to the foundation of the Buddhist faith by a native Prince, named Sakya Mune, or Buddha, several centuries before the Christian era. This Prince abandoned all his worldly comforts and possessions, chose an ascetic life, and for fifty years lived under trees and taught the doctrines he wished to disseminate—viz., kindness to animals and to all living things, and, above all, brotherly love and kindness to all men. But it was not till 300 years after his death that Asoka made it the State religion, and was said to have converted all India to the faith; and it was still 600 years later that Nagarjuna established ministers and gave Buddhism a clergy, and from that time it spread over Burmah, Siam, into China, all over Thibet, and the greater part of Asia. A very remarkable fact, however, was that, although Buddhism was still the religion prevailing over a great part of Asia, there was not now to be found a single Buddhist in India, the land of its birth. Having given an elaborate description of the monuments of Sanchi and Amravati as examples of the structures raised in honour of Buddhist saints, the lecturer went on to refer to the details of the architecture of several periods, the sculpture proving beyond all doubt that tree and serpent worship, which was the religion of India previous to the introduction of Buddhism, had again gradually crept into the new faith. Tree and serpent worship, he observed, had at some period or other prevailed all over the world, and doubtless the frequent reference to trees and serpents contained in the Holy Scriptures was in some way connected with this practice. Trees and serpents also held a high place in all the mythological fables; and his opinion was, that if this subject were thoroughly looked into they would arrive at an amount of ethnological and religious knowlege now quite unsuspected. All over the steppes of Asia, throughout Scandinavia, and in this country, wherever they found these rude tumuli, they found traces of the same race that erected similar monuments in India, and though he did not say that people came over from India and taught the people of this country to erect Stonehenge, nor that they had any connection with the people of India, yet there was this great underlying stratum of population, who cropped up in Europe and other parts of the world as well as in Asia, and wherever they came to the surface their monuments were similar in character, and all more or less applied to the same purpose. Originally funereal, they gradually became temples and relic shrines; but they were all monuments of one great people, and all expressed more or less distinctly one idea. He was convinced that when this subject was fully investigated they would have a very interesting picture of a people who were now only known by their rude monuments all over the globe.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.

In the Geographical Section, Mr. A. Waddington read a paper on an "Overland Route through British Territory from the Atlantic to the Pacific." He urged that, if England did not stir in the matter the Pacific Railroad, now on the point of being completed, would throw the carrying trade between the East and Europe entirely into the hands of the United States. Mr. Waddington proposed that a railway should be made entirely through British territory, to start from Ottawa, the legislative capital of Canada, and proceed to Fort Garry, a distance of 1,165 miles; thence to Jasper's House, at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, a distance of 1,100 miles; and then from Jasper's House, by the Yellow Head Pass, to the head of Bute Inlet, opposite Vancouver's Island, a distance of 620 miles. The entire length of the line would be 2,885 miles. The cost of making this gigantic line, including station accommodations, engineering expenses, rolling stock, reserve fund and contingencies, and allowing ten per cent. for sideways, he roughly estimated at £27,000,000. Upon this point of cost Mr. Waddington said, "We shall be told that such an outlay is far too great to be thought of. But what we have to consider is not merely the amount, but the object to be attained, and whether that is commensurate with the outlay. If the commercial supremacy of England is at stake—and that has been pretty clearly shown—what are seven-and-twenty millions compared with the sad downfall which must inevitably follow such a loss, and the decay and ruin of our country? Never was so large a sum of money more usefully, more wisely applied; and in vain might we ransack the history of our national debt to find a parallel. In times past a single subsidy to some Continental potentate has often cost more." Mr. Waddington suggested that a company might be formed to undertake the work by the offer of liberal grants of land, which, though at present of no value, might, in course of time, as the territory became settled, rise in value sufficient to pay the cost of the railroad. Another inducement would be to subsidise mail steamers in connexion with the line, and also to authorise the company to issue mortgage bonds to a certain amount, Government to pay the interest until the line became self-paying, which he thought would be the case in about six years. With regard to supposed geographical difficulties, the country from Ottawa to Fort Garry, with the exception of a narrow mountain range north of Lake Superior, was one vast level, and fit for settlement; beyond Fort Garry the valley of the Saskatchewan presented another extensive level of fertile country as far as Jasper's House; and from that point the Rocky Mountains had to be traversed, and here the difficulties were far more serious; but a practical road had been explored by the Yellow Head Pass, which has been pronounced available for a railroad; and then, following the course of the Upper Fraser through the mountains, the line would cross the Chilcoaten valley, and reach Bute Inlet by another practical road through the cascade range. Mr. Waddington declared that the severity of the climate had been exaggerated, and that the claims of the Hudson's Bay Company would be open to arrangement; nor did he anticipate any difficulties with the United States arising from any spirit of rivalry or jealousy.

TRADE ROUTES BETWEEN INDIA AND CHINA.

In the Geographical Section General Sir A. Scott Waugh read a report of a committee appointed at the Dundee meeting of the British Association to promote the exploration of lines of overland communication between India and China. It stated that the yearly increasing importance of the British provinces of Assam and Cachar made it from day to day more essential to their prosperity that a communication should, if possible, be opened with China. There were, however, two special reasons why the committee were desirous of pressing this subject at the present time:—1. Since the establishment of a French colony in Cochin China there is reason to believe that an exploratory expedition has been investigating the upper course of the Menam. As this course is within Chinese territory there is no reason to fear any collision between the two expeditions, and it would manifestly be to the advantage of both that they should meet. 2. It has come confidentially to the knowledge of the committee that an English traveller is at present organising an expedition for the purpose of exploring the upper course of the Yang-tse-kiang, and of attempting to reach India. Were a similar attempt made from the Indian side at the same time his chances of success would be greatly increased. In many countries this exploration might be left to private enterprise, but there are strong reasons why the task should in Eastern India be undertaken by Government, which alone has the power of influencing the small savage tributary tribes by which Assam is surrounded. A large part of the area of the unknown country, the exploration of which is considered essential by the committee, is directly under the control of the Government of India, so that its exploration by a properly equipped party is only a question of expense. The Upper Irrawadi, and the other regions dependent upon Ava, are also, it is believed, easily accessible to a British mission. Whether the obstinate resistance of the Tibetans to the entrance of Europeans is their own act or that of the dominant race can only be known by results. Even if no more can be done, the importance of the thorough investigation of our own and the Burmese provinces cannot be exaggerated. It is only after accurate mapping of the country and exact determination of the height and steepness of the mountain chains, that the best route can be chosen. The gain to geographical and natural science would of itself repay all the cost. There is, further, much reason to hope that the gain to commercial interests would be great; and should this not be the case, the urgency of the demand for this exploration by those interests is a good reason for setting the question at rest one way or the other.

Colonel Sir A. Phayre observed that it was a very interesting country to explore between the eastern parts of India and the western point of China, more especially as the river Irrawadi, which flows through the country of Burmah, takes its rise in these mountains, and its source is still a geographical problem that remains to be solved.

General Sir V. Eyre said the proposed exploration was one of his own suggestion at Dundee last year, and was very warmly taken up by Sir Roderick Murchison. Shortly after the proposal was made it came to their knowledge that Mr. Cooper had already forestalled the idea, and had actually undertaken to advance from China to the very point which he had indicated as desirable to explore to the north-east of Assam. Mr. Cooper had, after some difficulties, been heard of as having accomplished his journey successfully within a short distance of Thibet. There was, therefore, some hope that this problem would now be set at rest. It was of very great importance to India that a practicable road should be obtained between China and Assam, inasmuch as Assam was becoming a very great tea country, and was much in want of labour; and it was believed that a great excess of labour was to be found in the western parts of China. If a practicable road could be made, in all probability that labour would find its way into Assam.

TELEGRAPHS FOR INDIA AND THE EAST.

(PALL MALL GAZETTE.)

There are several facts, we were going to say, "not generally known" to the people of Great Britain; but, without going so far as that, let us say, of which they cannot be too often reminded. The chief of these is that certain districts in Asia, much desired by conquering persons in all ages of the world's history, so far as we are aware, and known by the name of the East Indies, belong to them. The habitual indifference which the nation shows to this fact is surely amongst the most curious of our insular eccentricities, and one which those citizens who believe almost fanatically in the imperial instincts of Englishmen must have some difficulty in accounting for. A curious instance of this indifference may be found in our neglect hitherto of all means of direct telegraphic communication with India. It would seem that ours is as yet the only country in which deep-sea cables can be satisfactorily made. We have possessions of our own which make us practically independent of all other nations, and give us command of two lines to India, except the Isthmus of Suez! In spite, however, of our advantages in holding on the Mediterranean route Gibraltar and Malta, and Aden in the Red Sea, and on the other route St. Helena, the Cape of Good Hope, the Mauritius and Ceylon—all of them needing telegraphic communication—what is our actual position in this matter with respect to India and China, our Australian colonies and New Zealand? and what are our immediate prospects? A few words will, we should hope, convince our readers that these questions are of the first importance, and that the present moment is a specially fitting time to attend to them.

There are now no less than eight different lines, either actually at work or in course of formation, by which an English Minister or merchant can communicate with India. Of these, five converge on the Persian Gulf, and are for all practical purposes in the power of the Turk, while the other three run in great part through Russian territory and are in the hands of the Czar; and all of them pass into foreign hands immediately they leave England. Now apart from all Imperial considerations, such as the chances of war in the East, and of our own relations with either of the European Powers becoming uneasy, it must be admitted that this state of things is eminently unsatisfactory. The habits and temper of Turks, as we all know, specially disqualify them for the successful practice of telegraphy. The experience of the working of the present system illustrates this incapacity in many ways. Thus not only are messages constantly delayed, and unintelligible when they arrive, but they arrive in the reverse order from that in which they are sent. The reason is obvious enough. The excellent Effendi, or other Moslem, in charge of a station in Asia Minor, or on the Gulf, having neither knowledge of, nor sympathy with, the mad political and mercantile worlds of the West, sits cross-legged and smokes his pipe, while impetuous message after message arrives in some important crisis of affairs. He files them, one after another, meaning to send them on in due course, "when it shall please God." On the arrival of that auspicious moment he proceeds to take them off the file and despatch them in precisely the reverse order from that in which they came to him, so that English correspondents receive their messages of latest date first, to the hopeless entanglement of all human business. Even when this does not happen, and the messages come to hand in their proper order, there is the greatest liability to mistake, from the necessity of translating them into so many different languages; and it must not be forgotten that the contents are in every case at the mercy of foreigners and rivals. Hitherto the tariff has been as unreasonable as the service has been slipshod, no message to Calcutta costing less than £5. In this latter respect, however, a reform is pending. A conference has just been held at Vienna, at which all companies and persons directly interested in the present lines were represented, and after much discussion (including a vehement struggle between the representatives of Austria and Hungary as to the distribution of the share of toll allotted to the Empire) the whole system has been reorganised, and a reduced tariff agreed on. The new system and tariff will come into operation on the 1st of January, 1869, and under it no doubt there will be some improvement in working, while the cost of messages from England to India will be reduced from £5 to £2 17s. So far so good; but what has been gained by the new arrangement for England from an imperial point of view? Assuming the proposed tariff to be fair and the future management of the lines to be unexceptionable, are we really going to sit down quietly, contented with a state of things in which we are absolutely in the power of one or other European Power or Turkey for our direct intercourse with our chief dependency? There can be no serious doubt as to the answer. Sooner or later, and the sooner the better in order that we may at least do all that we can not to lose India, a direct telegraphic line to Bombay, worked exclusively by ourselves, along the whole route, we assuredly must have, and, if this be so, what excuse is there for delay? . . . The safety of our Eastern empire may yet depend more on telegraphic communication than on railways, but our rulers would still seem to be in the same mind as in 1854, and unluckily there is no Lord Dalhousie at hand just now to carry things his own way with a high hand.

Is there any reason, then, why the Government should not undertake, and successfully accomplish, this work? We cannot suggest any, unless it be that it, in common with the nation, has utterly lost nerve in the panic of the last two years. On the other hand, we can suggest many reasons why it should be done, and done at once. It will give more security to our commerce and our empire than a dozen extra ironclads, and will not only be self-supporting, but a great source of revenue to the country, for no merchant in his senses will do his business through Turkish or Russian overland lines when he may use an English deep-sea line at the same or less cost. One would suppose that in the Telegraph Act of last session there is encouragement enough to induce even timid rulers to make the venture. The nation has made up its mind that the English telegraphs must become national property, and has with some demur agreed to a price which will double the capital of the lucky shareholders in the present companies. Why should not the Government get the profit in the first instance? A direct line of telegraph with our Indian empire and Australian colonies must sooner or later "crown the edifice." And as to the economical question such a line is certain to be at least as remunerative as the Société du Cable Transatlantique Français (Limited), and we cannot but hope that the example of Mr. Lowe and his coadjutors, French and English, will inspire the Minister to undertake this great and most pressing work for the honour and advantage of England.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BANKRUPTCY CASE.

EX PARTE ELLISSEN, IN RE ELLISSEN'S DEED OF ARRANGEMENT.

The debtor carried on business as a merchant in England, and his brother Gustav was his agent at Hong Kong, in China, and his father, Philip Ellissen, merchant of Frankfort, had been in the habit of making advances to him from time to time by money and by accepting bills of exchange. This was an application by Mr. P. Ellissen that the inspectors and trustees under a deed of arrangement might be ordered to pay to him the sum of £726 received by them and their late co-inspector and trustee, since deceased, in January, 1866, from one William Reme, of Shanghai, in respect of the proceeds of fifteen bales of blankets.

His Honour now gave judgment, and, after fully stating the circumstances under which the claim arose, held that there was no sufficient evidence to support the application, and he accordingly dismissed it with costs.

THE ISTHMUS OF SUEZ.—A letter from Alexandria, in the Moniteur, says, that on the 15th inst. the railway from Suez to Ismailia was opened, and that in the evening M. de Lesseps gave a grand banquet of one hundred and fifty covers. "The development of the town of Suez," it adds, "assumes more and more remarkable proportions. Its population, which was only 3,000 inhabitants a few years ago, now amounts to 25,000. The French colony which the creation of the maritime canal has attracted to the place is already very numerous' and is generally in a prosperous condition. Our merchants and traders, who had very little capital when they established themselves at the commencement of the works, now do a large business, and for seven years not a single failure has taken place."

THE New York Tribune has employed a special correspondent in California, Mr. Mark Twain, and he sends an account which Mr. Horace Greeley cannot publish without acknowledging that brutality towards an "inferior race" is possible in other parts of the country besides the South. Mr. Twain says that he has seen dogs set on to Chinamen in the streets of San Francisco, and men standing round enjoying the sport as if they were at a bull-fight. "I have seen," he says, "troops of boys assault a Chinaman with stones when he was walking quietly along about his business, and send him bruised and bleeding home." Yet the immigration of Chinese amounts to about 1,000 weekly.

C. DEVERIGAZ, the Hawaiian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has arrived in San Francisco on his way to Europe, where he goes with full powers to procure a revision of treaties with the Sandwich Islands.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint his Highness Ismail Pacha, Viceroy of Egypt, G.C.B., to be an Honorary Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

Serpent, 4, screw gun-vessel, Commander Charles J. Bullock, employed as a surveying-vessel, has been ordered home from China to be paid off.

THE North German steam-corvette Arcona is fitting out at Danzig for the Far East, being under orders to be ready to sail for Japan by the 1st of September.

CHINESE STATE-CRAFT.

TRUTH, it is said, lies at the bottom of a well; but we must seek even deeper still for the true motives of Chinese statesmen. Their views and actions, judged by any European standard, are alike unaccountable. The last puzzling thing in Chinese statesmanship is the remarkable manifesto —for in this light we must consider it, although issued in the form of a memorial to the Imperial Government—of TSENG-KWO FAN. According to this, railways, telegraphs, inland steam navigation, and similar innovations, as well as all claims of foreigners to privileges not now accorded, are to be resisted at the sword's point. Yet not quite all—there is an exception in favour of the working of mines; this concession alone, he thinks, would be advantageous to his own country, while any others would be prejudicial. But here TSENG-KWO-FAN reckons without his host. He fails to see, apparently, that what he withholds with one hand he gives with the other. To work the mines, European engineers and machinery must be introduced, means of transit to the port of shipment will suggest tramways, which will be the sure precursors of steam locomotives; railways thus arrived at, telegraphs can no longer be tabooed, so that in short the permission to work mines inevitably brings in its train all the other dreaded innovations. Can TSENG-KWO-FAN be blind to this fact? Possibly; but we are more inclined to believe that he sees the impossibility of preserving the status in quo, and while, to keep up his reputation as a stanch Conservative, he (so to speak) bangs the front door in our faces, he at the same time is willing to open a side entrance for us to creep in by. Be his motive what it may, we cannot doubt the genuineness of his idea regarding mines, for we learn by the present mail that in his capacity of Viceroy of Nanking he has applied for, and received permission, to employ foreign skill in working those in the neighbourhood of Nanking and Ching-kiang. It may seem strange that this step should be taken almost at the same moment that permission is refused to make a road to the mines at Chai-tang, where there is excellent coal to be obtained at once, while at the southern mines it has at present been hardly possible to get a sample large enough to report on. But this is capable of explanation. Chai-tang is too near the capital to be safely made the scene of a first experiment. Should all go smoothly at Nanking, when the mines there have been got into fair working order there will be no pretext for not according the same facilities at Chai-tang, and by that time the Chinese mind will have become more familiarised with the new order of things. Hostile and prejudiced as it seems, there is yet a gleam of comfort to be got out of TSENG-KWO-FAN'S memorial. It is pleasant, too, to learn that Mr. HART has (in this case at least) been on the side of progress. He stood up bravely, we are informed, for the Chai-tang road, and told the Tsong-li-yamên (even before the adverse decision had been given) that there were thousands of people in Peking dying for want of food, to whom the construction of the road and the working of the mines would afford employment; that by refusing to allow the work to be done, they condemned these thousands to starvation, and that their deaths would lie at the door of the Government. It is a pity that such a bold and forcible representation as this should have been thrown away, but it was hardly to be expected that any considerations of mere humanity would have the slightest weight with those to whom Mr. HART addressed it.

"THE TIMES" ON TREATY REVISION.

LORD PALMERSTON, when he dissolved Parliament on the question of the "Arrow" war, and inaugurated that series of operations that led up to the Treaty of Tientsin, rescued China—for a time—from the obscure position to which it had been condemned by English journalists. The interest thus aroused however, gradually died out, until of late years we have again had occasion to deplore a degree of indifference to all China affairs on the part of the leading journals, only a degree less injurious than the lamentable ignorance displayed by those of lower standing, when they occasionally broke silence on these matters. The BURLINGHAME Mission has at any rate had one good result already, in awakening public attention to the importance of the questions now at issue between this country and China. The Times, we are glad to say, has taken up the subject, and as the opinions of the leading paper must always carry great weight—especially when based, as they evidently are in the present case, on a careful and minute examination of the subject under discussion—we reprint the article in its entirety, as well as one from the Pall Mall Gazette, which takes a somewhat different view, but is most ably written and well worthy of consideration. The Standard also has something to say about the matter, but this may be very briefly dismissed, being evidently written for the sole purpose of contradicting The Times. The terms of the supplementary treaty concocted by Mr. BURLINGHAME are construed as evidence of a burning, impetuous desire on the part of China to introduce the very improvements it so distinctly rejects! Referring to our operations against the Taipings, the Standard says:—"The very "aid we have lent them for three years against a cause which "we knew to be good has rendered our name a name of suspi- "cion and distrust;" and in concluding, it boldly asserts that the Americo-Chinese treaty is no evidence of sloth or stagnation on the part of China, but, on the contrary, proof that "she is preparing herself for advance, and breaking windows "through the Great Wall which has hitherto separated her "from the civilisation of the West." Comment on such childish absurdity as this is needless.

Our own opinions with regard to the Americo-Chinese Mission have already been expressed with sufficient clearness. Its chief aim and object, we have pointed out, is not only to arrest the process of development that has lately set in, but to leave the Chinese free to retrace such steps as they have already taken towards the adoption of a more enlightened foreign policy. The greater part of the supplementary treaty just concluded, amid such sickening bombast at Washington, we have described as a mere sham, only intended to cover the clause by which telegraphs, railways, or other improvements of any kind are to be for ever excluded from Chinese soil. We are glad to find these opinions fully confirmed by The Times. In the article before us it is clearly laid down that a retrograde policy on the part of China at this date is simply out of the question; that the function of the preliminary articles of the supplementary treaty is to conceal the real and sole object of the mission; which is embodied in the 8th and last article; that the object is, to enable China once more to fall back into its old policy of isolation and exclusion; and that "to acquiesce in "a condition so absurd would be simply to court fresh wars, "and to fling away the chief gain of the Treaty of Tientsin." We believe that we are not far wrong in saying that this is the identical view that will be taken by Lord STANLEY notwithstanding the fact that The Times is just now in a position of decided hostility to the Conservative Government while the Standard is understood to be its stanch supporter and therefore to some extent inspired.

A TELEGRAM from St. Petersburg states that the Governor-General of Eastern Siberia is about to proceed to the Chinese frontier, in order to settle definitely the boundaries of China and Siberia, in conjunction with a plenipotentiary from the Government of Peking.

THE results of the scientific excursion made in Tian-Chan in 1867 have been communicated to the Russian Geographical Society. The explorers have brought home a collection of botanical and zoological specimens, and a plan, on the scale of one foot per five versts, of all the country situated between the Naryn and the Chinese frontier, a surface of 12,000 square versts.

THE HONG KONG MINT.

LATE advices from Hong Kong convey intelligence of the sale of the Mint machinery to the Japanese Government for the sum of 70,000 dollars, but no particulars are given as to where it is to be set up, or how worked. More than a year ago (June, 1867) we indicated a removal to Japan as its probable fate; and since its successful employment at Hong Kong has been given up as hopeless, it is gratifying to learn that this anticipation has been realised, and that the materials of the abandoned experiment will no longer cumber the ground and be an incubus on the tax-payers of the colony. Not that we acquiesce, even now, in the action of the local Government regarding it. We understand that although some 90 per cent. of its produce certainly went to the Straits, yet the non-circulation of the coinage in China was more the result of mismanagement and the prejudiced opposition of a clique than of any insuperable objection to it on the part of the Chinese. Moreover the banks, we are informed, offered to guarantee two-thirds of the working expenses if a further trial were allowed; and it seems to us to be an open question whether Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL has not somewhat exceeded the powers extended to him by the Home Government in closing the establishment so peremptorily and abruptly as he did. However it is shut up, dismantled, and sold; and there is an end of the experiment so far as Hong Kong is concerned. The sale is not altogether a bad one; the sum named, at the rates of exchange last advised, will equal over £16,000, and we believe the machinery and that portion of the plant sent out from this country cost under £30,000. The proceeds will go a good way towards paying one year's military contribution, and the buildings will be left free to be utilised in some other way for the benefit of the colony. What the Japanese will do with their acquisition remains to be seen. Probably, finding themselves in possession of such perfect machinery, they will altogether remodel their coinage and monetary system, and in a few years more bous and kobangs—the oddly shaped little cakes of silver and thin plates of gold—will have become altogether obsolete.

A WESTERN OVERLAND ROUTE.

AMONG the numerous papers recently discussed by the British Association—a select few of which we notice in another column—was one on a subject that is undoubtedly of considerable importance, although it has hitherto attracted very little attention in England. This is the approaching completion of the railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which will place New York and San Francisco in direct intercommunication, and will—our American cousins fondly hope—divert the great bulk of European trade with China from our eastward, to their westward overland route. No doubt some portion of it, more especially of the passenger traffic, will follow the new line; but we have already (in our issue of the 16th ult.) given our reasons for believing that, however great may be the results of the new route in developing American trade with the Far East, its effects on that of Europe have been unduly magnified. Mr. ALFRED WADDINGTON, the author of the paper that has called forth these remarks, appears to think differently. He assumes the threatened diversion of trade to be a real and inevitable danger, and urges the adoption of a plan by which Great Britain may yet hold her own. He proposes that we also should establish an inter-oceanic line of communication through our own North-American dominions, starting from Ottawa, with a terminus at the head of Bute Inlet, Vancouver's Island. The total length of the road would be 2,885 miles, or rather less than that of the United States line; and the cost of construction he sets down at £27,000,000. Lest the mention of such a vast sum should alarm capitalists, Mr. WADDINGTON points out that a company might be induced to undertake the work by liberal grants of land, which although now worth very little, would in course of time become of immense value. The plan certainly has its merits; leaving China interests out of the question, it would at least open up our vast North American territory to settlement and trade. But the enormous outlay required, and the great length of time it would take to complete even such a portion of it as would yield any return, will prevent the project assuming a tangible form for some time; meanwhile, we console ourselves with the belief that in his assertion that "our commercial supremacy is at stake" Mr. WADDINGTON indulged in some little exaggeration.

STRAITS GRIEVANCES.

THE Straits residents were formerly ruled by King LOG, and they didn't like him. Now they have King STORK, and find that they have—to use a somewhat homely simile—fallen out of the fryingpan into the fire. Grievances have accumulated under the new regime with alarming rapidity, and of the trio of Eastern colonies—Ceylon, the Straits, and Hong Kong—it is difficult to say which is the most hardly dealt by. In Singapore the manifestations of public discontent are constantly increasing. An inquiry into their cause is imperatively necessary, and as soon as Mr. DISRAELI and Mr. GLADSTONE have settled their faction-fight (for no more dignified term can be applied to the struggle now pending) it is to be hoped that the House of Commons will find some time to devote to the consideration of this and other colonial matters equally demanding attention. Judged by the test of public opinion, Governor ORD's rule is not a success. He commenced by launching the colony into great expense for Government buildings, that do not seem to have been planned with much taste or consideration; next came a large outlay for steamers, the whole duty of which would appear to consist in carrying Government officials in state from port to port; now, he tyrannises over the Legislative Council, interferes with the administration of justice, and prohibits the sheriffs from calling public meetings when requested to do so—a useful office that had always devolved on them previously. The Penang residents, too, have been treated in a very high-handed manner by their Lieutenant-Governor, and altogether it is evident that there are many just causes of complaint against the system under which the local Government is administered. The Legislative Council, as at present constituted, is a preposterous farce—a mere caricature of a legislative body. No doubt the Straits Settlements Association here will press these matters on the attention of Parliament when occasion again offers; but the interval between now and then may be a long one, and in the meanwhile something would be gained if those interested in the three colonies that are equally ill-used in this particular (Ceylon, the Straits, and Hong Kong) were to endeavour to come to some arrangement for mutual aid and support. Isolated questions put to Under-Secretaries are of no use; what is wanted is a full exposure and discussion of the present wretched system of colonial government.

Of course the short winter session, the sole object of which is to decide the fate of the Conservative Government, will afford no opportunity for the discussion of colonial affairs, and any attempt to procure redress of grievances from the House of Commons must be postponed until the re-assembling of Parliament next year. In the meanwhile, the Straits Settlements Association here has not relaxed in its determination to keep the fact of its existence before the Colonial-office. On the 25th ult. a meeting was held to consider the question of the Governor's control over the Judge of the Supreme Court, and a resolution was passed asserting the right of the Judge to that "complete independence of the local executive authority" which it has always hitherto enjoyed, and pledging the Association to use every means to support the petition to that effect already sent home by the colonists. We have now before us a letter addressed by Mr. NAPIER to the Duke of BUCKINGHAM, in which he communicates this resolution, and dwells at some length on the circumstances by which it was called forth. Mr. NAPIER insists on the pure, firm, and uncompromising manner in which justice has ever been administered in the Straits, and forcibly points out the injustice to the Judges themselves, as well as to the community, of any restrictive legislation implying suspicion or mistrust. No one whose mind is open to conviction can for an instant doubt the truth of Mr. NAPIER'S statement, that the secure tenure of his office by the judge is one of the main safeguards for the due administration of justice; nor, we believe, could any reasonable person object to the means by which he proposes to attain this desirable end. It is only necessary to introduce into the "Supreme Court Ordinance," now under consideration, a clause declaring that nothing contained in the GOVERNOR'S commission, or in any previous Act of Parliament, relative to the suspension or removal of public officers, shall apply to the Judges of the Supreme Court, who shall be liable to removal by the SOVEREIGN alone, on the advice of the COLONIAL SECRETARY. By this simple expedient the present GOVERNOR will be placed on the same footing, as regards his relations with the Supreme Court, as his predecessors, and a question that has given rise to very serious alarm in the colony will be satisfactorily disposed of.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

BURLINGHAME and "Bunkum" will soon come to be recognised as synonymous terms. The Chinese Ambassador is of course delighted at the unbounded success of his mission in America, and he has doubtless special reasons for being pleased with Mr. SEWARD; for in taking leave of that gentleman at Auburn he administered to him a dose of such gross flattery as would nauseate anyone but an American politician. In toasting Mr. SEWARD he said:—"The great Secretary "CANNING said that he had 'called a new world into existence "'to redress the balance of the old.' Mr. SEWARD has called "an old world into existence to redress the balance of the "new." So far Mr. BURLINGHAME'S progress has been signalised at every step by the biggest of big talk. After the above-mentioned incident the authorities at Buffalo invited him to a banquet. The Ambassador declined their hospitality, but he made them a speech, in the course of which he said:—"I shall go to Europe, extending to those nations the same "hand of goodwill which was so kindly received by the United "States; and we trust that our mission will result in THE "UNIFICATION OF THE WHOLE HUMAN RACE." Now this is really magnificent. Mr. BURLINGHAME'S aspirations, it will be observed, are just bounded by the limits of creation, and that is all. But then—and here opens before us an abyss of speculation so profound that we hardly dare to contemplate it—when Mr. BURLINGHAME has "unified" the whole human race; when there are no more nations or tribes to subjugate by the force of his matchless eloquence; when he stands like ALEXANDER, with no more worlds to conquer—what will he do then? The prospect is really awful—it will hardly bear thinking about!

THE American company which undertook the construction of a telegraphic line between America and Nicolaiewsk, on the Amoor, having discontinued its works and given official notice that it abandons the undertaking, the Russian Government has declared the concession annulled.

THE SUPPLEMENTARY TREATY BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CHINA.

(THE TIMES.)

The announcement of a Mission to the Courts of Europe from a Government whose past treatment of its relations with Western nations had well nigh caused despair in those who had looked forward with hope, when the Treaty of Tientsin was signed, to the undisturbed development of friendly intercourse with the Chinese people was hailed here with satisfaction. The prospect held out by the utterances of the Americo-Chinese Envoy on his arrival in New York—that "China finds that she must come into relations with this civilisation that is pressing up around her; feeling that, she does not wait, but comes out to you and extends her hand"—implying that the Chinese rulers contemplated a step forward in the direction of fulfilment of their obligations, contracted and uncontracted, was more than welcome.

We are interested far beyond any other country in a trade which already amounts to one hundred millions sterling in the year. We are alive to the immense benefit which cannot fail to accrue to us from the development of that commerce to the proportions possible to it; those proportions meaning, besides other things, the not insignificant advantage to us as a manufacturing people of clothing the teeming millions of that empire, causing China almost to surpass India in worth to us. We harbour no sinister designs on the rights of either Government or people. Of this we have given practical proof by the terms to which, in common with the French Government, we restricted ourselves when we dictated at Peking the Convention of 1860. Our sole desire is that the Chinese Government may not be tempted to revert again to its policy of isolation and hostility, which it once fairly abandoned, and that so lately as the year just named—that we may be spared further conflict, and our legitimate commerce being suffered to expand in security, free from underhand interference, we may gain the opportunity of cementing by the ties of a common interest a friendly alliance with the Chinese people.

For reasons of the above nature, the cordial reception of a mission with a character such as that announced by its envoy was guaranteed, although we might, if so minded, have taken umbrage at the selection that has been made, to the exclusion of our own countrymen, in favour of an American gentleman who does not even count among his qualifications any knowledge of the language of the Court from which he comes accredited. Under no obligations to the United States, the Chinese Government is under obligations positive and weighty to ourselves; for, oddly enough, ever since the termination of our last war in 1860, we have been doing little else in China than rendering it service, so acting doubtless under the impression that we should thus place beyond question the sincerity of the friendship proffered. From the latter half of the year 1861 to 1864 we were crushing the Taiping rebellion, which there is no room for doubt would, but for our aid, have triumphed. Other important services might be chronicled, by which the tottering dynasty obtained a new lease of life. In establishing a trustworthy administration, which was of our devising, and the assent to which on the part of the Treaty Powers was due to our instrumentality, for the collection of the revenue upon foreign trade, which has now reached the high annual figure of £2,700,000 sterling, and which the Chinese Government, left to its own resources, would be utterly incompetent to collect, we have contributed in no mean degree to the maintenance of a Government long since bankrupt in its exchequer. Hence, it would have exhibited a graceful appreciation of such services had the Chinese Government made choice of an Englishman with a knowledge of the language in place of an American without it. But, doubtless, the choice is justified by the objects which the treaty clauses concluded by the Envoy with the United States disclose. Its aim would seem to be nothing less than the reinforcement of the Chinese rulers in their old attitude of passive resistance and unfriendliness. It is a pity that the foreign counsellors whom they have at their elbow should have supplied them with advice so mistaken and mischievous. A retrograde policy on the part of China at this date is simply out of the question; it is at variance with the tendencies of the age, is condemned by all the experience of the past, and can bear but one fruit—chronic hostility. There is an irresistible law of progress, which China must, like all other countries, obey or suffer.

The compact which this supplementary treaty aims in effect at exacting from all foreign Powers is to let China remain stationary for all time. To acquiesce in a condition so absurd, and as unavailing as absurd, would be indeed simply to court fresh wars, and to fling away the chief gain, as will be found whenever that treaty is carried into effect, of the Treaty of Tientsin, which was to transfer by degrees from the hands of the Government to those of the people the power to imperil our relations whenever this might chance to suit the purpose or convenience of the former.

We will now, without further preface, proceed to examine seriatim the articles of the treaty under consideration. It seems to have undergone material modification at the hands of the Senate. As it originally stood, it affirmed that the Emperor of China had never waived the right of jurisdiction over strangers settling in Chinese territory. As this surrender is the particular feature of the treaties the Emperor has signed with every foreign Power, the declaration was in manifest contradiction of the terms of those treaties to which, notwithstanding, no allusion whatever was made, nor was any proviso added to supply the place of the jurisdiction thus abolished by one stroke of the pen, by one of the signataries to a special agreement, without consultation or concert with the other; an oversight under the circumstances so palpable and extraordinary as to suggest the idea that the abolition of the existing jurisdiction could not have been seriously contemplated. This point need not now, however, be discussed, since the addition of a line at the end of the clause—"except so far as that right may have been expressly relinquished by treaty"—has rendered the article at once innocuous and nugatory. As it stands it reads strangely enough. The Emperor of China avers his opinion to be that he has not surrendered his jurisdiction over those tracts of his empire to which strangers are permitted to resort; but by the words which follow this opinion is shown to contravene existing treaties, which are thereupon pronounced binding, the opinion expressed to the contrary notwithstanding. Thus the Emperor, after affirming that, by certain acts of his which formally surrendered certain rights, he had not so surrendered them, advances the length of declaring that the treaties which did in express terms surrender those very rights shall bind him. It is difficult to see any intelligible object in a stipulation so worded. The right of the Emperor to jurisdiction over territory not ceded to a foreign Power has never been questioned. The anomalous state of things which grew out of the defenceless state of the foreign concessions at Shanghai during a time of civil war, when all vestige of Imperial authority had disappeared, owing to the expulsion of the authorities by the rebels, ceased with the necessity, and the Emperor recovered, without dispute on the part of either the British or French Governments, his rights unimpaired. As little reason was there for the intrusion into the body of this purposeless clause of the subject of war between foreign Powers on Chinese soil, as if the contingency were imminent or probable. Surely no good purpose can be served by it, and, not to speak of the bad impression conveyed to the Chinese mind, it is a slur upon Western nations. Throughout the Russian war Chinese territory was never once violated by any one of the three combatants, and, as far as compacts can avail, neutral territory is held sacred by international law. Was the phantom of war raised in default of any other cry, in the hope of "scaring" us into acquiescence in a treaty to which our assent was deemed otherwise hopeless?

Article 2. This article provides that all privileges shall rest within the discretion of the Chinese Government. After this matter-of-course proposition there comes, as in the case of Article 1, a qualifying sentence, which provides that such discretion shall not be exercised "in a manner or spirit incompatible with the treaty stipulations of the parties." If the clause had declared that future concessions being absolutely within the discretion of the Emperor of China, foreign Powers were never more to ask for further privileges, a definite and intelligible result would have been attained. As it is, by providing that the admitted discretion shall be regulated by the spirit of existing treaties, nothing is determined or defined, with the further disadvantage of opening the door by an expressly-worded clause for disputes and differences. Who among the contracting parties, for example, is to pronounce when the discretion exercised is compatible or incompatible with the spirit of the treaties, not to say with their letter?

It is worth noting with respect to both Articles 1 and 2 that particular pains appear to have been taken by Mr. Seward and the Americo-Chinese Envoy so to guard the United States that it parts with neither privilege nor concession in any event. In a speech delivered at New York, public attention was invoked to a policy, branded as extortionate and tyrannical, which it was alleged had been pursued towards China to the deprivation of her just rights. Did the Envoy hold this language to Mr. Seward, and if he did, and Mr. Seward concurred in the representation, how came it to pass that the Government of the United States neglected the opportunity afforded by this treaty of renouncing some of those rights of which the Emperor of China is stated to have been shorn, which the United States have not been slow to grasp, and of which they, in common with other nations, are at this moment, in full possession? Can the Envoy have raised the cry for a purpose, knowing it to be baseless?

We need not happily go far in quest of proof to make the groundlessness of the insinuations in question apparent. This is aptly furnished by the terms of a convention signed by the Chinese, when undeniably masters of their own action. It was concluded in November 1860, in the month subsequent to the final conclusion of peace between China and the allied Powers—Great Britain and France. What was the nature of the privileges voluntarily accorded to Russia? Article 7 of that convention provides that—

"In the localities thrown open to commerce, the Russians in China and the Chinese in Russia may enter into all commercial transactions without any hindrance from the local authorities; they may frequent the markets and shops in perfect liberty, as also the merchants' houses; they may buy and sell wholesale or retail, as best suits their convenience, on credit or otherwise, according to the confidence they place in each other. The length of stay of merchants in these localities is entirely dependent on themselves."

What tyrannical agency was there in this instance in operation to extort so valuable a clause? The truth is that the Chinese Government recognised the impossibility in 1860 of longer closing the door, and under this impression opened it wide.

We might call the same convention to our aid upon the question of jurisdiction, paraded in the Americo-Chinese Envoy's treaty as if of predominant importance in the eyes of the Chinese. It is a singular fact that although the convention referred to numbers only fifteen articles, Chinese jurisdiction is waived in no less than four separate and distinct clauses. These are:—

1. "Offences and defalcations will be judged as settled by the 7th Article of the Treaty of Tientsin, according to the laws of the Empire of which the delinquent is subject.
2. "Disputes which do not come under the head of 'commercial transactions,' as lawsuits, complaints, &c., will be settled by mutual consent of the Consul and chief local authority, and the delinquents punished according to the law of their own country.
3. "In criminal cases, no matter how serious, neither the Consul nor the Chinese authorities have any right to incarcerate or pass sentence upon an individual not a subject of their own Government.
4. "As provided for by the 7th Article of the Treaty of Tientsin, offenders shall be tried and punished in accordance with the laws of that one of the two countries to which they may belong."

Had the question of jurisdiction been a matter of real grievance why should the Emperor of China have affirmed and reaffirmed its surrender as above, without even an attempt to assign either duration or limit to the concession?

Articles 3 to 7 inclusive appear objectless, since their provisions already form part of the United States' Treaty of Tientsin, or of one or other of existing treaties with other foreign Powers, to the privileges of which the United States, under the favoured nation clause, are entitled. This will be apparent if we place the new Articles side by side with the old Articles:—

"NEW ARTICLES.

"Art. 3.—The Emperor of China shall have the right to appoint consuls at ports of the United States, who shall enjoy the same privileges and immunities which are enjoyed by public law and treaty in the United States by the consuls of Great Britain and Russia, or either of them.

"Art. 4.—The 29th Article of the Treaty of the 18th of June, 1858, having stipulated for the exemption of Christian citizens of the United States and Chinese converts from persecution in China on account of their faith, it is further agreed that citizens of the United States in China of every religious persuasion, and Chinese subjects in the United States, shall enjoy entire liberty of conscience, and shall be exempt from all disability or persecution on account of their religious faith or worship in either country. Cemeteries for sepulture of the dead, of whatever nativity or nationality, shall be held in respect and free from disturbance or profanation.

"Art. 5.—The United States of America and the Emperor of China cordially recognise the inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance, and also the mutual advantage of the free migration and emigration of their citizens and subjects respectively from the one country to the other for purposes of curiosity, trade, or as permanent residents. The high contracting parties, therefore, join in reprobating any other than an entirely voluntary emigration for these purposes. They consequently agree to pass laws making it a penal offence for a citizen of the United States or a Chinese subject to take Chinese subjects either to the United States or to any other foreign country, or for a Chinese subject or a citizen of the United States to take citizens of the United States to China or to any other foreign country without their free and voluntary consent respectively.

"Art. 6.—Citizens of the United States visiting or residing in China shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemptions in respect to travel or residence as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favoured nation, and reciprocally, Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions in respect to travel or residence as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favoured nation; but nothing herein contained shall be held to confer naturalisation upon the citizens of the United States in China, nor upon the subjects of China in the United States.

"Art. 7.—Citizens of the United States shall enjoy all the privileges of the public educational institutions under the control of the Government of China, and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects shall enjoy all the privileges of the public educational institutions under the control of the Government of the United States, which are enjoyed in the respective countries by the citizens or subjects of the most favoured nations. The citizens of the United States may freely establish and maintain schools within the empire of China at those places where foreigners are by treaty permitted to reside, and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects may enjoy the same privileges and immunities in the United States."

"OLD ARTICLES.

"Art. 10.—The United States of America shall have the right to appoint consuls and other commercial agents for the protection of trade, to reside at such places in the dominions of China as shall be agreed to be opened. [The treaty being one of reciprocity, the Emperor of China would be equally entitled to the privilege.]

"Art. 29.—The principles of the Christian religion, as professed by the Protestant and Roman Catholic Churches are recognised as teaching men to do good, and to do to others as they would have others do to them. Hereafter those who quietly profess and teach these doctrines shall not be harassed or persecuted on account of their faith. Any person, whether citizen of the United States or Chinese convert, who, according to these tenets, peaceably teaches and practises the principles of Christianity, shall in no case be interfered with or molested.

"Art. 12.—Any desecration of the cemeteries by natives of China shall be severely punished according to law."

"BRITISH CONVENTION OF 1860.

"Art. 5.—As soon as the ratifications of the Treaty of 1858 shall have been exchanged, his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China will, by decree, command the high authorities of every province to proclaim throughout their jurisdictions that Chinese choosing to take service in the British colonies, or other parts beyond sea, are at perfect liberty to enter into engagements with British subjects for that purpose, and to ship themselves and their families on board any British vessel at any of the open ports of China; also that the high authorities aforesaid shall, in concert with Her Britannic Majesty's representative in China, frame such regulations for the protection of Chinese emigrating as above as the circumstances of the different open ports may demand."

UNITED STATES' TREATY CONTINUED.

"Art. 30.—The contracting parties hereby agree that should at any time the Ta-Tsing empire grant to any nation, or the merchants or citizens of any nation, any right, privilege, or favour connected either with navigation, commerce, political, or other intercourse which is not conferred by this treaty, such right, privileges and favour shall at once freely enure to the benefit of the United States, its public officers, merchants, and citizens.

"Art. 17.—It shall be lawful for them [United States citizens] to hire at pleasure servants, compradores, linguists, writers, labourers, seamen, and persons for whatever necessary service."

All may be pronounced harmless, so harmless and so needless as to awaken suspicion. Article 1 started with an imposing question, that of jurisdiction over the persons and property of foreigners. This is mooted, and at once dropped and left in specific terms precisely where it stood before. Article 2, providing that the Emperor of China shall exercise his discretion in respect of privileges in conformity with the spirit of the treaties, attains no tangible result. If the Emperor of China would but thus act, all fair claims upon him would at once be unanimously declared satisfied.

The subsequent Articles, as has been shown, are of no perceptible value. The first draught of the treaty, as published, contained a clause, which was originally No. 7, "recognising the necessity for representative coins having a common value, and also a common standard of weights and measures for all countries." This appears to have been eliminated, the Senate possibly regarding a proposal of this sort from China, whose coinage happens to be the unwieldy copper cash, and whose Government, though repeatedly appealed to, has turned a deaf ear to all proposals for a silver coinage, as too good a joke, and the object of its proposal, the occupation of space, as not quite a sufficient reason for its insertion.

That function the Articles which preceded it were, no doubt, thought to have adequately discharged, to conceal the real and sole object of the Americo-Chinese Envoy's mission to Europe, which is embodied in the 8th and last Article.

That Article is intended to pledge—and, in the minds of the Chinese rulers, it will pledge—Western Powers not to introduce the subject of railroads or telegraphs until, of their own motion, the Chinese avow their willingness and invite counsel, which they, of course, inwardly resolve shall be never.

As no foreign Power has the slightest intention of forcing the railway or the telegraph at the point of the bayonet upon the Chinese Government, and as the Government is quite competent to prevent the people under its rule, willing and well-disposed though they are, from parting with their land for such purposes, it is difficult to perceive the utility of a treaty engagement to such an effect. It would certainly be an act of imprudence and folly on our part, considering the temper and aims of the Government we have to deal with, to bind ourselves by an engagement in the solemn form of a treaty never to moot the subject of railroads, telegraphs, or other works of public utility, however desirable—nay, imperative—in a time which may not be far distant, their introduction might be for the conservation of our interests in that part of the world. Silly as such an engagement on our part would be, it would be attended with the most mischievous consequences; it would be safe to be violated, as, despite any treaties or conventions, railways and telegraphs will sooner or later find their way into China. The Government would think they had cause for complaint, and would reproach us with bad faith. This impression they would take care to convey to the people; the violated compact would be disseminated throughout the length and breadth of the land; we should be held up as incorrigible violators of our word—the laying down the railways as only a first step to occupation and possession of the land, the ravishment of the women, and the slavery of the men. We are not altogether strangers to this method, and we have seen in India how popular resentment may be inflamed by artful management and contrivance. Unless, therefore, we are prepared to pledge ourselves to the Chinese Government and people to have nothing to do with railways or telegraphs for all time, and are willing to let other nations enjoy that monopoly, we had better pause before we affix our signature to such a condition.

To conclude our remarks upon the treaty under notice, it is important to dwell upon the fact that the Chinese Government obtains no concession whatever from the United States; on the contrary, the only provision of any value is in favour of the United States, which was possibly the inducement tendered to Mr. Seward as the price of his signature. No railways and telegraphs are to be introduced; but, if they are, matters are put in train for insuring the monopoly of accruing advantages to the United States, who are "to recommend" other nations to comply. American diplomacy may have beaten ours in recent years at Peking, but that does not constitute a reason why we should chronicle the ignominious fact. The very insignificancy of the gain to the Chinese Government of this treaty constitutes a sufficient reason for its rejection, that gain, too, being not real, but only apparent. At bottom valueless to the Chinese, it would be, as has been above remarked, in every way prejudicial to the pacific development of our intercourse with the Chinese people.

And, these considerations aside, it may be asked if it be wise to multiply instead of diminishing the chances of disagreement among European Powers, and especially between ourselves and the United States? Of possible causes of difference have we not already enough in the West, without heedlessly sowing the seeds of a fresh crop in the East?

We rise from the perusal of this treaty, we are bound to say, with the conviction that there is more underneath it than appears on the surface. It bears distinct traces of foreign inspiration, and it is our belief that this mission did not originate with the Chinese Government at all; that the idea of enlisting Mr. Burlinghame as a temporary, recruit for furthering Chinese ends, so far from being spontaneous emanated from a foreign brain, and was suggested by the departure of the American Envoy, then on the eve of quitting Peking. The plan was, no doubt, joyfully welcomed by the Chinese Ministers, who, having but one object at heart, gave but one instruction—"Stop all progress; as to the rest, carte blanche; say and do what you like." The treaty concocted by the Mission on its passage from China is the result before us.

(PALL MALL GAZETTE.)

As regards its external relationships the Celestial Empire calls for more attention at present than it has done since the year 1860, when an allied French and British expedition advanced to the capital and the convention of Peking was made, supplementing the treaty of Tientsin which had been agreed upon two years previously, but the execution of which had been delayed by the contretemps that occurred at the mouth of the Peiho in 1859. It was very wisely arranged by Lord Elgin that the treaty he had formed should come on for revision after ten years' experience of its working, and this is the year which was fixed for that event.

In the modern period our commercial relations with China have been of rather a peculiar kind, owing chiefly to the desire of the people, or at least of a very influential portion of them, to keep their country secluded as far as possible. A humourous mandarin once remarked that England hit China in the face with one hand, and, holding out the other, insisted that it should be grasped in a friendly way; and it must be owned that our countrymen have still a decided leaning to Sydney Smith's doctrine that the "bombshell gospel" ought to be sent to all nations who insist upon shutting themselves up from the rest of the world. It is useless to disguise the fact that a good deal of our relationship with China is a forced relationship, which requires fleets and armies either in the foreground or in the background. In such a case any fine-spun arguments about international rights would be quite thrown away; and it is wise to confine ourselves to a consideration of those changes in the Treaty of Tientsin which are for our own interest, and may be effected without doing the Chinese obvious injury or seriously rousing their opposition.

A few years ago, when the Chinese were in the midst of their difficulties with internal rebellion and the changed state of foreign relationships forced upon them, they would not have dreamed of attempting to influence the action of occidental nations towards them, but would have simply looked upon it as they do on a thunderstorm or a drought, or any other infliction which it pleased Heaven to send. Now, however, their remarkable success (so much owing to the aid given them by foreigners) in restoring the Empire to a state of order and peace has given them courage to come forward and press their own view of the lessons to be learned from the working of the treaties of Tientsin. They have commissioned Mr. Burlinghame, who was formerly the United States Minister at Peking, to be their representative to the treaty Powers, and the line which he has taken up is rather a peculiar and apparently objectionable one. The Chinese, he asserts, have already so fully entered the comity of nations, and are so willing to allow foreigners all reasonable privileges of residence and trade in their country, that there is no necessity for any treaties or special stipulations with them. On the face of it this seems very absurd; for without such stipulations foreigners would be subject to Chinese jurisdiction, to the use of the greater and lesser bamboo, and to that peculiarity of Chinese courts of justice which subjects witnesses to corporal punishment until they agree in their evidence. The Americans are quite as unlikely as any other people to submit to such conditions, and no doubt calculate that, by their great influence in China and by subtle stipulations, they will retain their own jurisdiction; but, if the thing is to be properly arranged at all, there is no reason why it should not be done, as by our present treaty, in a straightforward and definite way.

On the other hand, the foreign merchants in China have their own ideas as to what the experience of the last ten years teaches, and what are the improvements which should be made in the treaties of Tientsin. On this subject considerable weight attaches to their views, and these have been very fully expressed in memorials from the Chambers of Commerce at Hong Kong, and at the open ports to the British Minister at Peking. It need not be admitted that our merchants are a conclusive authority (any more than Mr. Burlinghame) from whom there is no appeal, even as regards their own interest, while much less is it to be held that where so many conflicting interests are concerned their views are to be accepted offhand as indicating exactly what this country should aim at as regards China. There seems to be a general feeling among the mercantile community on the coast of China that the treaty of Tientsin has proved a very valuable document, but there are certain points on which they are almost all agreed in demanding further privileges or better means than they allege they have at present for obtaining the benefit of privileges which have been already conceded. There are two points in particular on which great stress is laid, and on which the Chambers of Commerce are pretty well agreed —namely, the illegal levying of transit dues on foreign goods by Chinese authorities, and the obstacles thrown in the way of foreigners travelling and residing in the country.

There is no doubt that one important object of the existing treaty was to extend the facilities for the sale of British manufactures, and especially of cotton goods, in the Chinese empire. To this end it was arranged that the inland transit dues, or at least one species of them, should be commuted for a payment of 2½ per cent. at the ports of entry; and it is now complained that, in spite of that commutation, transit dues are illegally levied on foreign goods so as virtually to exclude them from the greater part of the country. The Amoy merchants declare that these taxes range from 4 per cent. to 90 per cent. on the value of the goods, and the Shanghai Chamber alleges that a piece of shirting costing 16s. 2d. at that port cannot be delivered in Soochow, only eighty miles distant, at less than 18s. 4d., "showing," as they assert, "an inland charge of 2s. 2d." And, generally, they allege that these illegal transit dues are most injurious to commerce in increasing the price of Chinese exports, but more particularly in preventing the sale of British manufactured goods.

This complaint about illegal transit dues is always a telling point in this country against the Chinese, because it suggests that the interests of the British artisan are involved, and throws a halo of philanthropy and benevolence round the China merchant. At the time of the opium war some one created an immense sensation in Manchester by calculating what a great increase there would be in the manufacture of cotton goods if only every Chinaman could be got to buy a Lancashire pocket-handkerchief yearly, and similar suggestions easily arise in the minds of many persons when the hundreds of millions of the population of China are contrasted with our own power of producing cotton cloth. But to those who have made an intelligent acquaintance with the actual condition of China the question of inland transit dues is by no means so easy a one as the traders would have us believe. It is very difficult in that country to know on what ground levies are made. Its public works, such as the canals, which are the principal means of conveyance, are maintained by the Government, and if these are much out of repair the local mandarins find it necessary to levy special taxes in that district, in order that there should be any sufficiently cheap means of conveyance at all. Again, it is well known that robbers (so-called rebels) spring up very easily, and form themselves into formidable bands in any part of the empire where a portion of the population happens by some accident, such as the flooding of a river or the breaking down of a canal, to be deprived of its ordinary means of subsistence. The result of such a state of matters is that the Government officials placed in charge of a district so disturbed must have recourse to special taxes in order to restore it to a state in which there can be any demand for foreign goods, or transit of goods, or commerce in any shape whatever. They have no other source to look to except the revenues of their district for preserving order, and consequently they must tax the latter in the most convenient ways which present themselves. Now, in circumstances such as those just referred to, can it be any gain to commerce to refuse permission to the mandarins to levy transit dues? In the case of canals, roads, and such like matters, the tax levied is no way different from our own system of taxing carts and carriages at tolls still to be found in many counties at every few miles of road; and the Chinese might for similar reasons to those of our merchants complain that the sale of their tea is prevented in England by local transit dues. As regards taxes levied for the preservation of order, they might say that the excessive police rates of Bengal and Malwa prevent them getting their opium so cheap as they ought. To this it is very truly objected that the treaty of Tientsin contains a special article (XXVII.) which provides for the commutation of transit dues; but then the question is whether, looking at all the circumstances of the case, it is advisable to insist on the execution of an article which was demanded in considerable ignorance of what might be its effect, which was assented to under pressure which left the Chinese little option in refusing or assenting, and which, if strictly carried out, would interfere so seriously with the internal economy of the country. At all events we have mentioned sufficient to show that the principal demand made by the Chambers of Commerce is by no means so simple in itself or so clear in its probable effects as they would have us think, and as on the first blush it may appear to those who have given no special attention to the condition of China. On the other points mooted by the Chambers much to the same purpose might be said; but it is sufficient for the present to call attention to their demands, and to the line of argument which may be taken up against them.

On the whole, it looks as if the foreign merchants, and the Chinese as represented by Mr. Burlinghame, were playing a game against each other, and trying to neutralise each other's unreasonable statements by demands which will not bear examination, but which may serve the purpose of "choking off" the opposite side. Both parties, however, are mistaken in supposing that public opinion in this country is to be taken by storm in that kind of way; and we have no doubt that a further discussion of the subject will bring out clearly enough what are the real changes in our position towards China which the new time demands, and which will be equally beneficial to the people of both countries.

NAVY REFORM.

As the views of Captain Sherard Osborne on this important subject are likely to be interesting to many of our readers, we reprint the following able letter, addressed by him to the editor of The Times a few days ago:—

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE TIMES."

SIR,—The recent speech of Mr. Childers to his constituency, Mr Hunt's lame reply, and your able article of Saturday on our present wasteful expenditure upon navy, army, and monstrous fortifications, will, it is to be hoped, strike the key-note of a subject which deserves quite as much public consideration as the sweeping away of ecclesiastical abuses in Ireland.

Reduced taxation and reduced expenditure are matters every elector in this kingdom can appreciate, and if, as you justly show, diminished expenditure merely means the getting rid of a mass of inefficient officers, men, and materials, now draining our resources, and giving a fictitious appearance of strength were such strength does not really exist, it surely calls for uncompromising action on the part of the constituencies of Great Britain to pledge their future representatives to sweeping reduction in our naval and military expenditure, and to take care that such pledges are faithfully redeemed?

My testimony may be worth little, but such as it is, after having given much consideration to the subject of public expenditure on the navy ever since the appearance of a little work in 1867, known as Sir Frederick Grey's Blue-book, and having devoted some study to military expenditure, whether on men, fortifications, materials, or manufactures, I avow that there should be now little difficulty in reducing it by the annual sum of six millions, or a sum equal, say, to our income-tax of 5d. in the pound sterling, and that without impairing the real fighting power of the State.

Of course we all agree that such trenchant reduction cannot be wrought by a weak Government or a Parliament composed for the most part of contractors or their allies. Neither can we expect it if the next Parliament should be, according to recent prophecy, reconstituted of "young lords and soapboilers;" but, given such men as Joseph Hume and Sir James Graham, the economy can be effected with proportionate efficiency in all branches of the navy and army.

So far as my own profession is concerned, whether in effete admirals, unserviceable half-pay officers of all grades, huge dockyard establishments, crazy ships, gangs of loafers receiving pay as combatants who have sworn to themselves never again to see blue water, and reserves which are only so in name, I maintain that there never was a time in the history of our navy when unsparing retrenchment could be more advantageously carried out, both in the interest of the State and of our service.

What is true of the navy is still more applicable to the army. Take our home military expenditure in all its branches, add that to the vast sums wrung from the Hindoo for that portion of the British forces which are in India, and I think you will find that England stands at the head of all the nations of the earth in her military expenditure, though a long way down the roll in the number of combatants she could proportionately produce. The fact is, neither Horse Guards nor War Office has calmed down since the Crimean war and the Indian Mutiny. More camps, more garrisons, more forts, more muskets, more guns, more staff-officers, more appointments, more patronage is ever the Horse Guards' cry, just as the list touchingly read by the Admiralty organ in the House of Commons last Session was for more money, more ships, more seamen in the navy.

The limit must be drawn by the tax-payer; if he gives unlimited credit there will be unlimited expenditure, and every Ministry will justify it by an appeal to a self-appointed select committee of professional men.

Comparing our increasing expenditure since the Crimean war with the returns of pauperism, it is curious, after allowing for the sudden accession of paupers caused by the cotton famine, to note how much the two items run parallel to each other. Last Lady-day, just as Tory Secretaries of State were justifying the previous year's waste and asking for more supplies, there were nearly a million of declared paupers in Great Britain. That million of houseless, penniless creatures had behind them, as we all very well know, another million of poor souls, some who preferred to starve rather than beg, others who warred on society, living on it, if not by it. To these two millions we must add those who live upon us, from befeathered Commander-in-Chief down to the soldier, sailor, policeman, public pensioners, and employés, before we can arrive at anything like a just proportion of the drones and wasps the bees have to support in this our British hive.

Something might be said in favour of our present large outlay in camps and fleets if the mere outward semblance of efficiency—the "pomp and circumstance" without the real preparation for war—would serve the purpose of frightening foreign Powers from ever disturbing us. But it does not answer its purpose, any more than the Japanese calico screens representing heavy batteries stopped our reaching Yedo and its Shiogoon. If anyone doubt it, let him read—and I strongly advise the perusal—a remarkable report by the United States' Commissioners to their Government on the exhibitions of the munitions of war in Paris last year. Taking the chapter "Ironclad Ships" alone, it is evident we have been unable to cast any glamour in the eyes of our Transatlantic brethren. They have discounted our expensive fleet of broadside armourclads, and they more than ratify all The Times has ever said, or I have ever written in Blackwood's Magazine or elsewhere, on the same sad subject. The report should be printed in the largest type, and hung up in the board-room at Whitehall. The Yankees have quite seen through our calico fleet, and shown how unprotected ends in ironclads will only serve to burn or smoke out our seamen from protected box batteries; how rams of the Amazon type will not ram, save to their own destruction; how things like the Pallas will not serve as the eyes of a fleet to any future Nelson; how "it would be difficult to imagine a case of more successful deception than that by which the British public has been led to believe that the armour-plates of the Hercules are nine inches in thickness," because a Hercules target was stuck up in the Exhibition with a nine-inch plate on it, and so ticketed; and how they have summed us up, after spending so many millions of money, as merely possessing an "egg-shell fleet," which, "in the event of war, would prove a source of weakness rather than of strength to the nation."

If such is, then, the result, and I and many others believe it to be so, surely the real remedy lies in economy? If a collection of old gentlemen or officers incapable of appreciating the future requirements of our navy and army are to waste public money in ships and forts because it is our ancient custom that they should do so, the less money they have to play with the better. When war really comes we shall all wake up; we shall have all the better means in hoarded wealth to meet the requirements of the moment, and we may rely on the patriotism of our countrymen; the skill, energy, and resources of our private factories and yards, and the genius of our people for war as well as their love of peace. Herein lies our real strength; for, as the commissioners already quoted say, very truly, "No one who examines the products of British skill and labour as illustrated in the Champ de Mars can doubt for a moment that English shipyards can turn out ironclads better adapted for naval warfare than any possessed by the British Government; indeed, they have already supplied them to other countries."

What can be done by this nation in warships and sailors can, when the necessity arises, be also accomplished in fortifications and soldiers; and I will back a good railway contractor to throw up an earthwork in forty-eight hours far more formidable against an enemy's fleet than anything yet produced at Spithead or Plymouth.

Retrenchment in expenditure should, therefore, I maintain, be our motto, as well as the disestablishment of the Irish Church; for both measures are needed for the better consolidation and future safety of the United Kingdom.—Yours obediently,

London, Aug. 30. SHERARD OSBORN, Captain.

Monetary and Commercial.

Messrs. Birley and Co. announce that the interest and responsibility of Mr. Francis Parry and Mr. Thomas Smith in their firm at Hong Kong, Canton, and Foochow, ceased on the 31st December, 1867. The present partners are Mr. Charles Wilson Murray, Mr. Arthur Smith, and Mr. Thomas Pyke. Mr. H. L. Dalrymple signs the firm by procuration.

An announcement appeared the other day in some of the daily papers that "the bills of a firm engaged in the India and China trade had been returned." We are enabled to state that the firm in question had no connection with China; moreover, the liabilities are so small that the circumstance was hardly worthy of mention in the City Article of the papers that published it.

The sum of £26,000 in gold has been withdrawn from the Bank for manufacture into small bars for shipment to China.

At last week's biddings for bills on India the amounts allotted were, to Calcutta, Rs. 18,89,000; and to Madras, Rs. 1,11,000. The minimum price was fixed as before at 1s. 10½d. on both presidencies, and tenders at 1s. 11d. receive about 56 per cent. No tenders on Bombay were invited.

The Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company's steamship Chiltern has sailed from the Thames for Malta with the shore end and part of the main cable for the direct submarine telegraph line to be laid by that company for the Anglo-Mediterranean Telegraph Company (Limited). The Scanderia, containing the remaining length of the main cable, will sail in a few days.

At the meeting of the City Offices Company (Limited) it was announced that satisfactory progress had been made with the scheme for opening the "Lombard" subscription room, over 3,000 subscribers having been secured. A resolution authorising the step was carried with only one dissentient vote.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Peru, from Southampton on the 5th inst., was in gold, to Galle, £20,100; to Bombay, £57,100; to Madras, £5,215; to Calcutta, £10,000; to Alexandria, £5,000; in silver, to Singapore, £9,896; to Hong Kong, £25,740; to Foochow, £900; to Shanghai, £10,700; total in gold, £97,415; in silver, £47,236.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for July show a steady tendency towards revival in nearly all branches of industry, with the exception of the iron trade. Compared with the corresponding month of last year there has been an increase of £185,839, or about 1 per cent., in the declared value of our exportations, while upon the total of July, 1866, the increase is 5 per cent. Our consignments of cotton goods have been on a satisfactory scale; since, although those of yarn figure for a decrease of 21 per cent. in value and 14 per cent. in quantity, those of manufactured articles show an increase of 2¼ per cent. in value and 12 per cent. in quantity. In woollen goods likewise there have been increased transactions, owing chiefly to an improved demand from the United States, the augmentation being 6 per cent. in declared value and 35 per cent. in quantity. There has likewise been an increase of 7 per cent. in our shipments of coal, 6 per cent. in earthenware, 19 per cent. in haberdashery, 2 per cent. in hardwares, and 14 per cent. in silk manufactures. Iron, on the other hand, shows the large diminution of 16 per cent., and in linen manufactures there has been a diminution of 4 per cent. As regards importations it appears that the arrivals of cotton during the month were 719,793 cwts. against 748,898 in July, 1867, a falling off of about 4 per cent., and that of wheat they were 3,010,288 cwts., against 3,295,622, a falling off of 9 per cent. Our total shipments of goods for the first seven months of the year have been £100,349,426, showing a reduction of 2¾ per cent. from those of the corresponding period of last year, and of about 7 per cent. from those of 1866.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

HAMBURG TRADE RETURNS.

HAMBURG, Aug. 28.

The following tables, having reference to the commerce of this port with the Far East, are extracted from the statistical returns for the year 1867, compiled and published by the Hamburg Board of Trade. They must be regarded as highly satisfactory, for it will be seen that all articles of any importance show an increase on the previous year. The marked disproportion between Tea and Coffee (in Table 5) is a curious feature.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The attention of the trade is just now centred on the almost simultaneous arrival of six of the China clippers, of which the Ariel was the first to get her teas on the market; the first sales made were at 2s. to 2s. 6d. for new season's Kaisow, and 2s. 6d. to 2s 9d. for Paklings in boxes for export to Russia, &c.

The new black leafs ex Agamemnon prove quite up to the favourable expectations formed from Overland samples, and have sold well at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 3d. for fine Oonams and Ooanfas, and 2s. 4d. to 2s. 6½d. for fine Monings and Oopacks; about 8,000 chests have sold. Kaisows, except finest, are most difficult of sale.

At last week's public sales 22,219 packages were offered, of which about 18,000 found buyers, and these generally at a further decline. About 5,000 boxes new season's Canton scented teas per overland mail were sold—Scented Caper at 1s. 7d. per lb., Scented Orange Pekoes at 1s. 2d. to 1s. 6¾d. per lb., showing a still further decline, and entailing in most cases a heavy loss—as much as 7d. to 10d. per lb. Old season's Canton Scented Pekoe sold at fully 1d. per lb. lower. Congous sold irregularly, but in some cases at a slight reduction on private contract prices. Packages offered:—Congou, 11,061; Scented Caper, 1,564; Oolong, 766; Souchong, 206; Pekoe Souchong, 200; Flowery Pekoe, 48; Scented Orange Pekoe, 7,160; Hyson, 158; Young Hyson, 616; Imperial, 49; Gunpowder, 242; Sorts, 8; Assam, 11; Java, 130; total, 22,219 packages.

SILK.

[For London market see "Commercial Postscript."]

According to a Circular of Messrs. Arles Dufour and Co., there has, as usual in the month of August, been very little business in the Lyons Silk Market. The supplies of European raw and thrown descriptions having been limited, the prices of these remain firm and the stocks held are lower than ever. In China Silk the first arrivals have not yet led to any important transactions, and quotations are still unsettled. It is considered that the political state of Europe may induce many importers to realise at small profits, while, on the other hand, others may feel justified in holding until later in the season, when, European Silk being exhausted and a change in fashion occurring, Asiatic Silk is likely to be used more freely. Bengal sorts are still neglected, on account of the difficulty of having them thrown.

COTTON.—The market was very firm in the early part of the interval, consumers and exporters doing a large business, and although, owing to the large import, a quieter tone has prevailed during the last day or two, prices show but little change. All descriptions of East India found free buyers in the early part of the interval, but the large import has subsequently caused a quieter feeling, and prices have in some instances given way ⅛d. per lb.

COFFEE.—The market has been largely supplied with Ceylon, both Plantation and Native. Plantation, especially the superior qualities, has sold very well at firm rates, while prices for the medium and lower sorts have been slightly easier. Native has been in less demand, and quotations are 6d. to 1s. per cwt. lower than those given in our last. The following are the current rates: Plantation Ceylon, triage and ordinary, 56s. to 58s.; good and fine ordinary, small and gray, 61s. 6d. to 67s.; low middling to middling colory, 67s. to 75s. 6d.; good middling, 77s. to 80s.; good bold. 82s. 6d.; pea-berry, 78s. to 86s. Native Ceylon, good and fine ordinary, at 46s. to 48s.; small, 38s.; pea-berry 50s. 6d.; garblings, 20s.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—The market is firm but inactive. Of Ceylon, about 130 casks have been disposed of at £51 5s. per ton.

CAMPHOR.—We are still without business of importance in either China or Japan.

CUTCH.—Prices are slightly lower, 300 boxes Pegu, at auction, having realised 30s. to 31s. 6d. for good quality.

GALLS.—We have no transactions to report, all offers at auction having been bought in.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Quiet; of 95 cases Sumatra at auction, a few only sold at £7 10s. per cwt. for false packed seconds, and £4 17s. 6d. very ordinary thirds. Copal: Firm; but of 204 cases at auction only one-fourth sold at 32s. 6d. to 33s. 6d. per cwt. for ordinary rough hard. Damar: Steady; 163 cases sold at auction at 85s. to 88s. per cwt. for fair to good picked.

INDIA RUBBER.—The market is extremely flat; 22 baskets Singapore and 134 packages Penang offered at the auctions were all bought in.

JAPAN WAX.—Rates again exhibit an advance, and 398 boxes of recent arrival, offered at the sales, realised £5 10s. to £6 7s. 6d. per cwt. for medium to fine quality, in saucers.

PLUMBAGO.—Of Ceylon, lump is in less demand, and cheaper. Dust very firm. Of 822 barrels at auction one-half sold at 23s. to 38s. per cwt. for middling to fine lump, and 14s. 6d. to 19s. for middling to very good dust.

PEPPER.—Black: The market is steady. 1,223 bags Sumatra at auction sold at 3⅜d. to 3½d. per lb.; and 495 bags Penang sold at 3½d. to 3¼d. per lb. Moderate trade privately. White is fully ⅛d. per lb. cheaper. Of 3,452 bags Singapore at auction, one-fourth sold at 4⅛d. to 5d. per lb. for middling, with two lots superior at 6½d. to 6⅝d. 106 bags Penang sold at 4½d. for inferior.

RICE.—The supplies of soft grain sorts previously secured by both home and foreign buyers have almost suspended the demand for floating cargoes, and scarcely any business has been done within the fortnight. At public sale 3,089 bags Java, of common quality, much mixed with paddy, were bought in at 10s.; 250 bags peeled sold at 14s. 6d. By private contract 1,000 bags Dacca have been sold at 9s. 6d. 400 tons Ballam at 8s. to 8s. 6d. ex ship arrived, 200 tons Moulmain ex ship arrived at 11s. 1½d. 500 tons yellow Bengal for arrival at 8s. 6d. ex ship, late shipment, 8s. 7½d. landed A cargo of 700 tons Necransie arrived off the coast has been sold at 10s. 10½d. for the Continent.

SAPANWOOD.—Prices are lower, and of 35 tons Siam at auction two-thirds sold at £10 2s. 6d. to £10 10s. per ton for inferior; 45 tons Manila sold at £9 2s. 6d. to £11 2s. 6d.; and 61 tons Ceylon one-third sold at £9 7s. 6d. to £10 2s. 6d.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: We quote 1st sort 2s. 9d. to 3s. 1d. per lb.; 2nd sort, 1s. 9d. to 2s. 10d.; 3rd sort, 1s. 5d. to 2s. 5d.; and 4th and Jungle, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 10d. Market quiet, with limited business. Cloves: Penang dearer; 13 cases at auction sold at 10d. to 11¼d. per lb. for good to fine. Mace: Steady; of 35 cases Penang at auction one-third sold at 1s. 9d. to 2s. 6d. per lb. for ordinary to good reddish. Nutmegs: Firm; of 21 cases Penang, 9 cases Singapore and 128 packages Batavia, at auction three-fourths sold at 2s. 11d. per lb. for fair bold, and 1s. to 1s. 10d. ordinary small to good medium.

TIN.—The market for Straits since our last report has been firm with a moderate business. The current quotations are:—Banca £93. 10s. to £94, fine Straits on the spot £92 to £93, afloat £93 10s.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

The market for shipping yarns is very quiet, and to make sales it would be requisite to take lower prices, but there is not much pressure to sell on the part of spinners, as they are well under contract. Home-trade yarns are very quiet, and much less than average business has been done. A slight concession would have to be made in these yarns to induce business. For cloths there is evidently a falling off in demand, and to effect sales lower prices would have to be taken, but there seems to be no inducement, either on the part of manufacturers or buyers, to make any movement.

Mr. Sam Mendel's report for the past month is as follows:—

The month has been marked by more than average activity compared with some time past, and though there have been intervals during which this market has exhibited an entire absence of animation, there has existed a general firmness and healthiness of tone, and considerable business has resulted. The cheerful feeling which prevailed at the close of July and over the opening days of August was succeeded by a temporary dulness, influenced by a quieter tone in the Liverpool Cotton Market for some days, when a fair demand again sprang up for the raw material at gradually hardening rates, giving renewed confidence to buyers of yarns and goods, and operations were resumed on a free scale, enabling producers to clear off all accumulations of stock, with additional sales for forward delivery, at slowly yet gradually advancing prices. For some days past a marked improvement has taken place in the value of cotton, with larger sales both for home consumption and export, followed by a response in this market to about one-half the extent; at any further advance buyers of both yarns and goods prefer to look on, and we close the month with a firm and steady market, but with less activity, from the refusal of sellers to accept prices below the quoted advance.

WOOLLEN GOODS.

Messrs. Jorss and Co.'s fortnightly Circular is as follows:—

A small business is being transacted in Lustre and Dyed Yarns, but export houses abstain from operating; while, as Spinners are still well employed with old orders, prices remain, on the average, steady. No change can be reported in the dullness of the Piece trade. The Export houses are, apparently, very quiet; while the Home houses are giving only a few orders in Fancies. The Eastern trade is as languid as ever; and for operations on American account the season has not advanced sufficiently. Still prices remain firm, partly owing to the unaltered prices of the raw materials, partly to the conviction that improvement will set in during the Autumn. All branches seem to tend this way, and, therefore, transactions are limited.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth freights to the Eastern ports are not well maintained, the offers of tonnage being in excess of the demand. Coal freights from the Northern outports still continue dull at the undermentioned rates.

Current rates of freight for vessels on the berth:—To Yokohama: 45s. weight or meast. To Nagasaki: 50s. weight or meast. To Shanghai; 42s. 6d. weight, 40s. meast. To Chefoo: 60s. weight or meast. To Foochow: 50s. weight or meast. To Hong Kong: 42s. 6d. weight, 30s. meast. To Amoy: 50s. weight or meast. To Singapore: 35s. weight or meast. To Penang: 40s. weight or meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 35s. meast.

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear of Tyne per keel.—For Shanghai: £45. For Hong Kong: £35. For Singapore: £26. For Galle: £23. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton.—For Yokohama, £2 3s. For Shanghai: £2 7s. 6d. For Hong Kong: £1 17s. For Manila: £1 14s. For Batavia: £1. For Singapore: £1 6s. For Galle: £1 2s.

The Admiralty have invited tenders for the conveyance of the following stores:—1 ton (light) cartouches, at Woolwich; 8 tons (light) form tops, &c., at the Tower; for Colombo. 15 tons (heavy) and 1 ton (light) naval common stores, at Woolwich; 7 tons (light) socket pipes, at the Tower, and 475 hogsheads malt liquor (to be shipped from England by the last day of September), for Hong Kong.

CASUALTIES.

A letter received from the master, Graffunder, of the Willy, from Cardiff to Hong Kong, states that his vessel was lost in Gaspar Straits, having struck on a rock, crew saved by the Agamemnon (str.), on her way to London, via Mauritius.

The Andre Maria, Palegry, from Buenos Ayres for Ceylon, put into Rio de Janeiro, July 31, with damage, and was repairing rigging on the 7th Aug.

The Miranda, Good, from London to Colombo, which touched the ground off the South Foreland, put into Plymouth, Sept. 2, to have her bottom examined.

NATIONAL MUSIC.

"THE ECHO OF LUCERNE" and the BUXTON BAND.—Our visitors will be glad to know that the programmes for next week will contain, with other novelties, the popular song, "The Echo of Lucerne." This clever band has won for itself a high reputation by having performed some of the most charming compositions, both ancient and modern. Of the latter class we may mention "God Bless our Sailor Prince," and the new song, "Our dear old Church of England." We hear that Herr Lutz's fine band at Scarborough has introduced the national air, "God Bless our Sailor Prince," in his programmes.—Vide Buxton Advertiser, Aug. 15.

The above songs are published only by ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street, and may be had everywhere.

THE ECHO OF LUCERNE. Transcribed for Pianoforte by Brinley Richards. 3s. The same as Piano Duet. 3s. 6d.; and the Song. 3s.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BELLS OF ABERDOVEY, for Piano, 3s.; ditto, Piano Duet, 3s. All at half-price, with an extra stamp for postage.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, and all Musicsellers.

(DIRECTORS OF THE COMPANY, 1866-8.)

AT a GENERAL MEETING, held on TUESDAY, the 12th day of MAY, 1868, the following resolutions were passed, relative to the continuance of the Company for a further period of three years from the 1st January, 1869; and notice is hereby given that applications for shares in the annexed form will be received at the offices of the Company until 31st October, 1868.

Applications for shares from persons not resident in Shanghai must be accompanied by a power of attorney to their agents to sign the deed of settlement in their behalf, and generally to represent them in all matters connected with the Company.

In accordance with the resolution passed at the meeting of 18th November, 1867, a separate office of the Company will be opened in London on 1st January, 1869.

By orders of the Court of Directors,
JOHN S. MACKINTOSH, Secretary.
Shanghai, 15th May, 1868.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

No.

To the Provisional Committee of the North-China Insurance Company.

GENTLEMEN,

hereby request that you will allot to shares in the above Company, and agree to accept such shares, or any less number you may allot to ; and agree to pay the first call of Tls. 200 per share, and all subsequent calls, and to subscribe the deed of settlement whenever required to do so.—Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

RESOLUTIONS REFERRED TO ABOVE.

Res. I. That a company to be called the "North-China Insurance Company" shall be formed for a further period of three years, from 1st January, 1869, to 31st December, 1871.

Res. II. That the Directors for the time being of the present Company be appointed to act as a Provisional Committee to organise the new Company.

Res. III. That this meeting recommends that the Provisional Committee should adopt as the basis of the new Company that the capital should be Tls. 1,500,000 in 1,500 shares of Tls. 1,000 each; paid up capital, Tls. 300,000, or Tls. 200 per share, and that the Committee be authorised to issue a prospectus inviting applications for shares and to proceed with the allotment.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE BORNEO COMPANY (LIMITED).

Singapore, April 6, 1868.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WM. CLOUGHTON, Managing Director.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—A word of promise.—All sufferers from sores, ulcers, scorbutic affections, and skin diseases may confidently commence the treatment of their several infirmities with these healing and cleansing remedies. Under Holloway's well tried medicaments the worst cases will soon assume a more kindly aspect, and in the progress of the cure the afflicted will neither be embarrassed by difficulties nor disheartened by failures. A little perseverance and moderate attention to the "directions for use" enveloping each packet of Ointment and Pills will enable every invalid to cure himself, and to conduct his complaint to a successful issue; and he may feel assured that by following this simple but searching treatment his skin will be made sound, severe suffering spared, and health restored.

THE MAILS, &c.

The present mail left Alexandria, and passed Messina one day late, and was hardly expected to be delivered until to-morrow morning. The lost time has, however, been made up for, and letters were delivered punctually. The next inward P. and O. mail, leaving Hong Kong on the 21st August, will be due on the 5th October. The French mail of the 25th August may be expected about the same time. Telegrams in advance of the latter have been received via Galle; from Shanghai telegrams to the 26th August were received via Kiachta this morning. Under this head we stated in our last issue that the inconvenience arising from the want of harmony between the P. and O. and Messageries time-tables would soon be remedied. We are now enabled to state that as a preliminary step towards commencing a fortnightly service, the directors of the Messageries Imperialés intend to change the days of departure from a fixed day of the month to a day of the week. The alteration will probably take effect with the outward October mail, or at latest the November one. The day of departure from Marseilles will be Saturday.

The steamers Chiltern and Scanderia have sailed for the Mediterranean with the new Malta and Alexandria Cable.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present mail brings advices from Yokohama to July 26. A portion of the outward mail of June 5 was received on the 23rd July, being brought by the Pacific Company's steamer Colorado, direct from Hong Kong; the P. and O. Str. Aden, with the rest, was due when the present mail left. The Pacific Steamer New York, from San Francisco, was also hourly expected. The Japan Times sums up the news as follows:—

The position of Japanese politics appears as indeterminate as ever, and the uncertainty which still exists is always as harmful to foreign trade and the progress of European ideas. For though the Imperial troops are evidently pushing back the rebels on all sides, no decisive action has taken place, nor, indeed, from the nature of Japanese warfare, can such be looked for. The Northern guerillas are at present driven farther from Yedo than they have ever been since the city was occupied by the Mikado; but it is impossible to force them to a position where they might be crushed and done with—a desultory skirmishing goes on all over the country, and keeps its peaceably inclined inhabitants in a constant state of alarm. We need not trouble our home readers with particulars of any of these petty affairs. The only points really worthy of record are the removal of Yoshihisa, the ex-Shiogoon, from Mito to Tsurunga, and the projected visit of the chiefs of the Southern confederation to Yokohama. These have a certain importance. The first, as signifying that Yoshihisa is still mistrusted, or that at all events, it is thought better to remove him from the North, when he might at any time be made a rallying point for the rebels, to a place where he will be more a hostage for the clan than anything else, while the visit of the Southern chiefs to Yokohama, leaving their own territory and the Mikado, is a significant proof of the consolidation of their power so far, and of the falsity of the numerous reactionary reports so industriously spread about by the friends of the rebels. Thus Ailzu was said to be in Kiusiu, within eighty miles of Osaka, and marching upon it—a statement without the least foundation in fact, but which sufficed to alarm considerably foreign residents at Kobé.

From Osaka we hear of the flooding of the foreign concession by the swollen rivers, to the depth of over two feet. Such rains the Japanese say have not occurred for many years. We are sorry also to have to record the death of other victims to the Osaka bar. A French restaurateur, Mr. Charles Debez, and two coloured men were drowned in attempting to cross it on the 6th and 7th. It is a shifting sand, and the recent floods seem to have so changed its shape and channels that even the native boatmen are at fault upon it.

Osaka is to be made a port of entry after all—an important step gained, and which will shortly be officially announced. As the bar is evidently, as it stands, an insuperable obstacle to landing goods, it is clear either that it must be removed and sufficient works made to prevent any fresh accumulation, or a railway must be built from Kobe or Hiogo to Osaka. In our leading columns will be found a second article addressed to intending emigrants hither and, as will be seen, we point to such works as these, which require large capital to execute, as a proper field for the wealth and enterprise of Australians or others, the only class of settlers we want in Japan.

The Albion, chartered by a company of Italian silkworm egg buyers, left for Nee-e-gata, the newly opened port on the west coast, on the 17th. Our latest advices received from that port do not justify us in anticipating for these enterprising gentlemen a successful campaign.

A complete change in the weather has taken place, and we are now in the enjoyment of bright skies and a summer heat tempered by an unfailing breeze. Considerable damage has, however, been done to the rice crop in parts of the country where it was farthest advanced, and foreign grain in moderate quantity will probably find a market during the autumn. Shippers must, however, be very cautious, for it must never be forgotten that the Japanese are strongly prejudiced—and with excellent reason—in favour of their own produce.

The Ministers held a meeting on the 22nd July, at which it was decided, in view of the march of large bodies of Southern troops upon Yedo, again to neutralise this settlement, and to confide it to the protection of foreign guards. A proportion of men is to be furnished by the French and English garrisons and the marines from vessels of war of various nationalities now in harbour for this service. On the 23rd a large guard-house for the Dutch contingent was commenced in a most inappropriate place, the main street of the settlement, just opposite the French Bank. This building, if allowed to be completed, will nearly block up an important thoroughfare; will vitiate the insurance upon all the godowns immediately near it, while the guard will—it is hardly necessary to say—be an unendurable nuisance, night and day, without being of the slightest use. During the night of the 23rd the half finished building was, very properly, pulled down by some persons unknown. Mr. Van Polsbroek, the Dutch Minister, should take the hint and remove his contingent to the outskirts of the town, where it can protect, instead of being only protected.

The folly of dismantling the Hong Kong Mint has, we hear by last mail, been consummated—a fact of which we were not aware when the article on the Hong Kong grievances was published in our last. It has been sold to the Japanese Government for a ridiculously low price, and a change in the currency of this country may therefore be anticipated. It will take some months for the machinery to be taken down and shipped hither, so that our Chamber of Commerce and professional financiers have time enough before them to prepare for the change: we trust they will have skill enough to direct its course.

NAGASAKI.

The Nagasaki Times, referring to the recent deportation of Christians, states that in reply to the Consuls' inquiries a letter was sent to the effect that the Christians had been sent to the territories of the Princes Choshiu Sekishiu Suano and Bingo to be "taken care of;" that the Japanese Government did not intend to outrage humanity by the destruction of innocent men; that the remaining Christians in the village would not be molested and giving as a reason for acting as they had done with regard to those sent away that it was to prevent trouble between them and the other sects in the neighbourhood, at the same time thanking the various Consuls for their kind suggestions and humane motives. They did not deny that fathers and husbands had been taken away, leaving many families without means of subsistence. We hear from a private source that, according to currrent report, another ship load had been sent off.

CHEFOO.

THE GOLD MINES.

A Chefoo correspondent writes to the North China Herald:—"There are several persons at the mines, and they seem to be making a good thing out of them, as they do not return. It is reported that some miners came over in the last San Francisco steamer to Yokohama, and chartered a steamer thence to Shantung." Allusion is also made to a silver mine, which has had to be abandoned, through the difficulty of getting coolies and mandarin opposition. An experienced digger has been to "prospect" the country, and reports highly of its mineral wealth.

From another correspondent's letter we extract the following passages:—"The gold mines in this vicinity are the topic of the day here, and perhaps your readers may be glad to know the most recent accounts from them. There have been satisfactory proofs of the existence of the gold for some time, but no evidence of practical and experienced miners had been given as to the value of the diggings until now. Everybody here felt that until a trustworthy report of the gold-fields could be made, such as would satisfy professional diggers it would not be worth their while coming to Chefoo, there was no certainty of attracting workers to the rich deposits of mineral wealth. Now, the country has been tested by an 'old hand;' and there is no mistake about the stuff that guineas were made of being in abundance in the quartz reefs and ranges within fifteen miles from this port. Specimens of the quartz are now here, and small nuggets of the size of peas. The 'inspector,' who has just returned, declares that the whole country is inviting for its mineral wealth. It now appears that not only gold but silver exists in large quantities, and silver ore containing thirty per cent. of pure silver abounds in the district. All that was said long ago about the place is more than verified, and that deposits of galena, lead ore, and copper ore permeate the mountain ranges.

"Let it not be thought for one moment that the people of this province would look upon the Californian emigrants as antagonists. The entire population would hail their arrival with pleasure, as the harbingers of their own personal liberty to share in the gold of their own country. Nor can it be maintained that the opening of mines would interfere with rights of private property. It is true that the richest diggings are supposed to be in the terraced fields on the sides of the hills; but the miners need not begin on them. There are miles of rich quartz reefs where no human being resides and where no private rights of property exist. Let this be clearly understood, that there will be no collision with the Chinese about the land where the best diggings are found. There will be no interference with the peaceful agricultural districts, nor any meddling with the poor people such as would constitute a grievance whereupon to found a despatch from the Tseng-le-yamen. The coast is clear of all such difficulties. The gold harvest is ready for the sickle of the miners, and they will have the sympathy of the entire population. It will be hard to make out a case for political interference, and this new and unexpected phase in Chinese history will be a godsend to the foreign Legations in their dealings with the poor old absurd and rebel-stricken Peking Court. Let a thousand Californians settle in Shantung, and Ministers will get anything they like out of the 'foreign board,' just by promising that the 'band of brothers' shall not appropriate all China.

"Let not the opportunity be lost. Now is the time for action, and a few courageous pioneers will lay the foundation of a grand future for all foreigners in China. Every one should contribute by word or deed to hasten the day of action. If the Californians don't believe in the Chefoo gold mines, let them send over a delegation to prospect the place. The Pacific Steam Company could afford to give them free passages, and would doubtless do so for their own interests. . . . When California was opened, food was dear and everything scarce. In this new California provisions are abundant and cheap. The diggings are within twenty miles of a good seaport, with good roads all the way, and the miners might supply all their wants from the neighbourhood. A good climate, fine country, cheap food, peaceful inhabitants, communication with the world, and lots of gold and silver!! What more can be required?"

Some land in the bankrupt estate of Meadows and Co. has been sold at absurdly low prices, there having been no competition. The late theatrical performance was so successful that a permanent amateur corps has been started.

SHANGHAI.

Dates from this port extend to the 1st of August. The English mail of June 5 arrived out on the 20th of July, with telegrams to June 27. Later telegrams to June 30 had been received via Kiachta.

From the North China Herald we extract the following:—"The prospect of opening up mines continues to excite much interest among foreigners, and some alarm among Chinese officials. A protest has been addressed by the Taoutai to the foreign Consuls against the threatened invasion. Mining in China is illegal, he tells them, on the authority of the foreign board; and foreigners who may venture into the interior in defiance of law cannot be protected against the hostility of the inhabitants. Much California diggers will care for this threat! But we do not anticipate popular opposition if the new comers behave quietly. No doubt the mandarins will do the best they can to conjure up Feng-shuy; but the Shangtung villagers do not seem to believe in it.

"It is rumoured that several changes are likely to be soon made in the Customs service. Mr. Kleinwachter goes from Kiukiang to Swatow; his collision with the Taoutai precluding his stay at the former port, where he will be relieved by Mr. Bowra, who will in turn be relieved by Mr. White, at Ningpo. Mr. Kopsch succeeds the latter at Takao. With reference to Mr. Kleinwachter's removal, it is generally remarked that the removal of the Taoutai from Kiukiang would be a more appropriate step, as that official is clearly to blame. We are waiting with some interest to know who is to be the new Commissioner of Customs at Shanghai. Baron de Meritens and Mr. Dick are spoken of as likely men for the post.

"We are glad to hear that the revolving light which has been fixed on the lightship at the entrance of the Yangtsze is spoken of by shipmasters as a great success—a vast improvement on the old light.

"Mr. Cumberland, who was acting fourth officer of the Benares at the time of her wreck, has handed us a protest against the sentence passed on him by the Naval Court. He was not the responsible officer of the watch, he says. The second officer was so. Mr. Cumberland, therefore, avers that he had no power to stop the ship or do other than he did—report what he saw to his superior. He intends to appeal to the Board of Trade.

"The Prussian Consul-General's country house was destroyed by fire on the 23rd July, despite prompt assistance rendered from H.M.S. Acorn.

"A violent gale—the outer edge of a typhoon—blew over the settlement during the night of the 19th and morning of the 20th instant, doing some damage. Some ships which experienced the full force of the cyclone at sea have come in badly damaged. The mail steamers Ellora and Dupleix caught the typhoon at the mouth of the Yangtze, and anchored inside the light-ship. The United Service had also to heave to; she lost a serang, washed overboard. The steamer Ying-tze-fei, about which some fears had been entertained, reached port in safety. She experienced the full strength of the typhoon, but sustained no damage worth mentioning. The actual cause of her late arrival is that she ran short of coal and had to sail the last half of the way from Chefoo. She had just enough coal to carry her to Shanghai under ordinary circumstances, but not enough to meet the emergency which arose in her detention by the gale. Blame attaches to whomsoever is responsible for this deficiency; and we doubt not a similar contingency will be guarded against in future. Mishaps of this kind are excusable on a long journey, but not so on the short trip from Chefoo to Shanghai."

The further effects of the storm are thus described in the Supreme Court Gazette:—"Several walls, verandahs, &c., were blown down, among others that of Judge Hornby's house on the Bubbling Well-road, and the streets of the settlement were flooded to a great distance from the river on Saturday night. Two of Mr. Muirhead's workshops were unroofed and damaged, and the naval yard was submerged. In the settlement several pieces of wall were blown down, and one or two portions of China houses; several of the small trees on the bund were uprooted, and several of those on the open plot at the back of the Consulate broken. The City of Aberdeen was compelled to run for shelter from the gale, and anchored with the Amherst Rocks bearing eight miles north. Finding the ship drove with one anchor and a hundred fathoms of chain, a second was let go, which brought the ship up. Whilst riding at anchor, she pitched very heavily and lost jib-boom, fore-top-mast, and main-top-gallant-mast. Whilst in this position a junk foundered close by, and the captain with four volunteers went to save life. He succeeded in rescuing five Chinese, and took them to the City of Aberdeen, and left again to endeavour to save more life; in this attempt he was driven out to sea, and after about 24 hours sighted a junk and pulled for her. Taking his compass with him he boarded and induced the junk captain to steer for the entrance of the Yang-tsze, where he was fortunate enough to be sighted and picked up by the pilot boat New York, after an absence from his ship of about thirty-six hours. Captain Gerrie's courage has been the subject of well merited praise, and it is suggested the Chinese authorities should make some acknowledgment to him for saving the lives of some of their fellow countrymen. The Silicia was towed into this portdismasted; and Captain Hawes and the crew of the barque Kewkee returned to Shanghai in the Mistletoe, having lost his vessel on the 19th inst. The American ship Mary got on shore on Square Island, and the ship St. George has been reported on shore near Chin-hai. In the country several large trees were uprooted, houses unroofed, and the crops more or less damaged. The cotton especially, which had been previously suffering from the prolonged cool weather, is laid level with the ground; and the peach trees are half stripped. At Woosung a number of junks were driven high and dry on shore, five were sunk, many acres of land were submerged, the crops ruined, and several houses blown down.

The following items are also from the Supreme Court Gazette:—

"Mr. W. H. Medhurst has taken charge of H.B.M. Consulate at this port. Considerable speculation has taken place as to who is likely to be appointed Commissioner of Customs at this port. We hear that Thomas Dick is nominated to the office. We also hear that the Baron de Meritens will remain at Chefoo, Mr. Keinwachter will proceed to Swatow, Mr. Drew will be removed from Chinkiang to Kewkiang, and Mr. Man will proceed to Chinkiang.

"A new steam transport has been launched from the Chinese arsenal at Tungkadoo. She measures 180 ft. over all and 27½ ft. beam, and her capacity is 750 tons. She will carry eight 24 howitzers, also manufactured at the arsenal, and she is to be fitted with the engines that belonged to the old Waratah, but these have been so completely repaired that they may be almost considered new. They are 150-horse power, and the boiler, which weighs 32 tons, is of sufficient capacity to bear a pressure of 35 lbs. to the square inch. It has been tested with 30 lbs. of cold water, which is considered equal to about a third more steam. The boat is built of oak framework throughout, and of teak planking. The keels of two similar ones are, we are informed, to be at once laid down, and it is intended soon to begin three others."

The N. C. Herald mentions that the English and American Ministers have forbidden steamers to pass through the cut known as the "Straw Shoe Channel," near Nanking, by which they have been wont to cut off a long bend of the Yang-tze. The Herald says, "We think the objection of the Chinese to its use by steamers is well founded. It is too narrow for them to pass through it without imminent danger to native shipping."

The Daily News says it is reported that the change in the Chehienship of Shanghai is due to the check placed on the squeezing propensities of officials in Shanghai. Many of the principal Chinese merchants live in the foreign settlements; and we have raised so much difficulty to squeezing these, that the magistrate can hardly pay his expenses.

The whereabouts of a quantity of bullion and other property stolen from the wreck of the Benares is said to have been discovered in the neighbourhood of Ningpo, and the Taotai has been applied to, to procure its restoration. The new owners, however, seem in no hurry to relinquish it, and the village where it is stowed is so queerly situated in a net-work of creeks that it is difficult to use force. It is next to impossible to surround it, and the approach of an armed force would be simply a signal for the removal of the loot.

The provincial Commander-in-Chief has lately paid a vist to Chusan, accompanied by several armed lorchas, to review and reduce the garrison. A row is thought likely, as the Chusan men are rather independent, and may object to being disbanded. It was reported likely that he would go on to Pootoo, and the prospect is causing great excitement among the priests who live on the island.

It is rumoured that M. Giquel's Foochow dockyard scheme has come to a deadlock.

Captain Harmon, of the Plymouth Rock, thus describes a "bore" or tidal wave, which occurred in the Yang-tsze-kiang on the 24th July:—

"This morning at 2 A.M., while under way, coming down the river with a strong ebb tide, when about five miles above North Tree, we passed through very heavy breakers. The steamer was then in about twelve fathoms of water. At 2.30 A.M. we anchored below North Tree; at 3 A.M. a noise was heard approaching, as if a steamer was coming up and blowing off steam. In a few minutes a tide wave struck the steamer on the port quarter with such force as to cause her to strain and vibrate as if she had struck a ledge of rocks, going at full speed, the water breaking on board over the stern. I am confident had the steamer been lying across the stream the consequence would have been a serious one; fortunately we were heading up river.

"The wave came in from south-east, following the left bank; the sky was clear, and a fine breeze from the south blowing at the time. The wave must have been from twenty-five to thirty feet high, extending two miles across. Its force instantly stopped the ebb tide, which was running at the time about four knots per hour; in a few minutes after the steamer swung to the flood tide, which began to run with equal force."

The following is the text of the despatch concerning the Chefoo gold mines which has been addressed by the Taoutai of Shanghai to the Treaty Consuls:—

"Ying, the Taoutai, would inform the Consul that on the 7th day of the 6th month (July 26th, 1868) he received from the Board of Foreign Affairs at Peking a despatch stating:—

"That the opening of mines is strictly prohibited by Chinese law, and that hitherto even the Chinese merchants are not permitted to work them. Now, in the vicinity of Yien-tai and near the sea, since the opening of the place to foreign trade, Chinese and foreigners collect in considerable numbers, and if corrupt scoundrels of the interior, along with foreign wandering vagabonds, should secretly dig for mineral wealth and acquire riches, not only would it be a great injury to the people's Fung shui, but also it is to be feared that it would easily give rise to quarrels, wherefore the Board of Foreign Affairs writes to each of the foreign Ministers resident at Peking requesting them to order the Consuls at all the open ports to act in accordance with the prohibitions and strictly prohibit all foreigners from proceeding thither; and the 'Tsoong li Ya-men or 'Foreign Board' also writes to the Commissioner for the Three Ports and the Futai of Shantung province to order all the local magistrates at the ports to examine, and at all the places formerly yielding gold strictly prohibit, all persons, whether Chinese or foreigners, from working for it. And if any villanous Chinese should secretly pursue this business, then, according to Chinese law, punish them. And if any foreigners should engage in the business, then order the local magistrates, along with the Consuls, immediately to prevent them. Now as Shanghai is the common entrance for foreigners, should any of them get passports under false pretences, or proceed without passports to the northern ports, then immediately, along with the Consuls, to prevent their engaging in this business; and the Board also writes to act in conformity to these orders.

"And the Taoutai having received this, now writes to the Consul requesting him to examine the foregoing, and hereafter if any wandering vagabonds without means should want to repair to Yien-tai, the Taoutai hopes the Consul will immediately prevent them. And when foreigners apply for passports, for sporting in the interior, he hopes the Consul will examine clearly as to what business they are going on, and to what place they are going to hunt, and to have the place named in the passport before affixing the seal; and if any foreigners without passports repair to Yien-tai and such places to dig for gold, and anything happen in the way of an uprising against them, the Chinese magistrates cannot afford them any protection. The Taoutai hopes for a favourable reply to this despatch."

We (N. C. Herald) hear from Peking that the change predicted some weeks ago by our Tientsin correspondent has been carried into effect. Li-hung-chang and Tso-tsung-tang have been ordered to the seats of their respective vice-royalties, and to keep them free from rebels; while the late commandant at Moukden is appointed to command in chief the northern army operating against the rebels in Chih-li and Shantung. It remains to be seen whether Li will accept his disgrace quietly.

A lottery of horses on a large scale has been held in Shanghai. A Mr. Keele brought a number of animals from Australia and hit upon this method of disposing of them.

HONG KONG.

From this port our advices are to the 7th August. The outward French Mail of June 18th was received in Hong Kong on the 27th, and the English mail of June 19 on the 29th July. The latest London telegrams to hand were via Calcutta, to the 13th July, received August 2. The local news is of small importance, nothing further having transpired regarding the late horrible coolie outbreak, or the only other topic of much interest, the new Cordon of custom houses round the island.

On the 30th July another case arising out of the bankruptcy of Lyall, Still and Co. was tried before Judge Ball, namely, that of Henderson v. the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank. This was a suit in Chancery wherein the plaintiffs, Messrs. C. P. Henderson and Co., sought to call upon the defendants to state an account of the proceeds of a certain consignment of goods, viz., one hundred bales shirtings, formerly held as a security by the defendants and since sold by them; and also to recover the proceeds of the said goods from the defendants. The case was similar in its leading facts and arguments to that previously decided by Chief Justice Smale, and since appealed against, so that an extended report of the hearing is unnecessary. After hearing the evidence (which occupied two days) the judge postponed his decision.

The China Mail publishes an important despatch, having reference to matters affecting the interests of the mercantile communities of China, which has been addressed by Mr. Hart to the Chairman of the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce. It is as follows:—

Inspectorate-General of Customs, Peking, 20th July, 1868.

1. Sir,—I beg to invite your attention to the contents of the despatch now addressed to you, and which has reference to matters of common interest.

2. I desire to be permitted to take advantage of the existence of a mercantile representative body to ascertain from time to time the views of the communities at the ports on all matters affecting their interests in connection with the working of the Customs' Department, and on such subjects as may seem to be of a kind in which the assistance of that department might be calculated to be productive of good result or mutual benefit.

3. The doings of the past ten years make it evident that there exists an identity and not antagonism of interest, and, in the exceptional state of affairs in China, experience suggests that those identical interests can be best furthered by a mutual good understanding and by common conference in respect of measures that affect them. That the country should enjoy tranquillity is of as much importance to the mercantile body as to the Government itself; that treaty stipulations should be understood and adhered to is just as conducive to the welfare of the Government as to the prosperity of the merchant; that there should be method in the collection of revenue, and regularity in the administration of revenue matters, is just as necessary to the transaction of the merchant's business as to the proper performance of their duties by Custom's officials; and that there should be a mutual good understanding contributes just as much to the success of those who have to act as it does to the protection of those who are acted upon. The discussion of measures affecting the general tranquillity of the Empire, and the interpretation of treaty rights and enforcement of treaty stipulations, are, of course, matters that concern more immediately the responsible authorities, but the every-day work of taking action under treaties, and of giving effect to their commercial stipulations, brings the Customs' Department and mercantile public into such constant and intimate contact that it would be folly to ignore the effects that our action and bearing have on each other, while it would be wise to attempt, through the medium of a common good understanding, and by mutual communication in respect of each other's requirements or responsibilities, to provide for the arrangement of a relation between action and result, so that action may be effective and result harmless.

4. The Foreign Inspectorate of Customs has now become an integral part of the revenue administration of this country; its offices are at every treaty port, and its members form the executive in the collection of dues and duties accruing on foreign trade, and in carrying out rules and regulations therewith connected, and affecting both foreign and native merchants. Cosmopolitan in its composition, it affords to every treaty Power the security that the interest of one Power will not be attempted to be advanced at the expense of another, and procures for each member of the cosmopolitan communities at the treaty ports the same treatment that all others receive, and thorough impartiality; paid by the Chinese Government, it insures for it the full collection of Maritime revenue, and the proper observance of established rules. Ports, however, differ in their requirements, and, with changing times, come changing circumstances; a new sort of action has to be taken here,—a novel measure introduced there,—and a regulation rescinded, altered, or added to at a third place; every such event affects the mercantile community at the place, and re-acts upon the Customs' Establishment. Looked at from the Customs' point of view, a rule may appear logical and unobjectionable, but, viewed from the side of the merchant, it may be uncalled for and mischievous; from the mercantile point of view, a certain measure may seem to be demanded by the circumstances, while to the Customs it may, for adequate reasons, appear to be altogether impracticable. It is thus evident that many of the rules that have to be acted on by the Customs' Department, and which are to be observed by the merchants, will be all the better for some preliminary ventilation, so that their object may be intelligible and action under them easy, before being determined on, or given effect to; and, in the case of rules once resolved on, a common understanding may go far to promote the interests of both sides, by making the rule effect its proper object on the one hand, and on the other, by preventing it from pinching unnecessarily or becoming mischievous in its operation.

5. Apart from mere Customs rules, there are matters of greater importance, but all more or less connected with the Foreign inspectorate and its working, in respect of which an understanding between the Inspectorate and the public, or, at all events, the means of arriving at such an understanding, would appear to be calculated to be productive of good results. Thus, in respect of the conservation and improvement of harbour approaches, lighting of the coast, pilotage, &c., it must be apparent that the action of the Inspectorate would be easier, if understood and approved of by the public, and that public interest and public wishes could be more easily furthered and complied with if there were such a recognised medium for the communication of them to the Inspectorate. In these and other affairs the interests of both public and Inspectorate are identical; it is to the interest of the public that all necessary works shall be done, and done well, and it is to the interest of the Inspectorate to see that work is necessary before it expends public funds on it, and to carry out, in the best and most enduring manner, whatever work inquiry has demonstrated to be really called for.

6. It is with these, and kindred thoughts in my mind, that I now address you, and through you, the Chamber, in the hope that a result may be secured conducive to the public good. Hong Kong, as I know, is a British colony; but its position on the coast, and the intimate connection that subsists between it and the Chinese treaty ports, lead me to think that to be in communication with your Chamber will not be without its uses.

7. I have, of course, had the opportunity of learning the views of the Chamber and the communities at the ports, as put forward in respect of questions connected with the expected revision of the treaty, and, as a member of a Commission engaged upon preliminary enquiries into the feasibility of, and best way of giving effect to such suggestions, I am pretty well acquainted with all that has of late been proposed, and can answer for the care with which each proposal has been considered and discussed. But, in the daily life of each community, events occur and cases arise which call for immediate action and settlement, and cannot await treaty revision, and it is with reference to them—to current business, so to speak—that I am more especially writing. In its Consuls at the ports, and Ministers at the capital, the public is already provided with the machinery for making known its wants, guarding its interests, and settling its affairs with the Chinese Government, and it is, therefore, no wish of mine to volunteer for the performance of the duties of others, or to interfere in work that does not concern me; still, Consular and Ministerial functions, no matter how well defined, leave room, occasionally, and at some points, for the employment of, and resort to other agencies. In appealing to you, therefore, I am simply desirous of initiating a state of affairs, in which a public service, the Foreign Inspectorate, may be so placed in communication with the public—and more especially with a recognised representative of the public, your Chamber—that it, acquitting itself of its responsibilities to the Chinese Government on the one hand, may, on the other, be at the same time the better able to aid, and, as a public servant, to do its duty by the mercantile communities in this country.

8. Hitherto my time has been chiefly devoted to the formation of the service, and the establishment of offices at the ports, and, so employed, I have delayed to place myself in communication with your Chamber; the instructions issued to subordinates in charge of offices at the ports have, however, been throughout dictated by the same idea that runs through this despatch—to remember that Mercantile and Customs' interests are not antagonistic,—that restrictive legislation must be as little as possible resorted to—that advantage should be taken of every opportunity to develop the resources, and foster the expansion of each locality—that the transaction of business should be simplified to the utmost possible extent—that the movements of shipping should be expedited, and mercantile operations facilitated and that the best way to aid the growth of revenue is to foster the growth of trade. In respect of pains and penalties, I have always advocated the utmost publicity, and full and fair inquiry before condemnation, and I have ever objected to the withdrawal of capital from active circulation by unnecessarily heavy fines or confiscations. The difficulties of managing a growing cosmopolitan service, and of serving a Government whose views have been often diametrically opposed—not for opposition's sake, but from the working of old ideas—to my own, have fully occupied my hands for years back. An opportunity is now presented, of which I gladly avail myself, contemporaneously with possible changes in connection with a revised treaty, and succeeding the formation of the Customs' establishments at all the ports, to do what I have long wished to do—to place myself en rapport with the mercantile communities, and, by initiating personal communication with their representative, your Chamber, to provide for a future in which work may proceed satisfactorily, misunderstandings be prevented, and general interests be subserved and promoted.

9. I have therefore to request that you will permit me to avail myself, through you, of such information and advice on specific points as I may, from time to time, desire to obtain, and that your Chamber will, in the same way, do me the favour of addressing me on any subject on which it may wish to be informed, and of making such suggestions as it may think calculated to be of general or particular utility. I have also to request that the Commissioners of Customs may be communicated, consulted, and advised with, at the ports, as time and circumstances may seem to require.

10. I have written an identical letter to the Shanghai Chamber, and shall send copies to the Commissioners of Customs for their information and guidance.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

ROBERT HART, Inspector-General.

Senhor Horta, prior to his departure, was subjected to an examination in the Supreme Court, in the case of Regina v. Saint, the Editor of the China Mail, who is accused of libelling the Portuguese Government in connection with the coolie traffic. At the close of the hearing the Chief Justice, on behalf of the Government of Hong Kong, disclaimed any knowledge of the case, which will now, probably, fall to the ground.

From Macao we hear of the arrival of the new Governor. The Daily Press says:—"His Excellency Vice-Admiral Sergio de Souza having called at the Government-house and left his card, not finding the Governor of Hong Kong in town, proceeded to Macao, accompanied by the Baron do Cercal, in H.F.M.'s gunboat Camoes, and arrived off the Praya at 6.30 A.M. At 7.25 his Excellency landed, and was received with the honours due to his elevated rank. He has no less than five grand cordons, and is an intimate friend of Dom Luiz, and is his aide-de-camp. Governor Horta goes home by the next English mail, and has handed his worthy successor the reins of Government.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present mail left Singapore on the 15th August. The outward mail of July 3 was delivered on its due date, August 5. The news of the fortnight is summed up by the Straits Times as follows:—

The attention of the community has been mainly occupied by three subjects, and these have attracted more interest perhaps on account of the still depressed state of business. They are, the Legislative Council, a trial in the Supreme Court arising out of the sinking of the powder hulk, Princess Royal, in February last, and the solar eclipse of the 18th August.

The Legislative Council sat on the 8th instant, and transacted a considerable amount of business. The legislative faculty manifested by our Council is something to marvel at, and certainly ought to be an example and a lesson to other councils all over the world. This model Council of the Straits colony thinks nothing of introducing, reading a first, second, and third time, and passing a Bill at one sitting, and not only one Bill, but as many as may be wanted. On this occasion two Bills were introduced, committed, read and passed right off-hand—to be sure they are Bills amending two Bills of last year. One of them, however, is of so much import that really our honourable legislators might have made a show at least of taking a "thocht a bit" about it. It gives the Governor power to do as he likes with Her Majesty's subjects at his will and pleasure, all law to the contrary notwithstanding. In addition to the above Legislative feat a Coinage Bill and Prison's Bill were introduced, read a first and second time, and recommitted; but these call for no remark. The Council further agreed to allow 500 dols. per annum to keep the Raffles' Institution Buildings in repair, which is only what was right and proper to do. There was further laid before the Council a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, offering to send out a geologist to survey the Straits Settlements. The despatch was ordered to be printed, the Council prudently making no remarks on the subject. The public have not been equally reticent. Considering that a competent geologist could not be engaged much under £1,000 per annum, and would require an office and staff costing something like a similar amount; considering, further, that the pages of the Journal of the Indian Archipelago are a mine of accurate scientific information regarding the geological formation of the settlements and neighbourhood, considering most of all that the finances of the Colony are in a somewhat dubious position, and therefore any additional burden imposed upon them will be indignantly protested against by the colonists to a man, the best course for his Excellency the Governor is clearly to respectfully decline the obliging offer of his Grace the Duke of Buckingham.

The Gunpowder Case has occupied the Supreme Court for six days, and has excited great interest among the merchants. The owners of the hulk, the Princess Royal, which sank at her moorings in the harbour in February last, are prosecuted by the consignees of the powder on board of her for its value. The case is of very considerable importance—the amount of money at stake is large—and the issue, to the defenders in the action, of vital consequence. Therefore the decision of the Chief Justice, Sir Benson Maxwell, is awaited with mingled curiosity and anxiety. It would be out of place on our part to say more until the decision is given. We give a full account of the evidence for the defence and prosecution.

Although Singapore is pretty far away from the central line of the total eclipse of the sun on Tuesday, the 18th July, still the phenomena presented here will be worth observing, and the Chinese and other natives, who are quite well aw[illegible] of what is coming, will make the day a grand holiday. His Excellency Sir Harry Ord left here in the Peiho on Wednesday last for Whawan, in the Gulf of Siam, where he will be the guest of his Majesty the King of Siam, and where the total eclipse will be seen to the greatest advantage, lasting there, as it will, longer than on any other spot on the earth.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—There was a better feeling amongst dealers, but the actual business continued trifling, and rates, although fairly steady, had not improved. Early in the fortnight considerable sales of Grey Shirtings were effected at $2.90 for ordinary chops. The demand appears to have subsided, but rates were maintained. A few parcels Nos. 28 to 32 of Cotton Yarn favourite chops had been sold at $54 per picul. Holders were firm, but there were not many buyers at our quotations; a few plain lustres and black velvets had been sold, but generally fancy goods and woollens were quite neglected. The extraordinary fluctuations in the native currency made buyers extremely cautious in their dealings. The current quotations were:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16 to 24, $50.0 to 51.0 per picul; Nos. 28 to 32, $53.0 to 54.0; Nos. 38 to 42, $52.0 to 53.0; Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.35 to 2.45 per piece; 8.4 lbs., $2.90 to 2.95; 8.6 to 8.8 lbs., $2.95 to 3.05.; White Shirtings, 56 to 60 reed, $3.15 to 3.25; 64 to 72, $3.70 to 4.10; 68 to 72, $3.70 to 4.10; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., $175 to 2.35; 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.30; Camlets, S., $16.50 to 17.50 per piece; S.S., $15.0 to 16.0; S.S.S., $13.0 to 14.50; B.B.B., $16.50 to 17.50; Orleans, plain, $4.0 to 5.0; figured, $4.0 to 4.50; Iron Nail Rod, $3.0 to 3.75 per picul; Lead, $7.0 to 8.0; Tin, $17.0 to 18.0; Tin Plates, $6.50 to 7.25.

SHANGHAI.—Cottons: In Plain Cottons a good inquiry had existed for the Northern markets. Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., had realised better prices. White Shirtings in fair demand at comparatively low rates, whilst T-Cloths had been in great request, also American and English Drills. Fancy Goods generally continued difficult of sale. Woollens: Spanish Stripes had been in fair demand, and had increased slightly in value. Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths were in better inquiry. Camlets: Small sales at about former prices. Long Ells in limited request. Lastings were very dull of sale. Metals—Nail Rod and Bar Iron: A small business had been done in these kinds at about last quotations. Pig Iron: Some small sales were reported at Tls. 15 to 16 per ton. Lead: A further decline had taken place. Tin Plates and Steel in small inquiry. Coals: Arrivals 1,478 tons from Australia and 1,054 from Formosa. Market dull; stocks of English Coal were small, without demand. American Coal had been sold to arrive at Tls. 12.5.0 per ton by the cargo, and Australian at quotations. The quotations were:—Grey Shirtings, 38½ yds., 39 in., 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.9.5 to 2.0; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.2.7 to 2.3.3; 9 to 9¾ lbs., Tls. 2.7.5 to 3.4.0; White Shirtings, 40 yds. 36 in. 52 reed, Tls. 1.8.0 to 1.8.5; 56 reed, Tls. 1.9.5 to 2.0.5; 60 reed, Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.1.5; 64 reed, Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3.0; 66 to 72 reed, Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.7.0; American Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.2.0 to 4.4.0; American Jeans, 30 yds. 30 in. 10½ lbs., Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.5.5; American Sheetings, 40 yds. 40 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.1.5; English Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 12 to 15 lbs., Tls. 3.9.0 to 4.2.5; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., 24 yds. 32 in., Tls. 1.6.5 to 2.2.0; 8 to 8.4 lbs., 24 yds. 36 in., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.5.0; Woollens and Worsteds—Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.7 to 0.7.5 per yard; Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths, Tls. 0.8.5 to 1.2.0; Camlets, English, S., 56 yds. 31 in., Tls. 13.0.0 to 13.5.0 per piece; S.S., Tls. 12.0.0 to 13.2.5; S.S.S., Tls. 9.0 to 10.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds. 31 in. 12 lbs., Tls. 6.7.0 to 6.9.0; Assorted, Tls. 6.8.0 to 7.1.5; Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 11.0.0 to 11.5.0; Crape Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 7.5.0 to 8.5.0; Crape Lustres, Tls. 4.3.0 to 4.6.0; Orleans, Figured, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.8.0; Orleans, Plain, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 3.3.0 to 3.5.0; Metals—Iron, Flat and Round, Tls. 2.4.5 to 2.5.0 per picul; Nail Rod, Tls. 2.5.0 to 2.6.0 per picul; Hoop, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.2.5 per picul; Pig, Tls. 15.0 to 16.0 per ton; Lead, Tls. 6.5.0 to 6.9.0 per picul; Tin Plates, Tls. 4.4.0 to 5.0 per box; Steel, Tls. 3.9.0 to 4.4.0 per tub; Coals—English, Tls. 9.2.5 per ton; Cardiff, Tls. 10.5.0 per ton; American Anthracite, Tls. 13.0 per ton; Sydney, Tls. 9.5.0 per ton.

HANKOW.—A fair business had been transacted, which might have been larger but for the firmness of holders. In Grey Shirtings an advance in prices had been established; 8¼ lbs. Tls. 2.2.7 to 2.3.2, 7lbs. Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.0.3. White Shirtings: Trifling sales at low rates. T-Cloths: Demand appeared to have ceased for these goods, dealers having laid in large stocks; 7lbs. Tls. 1.8.5 to 2.1.0, 8 lbs., 36 in., Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.3.5. Drills: American, Tls. 4.3.0 to 4.3.5; English, Tls. 3.9.0 to 4.2.5. A good inquiry had existed, which had been met pretty freely. Fancy Cotton Goods dull of sale. Camlets had been in slightly better inquiry, and good assortments had realised Tls. 12.5.0 to 13.3.0 for S.S. Lastings in better favour at Tls. 11.2.5 to 11.9.0—very trifling sales. Long Ells: Assorted in better request, and some colours had advanced in value, Dark Blue, Tls. 7.4.0 to 7.6.0; Scarlet dull of sale, at Tls. 6.9.0 for H.H. Spanish Stripes and Medium Cloth Tls. 0.5.1 to 0.6.3 and

Digitized by Google

Tls. 0.9.0 to 1.1.5 were the quotations, at which but little was doing in these goods. Figured Orleans: Sales of these in barter had been made to a considerable extent at Tls. 3.4.0 to 3.9.0 At Tientsin a large business had been transacted, and stocks very much reduced. Grey Shirtings, 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.3. Mexican T-Cloths, 7 lbs., Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.1.5. White Shirtings saleable to a fair extent: 56 to 60 reed, Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.1.0. Dyed Fancy Goods in no demand, and White Brocades and Spots only in limited inquiry at low prices.

FOOCHOW.—The only sales reported have been as follows:—T-Cloths, 7½ lbs., 500 pieces, at $2.60 per piece; 7 lbs., 1,000 pieces, at $2.50 per piece; Lead, 2,970 piculs, at $10.50 per picul.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated 6th August, is as follows:—Cotton Yarn: Little attention has been paid to this article, and prices have undergone a further fall of $2.50 per bale. The sales of Nos. 16 to 24 reported, embrace 60 bales of English, 99 of Bombay, and 23 of Singapore manufacture. Cotton Goods: Drills have been in demand, but little has been done in other descriptions, purchases being merely to meet pressing and immediate wants, which are very moderate. Holders of Grey Shirtings from 8.4 lb. up to 9.8 lb. have become very firm under the advices from Shanghai, and have succeeded in forcing prices up 5 cents per piece. White Shirtings are entirely neglected, but being already comparatively cheaper than other goods, have suffered no further decline. T-Cloths have been quitted in insignificant parcels on easier terms, but more firmness is shown at the close. Turkey Reds are unchanged. Assorted Brocades are 10 cents dearer, owing to a trifling demand for the coast. In drills some 6,000 pieces 40 yards American were settled immediately after despatch of last mail at $5.30, and $5.17½ cash, for Pepperell and Laconia Mills respectively. A small sale of Laconias was made a few days later at $5.30 cash, and holders then advanced their asking prices 10 cents per picul, which checked purchases for a time, but just at the close a sale of some 3,000 pieces Pepperells has been made at $5.50 cash. Dutch Drills have been taken to a fair extent at an advance of 10 cents per piece. Purchases both of American and Dutch Drills have been either by Northern merchants (native) or by foreigners for shipment to Shanghai. We note a sale of 2,000 pieces 30 yard American Jeans at $4.40. Woollens: Sales have been trifling, but the market is improved in tone, and this improvement will no doubt become more pronounced as the season advances. Considerable quantities of Long Ells have been shipped north, and this has led to an advance of 20 cents per piece. Assorted Spanish Stripes are a trifle lower, but all other descriptions of Woollens are steady, and generally held for figures above our quotations. Metals: Nail Rod, Bar, and Hoop Iron, and Steel are not inquired for, and are all lower. Wire is unchanged. Lead has further declined. Tin in fair demand at former rates. Tin Plates in moderate request on easier terms. Quicksilver steady. Coal: Arrivals have been 1,255 tons English, 4,302 tons Welsh, 1,937 tons Sydney, and 300 tons Formosa, of which 1,300 Welsh, 480 tons English, 848 tons Sydney, and 300 tons Formosa are on the market. There have been no sales, buyers holding off for a decline in prices, and the market is decidedly weaker. Formosa Coal is improving in quality, and may soon rival Australian in our market, with increased facilities for working the mines.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—A fair amount of business had been done, and about 1,300 piculs had been settled. We still find the teamen attempting to work off the remnant of the last crop by mixing with the new, and the quality of the whole export was inferior, very few parcels of fine grades being brought to market. Quotations for the higher classes were therefore nominal, and for other qualities ruled as follows (laid down in London at exchange 4s. 7d.):—Fine, 1s. 10½d. to 2s. 7d.; Good Medium, 1s. 8d. to 1s. 9¾d.; Medium, 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 7½d.; Good Common, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4½d.; Common, 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 2d.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A very large business had again been transacted, and natives generally had been easy to treat with. Purchases had shown much irregularity, but common descriptions may be considered two taels per picul lower. The liberal stock remaining embraced very few parcels of a higher character than that of good medium. Prices of common Teas were, with few exceptions, three or four taels per picul over what they were at the same period last season, and the better sorts likewise were much over the selling prices of such kinds last July. The market closed with a very quiet feeling. Settlements for the fortnight, 30,500 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 17,000 chests; stock, 83 chops, or 32,684 packages. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 2¾d. per tael, and freight at £4 10s. per ton:—Hohow, common to fair, 18 to 23 taels per picul; Oonam, common to fine, 20 to 35; Ningchow, common to fine, 24.5 to 31.5; Oopack, fair to good, 25 to 30. Green: Considerable transactions had taken place at about previous prices. The bulk of the purchases consisted of Pingsuey tea, of which about 14,000 half-chests of middling quality had been taken at prices ranging from Tls. 34½ to 38½, according to proportion. A few parcels of good Shanghai-packed tea had been settled at Tls. 36¾ to 37½, and three chops of new Fychow tea at Tls. 35 to 36½. The latter were about 1 tael per picul over last year's opening prices. All the purchases were for England, to which country the export was large. Settlements for the fortnight, 17,000 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 600 half-chests: stock, 20 chops, or 11,875 half-chests. Quotations, duty-paid, exchange, as above:—Gunpowder, 1s. 6d. to 3s. 10d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 8d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 2s. 10d.; Twankay, 10d. to 1s. 3d.

HANKOW.—Prices at one time declined Tls. 1 to 2 per picul for Oopack kinds, but with a reduction of the stock natives became firmer, and a portion of this decline was recovered. Low price teas were about 1 tael dearer. Quotations were: Oopacks, fair to good medium, Tls. 18.7.5 to 25, equal 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 9¼d. per lb.; Oonams, fair to good medium, Tls. 16.5.0 to 22, equal 1s. 3¾d. to 1s. 7½d. per lb.

KIUKIANG.—Nothing had been done, no new Greens having arrived, and foreigners being unwilling to operate in Blacks, with a falling market at Shanghai. Holders of leaf in the interior were said to be demanding prices which buyers were unwilling to pay, and a temporary falling off in supplies was shortly expected. Chinese reported that large quantities of leaf, both black and green, had been spoiled by an inundation, but the report gained little credence.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Rusden, Phipps, and Co. report as follows:—Congou: Our market for England during the fortnight has been comparatively quiet, settlements being principally in the common grades for Australia and the Continent. The better class teas have nearly come to an end, and maintain their value better than the medium and lower sorts, which, within the last few days, have declined Tls. 2 to 3 and Tls. 1 to 2 respectively. Scented: Are a little easier in price, and though rather broken in leaf are well scented. Settlements for the fortnight have been:—Congou, 35,360 chests at Tls. 8.8 to 36.8. ship off; Souchong, 2,172 chests at Tls. 24.3 to 37.8, ship off; Oolong, nil.; Scented Teas, 12,653 boxes at Tls. 9.8 to 29.8, ship off; Flowery Pekoe, 166 chests at 31.8, ship off.

AMOY.—The market had been cleared of Congous—a good demand existing for Australia—at an advance of about one dollar per picul. Supplies came forward very slowly, and as teamen were losing heavily, receipts for the season would probably not be large. Settlements of Oolong amounted to about 1,000 packages, at prices about one dollar over those paid for former purchases. A few of the parcels taken were intended for the American market.

CANTON.—During the fortnight limited settlements had been made, consisting principally of scented kinds. In the finest grades of Scented Orange Pekoe we quote a reduction of two taels on previous rates, but the commoner kinds were very dear. Scented Capers were held for most unreasonable prices, and there were few to be had free from spurious leaf at twenty taels. A very limited selection of desirable teas of either kind was on the market. The country Congous were almost entirely neglected, and there was but little doing in other descriptions of teas. The following settlements were reported:—Canton District Congous, 1,500 boxes at Tls. 21 to 23; Scented Orange Pekoe, 5,800 boxes at Tls. 20 to 34; Scented Caper, 12,000 boxes at Tls. 15½ to 33; Gunpowder, 1,000 boxes at Tls. 13½ to 28.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The weather had continued fine all the fortnight and, but for existing political disturbances, doubtless a large business would have been done. As it is about 400 piculs had been settled. Prices, notwithstanding the steady rise in Exchange, had continued firm, all good parcels being snapped up at once as they arrived, as much as $870 having been given for a few bales best Shimonita. Most transactions had been, however, in medium hanks. The unsold stock was estimated at 100 piculs. The quotations (laid down in London at exchange 4s. 7d.) were Mybash and Sinshu, Best, 35s. 10d. to 36s. 8d.; ditto Medium, 34s. 7d. to 35s. 5d.; ditto Inferior, 31s. 7d. to 33s. 8d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's Circular, dated 30th July, offers the following remarks:—The latest advices received from England since the date of my last Silk Circular, are by letters to the 5th June, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 30th idem, the latter quoting Chop No. 3 Tsatlees 30s. per lb. A steady business has been transacted in this market during the past fortnight, resulting in considerable settlements, estimated at fully 6,000 bales, including 1,000 bales settled at the close of last mail, but after my Circular had been issued, making a total of 19,000 bales Silk settled since the 1st of June, against 11,700 bales to same date last year. There has been great complaint made of the mixed condition of the Silks purchased, and many parcels were rejected upon inspection. From the fact of the Chinese putting such undesirable Silks on the market thus early in the season, it might be inferred that good Silks are scarcer than at first anticipated, and this idea is further strengthened by the fact that for really good and classic Silks the natives are very firm in their demands for full rates. Prices show no material change, though, as was the case last mail, they have been irregular; owing to the increased value of dollars in the interior causing higher rates there, many holders of Silk prefer holding their stocks for higher quotations than selling at our present prices, as they would be unable to replace such Silks at the rates they are now offered. The unsold stock remains about the same as last estimated, say 4,500 bales. The arrivals from Ningpo amount to about 360 to 370 bales, and from Japan 433 bales were received per last French and English mail steamers. The current quotations (laid down in London at exchange 6s. 3d. per tael) were as follows:—Tsatlee, Chop No. 1, none; ditto 2, 31s. to 32s. 1d. per lb.; ditto 3, 29s. 11d. to 31s.; ditto 3½, 28s. 10d. to 30s. 2d.; ordinary 3½ and Best Chop 4, 26s. 3d. to 28s. 4d.; Red Peacock and ordinary 4, 24s. 1d. to 25s. 8d.; ditto 5 and common, 20s. 8d. to 22s. 6d.; Karshing Taysaam, Chop No. 1, 25s. 8d. to 26s. 9d.; ditto 2, 24s. 1d. to 25s. 2d.; ditto 3, 21s. 6d. to 23s. 1d.; ditto 4, 5, and common, 18s. 10d. to 20s. 5d.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 1, 22s. 9d. to 23s. 4d.; ditto 2, 21s. 6d. to 22s. 6d.; ditto 3, 20s. 5d. to 21s. 6d.; ditto 4 and common, 17s. 9d. to 19s. 11d.; Yuenfa and Hainings, No. 1, 26s. 9d. to 27s. 3d.; ditto 2, 24s. 11d. to 25s. 11d.; ditto 3, 23s. 1d. to 24s. 1d.; ditto 4 and common, 20s. 5d. to 22s. 6d.

ARRIVALS.

At YOKOHAMA.—From Cardiff, July 20, Jeannie Eastman.

ARRIVAL OF THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

THE arrival of Mr. BURLINGHAME'S Mission in this country is announced in this morning's papers. The members of the Embassy left New York on the 9th inst. in the Cunard mail steamer Java, which arrived in the Mersey at noon on Saturday, the 19th. The Java, on entering the Mersey, with the Chinese ensign at the fore, at once proceeded to the Canada Dock, and landed her passengers, so that but few persons were present to welcome the "distinguished strangers." They at once entered a private omnibus and some other vehicles provided for them and drove off to the Washington Hotel, where their arrival created a great sensation. After partaking of dinner and resting for an hour or two, the members of the Embassy left Lime-street station for London, where they are expected to remain for some two or three months. During their stay in the metropolis they will reside at the Grosvenor Hotel, but they will probably visit several of the largest towns in the provinces before they cross over to the Continent. Two European gentlemen are attached to the Embassy, Mr. JOHN MCLEAVY BROWN, who acts as first secretary, and M. EMILE DESCHAMPS, who officiates as second secretary. The Chinese envoys consist of CHIH-U-KHAN, or CHIH TAJEN, the "first associate Minister," a Mantchoo Tartar, who holds a high position in Peking. The "second associate Minister" is SUN CHIA CHANG, or SUN TAJEN, described as a great scholar, soldier, and diplomatist. The remainder of the suite consists of interpreters, of whom two speak English, two French, and two Russian.

THE BANK OF HINDUSTAN.—The liquidators of this bank announce a further call on the contributories of £2. 10s. per share, payable on the 20th October next.

LONDON, MONDAY, SEPT. 21, 1868.

A REMARKABLE DISCOVERY.

SOME strange news comes to us from Paris. It may seem curious to our readers—most of whom probably think they know something of the Coast of China—that a large and important island has hitherto lain undiscovered in that region; yet M. EDMOND TEXIER assures us (through the columns of the Siecle) that such is the fact. M. EDMOND TEXIER is a French journalist, who has an adventurous Italian friend named CÆSAR MORENO. This gentleman, it seems, while voyaging in the Far East (how or when is not specified), has discovered an island of great richness and vast extent "somewhere on the Coast of China." CÆSAR—unlike his great prototype—did not proceed immediately to conquer the new land, but returned quietly to Europe without saying a word about it—being blessed, we must suppose, with a very discreet set of companions, who let no hint of the tremendous secret escape them. Considering himself the rightful owner of this gem of the China Sea, he "offered" it to his own Government; but whether they considered the title doubtful, or had enough work on hand already, for some reason or other it was declined. Prussia was next tried, but with no better success; and this is stranger still, when we take into consideration the avowed desire of Count BISMARK to establish a German Colony in China. NAPOLEON the THIRD next had the refusal of it, but his Imperial Majesty was too old a bird to be caught with chaff—besides there is Cochin-China not quite settled yet. The discoverer evidently did not think it worth while to make any overtures to Great Britain—so he then crossed the Atlantic with the benevolent intention of revenging himself against the apathetic European Powers by "coming to an understanding" with a band of filibusters, who would doubtless have "settled" the place—if they could only have found it—to some purpose. But here a brilliant thought struck M. MORENO. Mr. SEWARD was "going in" for territory—why not try him? The trial was made, and, M. MORENO informs his friend EDMOND TEXIER, with every appearance of success. "Mr. SEWARD "received him well, considered the affair, and seems likely to "conclude it." So M. TEXIER publishes all this history in the Siécle, to show the ungrateful Powers of Europe what a magnificent opportunity they have lost. MORENO says he expects to sail shortly to "take possession" of this island in the name of the Great Republic. Has he been bewitched by some Will-o'-the-Wisp, like the fabled isle of St. Brandan? or does he intend to make over to the United States—for a consideration—Formosa or Chusan, or part of the Japan group? It is a curious business altogether.

THE announcement of the opening of the new line of railway between Suez and Alexandria, via Zagazig, on September 8th, will be received with general satisfaction by all connected with India, since not only will passengers henceforth perform the journey between Alexandria and Suez in ten hours, including stoppages, but, owing to the more favourable position of the line, the difficulty of maintaining it in efficient working order will be materially lessened. The length of the line from Zagazig to Suez (we learn from the Mining Journal) is about eighty-five miles, and as the Cairo and Suez line is to be abandoned, the whole of the working stock will be available for the new line, to which the rails and iron sleepers will likewise be transferred. Compared with the Cairo route, the difference in speed by the Zagazig route will be considerable, owing to the heavy gradients on the old line being avoided, while even those passengers who desire to visit Cairo will lose but little time, since it will only involve a run of twenty-eight miles from the Benha Junction and back, which will be compensated for by the greater speed on the main line.

CHRISTIANITY IN JAPAN.

THE news received by last mail from Nagasaki is almost too horrible to be believed. Even in that extraordinary country, whence so many startling events have been reported, it is difficult to believe in the possibility of some two hundred men and women being deliberately put on board a steamer and taken out to sea to be thrown overboard. Unfortunately, however, the particulars are too precise and circumstantial to admit of much doubt. The victims seem to have been hurried to their doom in an open, unconcealed manner, as though it were quite in the ordinary course of events. The punishment inflicted may perhaps be strictly in accordance with Japanese law, but the foreign Consuls could not see so inhuman a law carried into effect without a protest, which, however, was all in vain; they were told to mind their own business. Now arises the question—What legal right have foreigners to interfere at all? And it is a difficult one to answer. Argument and persuasion are alike useless; and to attempt by force to put a veto on the carrying out of native laws—however cruel they may be—would be to assume a very grave responsibility. On the whole, perhaps the best means of preventing a recurrence of so distressing an occurrence as this would be for the Sovereigns of France and England severally to send autograph letters to the MIKADO, protesting against such relentless severity, and pointing out that if persisted in it is likely, sooner or later, to lead to direct foreign interference in the internal administration of the Empire—a result that the Japanese Government has every reason to dread.

MR. BURLINGHAME'S MISSION.

In the Pall Mall Gazette of the 10th inst. and The Times of the 11th, the Americo-Chinese Treaty and our own relations with China are further discussed, but in articles too lengthy to be reproduced entire.

The former paper commences by saying, "We are afraid the Americans have already spoiled the Chinese ambassadors. They have been taken through a course of unlimited feasting and carousal. . . . The Chinese will be disappointed after all this with their reception in England. Goldsmith's Chinese philosopher reported that it was a custom with Englishmen turned of thirty to retire at proper intervals every year and lie in of the spleen. When the new ambassadors contrast their reception here with that which they experienced in America they will think they have unluckily arrived at one of our great lying-in seasons." In allusion to Mr. Burlinghame's plentiful distribution of "bunkum," the writer says:—"Mr. Burlinghame seems for the moment to be carried away by a great American 'notion.' This is, that the United States must eventually, by means of her Pacific railroad, obtain control over the commerce of China with foreign nations, and that, consequently, the sooner a clear field can be made for her the better. America in the forefront and the rest of the world nowhere—such is the sentiment which Mr. Burlinghame has proposed to the American people, with great applause. We shall be curious to see what variations he introduces into it when he arrives here." The new Treaty, it observes, "is all very well from the American point of view, but Mr. Burlinghame is not ignorant of the history of British relations with China, and he must be aware that we have our view of the question, and that his representations in the United States have not done justice to it. The treaty, he added, will make the tour of the world. Very likely; but it may not everywhere excite the wonderful enthusiasm which it has created in America. So far every argument which Mr. Burlinghame used for its acceptance by the United States is an argument for its rejection by Great Britain. Unless the head of the mission relies upon changing his front with great dexterity and success we shall scarcely be able to compliment him upon his diplomatic genius. He might have been sure of a hearty welcome in America without wantonly arousing the suspicions of all other Powers which have dealings with the Chinese."

The Times introduces its remarks with a somewhat elaborate review of our relations with the Chinese during the last thirty years, which, it says, "will show their behaviour to have been marked from first to last by persistent hostility, by an undisguised aversion to relations with us at any price, whatever the terms submitted, whether these might be lenient or the opposite. Yielding for the moment to fear, they have afterwards openly or secretly set at naught all promises and engagements." It then goes on to show that in return for this bad faith and treachery they received not only forbearance, but actual benefit.

"But, indeed, it is to something beyond leniency that the present (Chinese) Government is indebted. When we crushed the Taeping malcontents we literally delivered it from the jaws of ruin. And how has it repaid the services rendered? Has effect been given to a single clause of the treaty that could be wriggled out of? Has a single case of complaint been redressed? The despatches of our representatives, past and present, tell the same tale. Verily it would seem as if the Chinese diplomatists were masters of the situation. They laugh to scorn our treaty. They inflict upon us a severe disaster. They then jockey us into quelling native rebellion. They again laugh our treaty to scorn, and, coolly ignoring their indebtedness, contemptuously give us the go-by as principal and leading Power in their foreign relations. They send a mission with the avowed object of rendering as far nugatory as may be possible the right of access to the interior, acquiescence in which they feel they can no longer evade, and which, though forming the leading provision of the Treaty of Tientsin, has for some reason or other been left practically a dead letter for eight years. The Chinese Government feels too weak at the moment to resist as in days gone by; it resorts, therefore, to artifice and cajolery."

The people, however, are animated by a totally different disposition rom that of their rulers. They have uniformly evinced the greatest riendliness towards foreigners, and no reason exists, so far as they are concerned, why China should not be thrown open to-morrow to unrestricted intercourse.

"We have now to recover the ground lost. We can effect this by simply telling the Chinese Ministers that if they wish for war we desire peace; that we perceive plainly the drift of their present diplomacy to forestall our attempts to form a friendly acquaintance with their subjects; that we mean to have our treaty carried into effect without further delay, and that consequently we shall decline to sign any clause or clauses calculated to convey the notion that that determination has been relinquished. If we thus act now the Chinese Government, being too weak to show its teeth, will acquiesce, and there will be peace. If we do not, and we allow it time to alienate the people, our intercourse will grow, for grow it must, amid contests that must lead to conquest, since all means of persuasion and coercion short of that will have been exhausted."

The writer concludes by pointing out the inconsistency of the policy urged on the United States by Mr. Burlinghame, and apparently received there with favour:—

"Nothing can contribute so surely to render war among Western nations upon Chinese soil likely as this description of interference by one nation in the concerns of another. It will not fail to exasperate and to estrange, and China—her arrogant rulers sure to place themselves in the wrong—will be the sufferer amid the wrangle, and worse than wrangle, that must ensue. The strict fulfilment of the obligations she has contracted towards all foreign Powers alike is paramountly the interest of China. This alone will ensure and entitle her to the common protection in her just rights by all."

MISSIONARY MISTAKES IN CHINA.

Mission of Kouy-Tcheou (China), Feb 23, 1862.

GENTLEMEN,—The blood of martyrs has recently been flowing in our province. The victims are—1, Father John Peter Néel, of Sainte Catharine-sur-Nivière (diocese of Lyons), beheaded for the faith last Monday, February 17; 2, his catechist, John Tchen, aged forty-two years; 3, a baptisee named Martin Ou; 4, the neophyte John Tchang, whose house was the missioner's asylum; 5, the virgin Lucy Y., belonging to a very honourable family in this city.

Such are the opening sentences of a letter addressed by Monsignor Faurie, Vicar Apostolic of Kouy-Tcheou, to the directors of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, as published in their "Annals." The story of the murders is soon told. Abbé Néel, a young and active missionary, was sent to superintend a newly established station at Kia-chaloung. He had no sooner arrived there than he was bitterly opposed by the mandarin of the district, who finding threats unavailing to drive him from his post, ordered his arrest. Together with his catechist, the Abbé Néel was brought before the mandarin, seated at a temporary tribunal on the execution ground. The examinations were short and formal, sentence of death was passed, and the unfortunate men were executed on the spot.

Such pioneers of religion must always be regarded with respect. Exiled from his native country, often never to return, leaving all that is dear to him on earth for his faith's sake, the missionary goes to labour amongst a people sometimes persecuting, always ungenial. With tastes and feelings as widely differing from theirs as the West differs from the East, he throws himself into his work with an energy that half obliterates the recollection of all he has left behind; and all for others' sake. But although high esteem for these Roman Catholic missionaries cannot be denied to them, we cannot refrain from thinking that there must be some fault in their system which draws on them the distrust of officials and people alike amongst whom they dwell. From Thibet, Corea, Japan, and China we hear the same accounts of persecutions and martyrdoms; and it is only reasonable to ask whether the uniformity of the phenomenon does not indicate a corresponding uniformity in the cause. And of this cause we think we find some indications in the letters of Monsignor Faurie.

It should be remembered, to begin with, that from feebleness of religious feeling the Chinese are the most tolerant people in the world. Buddhists, Taouists, Confucianists, Protestants, and Mahommedans live together in harmony; and it is only when the rules of the Protestant faith clash with the native rites, apart from the essentials of religion, that disagreements arise between the missionary converts and their heathen brethren. And if the Roman Catholics suffer persecution in China it is probably because their bishops and priests claim powers to which they have no lawful pretension, thus creating a permanent rivalry between themselves and the mandarins, who are provoked to adopt harsh measures, in order to make it clear to the people that the might, if not the right, is still in their hands.

Under the most favourable circumstances, one of the Kouy-Tcheou mandarin's most difficult tasks is to maintain the loyalty of his district. Of turbulent disposition, and bred in the midst of anarchy, the Western Chinese pass into the ranks of the rebels or return to the position of peaceful citizens with equal ease and indifference. Destitute of patriotism, suffering under severe taxation without the compensating benefit of protection to life and property, the threads that bind these people to the State are of the weakest kind, and it taxes to the utmost all the mandarin's talents, natural and acquired, to prevent their breaking away altogether from his control. By cajolery and cruelty the mandarins for the most part hold their own; or, if they find the tide setting too strong against them, they either throw in their lot with the rebels, or forestall the too probable edict from Peking by putting an end to their existence. From these considerations it will be seen how easily a power, or what may seem to be a power may arise to perplex the mandarins; and how a set of men of the noblest intentions, may, by receiving under their quasi protection all who choose to submit to their teaching, appear to the imagination of these harassed mandarins enemies of established authority. Every one who has lived in China knows how insolent Chinese employés of foreign masters become to native officers, and how overbearing to their fellows. And few can have had much intercourse with mandarins without receiving repeated complaints of such conduct. The truth is, it behoves all foreigners living in China, and especially missionaries, to avoid giving the people any shadow of excuse for believing that by entering the service or adopting the religion of the stranger they transfer their allegiance from the native authorities. But how does Monsignor Faurie act? We find that he describes himself as exercising the power of life and death, of imprisoning and setting free, of making peace and declaring war. He relates how he moved from place to place with the ceremonies becoming a Viceroy, and attended by a retinue that would have graced the progress of a victorious general. On the occasion of his making a tour through his diocese, he describes his approach to the town of Tchen-nin-Tcheou in these words:—"Besides the red parasols, consisting of three tiers of shade, the calvacades, and the cannonades, there was added before my palanquin an escort of three little children dressed in red and green, and carrying crowns composed of precious stones. . . . Here again I signalised my arrival by setting free several prisoners who were confined for offences against our religion." Having arrived at Gan-chouen-fou, Monsignor Faurie tells us that all the chief insignia of authority were placed at the door of his house, "besides cannon announcing the nightly guard. . . . Each time that I left my house or re-entered three rounds of cannon announced the fact." Nor after he had entered the portals of his house was ceremony banished. "I always eat alone. The principal chiefs in full dress stand round the table to serve me, while musicians stand at the door and commence their harmony. . . . When my repast is over they serve the second tables, at which are placed my attendants, the chiefs of the country, and the musicians." Monsignor Faurie's letters abound with similar descriptions of such pomp and power.

Now what effects were likely to be produced by these lofty pretensions on the people and the mandarins? As for the people, they saw a handful of foreigners, recognised by the local authorities and on friendly terms with their Viceroy, wielding an almost unbounded power, and attended by all the pomp that belongs to high officials. They saw them forming a considerable society in the midst of their towns and villages, into which admittance was to be gained by acquiring a knowledge of certain signs, and the members of which were protected alike from the rapacity of the mandarins and the attacks of hostile clans. Many believed that a time was approaching when the mandarins' arms would be shortened, and that a millennium of freedom from taxation was begun. Nor were signs in the heavens wanting to sanction such ideas. A comet appeared in the sky announcing, as is generally believed in China, the downfall of the reigning dynasty, and pointing to their successors by displaying to the eyes of those whose heated imaginations taught them to look for such a sign, the form of the cross; giving rise, as Monsignor Faurie himself informs us, to the general observation, "There can be no doubt about it this time; the empire is passing into the hands of the Christians."

Influenced by such feelings and considerations, thousands offered themselves as candidates for baptism. Whole villages, whose only pretension to so high a privilege was the fact of their having learnt to make the sign of the cross, besought the blessing of the bishop. On one occasion Monsignor Faurie tells us he was met at the entrance of a large village by the chief of the national guard, who addressed him thus:—"Having heard yesterday of the arrival of your lordship, we detained your catechist, and learned from him how to make the sign of the cross. We have stripped our houses of all the superstitious objects contained in them. All the villagers are now Christians; come and bless us." Monsignor Faurie goes on to describe what follows in these words:—

It was fair day; the crowd was immense. I entered the chief's dwelling, from the steps of which the principal square is overlooked. The moment I appeared at the porch the business of the fair was suspended, and all eyes were immediately fixed on me. I raised my arms to bless them, but I perceived they did not understand what I was going to do. I immediately put my hand to my forehead and commenced the words of the sign of the cross. Immediately the whole multitude fell on their knees, repeated the same sign, and cried aloud with almost one voice, "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

Such a scene needs no comment. It must not be supposed that Monsignor Faurie believed that all those who professed Christianity were actuated by sincere and right motives; indeed, he relates the following incident to the contrary:—

Two families of Mou-rou-se (Ly and Ou) hated each other mortally. There had been attempts at assassination. Every member of the family of Ly had been wounded, and their house pillaged and burned. They were preparing to make a formidable (sic) complaint of the treatment they had received, but before doing so they declared themselves Christians, in the hope that they would secure the influence of the bishop in their favour. The family of Ou understood perfectly the danger in which they were placed, and, actuated by the same motives of securing a friend, also declared themselves Christians.

Amongst the mandarins there is a considerable divergence of opinion as to the conduct of the missionaries. The more liberal-minded—and they were those who were more intimate with the missionaries and their doctrines—regarded them, despite their love of ostentation, as true men, and were willing to let them run their course, knowing full well that time would sift the interested converts from the true, and, when that was accomplished, that there would be a very small following left to Monsignor Faurie. The Tories, on the other hand—and they were in a large majority—believed the missionaries to be intent on the overthrow of the empire, and regarded their religion as a cloak for the concealment of political machinations. So great was the alarm of these officials at the numbers of recruits who daily declared themselves followers of the new religion, and the increasing importance assumed by the missionaries, that they organised a society for the suppression of Monsignor Faurie and his converts; at the head of which was Tien, the general of the province, a Tory of Tories, and a bitter foe to the missionaries. His alarm appears first to have been aroused, according to Monsignor Faurie, by the elaborate pomp, the large retinue that surrounded the Vicar Apostolic on the occasion of a visit to the governor of the province to announce the arrival of his passport from Peking, granted under the provisions of the treaty of 1861. From that time Tien used all the means in his power—threats, tortures, imprisonments—to stop the progress of Christianity; and at last he determined to strike a decisive blow against what he considered to be an illegal and dangerous society. For this purpose he found an instrument ready to his hand, and one who had experience in such matters. Tay-lou-tche, a mandarin, who had, in the year 1858, at Maokeou beheaded three Christians under similar circumstances, readily undertook a like office on this occasion. By his orders the Abbé Néel and his catechists were seized, loaded with chains, and carried to the execution ground, where he personally directed the ceremonies of their decapitation. The spectators who carried the news to Monsignor Faurie averred that at the moment that the Abbé Néel's head fell to the ground a bright cloud descended from heaven and hovered over his corpse.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, September 18.

The rumour that Mr. E. de Waal will shortly resign his post as Minister of the Colonial Department has assumed more consistency since H. M. the King has granted him leave of absence on the ground of ill health. It is ascertained that his resignation will take place as soon as the India budget is voted. As his probable successors, are named Mr. Mirandolle or Mr. O. van Rees; the Conservatives are afraid that the last named will accept the Portfolio, and the papers of that party have opened a crusade against him accordingly. There is a general conviction, however, that he is the right man in the right place, and that his appointment will go far to still the discontent which prevails in India in consequence of the unfulfilled promises of the Liberal party.

The addresses of the Chambers of Trade at Amsterdam and Rotterdam urge that more produce should be sold in India instead of being brought here unsold, and all the Chambers are forwarding addresses to the same effect; it is thought probable that the Government will consent to the change. I hear also that the minister intends once more to ask a credit to subsidize a steam line between Java and Australia, the necessity of which is so strongly urged by the Batavia Handelsblad, which was received by the last mail.

The French papers are alluding to the fact that the negotiations of Holland with Germany, which aimed to revise the navigation-treaty of the Rhine, have been interrupted. Several rumours are current respecting the occasion of the interruption, but I am able to state that it was only caused through Prussia having claimed the right to become master of our rivers, that is that no public works should be made, either on the Merwede or New Maese, without the consent of the Rhine States. Of course it was impossible that Holland could grant such an extraordinary demand, but it is ridiculous to say that this will become a pretext for hostilities between Germany and Holland.

The Catholic party has opened a crusade against the Cabinet. You will remember that the Minister of the Home Department declared that he would not alter the present Instruction Law. The archbishop and the bishops have in reply published a manifesto, which is read in all the churches, and by which every Catholic is recommended not to support the public anti-sectarian school, but to establish private schools in which the Catholic religion may be taught. The clergy are thus endeavouring to force the Cabinet to alter the Act of 1857. A general excitement will be the probable consequence of this manifesto, because the educational system has many more defenders than antagonists, and of course the former will endeavour to prevent any alteration in the existing law.

The result of the sugar convention at the Hague was that the customs duties on refined sugar when imported into France are two francs lower, so that the duty is now f.48.65 per 100 kilo. This alteration of the sugar treaty is made because the foreign importers were prejudiced by the differential customs duties which prevail in France; and the plenipotentiaries of the other States only approved of the alteration upon the assurance of the French Commissioner that the French tariff should be entirely revised next year.

I regret having to record the death of our eminent author, Mr. Jacob van Lennep, who died, aged sixty-six years, at his seat at Oosterbeek.

The annual meeting of the Society for Improving the Javanese has been held at Arnheim, under the presidency of Dr. W. Bosch. A very extensive discussion took place upon the best way to realise the aims of the society, viz., that the natives should be made really free, so that Europeans should no longer continue to dispose as they please of their time and labour, as is now the case. It was strongly urged that the education of the natives ought to be improved in the first place, and a commission was appointed in order to report upon the actual condition of education in India. The members also resolved that the society should publish periodical reports upon our colonies. The number of members in the society is now 1,500, against 160 two years ago.

The intelligence received by the last mail stating that Government had paid the passage money of Mr. C. Busken Huet, who has left for India to become the editor of the hitherto Liberal Java Bode, has created much sensation and indignation here. This fact proves by what means the former Conservative Government maintained its power.

It is stated that the Minister of the Colonial Department has the intention to decide upon the question of sugar cultivation in India as soon as possible. The session of the States General will be closed on the 19th inst. in the usual manner, and the new session will be opened on the 21st.

H. M. the King has arrived from Switzerland at his seat Het Loo, where splendid festivities took place on the birthday of the hereditary Prince of Orange. H. M. the Queen has left for Ems.

The First Lieutenant of Marine, Mr. H. van Goens, now stationed in the East, has been appointed adjutant to the Minister of the Marine Department. H. M. has approved the appointment of Mr. G. von Bultzingslowen as Consul at Sourabaya for the North German Confederation.

H.M.'s steamer of war Djambi is ready to sail on the 21st. She is bound for Japan. The Mouch II. will shortly sail with 150 soldiers for the East India army. Whilst the Jacoba and Emilie is chartered to convey coals to Yokohama.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

The demand for money is quiet; the Bank, however, has made no alteration in the rate of discount, which was fixed on the 24th of March last at 2½ to 3 per cent.

The business in public securities has been of a more active description; the dealings nevertheless being in a great degree speculative. Foreign stocks in some cases have presented more firmness. It is thought that the current is rather turning in a favourable direction. The Dutch funds exhibit considerable firmness.

In your issue of the 11th inst. you make some remarks respecting the import of double duties on all goods imported into Java not manufactured in Holland. As some uncertainty seems to prevail about the matter in England, I insert a list of those articles which are subjected to double duties:—

Carriages, copper, manufactured, bronze ware, copper ware, earthenware (pottery) and china; flour and meal, furniture, glass and glass-work, iron, founded or forged, lead, manufactured, leather and leather-work, manufactures of cotton (not made up, white or bleached, dyed or printed), linen, woollen, hemp, flax and tow, ribbon and band, lace; meat of all sorts, salted or preserved; paper of all sorts and paper hangings; steel, rod, plate, sheet, railway bars, scarfnails, manufactured; cotton or woollen yarns; zinc work, painted or lacquered, are subject to a customs duty during the years 1866-68, when certified of Dutch origin or manufactured in Holland, of 10 per cent. of the value, and when imported from or manufactured elsewhere of 20 per cent.; this last differential duty will be reduced 4 per cent. after the 1st January 1869.

Beer in bulk is charged per 100 litres 2f. for Dutch, 4f. for foreign, till Dec. 31st, 1868, and then the foreign will have to pay 3f. Beer in bottle, 2f. 25c. for Dutch, 4f. 50c. for foreign, and after 1st January 1869, 3f. 50c.

Steam machinery for agriculture, mining, manufacturing; likewise parts of machinery, provided that they can be acknowledged by the functionaries; rope and cordage of all sorts, sailcloth; Dutch, free; foreign, 5 per cent. of the value, and after 1st January, 1869, 4 per cent.

Painters' colours, ground with oil or not; writing and drawing necessaries; Dutch, 6 per cent., and foreign 10 per cent. of the value.

Vinegar in bulk, per 100 litres; Dutch, 2f., foreign, 4f.; and after 1st January, 1869, 3f. In glass; Dutch, f.2.50; foreign, 5f.; and after 1st January, 1869, 4f.

Wine (bottled), per 100 litres; Dutch, 8f., foreign, f.10.50.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The Trading Company has announced an auction for the 23rd instant, when 122,200 b. Java and Padang will be offered. The market has been very quiet and the transactions of trifling importance, they include:—709 b. Java, ex Herman de Ruyter, at 25c. to 30½c.; 942 b. do., ex Ellen, at 34c.; 1,319 b. Macassar, ex Hollandia; 674 b. Java, ex Herman de Ruyter, from 22c. to 27c.

SUGAR (Raw).—The market has remained inactive, and the following parcels have changed hands at 1f. to 1¼f. under July value. 400 mats Batavia, floating, per Emilie; 652 do. Probolingo, per Vooruit; 709 mats Bezoekie, ex Laura and Adele; 366 do. Sourabaya, ex County of Bute, No. 9¾, at 29¼f.; 185 do. do., ex Tonia, No. 10¼, at 29¾f.; 390 do. Japara, ex Admiraal de Ruyter, No. 12½, at 32f.; 280 do., Java, ex General Birch, No. 12¾, at 32½f.; 83 mats Macassar, ex Hollandia.

RICE.—There is not much doing, but prices of all grades are fairly supported. The lots sold include, 865 b. Sourabaya, ex Jessie Ann, at f.6¾; 1,194 b. Java, ex Vrede, at f.8⅛; 1,600 b. Macassar, ex Hollandia, at f.7¼; 858 b. Sourabaya, ex Burgemeester van Middelburg, at f.6¾; 655 b. Java, damaged, ex Leopold Graaf Van Limburg Stirum, at f.8⅛ to f.9⅛; 1,234 b. Java, ex Geertruida Maria, at f.8½; 1,027 b. do., ex do., at f.9; 930 b. Java, ex Gerard Pieter Servatius, at secret prices.

TEA.—The business has been limited, the demand being confined chiefly to the immediate wants of consumers. On the 11th inst. will be sold 750/4 ch. Java, which are valued as follows:—Trade mark Nangoeng: Java Congou, No. 1,90c., No. 2, 88c.; Souchow 115c.; Pecco, 275c. Mark Sarie Moelang: Congou, 90c.; Souchow, 115c.; Pecco, 350c. It is said that a direct cargo is expected from China. 750/4 ch. Java were offered by inscription. 201/4 ch. were sold at prices that did not transpire; the rest remains in the market.

TOBACCO.—Java Leaves: In waiting for the forthcoming auctions the market is inactive, only 2,087 b. Java, trade mark Walter, have been sold.

BANCA TIN.—The last mail brought intelligence that an inspector, when visiting the island of Banca, had found there an enormous quantity of Banca Tin, which had not been exported, and of which no account appeared upon the official returns. This news made a very unfavourable impression upon our market, and prices have receded in consequence. The transactions, however, are numerous, there being a good demand for account of English buyers. The transactions and quotations are as follows:—600 slabs at 54f., 500 do. at 53¾f., 200 do. at 53½f., 500 do. at 53¼f., 1,500 do. at 53f., 500 do. at 53¼f., 500 do. at 53¼f., 2,800 do. at 52½f. Of Billiton 3,100 slabs floating were sold at 53¼f. to 54f.

ARRACK.—300 casks, ex Aria and Betsy, were offered this week by inscription, but the parcel was not sold; 159 casks Tagal Alcohol, ex Geertruida Maria, changed hands.

INDIGO.—The market remains very firm, and the parcels offered are freely taken. The stock, however, is very small.

HIDES.—The market is very firm, but without transactions.

DRUGS.—Camphor unaltered at 80c. Cubebs: 91 b., ex Koophandel, inferior quality, were sold at secret prices.

RATTANS.—The following parcels have changed hands:—138 pic., ex Vice Admiral May; 100 pic., ex Herman de Ruyter; 226 pic., ex Bezoekie; 157 pic., ex Emilie; 86 pic., ex Cornelia Hendrika; 140 pic., ex Burgemeester Van Middelburg; 216 pic., ex County of Bute, and 149 pic., ex Koophandel.

SAPANWOOD.—100 pic., ex Eva Johanna, are in the market.

MANILA HEMP.—The 154 b. announced to be offered in auction have been sold privately at f.80.

Poll and family, Boode and family, Peralta de Renaud, Clarckson, Van der Hoop, Trehoff, Noels, Mrs. Serruys and family, Mrs. Casselette, Miss Korver, Messrs. Oesterweghel and Strube.

PASSENGERS OUTWARD.—For Java, per Amstelstroom, Captain Berg and family, Captain de Wilde and family, Lieutenant Langenberg and family, medical officer Van der Elst, Messrs. Herstein and family, C. B. Versteegh and family, Mrs. Nagel, Mrs. Eicke and child, Miss A. Tinkhoff den Toom, Miss E. Valckenhoff.

Monetary and Commercial.

The biddings for £200,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held as usual at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £193,200, and to Madras, £6,800. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both presidencies, and tenders at 1s. 11¼d. will receive about 40 per cent. Those above will be allotted in full. These results show a further increase in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

A small quantity of bar silver brought by the last West India packet has been disposed of for shipment to the Continent at 60½d. per ounce, showing a fractional advance.

A limited amount of Mexican dollars has been disposed of for China at 59⅝d. per oz., showing a decline of ¼d. from the rate last obtained.

The appeal case of Sam Mendel, of Manchester, against the decision of the Hong Kong Court, for delivery of goods to the Chartered Bank of India, consigned by him to Lyall, Still and Co., is not likely to be considered by the Lords Justices until November.

It appears that the Dutch still maintain the impost of double duties on all goods imported into Java not manufactured in Holland, and that all sorts of devices are used by our manufacturers in order to have their goods certified as of Dutch make, such as sending cotton manufactures to be bleached in Holland. It is remarkable that the Dutch Government has not abolished such a restriction, worthy only of a past age. Our Rotterdam correspondent gives a list of the articles upon which the increased charge is made. It would appear that a reduction in the rates will come into force on the 1st January, 1869.

The Ajax, belonging to Mr. Holt's line of China steamers, left Liverpool on the 25th of June, and arrived at Mauritius on the 3rd of August, making the passage under 39 days.

A new postal treaty between Great Britain and the United States with reference to the East India mails has been promulgated. It regulates the exchange of mails between the United States and the East, by means of the new American steam line plying between San Francisco and Hong Kong, and takes effect on November 1. The rate of postage is 10c. currency per half ounce on letters, 2c. each on newspapers, and 8c. per four ounces on book packets, patterns, and samples, and the treaty includes all the British possessions in the East.

The Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company's steamship Chiltern has sailed from the Thames for Malta with the shore end and part of the main cable for the direct submarine telegraph line to be laid by that company for the Anglo-Mediterranean Telegraph Company (Limited). The Scanderia, containing the remaining length of the main cable, has also sailed.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Massilia, from Southampton on the 19th inst., was in gold, to Galle, £2,800; to Bombay, £9,750; to Madras, £5,594; to Calcutta, £53,000; in silver, to Bombay, £1,050; to Hong Kong, £45,740; total in gold, £71,144; in silver, £46,790.

The directors of the Agra Bank (Limited) have issued a report to the proprietors, from which we extract the most material passages as follows:—"It has not been the practice in past years, as a rule, to issue a half-yearly report of the working of the bank. The present directors did so, however, last year, in regard to the peculiar circumstances of the bank at that time, and they have considered it advisable to do so again on this occasion. . . . . With regard to the A capital, the directors have declared an ad interim dividend to the A shareholders on the amount of their shares, for the half-year ending 30th June last, at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. With reference to this dividend, the directors are happy to be able to state that the business of the bank has been steadily on the increase. The progress which it has made, both in London and at the branches, has been of the most satisfactory character, and the credit and support which it has received, as evidenced by an almost daily addition to its constituency, is most gratifying and encouraging. The shareholders interested in the B shares are aware, from the last report issued by the directors, and from the information given at the general meeting held in April, that very considerable difficulty and delay were found to attend upon the realisation of the outstanding assets of the late bank. One principal object contemplated by the resuscitation o the bank was to afford sufficient time for the recovery of these assets without the necessity of forcing sales, by which the loss, inevitable in any case, would have been very seriously increased. This object has been attained, and the liabilities of the old bank have now been paid in full at a much earlier date than would otherwise have been practicable without a call being made upon the unpaid capital. . . . There are at the present moment assets unrealised representing the sum of about £2,700,000. The larger portion of this amount consist of assets in this country, but a considerable part is made up of claims in outstanding advances secured on indigo factories in India and other similar properties, for which the directors have not yet succeeded in meeting with purchasers on suitable terms. The home assets are composed to a great extent of claims on companies in liquidation, and of securities of various kinds in mortgages, debentures, shares, steamers, &c., having an intrinsic value which will no doubt sooner or later be developed, but many of these securities cannot at once be turned into money without a sacrifice which it would be injudicious to incur. When the resuscitation arrangements were drawn up, the belief was entertained that the period of two years would have sufficed for the realisation of all but a small portion of the old assets, and that by the 1st January, 1869, it would have been practicable to show a considerable surplus available to the B shareholders as capital to participate in dividends from that date. The directors regret to say that the progress made with these assets up to this time has not been such as to lead to the expectation that this will be the case. Beyond what will be necessary to cover the advances which have been made to provide for the claims of creditors, and which form the first liability of the assets, the directors find it difficult to offer a correct opinion, either of the amount of surplus which may remain, or of the period when the assets may be expected to be fully realised. At the same time it is right they should state that nothing has occurred in respect to these assets since the general meeting in April, to lead them to look for additional losses which were not then foreseen and explained. . . . They are most solicitous that neither the shareholders nor the public should be under wrong impressions, or should be misled in their expectations; and it is with this view that they have considered it to be their duty to communicate to them in this report the doubts they themselves entertain, that at so early a period as the beginning of next year there will be surplus assets to rank as capital, and available for dividend from that date, in association with the A shares. This will be a disappointment to the B shareholders, but it has arisen from causes connected with the assets, which the directors have not been able to control, and from the desire on their part not unduly to press sales by which the interests of shareholders would suffer. In conclusion, the directors would repeat what they have stated at the outset of this report, that the progress and prospects of the bank, both in this country and in India, continue to confirm their most sanguine anticipations."

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Thompson's Circular, dated 17th inst., is as follows:—The market has been excessively dull. The few fine Kaisows remaining over of the late arrivals have found buyers, but the bulk of the cargoes remains still on hand, the dealers refusing to make offers. The public sales now in progress are large, and New Season's Foochow Teas, of fair and medium qualities, have sold 1d. to 2d. per lb. lower since our last issue.

FOOCHOW CONGOUS.—Siftings have sold at 9d. Very common, of old Import, at the auctions, realised 1s. per lb., good common, 1s. 0½d.; fair, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 1½d. per lb.; new import, 1s. 4½d. to 1s. 7½d. per lb. for fair to medium grades; privately a few sales only have been made at 2s. to 2s. 5d. for fine to finest, which prices are about the same as last quoted. Black Leaf Congous: Dust and siftings have sold at 8¼d. to 8¾d. per lb. Good ordinary, ex Magellen, sold at the auctions at 1s. per lb., good common at 1s. 0½d.; fair at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d. per lb. Medium of new import ex Agamemnon, have been sold at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 9d. per lb. Tayshan Congous: About 5,000 boxes, ex Agamemnon, have been sold in the present sale at 1s. 2½d. to 1s. 4½d. for fair to good, showing fully ½d. per lb. decline. Oolongs are most difficult of sale. Souchongs: A parcel, ex Sir Lancelot, at the auctions, of fair quality, sold at 1s. 4½d. per lb., and common at 1s. 2d. per lb. Scented Orange Pekoes are about as last quoted—with great difficulty to obtain offers. Scented Capers, ex Belted Will and Undine, have sold slowly at 1s. 4d. to 1s. 8d. for fair to good, 1s. 10d. to 2s. 2d. for fine; a parcel of very common has been sold at 1s. 0½d. per lb. Green Teas have occasionally been sold at easier rates.

The China sale comprised 30,146 packages, so far about 20,000 packages have been sold. Prices have in all cases been lower, new teas selling at irregular prices, but generally 1d. to 2d. per lb. lower. An Indian sale is advertised for the 22nd inst. The Undine, from Canton, arrived on the 10th inst. Prices for Congous of old import show ½d. per lb. fall, but new, of fair to medium grades, are again 1d. to 2d. per lb. lower, or fully 4d. less than the opening prices.

The following is from the Produce Markets Review:—Notwithstanding the large quantity of tea placed on the market from recent arrivals, and the general inclination on the part of merchants to sell, the trade have not been buyers except of the finest grades, and even then they have only purchased in the most sparing manner; while the medium and common sorts, which so largely predominate, are quite neglected, and prices for these descriptions are now from 3d. to 4d. below the opening rates. High and disproportioned as were the first prices paid, there is no doubt that this class of tea has fallen to a price somewhat approximating to its merits. On the other hand, the few parcels of superior quality have moved off freely, and prices have been maintained. For the present we do not look for any fall in the finer kinds, owing to the active competition of shippers; but as soon as their wants are satisfied there must be a reaction, as the grocers generally are too deeply committed to low prices to admit of their buying any large quantity of tea over 2s. per lb.; buyers of tea should never lose sight of this fact, as the sooner it is practically applied in the purchase of tea the sooner will trade return to its usual activity. The new Monings, ex Agamemnon, have sold more readily than the Kaisows. The leaf and qualities of these teas are generally good, and prices are moderate for opening rates; we have also noticed that the objectionable unevenness of the Moning leaf has, to some extent, been removed. All activity in any branch of the tea trade is, however, checked by the enormous exports from China, the latest telegram giving a total of 81,500,000 lbs.; and the folly of thus pouring so large a proportion of the year's crop into our market in the space of a few weeks is the more to be regretted as it is by no means certain that the total imports for the year will be in excess of our requirements, and the course pursued will, perhaps, lead to undue depression at one period of the year to be followed by a speculative reaction as the season advances. The Canton Pekoes, ex Belted Will, are as difficult to sell as ever; for Scented Caper there is a little better, but not active, demand. Oolongs of both old and new import continue in excess of requirements.

SILK.

The interval has been characterised by a total absence of animation, and a further decline in price has been stimulated by the heavy unloadings of the French and English steamers, which arrived together. Chop thirds still remain nominally at 29s. to 30s., but Swet Fee No. 3 Blue Peacock is not worth more than 27s. 6d., while Ting Chang Kee Fong Wan, which sold at 26s. 6d. at the opening of the market, has since been placed at 23s., and some inferior Teatlee has only realised 20s. Skeins we may quote at 19s. to 19s. 6d.; Kahing, 21s. to 23s. 6d.; Haincens are lower by 6d. to 1s.; Japans remain neglected. The demand from the Continent still runs on fine silk, and entirely passes by Asiatics, and hence many anticipate that we shall fall until such a price is reached as to induce speculation, say from 1s. to 2s. below present rates. The new season's Japans are to hand, but nothing has yet been done with them.

COTTON.—Since the date of our last report the Liverpool market has taken a downward course. The holders of cotton are apparently losing confidence day by day, as is evidenced in their increasing desire to realise. The market is each day more freely supplied, and prices have in consequence a progressive and steady downward movement, showing a decline of ¼d. to ⅜d. upon those current at the date of our last. The current rates on the spot are:—American, 8¼d. to 11¼d.; Egyptian, 5d. to 1s. 9d.; Peru, 9¼d. to 10½d.; Surat 5¼d. to 9¼d. The latest sales in arrival cotton have been at the following rates:—American, basis of middling, Savannah, by steamer via New York, 9½d.; Broach, fair new merchants, early June sailing, 7¾d.; Dhollerah, fair new merchants, sailing May, June, and August, 7½d. Dhollerah, fair new merchants, June and July sailing, 7½d.; and Oomrawuttee, fair new merchants, May sailing, 7 9-16d. and 7½d.; ditto, April and June, 7½d. The London market has also been extremely dull, and the Liverpool market was slightly better on Thursday, owing to the receipt of favourable advices from America.

COFFEE.—The public sales of Ceylon have on the whole gone off with less animation, and, with the exception of the few lots of superior Plantation, prices were frequently in favour of the buyer. Native is also of less ready sale, and former prices, except for good bold, have been barely maintained. The quantities sold and prices paid have been as follows:—737 casks 75 tierces 68 barrels 308 bags Plantation triage and ordinary 24s. to 55s., small gray and brown 58s. to 63s., bold ditto 66s. 6d. to 68s. 6d., small coloury 65s. 6d. to 70s., middling coloury 70s. to 74s., good middling 75s. 6d. to 79s. 6d., good bold 80s. 6d. to 85s. 6d., peaberry 73s. to 84s. 1,885 bags Native, common good ordinary to fine ordinary at 43s. 6d. to 47s. 6d., good bold at 50s. 6d. to 54s. 6d. 1,134 bags 196 pockets Manila, pale greenish 51s., pale 46s. to 48s. 6d. At the auction held yesterday there was a less active demand, and prices generally declined 6d. per cwt. 830 casks 40 barrels and 300 bags Plantation Ceylon sold, triage, &c. 27s. to 47s. 6d., ordinary to middling 50s. to 74s. 6d., good middling to good bold 75s. to 83s., peaberry 74s. to 84s., 600 bags native Ceylon all sold, good ordinary 45s. to 46s. 6d., very superior 63s. 6d. to 67s., peaberry 49s. 6d.

COCOA NUT OIL.—The market for Ceylon is steady at £51, at which price about 45 tons have been sold.

GALLS.—At a recent sale of 75 cases China offered 26 cases sold at £6 5s., while 163 cases Japan were bought in at 53s.

MANILA HEMP.—The market is firm but inactive. Private sales of fair good roping Manila have been made at full prices, which are, however, not disclosed. In auction 580 bales ordinary brown Manila sold at £42 to £42 10s., and 100 bales fair to good roping bought in at £48 to £50. Further parcels of fair current Manila, amounting to 2,000 bales, were sold last week at £48.

PEPPER.—Black: Singapore is still firmly held, and 555 bags at auction were bought in at 3½d. Some inquiry has been made privately, and about 1,000 bags have changed hands at previous rates, Singapore at 3⅜d. to 3½d., Penang at 3½d. to 3¼d. There is nothing doing in White Pepper.

RICE.—A steady tone is still maintained in the market. The general demand for cleaned is extensive, and consequently rough sorts, both hard and soft grain, meet a readier sale at improved rates. The following transactions are reported:—At public sale, 2,683 bags Bengal good Askoolie principally at 10s. 6d., part 10s. 9d. Privately, 3,000 bags Dacca grain Bengal have sold at 10s. to 10s. 3d.; 1,000 bags Moonghy, 9s. 3d.; 3,000 bags good pinky Madras, 10s. 3d. For arrival, 100 tons Decca, June shipment, have been sold at 10s., ex ship; 300 tons Ballam, 9s., ex ship. A cargo of 620 tons Moulmein, April shipment, at 11s. 3d., ex ship for London; 1,500 tons Rangoon, September sailing, at 10s. 6d., ex ship for London; 1,270 tons Rangoon at 11s. 4½d., for Liverpool; 700 tons Necransie, arrived at 10s. 10½d., ex ship for London; and 800 tons Necransie arrived off the coast sold for the Continent, supposed at 10s. 6d.

TERRA JAPONICA.—Cutch: The market remains firm for fine Pegue at 36s. 6d. In auction of 320 bags from Penang the sound portion was bought in at 35s., 60 bags sea damaged selling at 31s. for first class, 60 bags low ditto sold at 20s., 293 bags low mixed from Calcutta bought in at 21s. Gambier: Prices are rather lower, about 400 bales having sold privately at 17s., and in auction 475 bales were disposed of at the same price; 150 baskets cubes bought in at 25s.

TIN.—The market is firmer, and business has been done in Banca at £92 10s., and in Straits at £92 per ton.

LAUNCHES.

Messrs. Robert Duncan and Co. have launched a splendid iron clipper ship of 1,370 tons for Messrs. Robert Cathbert and Co., Greenock. She was named the Rozalle by Miss Johnston, daughter of David Johnston, Esq., Bellaire, Greenock. The Rozalle, which is of fine model, was built under cover, is registered highest class, is 220 feet in length, 33 feet in breadth, and 29 feet in depth, is for the East India trade, and is to be commanded by Captain Meldrum, late of the Esmeralda, belonging to the same owners.

On the 17th inst. Messrs. R. Steele and Co. launched on the Clyde a fine China clipper named the Parsee, for Messrs. J. and W. Stewart. She is 216 feet long, 25 feet 10 inches beam, and 22 feet 3 inches depth, and 1,328 tons register. She is in all respects the same as the Assaye, lately launched by the same firm for Messrs. Stewart.

Messrs. Randolph, Elder, and Co. have just launched from their shipbuilding yard at Govan the Guinevere, a composite ship, of 1,073 tons builders' measurement, of the following dimensions:—Length over all, 2 7 feet; breadth, 34 feet; depth (moulded), 21 feet feet. She is intended for the China trade, and, among other improvements, is fitted with Skinner's vertical steering gear, which appears to be coming into general application.

Ship Taeping left the River Min at 3 P.M. on the 28th May; discharged pilot at 5.30 P.M.—June 2, 3 and 4, in company with Sir Lancelot; 10, Ariel, Spindrift, Undine, and Sir Lancelot in company; 12, parted company with Undine and Ariel; 13, parted company with Spindrift and Sir Lancelot; 22, passed Anjer, Ariel and Sir Lancelot in company; July 16, spoke ship Lahloo, lat. 31.48 S., long. 82.24 E.; 20, Passed the Cape in the morning; 29, Spindrift in company, lat. 18.55 S., long. 4.05 W.;

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE BORNEO COMPANY (LIMITED).

Singapore, April 6, 1868.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—In bad legs, scrofulous sores, glandular swellings, this Ointment operates very gently, but very surely, and with a rapidity that resembles magic. It should be rubbed into the parts affected after they have been fomented with lukewarm water. The purifying and curative powers of this marvellous unguent have never been disputed by anyone who has given it a fair trial. It contains not a particle of any substance of a noxious nature, nor is there a case on record in which it has done the slightest harm; while there are authentic reports of innumerable cures effected by it in all countries. It is as mild in its action as it is powerful and beneficial in its effects.

THE MAILS, &c.

The present homeward mail reached London on Saturday evening, the 3rd inst., somewhat in advance of its due date. The French mail, bringing Hong Kong dates to August 25, has not yet reached Marseilles, and is not likely to be delivered until Wednesday or Thursday.

The latest telegrams via Galle are those in advance of the P. and O. mail leaving Hong Kong on the 4th September, which will be found in another column. Via Kiachta, Shanghai telegrams to Sept. 8 were received on Sept. 26.

List of Passengers.

PASSENGERS INWARD.

Per P. and O. steamer from Suez, November 8.—To Singapore (via Bombay): Mr. Aitken.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

LATEST ADVICES VIA SAN FRANCISCO.

By the Pacific Mail steamer Great Republic, which arrived at San Francisco on the 19th ult., advices were received from Yokohama to the 29th August, or twenty days later than those brought by the P. and O. mail delivered to-day. She brought 915 passengers, 875 of whom were Chinese, and 1,200 tons of merchandise. The following is a summary of her news as published in the American papers, but its correctness is not reliable :—

The uncle of the present Mikado has been appointed Mikado by the Northern Princes.

A great panic has broken out among the Southern Princes. The Mikado has been requested to resign, and will probably comply with the request.

Sendai has captured and burned the strong fortress of Sirakawa. Tosa has left the Southern coalition.

The Prince of Mito, the father of the ex-Shiogoon, is dead, and the younger son, now in Paris, succeeds to the title.

The ex-Shiogoon had gone into the territory of Prince Aidsin.

The publication of all newspapers had been prohibited in Yedo.

Yokohama is again guarded by foreigners, and an attack is daily expected.

Don Jose Garcia de Queredo, the Envoy Extraordinary from Spain, has arrived here to ratify the treaty of that country with Japan.

H. Grinnell, late Acting Lieutenant United States Navy, has been appointed overseer of the Japanese Navy under the Southern Government.

The Consuls of the Treaty Powers have been officially notified that the transportation of rice from Hiogo to the open ports is prohibited, as contrary to the stipulations of the treaties of 1866.

The new Mikado had entered upon the duties of his office and issued his proclamation. He is the uncle of the present Mikado, and resides in Hugerostu, near Shonai, in Senda.

Numerous engagements had taken place between the Northern and Southern troops, in which the Northerners were completely victorious. The Kangmus were reinforcing Yedo to the utmost, and it was believed that that city would be the main theatre of strife.

Outrages on foreigners were of almost daily occurrence. Great trouble and ill feeling followed the attempt to force new paper money on the Japanese. Many merchants refused to take it. Intelligence was received from Kobe to the effect that a resident merchant had been decapitated for refusing it.

Another imperial decree against the Christians had been issued and circulated throughout the empire.

The labour market at Yokohama and other ports opened with a demand largely above the supply. Efforts were being made by the local press and the authorities to check the immigration.

The steamer Japan had arrived at Yokohama from San Francisco, making the passage in twenty-two days. Minister J. Ross Browne and party were on board, all well. They left for Shanghai, August 28.

The Great Republic grounded in Yokohama harbour, which detained her three days.

The flags at several of the legations, consulates and men-of-war in the harbour were at half-mast, and the flagship Piscataqua fired minute guns in memory of ex-President Buchanan, Aug. 27.

The tidal wave occurred in the harbour of Yokohama, Aug. 15, the day after the earthquake in South America.

The ship Lanercost is loading tea for New York.

Exchange on London, six months, 4s. 7d.; on New York, 11 per cent. discount.

The ship King Phillip, from Cardiff, and the steamer Japan, from San Francisco, arrived at Yokohama on the 26th of August. All well.

The ship Valley Forge sailed for San Francisco on the 23rd of August.

YOKOHAMA.

As noticed above, the Japan news by to-day's mail is of earlier date than that received by the Pacific route; but it is, as usual, more reliable and more complete in its details. Advices from Yokohama are to the 9th August; no later European mails had arrived out, but the San Francisco steamer had brought telegraphic advices from London to the 2nd July. The following summary of news is from the Japan Times:—

We are still without any political news of importance, but the quiet which still reigns at Yedo and in the South is favourable to the new government, which every day's undisturbed possession of the open ports serves to strengthen in prestige. Nee-e-gata is still held for Aidzu, but we hear of a naval force being on the point of starting to assist the Mikado's troops in that neighbourhood to take possession of the place. We are hourly expecting more positive news. Neither from Osaka nor Nagasaki have we anything of importance to record.

The Mikado's Government here is endeavouring to organise its various departments, but it labours under immense difficulties, the chief of which is naturally the want of servants who possess the requisite knowledge of foreigners, of our languages, our habits, and our wants. It is compelled to employ either the servants of the late Government or men entirely new to the work, and peculation, error, and discomfort are the natural results of their necessity. In a somewhat elaborate essay upon the subject we have endeavoured to set forth the complaints justly made by foreign merchants, and recommend, as the speediest and best means of cure, the adoption of the system of foreign supervision of customs which has been so successful in China. As readers of this journal will recollect, this scheme of reform has been repeatedly advocated by us, and we have great satisfaction now in the belief that it will presently be at least taken into serious consideration in other quarters.

The most important commercial event of the fortnight, a reform really of great moment to foreign merchants, is announced in the following official notification, promulgated by the native Government on the 27th ultimo:—"Arrangements having been made for the exchange of boos against dollars at the rate of two hundred and ninety-three (293) per hundred, exchange will be given to all foreigners on the morning of the ninth day inclusive from the day on which dollars are deposited at the Saibansho. This arrangement will come into operation on the 27th instant, July, 1868."

This announcement was received by many with incredulity and distrust, but the manager of the Oriental Bank, having satisfied himself that the native Government was acting in good faith, came to its assistance, and advertised that the bank was ready, under certain necessary conditions, to discount the Mint's engagements. Boos have fallen, in consequence, to a point nearly approaching the Government rate of exchange, and there is no doubt that the great good to the native Treasury will shortly result of confidence in its promises to pay; to foreign trade, that the disturbing element hitherto present in our calculations of prices will be soon eliminated by the establishment of native coin as the only currency; and the relegation of the Mexican dollar to its proper and natural position here—that of bullion.

Since we last wrote, the Chamber of Commerce has issued its report for the half-year ending June 30th. An allusion will be remarked therein to a fraud discovered in Italy, according to our latest advices, in the silk-worm egg trade. Certain blank cards appear to have been shipped hence by some dishonest persons, marked and stamped with the usual Japanese characters and Custom-house certificates, to be covered with Italian seed and sold as produce of Japan. Such an abominable fraud, if successful, would of course imperil the whole of this increasingly valuable trade, and considerable sensation has been created here by the news of the attempt. The Chamber of Commerce has promptly taken up the matter, appointing a special committee to co-operate with his Excellency, the Italian Minister, in endeavouring to discover the authors of the fraud, and we have little doubt of their success. The eagerness with which the native silkmen have applied for copies of a circular just issued by the Chamber, also alluded to in our review—in which are set forth the faults found with Japan silk by European throwsters, encourages us to anticipate that they, too, will gladly help to bring to justice the perpetrators of this silk-egg fraud.

Major-General Brunker and staff arrived from Hong Kong by the Colorado, and during the fortnight the 10th Regiment has been undergoing its annual inspection. The regiment was reviewed on the vacant land between the native and foreign concession on the 31st ult., and deservedly complimented by the general on its efficiency in drill. For the first time in Yokohama the wonderful power of the Snider rifle was exhibited, and the Japanese seemed particularly struck with the spectacle. The Belliqueuse, a fine French corvette, demi-plated, and armed with a projecting stem, has arrived with Admiral Penhoat on board. She is making a tour round the world, hailing last from Callao, and will return to France via the Cape of Good Hope.

We must mention a circumstance illustrative of what we have written above respecting the difficulties under which the new Government labours in its intercourse with foreigners, although the joke is against ourselves. Just before last mail, four out of six of our Japanese pressmen bolted, and put us to great inconvenience. The two who remained were rewarded and were anxious to continue their service; but a few days afterwards one of these disappeared for a day, and on inquiry being made, it appeared that the four deserters had set upon and beaten him severely. The wounded man was accordingly sent to the native police-office with a despatch, couched—as we knew that the new Government was deficient in interpreters—in the simplest possible language, such as one would use in writing to a child of eight years old, and in words of two syllables. In this protection was requested for the faithful servant, and a suggestion was made that a few days' imprisonment would do no great harm to his assailants. No reply having reached us, personal application was made for an answer, when we were gravely informed that our request had been complied with, the man who presented our letter had been locked up and properly punished, and "what did we want done with him now?" As no provision appears to be made in the Japanese code for remedy against false imprisonment, we have had to compensate the man ourselves, so that, on the whole, we took very little by our motion, and the "outraged majesty of the law" remains unvindicated.

The Japan Gazette says:—

Translations from native newspapers (of which nearly half a score have sprung up in Yedo within the past few months) show the motives of Choshiu's withdrawal—the rejection of his "three points" by the Mikado. One of these shows the hopes that still smoulder in the breasts of the Southern clans—that a time will yet come when foreigners shall be expelled. The "remonstrance" of Choshiu's Rifle Brigade does not urge that this shall be attempted now, but objects to the admission of foreigners to the sacred presence of the Mikado, on the ground that, if admitted, when the time comes for their repulsion no one will employ his energies for this purpose. This shows us the danger we are in if we reduce our forces in these islands.

We are led to believe that the bellicose Daimio, Tosa, has withdrawn, or is about to do so, from the confederation. With regard to this powerful chief, it is remarkable that almost every attack or threatened attack on foreigners since the middle of last year, save the outrage by Bizen's clansmen at Kobe and the assault on Sir Harry Parkes and suite at Kioto, have been by his retainers.

Under these circumstances it would be no very hazardous prediction that the opposite party, being united, and enrolling in its numbers most of the great Daimios of the North, would speedily recover the government for the Tokugawa family. There is, however, a very powerful reason for their hesitation. They say that if they put down the Satsuma party by force, unless they utterly crush them the latter will commit assaults on foreigners, and make every effort to embroil the Government.

NAGASAKI.

The following summary of Nagasaki news is from the Nagasaki Times:—

On the 22nd July at about 2 o'clock A.M. a fire broke out in the native city, but fortunately little damage was done, owing to the light wind at the time. We learn that the fire originated in a shop where toilet articles were sold, situated in Shta matz. The surrounding houses, being built of wood, quickly became a prey to the flames, and the fire rapidly spread in all directions, and had it not been for the numerous fire-proof godowns a large area must inevitably have been consumed. The fire was checked to leeward only by the high walls of the temple Saka no Tenman goo and the building known as Goto. The native pumps were of no more use in extinguishing the flames than so many syringes. The scene while the conflagration was going on was novel and exciting. The Japanese officers had donned for the occasion all kinds of absurd uniforms, and we were forcibly reminded, by the quaintness of the costumes and the glare of the bonfire, of our boyish games on Guy Fawkes' night. The inhabitants in the immediate vicinity were removing their "sticks and dry goods" with all possible speed, and with as much noise as they could shout. Mats seemed the most cherished objects; but this is not to be wondered at, if we take into consideration the absence of furniture in a Japanese house. No great amount of clothes appeared to be saved, possibly from the fact that a great many pairs of Japanese pants can be packed in a wardrobe. The view from the wall of the temple before-mentioned was grand. The glare of the burning houses and trees was quite brilliant, and outshone the lanterns, which were being moved about in all directions. Towards daylight the fire had burnt itself out, and was only smouldering when we left the scene, at half-past four. We are informed that twenty-two houses in all were burnt.

The P.M.S.S. Co.'s steamer Costa Rica arrived from Shanghai on the 20th July, and reported having met with a typhoon soon after leaving that port, and to have had a rough passage across, occupying five days in the run. She attempted to tow across two large lighters belonging to the company, for the use of their steamers here and at Yokohama, but from stress of weather had to part with them, after remaining a whole night hove-to ready to pick them up.

The Nangato left on Wednesday, the 22nd, to endeavour to pick up the two lighters. We fear it will prove a wildgoose chase. She has been chartered by the agents of the P.M.S.S. Company at 140 dols. per day, with coals found.

CHINA.

—o—

SHANGHAI.

Dates from this port are to the 15th August. The French mail of June 18th arrived on the 1st August, per Dupleix, and the English mail of June 19th on the 3rd August, with telegrams to 7th July. Later telegrams to 21st July had been received via Kiachta. The homeward P. and O. and Pacific steamers left on the same day.

The North China Herald gives the following items of news :—

Another shower of despatches has fallen upon the settlement, from the Chamber of Commerce, from the Inspector-General of Customs, and from the United States Consul-General. The former, evidently after mature consideration, have remonstrated strongly against the tone of Sir R. Alcock's last despatch about "Security Chops," and have requested that the correspondence be referred to the Foreign-office. The Inspector-General of Customs has invited the Chamber of Commerce to communicate direct with him, instead of through the Foreign Ministers and Consuls, on any difficulties or changes that may suggest themselves. We have no doubt the plan will be efficacious ; but the invitation is remarkable as another step towards that independent power which Mr. Hart is supposed to aim at. The U. S Consul General addresses his colleagues on the interesting question of jurisdiction over persons on board foreign ships in Chinese waters. The question is complicated by the exterritoriality rule.

The new Regulations for the Mixed Court have at length come into force—so far, at any rate, as the appointment of a special magistrate is concerned. Chun, who has long been well and favourably known in connection with that Court, took his seat as Tung-che for the first time on the 10th instant.

Our readers will not have forgotten the voyage of the General Sherman to Corea, and the reputed destruction of that vessel and all on board, by the outraged inhabitants. Information has been now received which will go far to remove this impression, as tending to show that two at least of the ill-fated crew still survive. A few evenings ago a letter written in Chinese was thrown into the compound of Messrs Ferguson and Co., and on its being opened appeared to be a letter from the Corea, saying that two Europeans—one of them Mr. Thomas and the other a pilot—were alive and well, and that they were very well treated. The letter was taken to the English Consul, and he, finding there was a Corean junk in harbour, ordered the master to be brought before him, when the latter confessed he had brought the letter from the Corea and thrown it into Messrs. Ferguson's compound. It is supposed that the letter was written with the cognisance of the gaoler, in order to reassure Mr. Thomas's friends ; but the letter, if it be genuine, deprecates interference as likely to ensure his death.

A quantity of land has been sold by auction. They were mostly cheap lots, the only remarkable feature being the rise in value of land in the Bubbling Well Road, which is being lined with villa residences.

The treaty Consuls have issued a notification, at the request of the Taoutai, warning their countrymen that they cannot forward the views of any persons who may think of gold-digging in Shantung ; but that, on the contrary, they will be ready to support the Chinese authorities by carrying out treaty provisions. As no one expected that the prospective gold diggers would receive official aid in penetrating Shantung, no one, probably, will be disappointed by the carefully worded notification to which we refer.

The S. S. N. and U. S. S. Co. have not been long left in undisturbed enjoyment of their monopoly on the Yang-tsze. Competition has been inaugurated by the Hong-que, running under Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s auspices, and the two first-named companies have lowered their rate of freight to tls. 3, by way of encouragement.

A pathetic appeal has been lately addressed by the Taoutai to all robbers and burglars to amend their ways, and save their own heads and hearts of their families. The idea will arise on reading it that it would be desirable that a little of the severity which his Excellency speaks of should be introduced into the Mixed Courts.

We hear a good deal of discussion as to the merits of the new light at the entrance of the Yangtze. Some of the pilots, we learn, declare they can only see it at seven miles distance. Other authorities declare they have seen it twelve miles off, and consider it invaluable in thick foggy weather, as the red flash pierces better and is more remarkable than the old light. Steps are, we learn, to be at once taken to erect a lighthouse on Gutzlaff.

We learn that Sir Rutherford Alcock intends to remain at Peking till October next year.

M. Giquel's Foochow arsenal has been described rather sarcastically by a recent visitor, as simply a school of instruction of the most feeble character. A number of buildings and some machinery have been erected ; but no practical result has been yet attained, beyond the construction of a quarter section of a gunboat.

We continue to receive letters from Chefoo about the gold discovery near that port. Several parties are still in the interior "prospecting." The accounts we receive tend to confirm our impression that there is no profitable field there for diggers, though it is likely that quartz crushing would prove remunerative. One correspondent writes :—"I enclose you a small sample of gold, produced with very primitive tools in about an hour and a-half. There is no doubt that quartz gold is plentiful in the hills adjoining the creeks, as you find small specks of quartz in the smaller pieces. I saw a sample of black sand sent down yesterday, containing small particles of gold. The only drawback at present is that the Taoutai of Ninghai, in whose district the diggings are, makes an attempt to frighten Europeans away by threatening to apprehend them. But his threat amounts to nothing, as there are more than fifteen parties out prospecting at the present moment. Some of these I believe to be practical men, but a few good Cornish miners would be invaluable."

The following are from the Supreme Court Gazette :—

There has been a rush of people to the little island of Pootoo for a change of air during the hot weather. This place was four or five years ago spoken of as a desirable spot for a sanitarium for Shanghai, but no definite steps have been taken to provide accommodation. From all accounts it seems to be a delightful spot, and if some proper place of abiding were provided would be all that is required. At present, complaints are made that the temples, the only places of shelter, are very uncomfortable and mar the enjoyment of a trip. The island is entirely under the control of the Bhuddist priests, to whom it has been given up as a site for monasteries ; and there does not seem to be any reason to believe that they would oppose arrangements being made for the accommodation of visitors, as they are not insensible to the value of Mexican dollars.

Mr. J. M. Canny, a British merchant, has been appointed Vice-Consul for France, at Chinkiang.

The gold fields at Chefoo have continued to be the chief topic of interest at this place, and the various questions in connection with them have been fully discussed in the local prints. An ably written letter over the signature of "Spectator" appeared in the columns of the N. C. Daily News, setting forth the chief arguments against the opening of the gold fields, and pointing out that by treaty there is no right conceded to foreigners to work mines ; that the value of the gold fields is as yet highly doubtful, and finally that it is questionable whether the advent of a number of miners to China would tend to benefit mercantile interests. The preponderance of opinion seems, however, to be greatly in favour of the other side of the question. Upon the point of treaty right there is no doubt ; but it has yet to be discovered to what extent the yield of the fields would be ; and respecting the advantage that would accrue to mercantile men in China there cannot be any question. These views are in substance sustained by the above-named paper ; while the Shanghai Recorder holds that the difficulties anticipated by the Chinese are likely to exist only if they refuse to legalise the working ; and further suggests that the present opportunity might be availed of to induce them to consent to opening the coal mines near Nankin. It is stated that a former resident in Shanghai has already proceeded to San Francisco with the object of forming a company to work on the fields, and that an exaggerated account of the matter having come to the ears of the native officials has caused them considerable anxiety.

The monthly meeting of the Municipal Council took place on the 4th August, when the report of the Works Committee was passed. The recent bad weather has not, fortunately, done much damage, but has caused some inconvenience by delaying works, and also some increase in the cost of the repairs required. Among the works delayed are those going on at the Pootung Cemetery and the Public Garden. Respecting the railings which have been placed round the latter, the Council mention that they are very inferior to those which were ordered out from home, a circumstance which the public heard with some satisfaction, as the railings in question are of the ugliest description—mere sharpened spikes. The Works Committee have taken into their consideration the question of taking charge of the roads outside the settlement, and have embodied their views in a memorandum which will be transmitted to the Consular body, who they hope will be able to obtain the co-operation of the Chinese authorities in the matter. The Council have received a despatch from H.B.M.'s Consul embodying the terms on which the public garden is to be granted ; which are, that no buildings shall be constructed thereon, and that the Chinese Government agree to give up all claim to ground-rent. To these conditions the Council have demurred, as they consider they embody a dangerous principle, and tacitly admit the right of the Chinese to all reclaimed land, which admission the Council conceive to be dangerous, as it might involve the principle that the Chinese Government was entitled to the whole of the Bund frontage; so that an unscrupulous official might put it up to auction, and the purchasers erect a row of Chinese houses between the Bund and the river.

The Shanghai News-letter says:—"The Chitang Coal Mines, about sixty miles from Peking, are to be opened to foreigners, and a road is to be made to the mines from Tientsin. Four new ports on the Yangtsze river will be opened for freight and passenger traffic in the river steamers. No foreign residents will, however, be allowed."

The Shanghai Chamber of Commerce has replied as follows to the important despatch addressed to the various Chambers by Inspector-General Hart, which we published at length in our last issue:—

Shanghai, August 6th, 1868.

Sir,—I am instructed by the committee to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch, dated July 20, addressed to the chairman, and to thank you in the name of the Chamber for the invitation which it conveys to the members of the mercantile community of this port to bring their wants and opinions, through the intervention of this Chamber, to the knowledge of the chief authorities of the Chinese Customs.

Representing on the one hand the Chinese Government, and having on the other hand the advantage of acquaintance with foreign modes of thought and action, the Inspectorate appears to the Chamber a natural channel of communication upon matters within the administration of the department under its control, and the Chamber can readily conceive that cases may arise in which there will be advantage in a means of coming to an understanding, with reference to details, without making the business under consideration the subject of diplomatic negotiation.

The Chamber is fully sensible of the benefits to be derived from such a preliminary discussion of measures connected with details of the Customs' administration as shall tend to prevent misconception by making plain the object of new regulations, and by making those regulations themselves such as will work harmoniously and with the least interference with freedom of trade, while securing the integrity of the Imperial Customs.

As you have very justly pointed out in the despatch now under acknowledgment, the officers of the Customs, although fully recognising an identity of interests, may, from viewing the question of the collection of duty from a position differing from that occupied by the trading members of the communities, often unwittingly obstruct the development of a trade which would, if unfettered rapidly increase the revenue. To the collection of duties and the complete organisation of the service of the Customs this Chamber would give every assistance, being assured that each of its members would wish the service to be well performed, and contribute without hesitation every just due. It is well that this should be understood, and that it is not from the duties or a wish to evade them, that discussion with the Customs has arisen, but from the details or the machinery of collection being at times ill adapted for the purpose.

It is, therefore, with much satisfaction that the members of this Chamber have received an expression of your willingness to consult their wishes by direct correspondence, of which they will gladly avail themselves, as circumstances may require.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Walter Pearson, Secretary.

HONG KONG.

From this port we have advices to the 21st August. On the 12th the English mail of July 3 arrived out. The local news is meagre in the extreme, the chief events of the fortnight being the half-yearly meeting of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, and two serious fires.

The half-yearly general meeting of shareholders in the above corporation took place on the 13th August, at the office of the bank, Wardley-house; Mr. George J. Helland, chairman of the board of directors, occupying the chair. Some difficulty was experienced in getting together a quorum, but after waiting half an hour the requisite number, forty, was found to be present. Conspicuous among the absentees the name of Dr. Murray, who has always heretofore taken a prominent part in these meetings, was mentioned. The Chairman after remarking that it was astonishing that so few came to hear so fine a report, read the half-yearly report, which certainly justifies his description, as the accounts show a net profit for the half-year of close upon 400,000 dols. Out of this the directors recommend a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, appropriating 125,000 dols. to the reserve fund (which will now be half a million) and carrying forward to new account 70,674 dols. A much larger dividend might safely have been distributed, but the prudence which dictated this decision will meet with universal commendation. The report was unanimously adopted amid great applause. The name of Mr. E. R. Belillos was added to the number of the board, and a cordial vote of thanks to the directors closed the proceedings.

Of the fires the Daily Press gives the following account:—

A fire broke out on Thursday evening, the 13th August, which at one time threatened to be as serious in its results as some of the worst conflagrations that have taken place in this colony; but, thanks to the very calm state of the weather, and the nature of the building where the fire originated, and those in the immediate vicinity, the flames were confined to a comparatively small area, where they, in fact, burnt out all there was to burn, and the fire was at an end. It is unfortunate that we are unable to say, "thanks to the fire brigade;" but so far as this very new institution is concerned, with the exception of its energetic chief, we were unable to see either the brigade or the evidences of that drill the Governor spoke of when alluding to the organisation of the brigade in the Legislative Council. As has usually been the case at fires in Hong Kong, confusion, disorder, and helplessness were the rule last night, and had it not been for the exertions of some of our citizens, who were on the ground long before a single engine made its appearance or a drop of water was obtained, combined with the fact, as already stated, that the fire stopped itself, there is no knowing where the flames would have taken their course, or where they would have ended; and more than likely our readers would have been without the usual morning issue, as the fire took place in rather uncomfortable proximity to our office.

The fire broke out about eleven P.M., in the building occupied by Messrs. Fawcett and Co., shipchandlers, corner of Wellington and Wyndham-streets. It is quite evident that before it made its appearance outside it had already made good headway inside the building, and was fairly kindled among some such inflammable articles as tar or pitch, for when discovered the whole of one corner of the building was in a blaze. The store had been closed at five o'clock, from which time until eleven of course no one had been inside; six undisturbed hours were consequently given for the development of the flames to the extent in which they first burst into sight. It was only a matter of a few minutes after the first appearance of the fire before the entire building occupied by Messrs. Fawcett and Co. was completely in flames, and once in the open air they rapidly sought more material for destruction. Spreading towards and in the old Oriental Hotel, time was scarcely given to a family occupying some rooms in the upper part of the building to escape with what clothes they had on before this building was also covered by the fire, which was now rapidly going westward through Wellington-street. The next building was Messrs. Dent and Co.'s stables, which being covered with a matshed, attracted the fire like a loadstone; but to this very fact is no doubt due the stoppage of further progress. The shed of course burnt like fire paper, and in a few moments fell inside, but there was then nothing left but the bare uninflammable stone walls of the stable, which immediately acted as a barrier to the further progress of the flames up Wellington-street, and so put an end to that part of the fire. Owing to the very calm state of the air, there was nothing to urge the fire up the hill, and consequently when it had burned up to the walls of the building occupied by Mr. Pearce, of Messrs. Fawcett and Co., as a private residence, it was again brought to a standstill from the want of material of a flammable nature to lead it further. Had there been any air stirring from the harbour the whole of Wyndham-street, including the Daily Press office, would no doubt the next morning have been in ruins, and it is difficult to say where it would have stopped. After the fire had been in progress nearly an hour one stream was obtained, with only the natural force of the water from the reservoir; but this was entirely useless, on account of there being but one length of hose, about twenty feet in length, and consequently not long enough to reach the needy buildings. The police engine was more successful in getting a stream on the buildings around and adjoining Dent's stables; but the water police have the credit of getting their machine first on the ground and first at work, although the same is kept at the harbour-master's, and had to be dragged up the hill with some difficulty. After the fire had well nigh burnt out, the P. and O. steam-engine was at work on Pedder's-wharf, with one stream on Wyndham-street, and Dent's engine had also been put in position, and was at work. Detachments of men from the Pearl and U. S. gunboat Undilla were on shore very shortly after the fire broke out, and were, as usual, most energetic in their efforts wherever they were called for. Some men from the garrison were also on the spot in good time, and rendered valuable service. Conspicuous among those who were early on the ground was a gentleman of the legal profession, and the partner of one of our leading American houses, through whose efforts alone a lot of Sikhs were put to work, and the lower part of Mr. Pearce's house saved. These fellows, in company with a large crowd of citizens, were idly looking on at the fire, until these gentlemen arrived and energetically took command, when everyone seemed to become impressed with the idea that something was to be done, and falling to work did good service under the barrister's direction. It is combined and systematised efforts of this kind that make a fire brigade and control a fire. The flames broke out again about four o'clock on Friday morning, but were soon got under by the police, who were on the ground during the whole night, and up to a late hour the next morning. The premises formerly occupied by Fawcett and Co. were completely destroyed. The upper part of the Oriental Hotel is more or less damaged both by fire and water, and the roof of Dent's stables, as already stated, was destroyed. The buildings opposite the hotel on the lower side of Wellington-street had a narrow escape, with only a slight scorching outside. The buildings and stock destroyed were, it is stated, fully insured.

The public hardly had time to cease thinking and talking of the fire of the 13th inst. before another conflagration of much the same order gave another proof of the helplessness and inefficiency of this colony for resisting or controlling the consuming element. The first alarm was given shortly after ten o'clock, and proceeded from a silkmercer's shop in Hillier-street, just out of Queen's-road, occupying the lower floor of the building, and shortly, before any assistance arrived on the ground, the whole building was in flames, and rapidly communicating to those on either hand and the opposite side of the street. Although there was little if any wind, the light air that was stirring assisted somewhat to give direction to the fire in its onward course towards the north-west. From the shop where it originated, the flames were soon making rapid progress towards Jervois-street, and by eleven o'clock both sides of Hillier-street were complete and helpless victims. The fire now took its way up Jervois-street, and for a time was entirely confined to the south side of the street, but the heat and flames soon began scorching at first, and finally igniting, the wood work of the buildings on the north side, and had it not been for the untiring and most valuable service of the steam-engine of the Hong Kong Fire Insurance, and the hand-engine of the 73rd Regiment, the fire would doubtless have gone right through to the waterside. More than once the flames burst out from these buildings both in front and rear, but as often did the steady and powerful stream from the steamer and the barrack engine fight it back. By twelve o'clock the main fire seemed to have marked out a course up the south side of Jervois-street, in which direction it was steadily advancing, and it was accordingly necessary to resort to that very popular "Hong Kong fire extinguisher," powder; one, two, three, and finally four houses in succession were blown up, thus making as it were a limit for the fire on the west at Cleverly-street. The flames now took a direction backward towards Queen's-road, and with the exception of a few houses fronting on Queen's-road, between Cleverly and Hillier-streets, the whole of that square bounded by the above streets, with Jervois-street on the north, was by three o'clock this morning a mass of charred ruins. The houses on the east side of Hillier-street were destroyed as far as Jervois-street, and eastward through Jervois-street the first three houses all burnt out, but the very praiseworthy and efficient services of Lieutenant Royse, of the Pearl, and a large body of his men promptly and effectually put a stop to the progress of the flames in this direction. A number of houses were blown down further on in Jervois-street, as at one time there were fears of the fire going eastward, but as already stated, the Pearl's men, under their gallant officer, put on a successful stopper.

LABUAN.

The Rev. W. B. Flower, who went out a short time ago as the new colonial chaplain for Labuan, died on the 26th July, after four days' illness, of congestion of the brain. His loss was very much felt, as he had become very popular in the community.

News had been received of the death of Rajah Sir James Brooke, and on the 20th July, as a mark of respect to the memory of the founder and first governor of the colony, the Government offices were closed, as also all places of business; the flags at the Government flagstaff, and of all the vessels in the harbour, were hoisted half-mast high; and at noon twenty-one minute guns were fired.

Governor Hennessy was to go over to Barram Point, eighty miles from Labuan, in H.M.S. Rifleman, to witness and take observations of the eclipse on the 18th July. The total eclipse would last there five minutes, and only one in Labuan. A tremendous cyclone had passed over Labuan on the 3rd July, which caused much damage—for instance, the newly-built fish-market and also the Government pier, extending over one hundred yards into the sea, were swept away and totally destroyed. No loss of life is reported. Quite a quantity of shipping had visited Labuan lately; among other vessels the steamers Royalist and Vine, H.M.S. Adventure and Leven, the Katherine, an American whaler, he Samson, and H.M.S. Rifleman, after a cruise of surveying.

SARAWAK.

Intelligence of the death of the Rajah, Sir James Brooke, reached Sarawak on the 25th July, and on the 1st instant Charles F. Brooke, Esq., the Tuan Mudah, was proclaimed successor. There was but little ceremony on the occasion. The Tuan Mudah made a speech in Malay, in the Court House, in which he said that he would follow the policy of the late Rajah, and uphold the religious liberties of his subjects, and he asked the chiefs there assembled whether they were satisfied with his accession. One of the Datus then answered for himself and colleagues that they were quite satisfied with him, and would support him to the best of their ability and power. The new Rajah was then proclaimed by the Malay crier, and the affair was over. A Dutch man-of-war had visited Sarawak on the 24th July for the first time for some years. She had afterwards proceeded on to Labuan, and when going down the river flew her flag half-mast high.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Advices from this port are to the 29th August. The Messageries Imperiales steamer Tigre and the P. and O. steamer Orissa arrived together, on the morning of the 18th August, with the home mails of the 17th July, and with telegrams to the 6th Aug. The Straits Times gives the following summary of news:—

So far as political affairs are concerned, the fortnight in Singapore may be marked with white chalk as a blank. His Excellency the Governor has been away up at Wah-wan viewing the eclipse, and there has of course been no meeting of the Legislative Council. There is somewhat serious news, however, from Penang. An extensive emigration of the Chinese sugar planters is taking place from Province Wellesley. Over two thousand have left for native territory. The local Government has made itself intensely unpopular, if we may believe the local press, with all classes of the inhabitants, Europeans and natives, and the emigration which, if not checked, will be a death blow to the prosperity of Penang, is in the main attributed by the local papers to the vexatious, meddling and uncourteous policy of the local Government in the treatment of the natives.

His Excellency the Governor returned from Wah-wan on the morning of the 26th August, having visited Tringanu and Pahang on the way. The King of Siam is said to have been munificent to his guests on the occasion of the eclipse. His Majesty is said to have built an observatory for the French Commission, in which they used a telescope fifteen feet long and forty-five inches wide.

Business still continues in a very depressed state, and the attention of the mercantile community has been chiefly occupied by creditors' meetings and discussions regarding the gunpowder case. Judgment was given in the case by the Chief Justice, Sir Benson Maxwell, on the 17th of August. By this judgment the owners, two in number, of the lost hulk Princess Royal are found virtually liable for all the powder that was stored on board. The decision took the consignees of the powder no less by surprise than it did the two owners, who are ruined thereby. A responsibility has been laid upon the latter's shoulders of which they had not the faintest conception, neither, confessedly, had the consignees nor owners.

The results of the judgment are somewhat peculiar, and deserve to be noticed. Only one firm prosecuted, and therefore only one firm have obtained judgment and execution. They therefore appropriate the whole estate of the two defendants, which, it is believed, will not satisfy the claim of this one firm. The defendants are dissatisfied with the judgment, but cannot appeal to the Privy Council without lodging in Court the amount of damages for which they have been cast. They are unable to do this, and not acknowledging the justice of the decision, they have refused to go into the Insolvent Court voluntarily, because they are advised this would bar appeal in any way. They prefer, therefore, to keep their rights intact by not doing anything whatever, but submitting under protest to legal spoliation. This conduct on their part precludes the other consignees, whose claims are of course equally good with that of the successful plaintiffs, from any chance of a dividend, which they would otherwise receive, supposing the defendants went voluntarily into the Insolvent Court. Whether this course of action on the part of the defendants is defensible is a matter of opinion in which people will differ according to the point of view it is judged from. It is unnecessary for us to say anything more on the subject in the meantime.

The P. and O. Company's steamers are keeping contract time, it must be confessed, with praiseworthy regularity. The new arrangement fixing the exact date of the departure of the homeward mails, which has been in force here under the new contract, has answered remarkably well, and it is hoped there will be no change made, as rumoured.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

Yokohama.—Cotton Yarn: A small business only had been done, and prices were weaker. Grey Shirtings: The same report. The Yedo merchants were still afraid to return to their homes, and business was dull. T-Cloths: Nothing doing. Quotations nominal. Velvets: Out of season; a small demand for Black, of which stocks were small. Other Cotton Goods were not inquired for. Woollens: In no demand, and quotations mostly nominal. Common Pilot Cloths were saleable at 0.90 to 0.95. Blankets were in demand, but stocks were not to hand. Metals: Re-export of lead was going on on Japanese Government account. Otherwise dull. The current quotations were:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16 to 24, $48 to 50 per picul; Nos. 28 to 32, $51 to 52.50; Nos. 38 to 42, $50 to 51. Cotton Piece Goods: Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.30 to 2.35 per piece; 8.4 lbs., $2.80 to 2.85; 8.6 to 8.8 lbs., $2.85 to 2.9 White Shirtings, 56 to 60 reed, $3.10 to 3.20; 64 to 66, $3.50 to 3.70; 68 to 72, $3.70 to 4.10; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.90 to 2; 6.8 to 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.30. Woollens and Worsteds: Camlets, S., $16 to 17 per piece; S.S., $15.50 to 16; S.S.S., $13 to 14; B.B., $16 to 17; B.B.B., $16 to 17; Cloth, Medium to Good Black, $1 to 2 per yard; inferior, $0.60 to 1. Metals: Iron Nail Rod, $3 to 3.50 per picul; Hoop, $4.25 to 4.50; Bars, $2.75 to 3.50; Pig, $1.30 to 1.50; Wire, $6.50 to 7; Lead, $7 to 7.75; Tin, $17 to 18.

Tientsin.—Native advices report an improvement in trade generally, and a good demand for Plain Cottons. Fancy Goods and Camlets were advancing in value and attracting rather more attention.

Shanghai.—Cottons: Demand for Plain Cottons continued for the Northern markets, and a large speculative business had been transacted. Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs.: Considerable sales had been effected at gradually hardening prices, commencing at Tls. 2.3.0, and the highest contract for the fortnight had been at Tls. 2.4.5. White Shirtings were in fair inquiry at improved prices. T-Cloths were scarcely in such good request, and former rates could not be readily obtained. Drills, both American and English, were wanted. Fancy Goods, generally, were commanding attention, and already there was a much firmer feeling shown by holders. Woollens: Spanish Stripes, Medium Cloth, and Habit Cloth were in moderate demand at firmer prices. Camlets were in better inquiry, at advancing quotations. Long Ells: Assorted colours in fair request; scarlet neglected. Lastings were somewhat firmer, and a few sales were reported. Metals: Nail Rod and Bar Iron were very dull of sale, and quotations showed a decline. Lead was in very limited inquiry, as also were Tin Plates, Pig Iron, and Steel. Coals: Supplies were plentiful, and rates generally had a downward tendency. Sales of English Coal had been made at Tls. 9.2.5 per ton from ships, and of Cardiffs at Tls. 11, in small lots, landed. Australia Coals were in slight request. Japans had been sold at Tls. 4.5.0 to 5.0.0 for inferior qualities. The arrivals had been: 3,031 tons from Great Britain, 728 tons from America, 4,116 tons from Australia, 1,850 tons from Japan, 2,100 tons from Formosa; in all, 11,825 tons, of which 4,070 tons were to order. The current quotations were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 38½ yds., 39 in., 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.8 to 2.1.2; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.3.7 to 2.4.5; 9 to 9¾ lbs., 2.9.0 to 3.3.5; White Shirtings, 40 yds. 36 in. 52 reed, Tls. 1.8.5 to 1.9.5; 56 reed, Tls. 2.0.5 to 2.1.0; 60 reed, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.2.5; 64 reed, Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.4.0; 66 to 72 reed, Tls. 2.4.5 to 2.8.0; American Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.4.0 to 4.5.0; American Jeans, 30 yds. 30 in. 10½ lbs., Tls. 3.6.0; American Sheetings, 40 yds. 40 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.3.0; English Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 12 to 15 lbs., Tls. 4.2.0 to 4.3.5; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., 24 yds. 32 in., Tls. 1.7.0 to 2.2.0; 8 to 8.4 lbs., 24 yds. 36 in., Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.5.0; Woollens and Worsteds—Union Spanish Stripes, —; Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.8 to 0.7.7 per yard; Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths, Tls. 0.9.0 to 1.2.0; Camlets, English, S., 56 yds., 31 in., 12 lbs., Tls. 13.0.0 to 18.5.0 per piece; S.S., Tls. 12.0.0 to 13.2.5; S.S.S., Tls. 9.0. to 10.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds. 31 in. 12 lbs., Tls. 6.6.0 to 6.8.0; Assorted, Tls. 7.0 to 7.3.0; Metals—Iron, Flat and Round, Tls. 2.4.0 to 2.4.5 per picul; Nail Rod, Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.4.5 per picul; Hoop, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.4.0 per picul; Pig, Tls. 15.0 to 16.5.0 per ton; Lead, Tls. 6.1.0 to 6.2.5 per picul; Tin Plates, Tls. 4.2.5 to 4.8.5 per box; Steel, Tls. 3.9.0 to 4.1.0 per tub; Quicksilver, 48.0 to 49.0 per picul.

Hankow.—There had been a general demand at higher prices for most descriptions of manufactured goods, but business had been much restricted by the firmness of holders. Grey Shirtings showed an advance, 8¼ lbs. being quoted Tls. 2.3.2 to 2.3.6, 7 lbs. Tls. 2.0.5 to 2.1.0. White Shirtings: Low counts in rather better inquiry, 56 to 60 reed, Tls. 2.0.5 to 2.2.0. T-Cloths 6 lbs. and 7 lbs., in better request at Tls. 1.6.0 to 1.9.0 and Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.3.0; 8 lbs., 36 in., dull of sale. Drills in good demand: American, Tls. 4.4.0 to 4.5.0; English, Tls. 4.0.0 to 4.4.0. Fancy Cottons: Dyed goods in more general inquiry. White descriptions neglected. Woollens and Worsteds: Camlets, a fair business transacted at Tls. 12.5.0 to 13.3.5 for SS. Lastings: Sales very trivial. Long Ells: Assorted colours, Tls. 7.1.0 to 7.2.0 for HH, and asked for; scarlet, Tls. 6.9.0 dull of sale. Spanish Stripes and Medium Cloth had been sold at rather better prices. Figured Orleans: Tls. 3.2.0 to 3.9.0 transactions unimportant.

Hong Kong.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular contains the following remarks:—Cotton Yarn: The only transaction has been the purchase of 50 bales Nos. 16 and 24 by a foreign house. There is no enquiry from natives, but advices of some improvement at Chinchew have induced holders to raise their asking prices for Nos. 16 and 24, $2.50 per bale. Higher numbers are unchanged in value. Piece Goods: Consequent upon advices from the north, a good demand arose for Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths for shipment thither, but transactions were checked by the increased firmness of holders. Slight concessions on their part, owing partly to the arrival of an assorted cargo from London, and partly to the unwillingness of buyers to accede to their demands, led to moderate settlements, and the market has again become firmer, northern advices continuing favourable. Drills are still enquired for, and have advanced fully ten cents per piece. English are in small supply, and the market is quite bare of Dutch, while stocks of American have been increased by the arrival of the N. B. Palmer with 765 bales. Holders are very firm, and a large portion of the Palmer's cargo will probably be shipped to Shanghai by the importers. Woollens: Scarlet Long Ells are lower by nearly the advance last reported, while assorted have further improved, being in comparatively small supply. Spanish Stripes are entirely neglected, and the best qualities of assorted are, nominally, a trifle lower. Blankets have declined. Lastings and English Camlets are unchanged in value, but are not in request. Dutch Camlets are $1 dearer. Metals: Nail Rod and Bar Iron are only saleable on easier terms. Hoop is steady, though not in demand. Steel finds buyers to some extent at former rates. Common Lead has declined 30 cents per picul, but better qualities are held at figures about 10 cents under last mail's quotations. Malacca Tin is firm, but Straits does not command former values. Tin Plates are weak. Quicksilver tends upwards. Coal: The arrivals have been 1,796 tons Welsh (1,000 to consumers), 1,412 tons English (668 to consumers), 967 tons Sydney to consumers, and 1,530 tons Anthracite. Sales have been 700 tons Welsh at $12.50, and 680 do. at $12.25. 734 tons English have gone on to Yokohama failing to find market at this. Sydney is being offered "to arrive" at low figures, without finding buyers. Anthracite is not wanted.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

Yokohama.—A large business had been done, and settlements, including all grades, amounted to fully 3,000 piculs; these settlements had been made at last quotations, but large arrivals being expected, and dealers showing more willingness to sell, prices were a little easier at the close for the lower grades. During the first part of the fortnight supplies came in freely, but later scarcely any arrivals were reported; stocks were increased, the bulk being of common sorts. The Alexandra, reported as loading, had been taken off the berth; the Italy sailed on the 6th August with 260,474 lbs. Quotations were:—Common, $22 to 23 per picul; Good Common, $24 to 25; Medium, $25 to 26; Good Medium, $27 to 29; Fine, $30 to 35; Finest and Choice, nominal.

Shanghai.—Black: Natives had shown much desire to realise, and had been met by buyers at prices showing a decline of from one to two taels per picul on most descriptions. Supplies had been liberal, and notwithstanding the large purchases the stock on offer was important. The range of prices were quite over that of last year, more especially on common sorts of Tea, and such parcels as were worth Tls. 20 were to be purchased in August last at Tls. 17. The market closed very quiet, consequent on the unfavourable nature of telegraphic advices from London, and the very large export from every port in China. Settlements for the fortnight, 24,700 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 13,600 chests; stock, 92 chops, or 36,500 packages. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 3¼d. per tael, and freight at £4 per ton:—Hohow, common to fair, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 8d.; Oonam, common to good, 1s. 2¾d. to 1s. 8d.; Ningchow, common to fine, 1s. 4d. to 1s. 9¼d.; Oopack, common to good, 1s. 3½d. to 1s. 8d. per lb. Green: Some business had been transacted in Pingsuey kinds at prices showing a small reduction. A chop of Taiping Tea had been purchased at Tls. 34 per picul, and one chop of Fychow at Tls. 35½. A few chops of the new Teenkai Teas had arrived, for which very high prices were demanded. Quotations were:—Pingsuey, Tls. 31¼ to 40¾; Fychow, Tls. 35½; Shanghai packed, Tls. 35¼ to 38; Taiping, Tls. 34. Settlements for the fortnight, 7,300 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,550 half-chests; stock, 26 chops, or 18,344 half-chests. Quotations, exchange, &c., as above, were as follows:—Gunpowder, 1s. 6d. to 3s. 10d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 8d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 2s. 10d.; Twankay, 10d. to 1s. 3d. per lb.

Hankow.—During the fortnight the amount of business transacted had not been large, and owing to the reports of a profitable out-turn of a few chops realised on the Shanghai market, natives had shipped their produce in large quantities to that place for sale. Prices of the Teas purchased showed little change. Quotations were: Oopacks, fair to medium, Tls. 17.5 to 21.5, equal to 1s. 4¼d. to 1s. 7d. per lb.; Oonams, fair, Tls. 15.2.5 to 19.5, equal to 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5¾d. per lb. Exports of Tea from 1st January, to 7th August, 1868, 33,680,325 lbs.; 1st June to 7th August, 1868, 33,385,810 lbs.

Kiukiang.—Settlements of Blacks had been on a very limited scale. Teas were coming forward very slowly, and unless prices show some improvement it was highly probable that considerable quantities of leaf would remain up-country unmade. No new Greens were to hand, but first parcels were confidently looked for in a week from date. Teamen stated that laying down cost would be lower than was anticipated, owing to a fall in the price of leaf.

Foochow.—Owing to the non-arrival of the mail steamer at Hong Kong, dates from this port are only up to the 8th August. Settlements of tea up to that date amounted to about 24,800 chests Congou, 2,300 chests Souchong, 8,100 boxes Scented Tea, and 20,000 half-chests Ooloong, the feature of the interval being the settlement of the latter, through an English house, by a buyer for America. Of these purchases but about 3,500 half-chests were publicly reported, and prices of the remainder had not transpired. The 3,500 packages were taken at Tls. 24.8 to 25.8 obtained for good cargo, Tls. 27.8 obtained for superior, and Tls. 29.3 for fine, or, quality considered, an advance of Tls. 2 on last season's opening prices. The Teas (3,500) were desirable first crop goods, though some of them were not regular true Oolongs, but from another district. Some two hundred tons had been sent to Hong Kong for shipment to New York by steamer via San Francisco. Stock amounted to about 72,000 half-chests. Holders of Congous were anxious to realise without delay, and prices of all grades were lower, many parcels being obtainable at really cheap rates. Third crop Teas were coming in, but had not arrived in sufficient quantity to warrant any opinion as to general quality. The musters of those to hand represented fairly well made Teas, strong in the cup. Stock was estimated at 42,000 chests.

Amoy.—Little had been done in Congou, and prices had declined about half-a-dollar to a dollar per picul. Third crop teas were arriving freely, and were about on a par with those of last season in quality. A string of about 4,000 half-chests of Oolongs, averaging good cargo, had been settled at $32 to $34 short, many of the chops being very dusty, though within the 25 per cent. limit. This same string last season only realised $23.75, and, taking the greater freedom from dust into account, prices show an advance of fully $4 to $5 on those of last year. Fine and finest Ningyongs are held for exorbitant figures.

Canton.—The market for Country Congous was opened on the 17th August, by the purchase of three chops at Tls. 27, and one at Tls. 30.5; the former being Tls. 2 to 3 over last season's opening prices, while the latter purchase was comparatively cheap. Other chops were being offered for, and further settlements would probably be made. In other descriptions little had been done, the heavy export rendering buyers indisposed to purchase any but the most desirable parcels, and then only at a reduction of Tls. 2 to 3. The fourth crop was expected to arrive daily, and teamen reported it to be of good quality.

SILK.

Yokohama.—A fair amount of business had been transacted during the fortnight at rates firm at last quotations, excepting an occasional weakness in medium and inferior parcels. Settlements were estimated at 550 bales, and as the supplies had not exceeded this figure, and had been generally taken on arrival, the stock left was nominal. Silk-worms' Eggs: Had come down very freely, although there had been some reduction on the previous heavy figures. Total supplies were about 1,120,000, and total settlements were estimated at 800,000 cards. Best Oshu and Sinshu, though not so scarce, commanded the extreme rates before quoted; and although some weakness might have been noted in good and best ordinary sorts during the early part of the fortnight, at the close they obtained slightly higher rates than those of last mail. Very best (green) may be quoted at $4 to $5; good and best ordinary (green) at $2¼ to $3¾; of white few had appeared. Quotations for Silk were nominal except for the following:—Mybash, Sinchu, &c., Nos. 1, 2, and 3, 35s. 2d to 38s. 1d.; Nos. 2, 3, and 4, 31s. 5d. to 33s. 6d.; Medium Coshu, 30s. 2d to 31s. 10d.; laid down in London at exchange, 4s. 10⅜d.

Shanghai.—Mr. Holdsworth's Circular, dated 18th August, is as follows:—The latest advices received from England since the date of my last Silk Circular of the 30th July are by letters to the 19th June, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 21st July. During the past fortnight only a moderate business has been transacted in this market, and settlements are estimated at about 2,500 bales, making total to date from 1st June 21,500 bales, against 11,700 bales to same date last year! Of the above transactions fully 500 bales are going forward on native account. Prices paid early in the fortnight showed a slight advance over last mail's quotations; subsequently, however, consequent upon the enhanced rate of exchange, coupled with the large unsold stock, which was daily being added to, rates declined for all market and ordinary Silk, but for true Chops Tsatlees an advance of Tls. 15 per picul was established. "Donkey" and "Yarkee" Silks having been sold at Tls. 570 to 572½, and last mail they were settled at Tls. 555 per picul. The arrivals from the interior having come forward freely, the unsold stock has increased to fully 7,500 bales, the greater proportion consisting of lower grades. From Ningpo 320 bales, and from Hankow 140 have been received, and 464 bales were brought over from Japan by the last mail steamer. As the mail closes, Chinamen are anxious to realise their stocks, and are willing to accept a further decline in prices for their Silks. The current quotations (all charges paid to England at exchange 6s. 4d. per tael) were as follows:—Tsatlee, Chop No. 1, none; ditto 2, 32s. 6d. to 33s. 4d. per lb.; ditto 3, 30s. 11d. to 32s. 3d.; ditto 3½, 28s. 9d. to 30s. 7d.; ordinary 3¼ and Best Chop 4, 26s. 7d. to 28s. 5d.; Red Peacock and ordinary 4, 24s. 5d. to 26s. 7d.; ditto 5 and common, 20s. 2d. to 23s. 4d.; Karshing Taysaam, Chop No. 1, 26s. to 27s. 1d.; ditto 2, 23s. 11d. to 25s. 6d.; ditto 3, 21s. 9d. to 23s. 1d.; ditto 4, 5, and common, 18s. 6d. to 20s. 8d.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 1, 22s. 3d. to 22s. 10d.; ditto 2, 21s. 3d. to 21s. 9d.; ditto 3, 20s. 2d. to 20s. 8d.; ditto 4 and common, 18s. to 19s. 7d.; Yuenfa and Hainings, No. 1, 27s. 8d. to 28s. 9d.; ditto 2, 25s. 9d. to 26s. 10d.; ditto 3, 22s. 10d. to 24s. 5d.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

Of course it is too soon, as yet, to say anything of the nature of Mr. Burlinghame's proposals to the English Cabinet, or the probable manner of their reception. Neither is there anything of moment to report as to the movements of the Envoys. It is not the fashion here, as in the United States, for the press to send emissaries to interrogate politicians, to "pump" or entrap them into some utterance that, with a little embellishment, will afford matter for a sensation leader. We do not even know what Mr. Burlinghame thinks of the Grosvenor Hotel, or whether the cuisine of that establishment finds favour in the eyes of the "Associate Ministers." Personally, the new arrivals seem to have created very little sensation indeed; but the political objects of their mission still afford a theme for discussion in the daily papers, some of whose articles we reprint in another column.

The Daily News, it will be seen, is rather favourable than otherwise to the mission, and urges that Mr. Burlinghame is entitled to a courteous reception in this country; and, as far as mere courtesy is concerned, he may be quite sure of receiving it. The writer is dissatisfied with the unfavourable tone of the comments that have already appeared, and says—What English interest in China it is proposed to subserve by snubbing in advance the most important deputation from China that has ever visited this country? We may be very certain that the Emperor and people of China regard the sending out of this commission as an epoch in the history of their country, and whatever may be their propositions, or the answer of our Government thereto, there is every reason why they should be received without suspicion, and entertained with cordiality. The Standard, on the other hand, asks—What important matter of international relationship can there be between China and England to justify Mr. Burlinghame's embassy? The present state of our relations with China are of the simplest character. The Chinese Government have made several treaties with us, none of which they have faithfully observed. We are their creditors in respect of numerous services performed by us in their behalf, and of solemn obligations by them systematically neglected. They have agreed to certain terms of amity and intercourse which they have deliberately violated. On our side we have carried forbearance and generosity to the utmost limits. There is only one intelligible object (the Standard says) in any Chinese mission to England, and that is to explain and to excuse the non-fulfilment of the obligations entered into by China towards England. Is this what Mr. Burlinghame has come about? If so, he may calculate upon a fair and patient hearing, and upon all the honour due to such an ambassador. All we have to take care of is that we are not being imposed upon by a very common and familiar trick of Chinese diplomacy—that we are dealing with real representatives of China, and not with any foreign mediators between us and the Chinese. The Daily Telegraph evidently neither knows nor cares much about the matter, so turns it over to the gentleman who does the would-be humorous leaders for that remarkable paper, and the natural result is something over a column of hopelessly imbecile trash, which we will not inflict on our readers.

THE CHINESE GUNBOATS.

In another column we give an abstract of a speech made at Halifax by that notable navy reformer, Mr. Stansfeld. Among the numerous charges therein brought against Sir John Pakington, one of the principal ones is founded on his having expended half-a-million or so of public money on the construction of gun-boats, some of which were specially intended for service in China waters; and Mr. Stansfeld is especially bitter on the worthlessness of "wooden unarmoured vessels," and "wretched gunboats of 700 tons, or less," quite ridiculing the idea of their being of the slightest use in protecting our commerce on the coast of China. Here we have another instance of the miserable ignorance of some of those who lay claim to a leading position in their party, on all matters that require some little effort of research to gain any knowledge of. On questions relating strictly to home affairs they can talk fluently, and perhaps correctly, enough; but the moment they have to deal with matters connected with China, or a distant colony, no absurdities are too wild for them to utter. As Mr. Stansfeld considers wooden unarmoured gunboats of less than 700 tons worthless to protect our merchant vessels against pirates, we should like to know what course he would adopt. Would he abolish the protecting force altogether, and let our commerce take care of itself, or would he send out ironclad frigates of 5,000 tons, or thereabouts, to chase pirate junks among the bays, channels, and inlets of the rocky coast of Southern China? The latter alternative seems almost too insane even for Mr. Stansfeld; so we must presume that when the Liberals come into power he will endeavour to carry out the plan promulgated last year by himself and his worthy ally, Mr. Childers, of economising the public money by withdrawing all protection from that branch of commerce which is one of the most productive sources of our revenue. "Retrenchment" always has been, and we suppose always will be, the hustings-cry of the Radicals; but this is retrenchment running mad.

PROGRESS OF TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION.

The Malta and Alexandria Telegraph expedition is progressing favourably. A recent telegram states that the cable is being paid out at the rate of five miles an hour; 550 miles had already been accomplished, and it was expected that the expedition would reach Alexandria to-day. Thus one important link in the much-needed Red Sea route to the East will be accomplished. The Russian screw corvette Lion, which was engaged some time ago in making soundings in the Black Sea, with a view to find a proper route for the submarine cable forming a portion of the Indo-European telegraph scheme, has completed her survey. In the north-eastern part of the sea an apparently safe and practicable route has been surveyed. The possibility of submerging a cable near the coast has, we believe, been demonstrated. The scheme projected of uniting America and Russia by telegraph has been abandoned. The telegraphic communication with India via the Persian Gulf and Turkish lines has been lately maintained with considerable regularity, the average time occupied in the transmission of a message being about a day and a half. This efficient condition of the lines will doubtless be rendered still more satisfactory by the duplication of the sections of the submarine system through the Persian Gulf.

THE AUSTRIAN EXPEDITION TO THE FAR EAST.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT).

The arrangements for the Expedition to the Far East are now completed, and the vessels will sail on the 6th of October. The expedition is divided into three sections:—1. The scientific and mercantile-political, at the head of which is the Hof-Rath, Dr. Carl von Scherzer, under whom are placed the reporters, who are to send in to him the result of their observations and remarks in writing; 2. The diplomatic, at the head of which is the Councillor of Legation, Baron von Herbert: the office of secretary to the Legation is given to Baron Frautenberg, and the Attachés of the Embassy are Baron Ransonnet and Herr Ghiza von Bernat; and 3. The drawing up of the treaties and the establishment of consulates-general at Hong Kong and Yedo. The chief direction of this section is confided to Consul General Heinrich von Calice, supported by Herr Rudolph Schlick and Ladislaus Hengelmuller von Hengiroar, as Chancellors of the Consulates; all these gentlemen are to be victualled on board for one half the amount of their pay for dietary, which is fixed as follows: the Hof-Rath and the Consul-General, 20fl. per diem, the Councillor of Legation 16fl., the Secretaries of Legation 13fl., and the Attachés of the Embassy and Chancellors of the Consulates-General each 10fl., all in silver money. For their outfit they also receive, according to their rank, sums of 1,000, 800, and 600 silver florins respectively.

Continental Intelligence.

HAMBURG, Sept. 28.

This city has been thrown into a state of great excitement by a visit from the King of Prussia, who, after having completed his tour of inspection in his newly-acquired provinces of Schleswig and Holstein, arrived on Saturday night, by a special train from the north, at our sister town of Altona, where he was received by the local, civil, and military authorities, and took up his headquarters at the residence of the Military Commandant of the Garrison, General von Gerstein, on the Palmaille. After being awakened the next morning by the band of the 11th Regiment of Infantry, his Majesty attended Divine service at the Altona parochial church, where the sermon was preached by the Bishop of the diocese; after which the local authorities and a deputation of the Hamburg Senate were presented to him,—the latter to congratulate him on his arrival, and to invite him to pay a visit to this city, where he has never been before, at all events not since he sat on the throne of his ancestors. After a luncheon at the Town-hall he proceeded to view the celebrated gardens belonging to Mr. Booth, at Flottbeck, and on his return embarked on board the Hamburg and American Steam Company's splendid new steamer Hammonia, just returned from her last trip to New York, for an excursion down the Elbe, to view the picturesque banks of the river as far as Blankenese. On the return trip he dined on board, a sumptuous banquet having been provided for him by the directors of the company, all of whom were in attendance, together with a selection of the first merchants of this city. In the evening he came to Hamburg, and honoured Mr. Senator Hayn with his presence at a soirée, where the elite of the Hamburg aristocracy were assembled, and where he witnessed the brilliant illumination of the city and a grand discharge of fireworks,—a species of optical enjoyment to which his Majesty is known to be very partial. About midnight he returned to Altona.

Yesterday the King paid another visit to this city, first going to the Exchange, then to the harbour and new docks, and after inspecting the beautiful new church of St. Nicholas, drove out to the Zoological Gardens, with all of which he expressed himself highly pleased. He was everywhere received with the respect due to his exalted position and the enthusiastic cheers that spontaneously burst forth from the assembled multitudes prove that the inhabitants have not forgotten the material assistance they received from Prussia after the great fire of 1842, by which a third part of this city was destroyed; for besides the munificent sum of 50,000 Louis d'ors, the King sent a number of tents, blankets, a company of Pioneers to assist in extinguishing the fire, together with a large quantity of provisions, which were all most acceptable presents and gratefully received. Indeed, the ovation paid to the King on the present occasion is in striking contrast to his reception at Altona from his own subjects; for if all accounts are true he was hissed there on his arrival on Saturday night, whilst empty streets and dark windows, with a total absence of flags and garlands, tell their own story sufficiently, and show that the Holsteiners are by no means pleased with their forced incorporation with Prussia. In the evening the King gave a dinner party at Altona, and then returned to Berlin by special train.

COMMERCIAL.

The rice market is firm, but the transactions since last mail have only been few. Cassia lignea is in great demand at rising prices, 13½ sch. bco. per lb. having been paid, and no more to be had now at that figure.

There is also much inquiry for pepper at full rates; 3⅛ sch. bco. has been paid for Singapore. A fair amount of business has been done in teas, chiefly in black, of middle and inferior low priced qualities, for which stiff prices are paid. After a long period of stagnation, Spelter has become animated and higher prices are willingly given. The sales of this week comprise 4,000 centners, afloat for delivery, on arrival at 13 mks. 6 sch., 1,000 centners, favourite marks, afloat, at 13.8, and 500 do. for September and October delivery at 13.9, whilst the price demanded for loco and spring delivery is 13.10.

SHIPPING AT BREMEN.

ARRIVED.—Sawley Chindo, from Rangoon; Pudsey Dawson, from Akyab; Ernst, from Bangkok.

SAILED.—Adele, to Rangoon.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, September 28.

Shall we have peace or war? is still the universal inquiry of the day. The greater part of Europe is engrossed by this speculation, but it seems that pacific ideas now predominate in France and Prussia. The warlike rumours have occasioned a stagnation in commercial transactions, the more so, because the German press continued to produce very hostile articles against Holland, on account of the negotiations respecting the revision of the Shipping treaty on the Rhine having been interrupted, without giving a definite result. The National, Opposition paper, did all it could by false representations to strengthen the opposition against the Liberal Cabinet. Public opinion being much agitated, attention was fixed with more than usual earnestness upon the speech with which the Session of the States General was opened, and the impression was most favourable, when H.M. the King, who arrived some days ago from his seat Het Loo, at the Hague, stated that our relations with foreign countries were as favourable as could be wished. This clause is undoubtedly the most important, or rather, the only one of importance, of the speech. For the remainder, there is mention made of several Bills which in the forthcoming Session will be laid before the Chamber, and of which the most important are those proposing the abolition of the tithes, and bringing forward the abrogation of the stamp duty, which now presses so heavily upon the newspapers. Further, it is stated that the harvest has been most abundant, but the fishing had not given a favourable result, and lastly, it was confirmed that the rinderpest had disappeared. Our financial condition is satisfactory, so that no extraordinary measures will be necessary to cover the expenditure.

With regard to the solution of the India question, the speech does not contain a single word. It is only stated that the condition of our extended transatlantic dominion cannot be described in so short a statement. An ample report, however, is promised. When the budgets for India (1869) are passed, it is probable that the Bills respecting the sugar cultivation and the waste grounds in India will be introduced.

The rumours respecting the resignation of the Minister of the Colonial Department have totally ceased; notwithstanding it seems quite certain that the Cabinet has negotiated with Mr. Van Rees, as successor to Mr. de Waal, and it is said that this is the reason for so few statements being made about India in the Royal speech.

The tin traders complain that the official returns of the stock do not agree with the truth, so that a much greater quantity is in stock in Banca than was known here. Our traders having addressed themselves to the Ministers, the Staats Courant has given some explanations by which it was confirmed that, although there is more tin in stock than the returns showed, the Minister is of opinion that the result will not exercise a bad influence upon the market, because some time must elapse before this quantity can arrive here. I need not say that our merchants are of quite a contrary opinion.

The military camp at Milligen has been broken up; but our volunteers are now assembled in the camp of Waalsdorp.

Her Majesty the Queen has returned from Ems, and it is said that she will shortly pay a visit to England.

I regret to state that the ex-Governor of the Moluccas, M. de Serrière, died some days ago at the Hague, at the age of eighty-two years.

A corps of 150 soldiers will leave during the month by the Gerard Pieter Servatius, to join the East India army.

I hear from a source which admits of no doubt, that the Rotterdam Bank has suffered some losses from certain operations in Europe, that will have a disadvantageous effect upon the next dividend. The solvency of the bank, however, is in no degree affected, and measures are already adopted which will prevent the recurrence of similar losses. Rumours are afloat of an impending change in the personnel of the management, but they are not of a reliable nature.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—In waiting for the auction of the Dutch Trading Company, which will be held on the 23rd inst., when 122,162 b. Java and Padang are to be offered, the market has remained very inactive, and only 1,000 b. Java, ex Herman de Ruyter, good ordinary white, were sold at 32½c.

RAW SUGAR.—The market has been very active, notwithstanding the forthcoming auction of the Trading Company on the 24th inst. The following transactions have taken place:—544 mats Sourabaya, No. 12, ex Holland, at 31¾f.; 384 do., Samarang, No. 15, at 32¼f.. ex Concurrent; 922 do., Sourabaya, No. 15, ex Vrede, at 32½f.; 214 do., Batavia, No. 8¾, at 28f.; 1,022 mats Sourabaya, ex Holland, No. 15½, at 32¼f.; 400 do. Samarang, No. 12½, ex Doelwyk, at 30¾f.; 992 do. Sourabaya, No. 16½, ex Geesina Maria, at 33¼f.; 627 do. Cheribon, No. 12¾, at 32f.; 125 do. Japara, No. 12, at 31f.; 480 do. Sourabaya, No. 9, ex Holland, at 28½f.; 594 do. mats Batavia, No. 12½, floating per Jane Kilgour, at 31¼f.; 118 do. Sourabaya, No. 11, floating, at 30¼f.; 414 do., No. 16½, at 33¼f. According to official returns, the stock of raw sugar was, on the 15th September, 50,852,019 kil.

RICE.—The market is very dull, only 2,270 b. Java, ex Koophandel, changed hands at 8¼f.

SPICES.—There is some demand for fine quality. For nutmegs of the late auction 75c. was paid, whilst mace was sold at 2c. advance.

TEA.—Of the 546/4 ch. Java, which were bought in at the last auction, about 300 ch. have been sold at 95c. An auction is announced on the 24th, when for private account will be offered 227/4 and 82/12 ch. Java, and 17/4 and 74/12 ch. China. Prices are generally well maintained.

TOBACCO.—On the 15th inst. 8,292b. Java were offered in public auction. There was only a demand for fine quality, and those sorts which were fit for the English market. The bulk, however, was sold at very low prices, and under the valuation. The stock of inferior quality in second hands is very large, whilst very important parcels are floating, so that lower prices are anticipated. On the 7th October 7,230 b. Java, of different marks will be offered for sale. Manila: A very great quantity of the cargoes which were sold in London some days ago were imported here, so that the stock has largely increased.

MANILA SEGARS.—On the 14th inst. an auction was held, at which 125,000 Habana were offered, of which only 4 lots were sold from 36f. to 40¼f. 230,000 Manila 2a. Habanos, 1866, more or less damaged, were partially sold at 17¾f. to 18f. 12,000 2a Habanos, 1866 and 1867, were bought in at 25f. There is a good demand for fine quality.

RATTANS.—The Trading Company has announced an auction, at which 92,300 b. will be offered. In waiting for this auction the transactions have been of little importance; only 16 pic., ex Almelo, and 56 pic., ex Boanerges, were sold.

HIDES.—The Trading Company sold in auction 8,201 Montevideo at 31c. to 35c., and 1807 do. (Ox), at 31c. to 34½c. The private transactions include 106 Buffalo, ex Jacoba, at 34½c.; 323 E.I., ex Grootmeester Nationaal, at prices that did not transpire.

BANCA TIN.—The market has been very animated. The current prices are as follows: 800 slabs Banca at 52¾f., 500 do. at 53f., 1,000 do. at 53½f., 3,500 do. at 53½f., 300 do at 53f., 600 do. at 53½f., 200 do. at 54f., 2,400 slabs Billiton, floating, at 52f. to 52½f.

Indigo.—The market was very animated, and several small parcels, together about 100 chests, were sold at very firm prices. On the 23rd and 29 Sept., and the 1st October, 219 ch. are announced to be offered in auction.

Drugs.—The market is very dull and inanimated. Camphor unaltered. Cassia Vera firm; on the 24th, 585 b., imported from Padang, will be offered in auction.

Insurance Premiums.—Merchandise packed in ordinary way: for Dutch India, 2¼ to 2½ per cent.; for China, 3 to 3¾ per cent.; for Japan, 3½ to 4¼ per cent.; when packed in tin ½ per cent. less. Manufactures in bales for India, 3½ per cent.; packed in oilcloth for India, 3 per cent.; for China, 3¼ to 4 per cent.; for Japan, 3¾ to 4¼ per cent.; in wooden chests for India, 3 per cent.; in tin for Java, 2 per cent.; for China, 3¼ per cent.; for Japan, 3¾ per cent.

Produce from India.—Sugar, 2½ to 3 per cent.; indigo, arrack, 2½ per cent.; tin, 2 per cent.; rice, white and table, 5 per cent.; cargo, 4 per cent.; other produces, 3 per cent.

Money Market.—At the Stock Exchange the business is of a very limited character; but prices are well supported. Dutch Two-and-a Half Per Cents., 55½; Three Per Cents., 64½; Four Per Cents., 86½; Trading Company, 125¾; Rotterdam Bank, 80¼ to 82. There is no alteration in the discount market.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

Neeb and family, D. van der Horst, Misses C. A. and J. Z. Duedman, Mrs. J. Major and family, Mrs. C. Scholte and family.

COLONIAL GARRISONS.

The Examiner has an article on "English Troops in the Tropics," in which, after some comments on the absurdity of maintaining a force of 4,000 men, at a cost of £300,000 a-year in the "bankrupt and pestilential" West India Islands, we find the following passages regarding our military establishments in the East:—

"Hong Kong, the Mauritius, Ceylon, and the Straits Settlements absorb nearly 8,000 European troops, and the two former places absorb them in a fatal sense, the details of which are too fresh within the recollection of our readers to require recapitulation. The cost of the garrison of Hong Kong is quoted at £234,000, towards which the local community contributes £20,000; that of the Mauritius £132,700, the colony paying £45,000. Ceylon, however, pays about £14,000 more than the troops cost, and, as it would appear from the evidence taken before the Select Committee on the Colonial Garrisons last year, that it is rather for Imperial than local purposes that European troops are maintained in that Island, the equity of so heavily taxing these colonists is not apparent. The Straits Settlements contribute £59,000 towards an expenditure of £132,000, and the total paid out of English pockets for garrisons in the tropics, exclusive of course of India, is £327,000 a-year; but this sum does not include the cost of transport from and to England, either for reliefs or invalids, and as the average price of a man's passage is over £20, the public may form their own estimate of what it costs them to play at soldiers in our unhealthy colonies. It is a significant fact, that the cost of bringing a regiment home is very much less than of taking it out, although the freight for each individual is much higher in the latter case; the cause of this saving will be found under the rank overgrowth which covers the shallow graves of thousands upon thousands of English soldiers who left their country never to return to it.

"The plain facts, supported by figures which we have presented to our readers, point the moral of our tale more strongly than any language which we could employ. It will be for the country to determine whether we should continue to expend the lives of Englishmen, and millions of money wrung from English industry, for a purpose so inadequate. We do not advocate weakening our military institutions; we would, on the contrary, have such a number of troops as it may be considered necessary to maintain, as complete in all respects as they can possibly be made. But our colonial garrisons are a source of weakness rather than of strength, and in cutting them off we should effect a very large diminution of expenditure without the least detriment to the real efficiency of the army."

THE ENGLISH PRESS ON THE CHINESE MISSION.

(STANDARD.)

The Chinese Ambassadors have arrived. That event, which should have stirred the very depths of our British curiosity, has somehow or other failed to excite any particular enthusiasm. Whether it is that our diplomatic relations with the Celestial Empire have ceased to be of an interesting character—whether we have had a surfeit of sensations of this sort, or, from some cause less readily explicable, we do not appear to be greatly moved by the news of the Chinese Plenipotentiaries' arrival. Mr. Burlinghame, with his polyglot train, have landed on our shores with scarcely more eclat than would be commanded by a new troupe of Japanese jugglers. There is an evident indifference to the new arrivals, hardly to be explained by the fact that they possess no accomplishments in legerdemain, that they pretend to no skill in butterflies, and would probably be beaten in top-spinning by the youngest member of the late Lyceum company.

In truth, we must regard this embassy as one of a most enigmatical character. We know the Chinese to be great adepts in the art of polite mystification. We have had some experience of that peculiar mixture of naive childishness and profound craft which characterises their diplomacy, and we confess to be fairly puzzled by this latest Chinese device. What, in the name of the great archdragon, are these ambassadors? What do they represent, and what is their business here? Never was there so paradoxical an embassy in the annals of diplomacy. In the first place, the plenipotentiary in chief is not a Chinaman, but a full blood Yankee, who only the other day held a position precisely the inverse of his present one, being an ambassador to China from the United States. Of the personnel of the embassy, the first secretary is an Irishman, and the second a Frenchman. There is only one real Chinaman in the whole concern, or rather, to use the polite language of one of our Liberal contemporaries, only one "whose illustrious line is free from every taint of barbarism." The association of nationalities is so odd as almost to provoke a suspicion of the genuineness of the whole affair. If we did not know the Chinese to be incapable of this kind of humour we might suppose that they had sent this collection of miscellaneous gentlemen by way of an elaborate burlesque of the forms of barbarian diplomacy. Mr. Anson Burlinghame, Mr. John M'Leavy Brown, and M. Deschamps, may be highly estimable and worthy gentlemen, inspired by a genuine faith that they are representing the Empire of China, and possessed of a lively interest in its affairs; but they will pardon us if we are unable to refrain from viewing the comic side of their mission. They have done their best to accommodate themselves to the parts which they have to sustain. A Poe-Au-Chen Chin-Chi-Choong-Jen-Facheu, Bo-Choon-An, and De-Chan, may have a certain imposing effect which is undeniable; and if we did not know that the illustrious Poe, &c., comes from Boston, that Bo, &c., hails from Belfast, and that De-Chan is simply pigeon-Chinese for Deschamps, we should be greatly struck at least by the nomenclature of the new ambassadors.

As it is, we cannot help saying that we are not much impressed by the Chinese character of this very remarkable embassy. What is the nature of the process by which the Emperor of China approaches the Queen of England? A dexterous American politician comes over from the United States with an Irish Secretary and a French assistant, and claims our attention as an ambassador from China. Let it not be supposed that we intend, for a moment, to doubt the genuineness of Mr. Anson Burlinghame's mission. But what has he come about, and why does China treat with us in this queer masquerading fashion? Individually—we learn from the Liberal journal which from the first has been in an ecstacy at the arrival of these distinguished strangers—they "unite all the attractiveness of the show Chinaman to the dignity of the diplomatist." This may be all very well; but as Mr. Burlinghame could scarcely have come only to exhibit himself as an attractive Chinaman or a dignified diplomatist, we are still forced to enquire what is the special object of his mission. Was it only to deliver the compliments of the Emperor of China to the British people? The Chinese are too old in politeness to send a company of strangers on such a mission; nor can Chih-U-Kang, the associate Minister—weighing, as we are told with impressive particularity, only 130 lb., be accepted as giving a due Chinese flavour to the expedition. What important matter of international relationship can there be between China and England to justify such an embassy? The present state of our relations with China are of the simplest character. The Chinese Government have made several treaties with us, none of which they have faithfully observed. We are their creditors in respect of numerous services performed by us in their behalf, and of solemn obligations by them systematically neglected. They have agreed to certain terms of amity and intercourse which they have deliberately violated. On our side we have carried forbearance and generosity to the utmost limits. We have refrained from pressing our treaty claims upon the Chinese Government out of a magnanimous solicitude for their weakness and their prejudices. We have allowed them to take us at every possible advantage—to exact from us the strictest obedience to the letter of our engagements, while they, on their part, have never attempted to carry out some of the most important clauses of the treaty, clauses tending to the extension of amicable relations between England and China, and to the cultivation of mutual good-will and of peace.

There is only one intelligible object in any Chinese mission to England, and that is to explain and to excuse the non-fulfilment of the obligations entered into by China toward England. Is this what Mr. Burlinghame has come about? If so, he may calculate upon a fair and patient hearing, and upon all the honour due to such an ambassador. We may have our own opinion as to the judgment of the Chinese in the matter of plenipotentiaries, but that is rather their concern than ours. All we have to take care of is that we are not being imposed upon by a very common and familiar trick of Chinese diplomacy—that we are dealing with real representatives of China, and not with any foreign mediators between us and the Chinese.

(DAILY NEWS.)

The proverbial affinity of extremes has rarely had so curious an illustration as the new relations that have been established between the young and progressive Republic of the West and the oldest and most conservative empire of the East. The enthusiasm with which Mr. Burlinghame and his deputation have been everywhere received in the United States, the welcome which has been given by the leaders of all parties, and the addresses and poems elicited from the most eminent American men of letters, are by no means due to so sudden a friendship as some of our contemporaries have assumed. Nearly a hundred years ago eminent Boston merchants were cultivating the good opinion of the Chinese, and the names Derby and Peabody became as well known in Canton as in New England. Frederick Townsend Ward, the late Chinese Admiral-General, was a Yankee boy, and he is not the only American who has done good service for that people. It is remarkable, too, that the American people in their dreams of national expansion should ever have seen their Hesperian gardens in the West. Not even after arriving at their farthest shore have they been induced to swerve to the north or south with any considerable longing. Instead of looking to Canada or to South America, they have still looked to the path of the sunset across the peaceful sea. Nor is it less remarkable that with the settlement of California there should have begun that Chinese emigration which had been previously unknown to modern history. It was reserved for Jonathan to be the prince to disenchant this Sleeping Beauty who for so many ages had remained stationary as if under a spell. This emigration to California began about twenty years ago, and in the year 1857 the world was somewhat startled at learning that there were seventy-five thousand Chinese in that State. In the various dealings of Russia, America, France, and England with China it did not escape the somewhat jealous notice of the other Powers that in the treaty made with the American Minister, Mr. Reed, China claimed the good offices of America in case of collision with other Powers. Since then the Chinese population of America has more than quadrupled, as have also the means of communication between San Francisco and Canton. A number of Chinamen have also returned to their native land in good circumstances, and have so increased the interest of the Celestials in the Western World that a "Life of Washinghton" and "History of the United States," both written by a Chinaman, have, within the last three years, made their appearance in the Chinese language.

Naturally there has been a growing feeling in the United States that its representative in China should be selected with especial care; and whatever may be said of the late American but now Chinese Ambassador, it is to be considered that his appointment by Mr. Lincoln was made in the belief that he was by education and ability fitted for an important post. Mr. Anson Burlinghame, who is not yet fifty years of age, and who looks much younger, has, however, had many and various experiences in his own country. He was born in Central New York, but his youth was passed chiefly in the far West, whither he went with surveying parties, and where he was instrumental in making several treaties with some of the most uncivilised Indian tribes. He subsequently removed to Massachusetts, and graduated at Harvard University. He studied law in Boston, and sixteen years ago was elected to the senate of Massachusetts, whose constitution he assisted in revising. Since then he has been elected three times to the United States House of Representatives, where he was one of the most intelligent and active members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Seven years ago he was appointed by Mr. Lincoln Minister to Austria, and subsequently, probably in accordance with his own wish, to China.

Without entering at present into the questions connected with Mr. Burlinghame's mission, we submit that a gentleman with these antecedents is entitled to a courteous reception in this country. Nor can we see anything in the speeches he has made in America to warrant the atmosphere of suspicion which some of our contemporaries have so sedulously prepared for him. His oratory, no doubt, savours occasionally of what is called "talk talk," and some of his ideas may be a little crude; but we have been unable to find in his utterances any indication of those profound Machiavellian designs which have been ascribed to him. Indeed, we should judge the Chinese Envoy by his speeches in America to be a somewhat romantic gentleman, more interested in theories about America and China than in the immediate advantages promised by his treaties. He is, we should say, an enthusiast of the kind described by Lowell as having a head "with one pole on Olympus and t'other on 'Change;" who already sees the Pacific Ocean burthened with rich argosies, and American freedom and civilisation dawning in the East to follow the course of the sun round the world. Nevertheless, we prefer to estimate the man, as well as his mission, after we have heard the statements which he has to make here. To put the matter on grounds lower than the love of justice and fair play, of which we sometimes boast, we cannot perceive what English interest in China it is proposed to subserve by snubbing in advance the most important deputation from China that has ever visited this country. If our interests in China are to be served by making ourselves offensive to those whom its emperor trusts; if our ingenuity is to be taxed in order to prevent that people ever forgetting the scenes at Hong Kong and Canton eleven years ago, with which we are unhappily associated, we can understand the sneering tone with which several of the most powerful journals in England have began their discussions of Mr. Burlinghame and his mission. We may be very certain that the Emperor and people of China regard the sending out of this commission as an epoch in the history of their country. Through the interpreters attending them, the members of it will preserve and report most carefully the reception they may have in each country they visit. Whatever may be their propositions or the answer of our Government thereto, there is every reason why they should be received without suspicion, and entertained with cordiality.

THE BANK OF HINDUSTAN.

The liquidators of this bank, in explanation of the necessity for a further call, issue the following report:—

Referring to our circular of 21st January last, in which we intimated to you the necessity of another call being made towards the close of this year, we beg now to enclose a notice requesting payment of a call of £2 10s. per share on the 20th October.

This call is required somewhat earlier than we anticipated, in consequence of the impossibility of collecting the assets so speedily as was before anticipated.

In the statement submitted to you at the meeting held on 2nd August, 1867, we informed you that the then ascertained liabilities of the bank amounted to £572,127, exclusive of interest and liquidation expenses, but this was subsequently considerably increased in the following manner, viz.:—£8,337 7s. 4d. for cancellation of leases of bank premises in China and India; £4,287 10s. for compensation to officers under agreements for loss of their appointments; £7,521 12s. 5d. for calls in various shares held by the bank or its nominees; £14,807 11s. 5d. for interest to 30th June, 1868, to National Bank; £4,500 paid for compromise of suit instituted by dissentient shareholders of Imperial Bank of China; total, £39,454 1s. 2d.

The total ascertained liabilities of the bank to this date amount to £277,358 6s. 4d., and after a careful re-valuation of the remaining assets, we cannot estimate them to produce above £175,000. There will thus remain a deficiency of about £102,000, exclusive of interest and future liquidation expenses, to be provided by the shareholders.

That the liquidation, thus far, has resulted so differently to what we had expected, has arisen entirely from the nature of the assets, which consisted almost wholly of claims on insolvent estates, and being therefore beyond our control, and acting on the information of others, we were only able to place a mere nominal value as to their probable outturn. For instance, the bank is a very large creditor of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East, and we had every reason to suppose that the latter would be able to pay in full with interest, but from the complications which have recently arisen, and are now in litigation between that bank and the old Commercial Bank of India, our prospects of ultimately realising this asset in full are considerably diminished.

There is also a large debt due from the Eastern Financial Association of Bombay, amounting to upwards of £56,000, which has been the cause of much litigation in the Supreme Court there. The liquidators of the Eastern Financial Association applied to the court, on behalf of the shareholders, to sanction a compromise of six annas in the rupee, or 7s. 6d. in the pound, entered into with some of the creditors, who were also shareholders, thus in effect attempting to force those who did not assent into an acceptance of the compromise, which was only intended to benefit the shareholders.

We opposed this compromise in the interest of our shareholders, believing the assets and liability of the members of the Association would produce much more, and under the advice of counsel an appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court in Bombay to the Privy Council is now pending. If we are successful in the appeal we hope to recover a considerable sum.

We regret to inform you that since we last addressed you an action has been commenced in Bombay by the liquidators of the old Bank of Bombay, to recover from this bank the sum of £20,000, alleged to be due to them under a guarantee given by the late manager there for £20,000, in the event of a native named Premchund Roychund not repaying a loan of £250,000 advanced to him by the Bank of Bombay. This man subsequently failed, and there is a large deficiency after realising the security deposited, the share of this bank being stated at the first-mentioned sum. Acting under advice obtained in Bombay, we are defending the action, and hope to be able to successfully resist the claim.

We are sorry to say that several shareholders still delay payment of their calls, and there now remains a considerable amount due on that account, the collection of which is now being vigorously prosecuted by our solicitors, and a list of defaulters, with particulars of our proceedings against them, can be seen by any shareholder at the office.

Since the liquidation commenced the liabilities have been reduced about £1,200,000. During the first eight months the affairs of the bank required and received almost daily attention from us, and we have applied £2,000 on account of our remuneration, which we believe to be very much less than has been applied in similar circumstances in other companies.

THE LOSS OF THE "BENARES."

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I have read with interest the finding of the Naval Court in the matter of the stranding of the P. and O. S. N. Company's steamer Benares, published in your issue of the 7th instant. I am somewhat surprised, however, to notice no expression of opinion as to the propriety (or otherwise) of sending off the passengers in the captain's gig, without an officer or crew—without a compass, and without an atom of biscuit or a drop of water!

Theoretically, the system of boat-stations on board these steamers is, doubtless, all that can be desired; practically, on this occasion, at any rate, it would seem to have been a miserable failure.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, A PASSENGER.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—o—

TESTIMONIAL TO THE REV. J. SCARTH.

The Gravesend Free Press gives an interesting account of the presentation of a testimonial to the Rev. John Scarth, who, before he took holy orders, was a merchant in China. Mr. Scarth has for some years been curate of Holy Trinity Church, Milton, and is now removing to Cranbourn, near Windsor.

About fifty members of the congregation assembled for the purpose of presenting the testimonial, which was offered in recognition of the earnestness and zeal with which Mr. Scarth had ministered in the church and district parish during a period of three years, and of his untiring exertions in connection with St. Andrew's Waterside Mission, amongst the waterside population, and on board of emigrant and other ships at this port, the whole of which services have been rendered gratuitously.

The testimonial consisted of a handsome clock of the value of twenty guineas; a carved oak desk for family prayer; and a library of theological works, value thirty guineas. These were accompanied by an illuminated testimonial on vellum, inscribed as follows:—

"Presented to the Rev. John Scarth, with a drawing-room clock, desk for family prayer, and a library of theological books on the occasion of his leaving for Cranbourn, near Windsor, by the undermentioned members of the congregation of Holy Trinity, Milton-next-Gravesend, in testimony of their high appreciation of his valuable gratuitous labours in the parish, as curate, and on the River Thames in connection with Saint Andrew's Mission."

This was followed by a list of the subscribers. In addition to the testimonial above-mentioned, was a gift by the Rev. C. E. R. Robinson, Vicar of Holy Trinity and Rural Dean, consisting of a valuable antique carved oak book-case (containing a centre and two wings), a quarto bible in morocco, and four photographic views—two representing the church as viewed from the north and south sides respectively—the third being a view of the interior facing eastward—and the fourth an exterior view of the Waterside Mission Chapel.

Mr. Edward Wates presented the testimonial on behalf of the committee and subscribers, also the other articles above named on behalf of the Rev. C. E. R. Robinson. Addressing the Rev. J. Scarth, he said:—"It is my pleasant duty, sir, as chairman of the committee, to inform you that at a meeting of the male members of the congregation of Holy Trinity, held at the Old Falcon Hotel in the month of June last, it was determined to open a subscription list for the purpose of presenting you with some tribute of our respect and esteem. As soon as it became known that the parishioners were about to lose your valuable ministrations, a spontaneous and general desire arose amongst them to present to you some memorial of their lasting esteem and regard. Sixty guineas were in a short time subscribed without any solicitation, and this sum was contributed not only among the richer members of the congregation, but from many of the poor. You will find on the list subscribers from Swan-yard and Thames-terrace, and the joint contributions of some of the very poorest of the waterside population. (Applause.) The committee asked you to select articles most suited to you. You have chosen most useful things for anyone to possess, but especially so for a clergyman. I assure you that I speak the sentiments of the whole congregation when I say that it is a matter of great and sincere regret that you leave us. We hope that you and Mrs. Scarth will live long to enjoy the kindly feelings of all with whom you are connected, and to feel the assurance that your labours on behalf of the parish of Holy Trinity have been fully appreciated. On behalf of the subscribers, sir, I beg your acceptance of the clock, the desk, and the books which are before you; and, in the name of Mr. Robinson, of the book-case, the bible, and the photographic views of the buildings in which you have so earnestly and zealously ministered."

The Rev. J. Scarth, who was unable to entirely conceal his emotion, said he must always feel great pleasure in meeting the good people of Gravesend. It had been his lot to pass some happy years amongst them, and he regretted that his immediate connection with them had terminated. With regard to the testimonial, it would perhaps be the list of names that he should value the most. They had been kind enough to leave the selection to him, and he had chosen what would be best for himself and his family, and what would best accord with the wishes of Mrs. Scarth. He had great satisfaction in receiving the present. With respect to the prayer-desk, in selecting it he thought he should preach a sermon to them. If every house were furnished with a desk for family prayer which should be held sacred for that purpose, the regular practice of family devotion would be promoted. He thanked them very sincerely for the opportunity of getting books which he did not possess, and should not feel justified in purchasing. They would be a source of satisfaction to him, and he hoped of good to those amongst whom he laboured. He felt grateful to Mr. Wates for the manner in which he had alluded to the mixed character of the subscription list. He should always look upon the gifts more as connected with their kindness than his own work. He thanked them sincerely for their kindness. He hoped that there would be peace and plenty amongst them, but especially peace. He had to thank Mr. Robinson for his great kindness in giving him the book-case, and a lasting memorial of the buildings with which he had been connected. Those pictures would be looked upon with great satisfaction.

MR. STANSFELD ON NAVAL EXPENDITURE.

In a speech at Halifax, Mr. Stansfeld, taking the navy as an example, demonstrated the extravagant policy of the present Government. The Ministry owned an excess of expenditure approaching to £3,000,000, but justified it as necessary, and declared that the Liberals were estopped from condemning it now as they allowed the estimates to pass without objection. What was the case in regard to the navy? If they compared the years 1865 and 1866, the two last years of the Liberal Government, they would find in 1865 the navy estimates amounted to £10,432,610; in 1866 they amounted to £10,392.224. Then came 1867, the first year not only of Conservative administration, but of Conservative estimates and expenditure; and they found those estimates sprang up to £10,921,523, which was an excess of more than £500,000. That was the year in which Sir John Pakington became First Lord of the Admiralty, and upon what did he elect to spend his half-million? In these days of rapid transition in naval architecture, when we were bound to think well of the newest discoveries in science, and of what constituted real power, instead of show and sham, Sir John Pakington spent that half-million of money in the construction of wooden and unarmed vessels, corvettes, sloops, and no fewer than thirty-five wretched gunboats of 700 tons or less, to, as he said, protect our trade in China and Japan. Then, as to the policy—what was it? To keep up foreign squadrons, which, however useful or necessary they might be within reasonable limits, formed in these days a very small part of our real power if we were put to the push and to the test of actual war. They on the Liberal benches took a novel and a very wise and successful course on this matter. Those of them whom official experience ought to have given, and he trusted had given, some special knowledge of the subject—Mr. Childers, Lord John Hay, and Mr. Shaw Lefevre—met and discussed the subject of the estimates, and the conclusion they came to was that mere nibbling of estimates was useless; mere criticism, if not useless, was not sufficient for them; they ought to be capable of something more. They propounded their counter policy and their counter programme. It was this: A large reduction of those foreign squadrons, consisting of ships which hardly constituted any portion of their real fighting power; a consequent reduction of the number of men; the devoting of their shipbuilding energies to the construction of the most powerful possible machines for offence or defence—types or units of production to be multiplied in future times in case of need—which science could devise and mechanical skill could construct; and, lastly, a reduction of the overgrown list of superior officers of the navy. The success of that move was proved by Mr. Corry's partial acquiesence in it. But in spite of that approach—he could call it no more—to a policy of economy, too much was still expended upon the construction of vessels.

The Suez Canal.—The Suez Canal Company has issued a note on the state of the works on the 15th August last. It appears that in the channel and basin of Port Said, in the four divisions into which the canal, properly so called, is divided (Port Said, El Guiser, Ismailia, and Suez), and in the canal and basin of Suez, the total quantity of earth to be extracted was 74,112,130 cubic metres, and that of it, on the 15th August, 47,228,155 were excavated, leaving 26,883.975 to be removed. Of the 47,228,155 cubic metres extracted, 2,114,450 were removed in the month from 15th July to the 15th August—a proof that the works now present facility and are carried on with energy. The number of dredging machines at work on the 15th August was fifty-eight, and that of the labourers employed 11,808. As to the jetties of Port Said, of which one is 2,500 the other 1,900 metres long—the former (the western) rising from a depth of eight metres forty centimetres, the other (the eastern) from one of five metres fifty centimetres—they will require 250,000 cubic metres of blocks; and of this total 227,302 were, on the 15th August, immerged, leaving only 22.998 to be employed to complete and consolidate the constructions.

The Siamese Twins.—The Paris Illustration publishes a portrait (or portraits) of the Siamese twins who are about to entrust themselves to the celebrated surgeon M. Nélaton with a view to being separated. The twins are simply and quietly dressed in costumes of identical pattern and colour—dark morning coat, dark trousers, plaid waistcoat. It appears from a memoir which accompanies the drawing that the two brothers, one of whom is named Chang, the other Eng, are fifty-four years old, and that they were only four when they were taken from their native land and brought to Europe, whence, after they had been exhibited for some years (with great advantage to themselves and others), they proceeded to the United States. Here, after a certain time, they bought land, made the acquaintance of "two charming sisters," who consented to marry them, settled on their estate, begot nine children each, and lived together in great happiness until the American civil war broke out. Then Chang declared himself a Unionist, Eng a Secessionist, and the quarrels between them became so violent that the twins were at one time on the point of fighting a duel. So, at least, says the author of the article in the Illustration, who writes with the air of a man enjoying special sources of information.

The Mont Cenis Railway.—This line is now completely restored after the damages done by the floods, and is now open throughout from St. Michel to Susa. The French Victor Emmanuel line is not yet repaired sufficiently for trains to work over, between St. Jean de Maurienne and St. Michel, the commencement of the Mont Cenis line, thus necessitating carriage by diligence between those places; there is, however, now only a delay of one hour in the journey from Paris to Turin, the whole passage from Paris to Turin being now performed in about twenty-five hours. His Royal Highness Prince Arthur, in journeying from Italy to Switzerland, travelled over the Mont Cenis line on the 25th ult. He left Susa at 5. 45 A.M., and arrived at St. Michel at 11 A.M. He expressed himself as being much pleased with the line.

M. de Montigny, one of the French Consuls-General (formerly Consul at Shanghai), has died suddenly in the country. His funeral, numerously attended, took place last week at the Madeleine.

Monetary and Commercial.

The directors of the Oriental Bank Corporation, at the meeting on the 22nd proximo, will propose an interim dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum for the half-year ended the 30th of June.

The report of the National Bank of India (Limited) shows an available total of £25,417, including a previous balance of £3,064, and recommends a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum and a bonus of 1 per cent. for the half-year, which will absorb £18,548, and leave, after carrying £5,800 to reserve, a balance of £1,069. The paid-up capital is £463,700, the reserve is £38,000, and the deposits are £840,630.

The directors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, have resolved to recommend at the ensuing meeting of shareholders an interim dividend for the past half-year, at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax.

At a meeting of several of the creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East, a preliminary statement was read shewing the disastrous results which must ensue to the creditors, should no measures be adopted, to put an end to the present proceedings in Chancery commenced by a few shareholders of the corporation against the Old Commercial Bank of India with the view of upsetting the arrangement by which the corporation took over the business, assets, and liabilities of the old bank as they stood on 1st January, 1865. After a short discussion, it was resolved that a committe, consisting of Mr. Parry, of the Delhi and London Bank, Messrs. Stewart and Tomlin, of the Bank of Hindustan, Mr. Gwyther, of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, and Mr. W. Graham, of Glasgow, be appointed to investigate and report to the creditors. It was further resolved that the preliminary statement read, be printed, and sent to the creditors.

The following letter, signed "A Creditor," has appeared regarding the tardy settlement of the affairs of the Commercial Bank Corporation :—

"Sir,—May I trespass upon your valuable space to inform my fellow-creditors that unless some united action be promptly taken we shall not receive any dividend for probably years to come? It cannot be generally known that the Master of the Rolls has ordered that no distribution of the assets among the creditors be made until the relative position of the old and new banks has been ascertained and defined by the Court. This, if at all possible, which is doubtful, must necessarily occupy a very long time, considering that four years have elapsed since the amalgamation of the two banks took place. There remains, therefore, little else for the creditors to do than to make the best compromise they can with the shareholders of the bank; and I would suggest that a committee of each interest be at once formed for this purpose. This would doubtless result in an early and larger distribution than we can possibly expect if the estate be allowed to grow beautifully less, as it necessarily must do in the course of a few years of the present expensive litigation. This bank failed before the Agra, which has paid its debts and resumed business."

The railway from New York to San Francisco is so far completed that the overland postal time between these places is now reduced to thirteen days. A mail is made up daily.

At the half-yearly general meeting of shareholders of the Delhi and London Bank (Limited), held on the 28th ult., the report of the directors with the accounts was unanimously adopted, a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum having been previously declared. After an expression of confidence in the direction and management, the meeting terminated.

The steamer Bangolore took yesterday £51,100 in gold for Bombay, £1,729 in gold for Madras, £12,300 in silver for Singapore, and £17,218 in silver for Hong Kong, making a total of £82,347.

The bar silver and Mexican dollars by the last West India steamer were sold, the former at 5s. 0½d. and the latter at 4s. 11½d. per ounce, showing no change compared with recent quotations.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

BISHOP'S

GRANULAR

EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA,

INVENTED, INTRODUCED, AND PREPARED BY

ALFRED BISHOP, Manufacturing Chemist,

17 & 18, SPECK'S FIELDS, MILE END NEW TOWN, LONDON.

THIS perfectly white and delicately clean granulated preparation possesses remarkable effervescent qualities, which far surpasses the ordinary Seidlitz Powder in its cooling, refreshing, and mild aperient properties, as well as in its flavour as a saline draught. It is particularly well adapted for women and young children, on account of its most agreeable flavour and mild effect.

N.B. The genuine has the name BISHOP upon the Bottle, also the Name and Trade Mark upon the Label, and is sold in convenient sizes, and secured in so perfect a manner that it may be shipped with safety to any part of the world.

Manufacturer also of Granulated and Effervescent Carbonate of Iron, Citrate of Iron, Citrate of Quinine, Citrate of Quinine and Iron, Carbonate of Lithia in Tubes, Citrate of Lithia, Vichy Salt, Seidlitz Mixture and all other Granulated Preparations.

IN CHANCERY.—CAUTION.—BISHOP'S GRANULAR EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA.—Mr. Bishop, having discovered that the Label which he has used for the last five years was being imitated recently applied to the COURT OF CHANCERY for an INJUNCTION to restrain such imitation The injunction was immediately granted, and the defendant was ordered to pay all Mr. Bishop's costs and destroy the Labels complained of.

Mr. Bishop is determined to stop the imitation of his label, and will, without notice or delay, take proceedings in Chancery against any person who may copy or colourably imitate the same.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—Every day Wast—Skin diseases, blotches, and unseemly eruptions which prevail so frequently and annoy so much, can be removed with facility by this cleansing and cooling Ointment, the salutary properties of which over all cutaneous affections have been long and indubitably established. Moderate doses of Holloway's Pills should be taken while the outward ailment is being healed with his Ointment; they will depurate the blood, and free it from every taint that might induce a relapse, deteriorate the general health, or otherwise act injuriously. By promoting digestion and by purifying the circulation Holloway's Pills even help to keep the skin clear, and to eradicate the many rashes and spots so frequently denoting an infirm stomach.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

The French mail just delivered brings no news of importance from Japan.

The Japan Gazette says the disagreement which has been looked forward to as likely among the Southern Daimios is at length tending to break out; that Choshiu is on the point of withdrawing to his province; and it gives the following translation from Japanese newspapers published in Yedo, as explaining the motives for his defection. Tosa is also said to be wavering. Up North, says the Gazette, a band of Choshiu's men have orders to return home, but the officers of Satsuma will not allow them. They are divided into small numbers, and remain distributed among the ranks of the other Daimios.

"Remonstrance addressed in the third month (April, 1868) by the rifle brigade of Choshiu (Ki hei tai) to Arisugawa Mia on three subjects: That the Emperor himself goes to the Quanto to inflict punishment is not right. By his departure he will not only cause great anxiety to all people, but everywhere in the whole country, although in profound reverence all sorts of things, good and bad ones, will be said about him. If the idea of his departure is therefore not abandoned, very soon the commencement of a terrible excitement will appear in the country. If the foreigners are invited to the Imperial Court, who will be the man, when the time for expulsion has come, to employ his energy for this purpose? Therefore it is not right that the foreigners are admitted to the Dairo. The government of the empire must be given back to the house of Tokugawa; the princes shall consult with each other on the subject of some abuses, but nothing else ought to be altered. To this government (of the Tycoon) to which the people have been accustomed for more than three hundred years, they still are devoted in fidelity and obedience; even if it were said that the old Imperial Government was to be reinstituted as in former ages—and or if the government offices were filled with Daimios Kuges, it would be a vain trouble, the people would never submit to them. If this state of affairs lasts, the time will come when the princes refuse to obey the orders of the Emperor, and will entrench themselves in their provinces to the ruin of the country. Therefore the government ought to be returned immediately to the family of Tokugawa. If this is not done disorders will arise immediately, and the restoration of peace will become an impossibility."

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT).

YOKOHAMA, Aug. 9.

The political situation remains unchanged. Matters at Yedo have quieted down a little, and, as you will see by the Times' summary, the British Legation have ventured back in the persons of Messrs. Adams and Saton.

The Southerners occupy the city, and unless some quite unlooked for event happens they are not likely again to be disturbed; I hope to be able to visit it during the coming week, and if successful will give you a sketch of its present condition.

I have just returned from a tour in the inland sea and neighbouring territory. My tour included visits to Osaka, Kioto, Hiogo and Kobe. The recent floods have destroyed one bridge and considerable property in the first named city, but beyond that and some interruption to trade in the interior, through the accumulation of water on the roads there has been no material damage.

The foreign concessions in Osaka and Kobe are being raised, graded, and put in readiness for the approaching sale of lots, which is announced for the 25th inst. The bidding is likely to be spirited.

Trade here, and indeed throughout Japan, is suffering from the effects of long continued civil war, and fears are entertained in commercial circles of further distress and failure.

YOKOHAMA.

A correspondent of the N. C. Daily News writes:—"There are some strange rumours afloat, but which are believed to be true. It is said that an appointment of Inspector of the Japanese Navy and another of Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese forces have been created and given to two Americans, the names freely given but not published. Yesterday it was current that the French had hauled down the Japanese flag at the Dock at Akoski, and taken possession of the place, holding the same as a material guarantee. I doubt the hauling down the flag, but it is well known that the French want a large overdue sum on these works, and they will hold, if they do not now, the property for due payment.

"At Hiogo things seem unsatisfactory. The Government have called upon the bankers to provide 240,000 boos, and give them paper money in exchange, redeemable in thirteen years. The Government then say they are so poor that they cannot receive their own paper money for duties. The bankers have to grin and bear; the paper currency is at 15 to 18 per cent. discount. A notice prohibiting the sale of rice to foreigners has also been issued. The merchants here seem dissatisfied with the present rule, and say the Government seem disposed to treat foreigners with disrespect, and to throw obstructions in the way of commerce.

"They do things in a wise sort of way here. There is an amusing advertisement in the paper—amusing because of its extreme absurdity. The Postmaster says, on and after this date (6th August) not less than one dollar's worth of postage stamps will be sold. Fancy a poor widow going to St. Martin's-le-Grand to post her pen'orth to her son, and being told that she could have nothing less than 4s. 2d. worth of stamps.

"Great complaints are made of the inefficient working of the Customs' service under the new regime. The removal of experienced men, in favour of adherents of the Southern daimios, partially accounts for the difficulty. The Japan Times strongly advocates the introduction of foreigners into the service, as in China; and the idea is said to find favour. Aidzu and the northern party hold the new port Nee-e-gata? But an expedition is being fitted out against it. Nothing has yet been heard of the party who went in the Albion to open this port. The position of the new Government seems gradually improving. An important reform in exchange has been introduced; the Government will in future take foreign coin at the rate of 293 itziboos to the 100 dols. The effect of this will be to check speculation in native coin, and to obviate the inconvenience constantly felt from the high rate demanded. A fair business has been done in tea at fluctuating rates, with a tendency to rise."

Mr. E. Hepple Hall has completed his sketching tour in Japan, and intended to leave for San Francisco and New York by the next Pacific mail steamer. He has succeeded beyond his most sanguine expectations in getting views, descriptive sketches, &c., suitable for his undertaking.

CHINA.

CHINGKIANG.

There is much trouble at this port, in consequence of local officials interfering with the opium trade in foreign hands. Their action is said to be chiefly owing to the intrigues by the Chinchew men, who are trying to thrust foreigners out of the market, and to get a monopoly of the opium business for themselves. It is said that those are the only men allowed to sell opium on shore in Shanghai, the war-tax being used as a means to stop any competition.

SHANGHAI.

Dates from this port are to the 19th August, four days later. The following items of news are from the North China Herald:—

We hear that the Viceroy of Fohkien and Chekiang has memorialised the Emperor in the same sense as the Viceroy of Nanking, as regards mines. He thinks they ought to be opened.

H.M. Salamis brings down glowing accounts of sport in the Amoor. She and the Rodney caught 1,000 salmon between them in one day. The story savours of Barnum, but we believe we may give it as a fact. The shooting, too, compares favourably, we hear, with the fishing. The misfortune is that the Amoor is too far off for most people.

We hear that the Acorn is to be paid off, and the naval hospital establishment at Shanghai abandoned. After buying the wharf premises, Government entertained an idea of not using them, but of making Yokohama the head-quarters. This notion has, however, been abandoned, we hear, and the Shanghai naval yard will be made the chief naval depot in these waters.

The Recorder recently said, "In Mr. Hart's removal to Peking, the head Customs' Department is transferred to that place; in Mr. Hockley's recent appointment, the Harbour-Master's Department goes also to the capital." Our contemporary is mistaken; the Marine Commissioner's head-quarters will be at Shanghai; so that department will be less dependent on Peking than when it was part of the Customs' service, and its only head was the Inspector-General. Not that the change will make much actual difference, for the latter will still wield predominant influence over it.

The roof of one of Messrs. Bull Purdon's godowns fell in on the 16th August, fortunately without injuring any person, or, we believe, much damaging the goods stored in it.

We hear that a new steamship company, called "the North China Steamer Company," has been formed, with a capital of Tls. 300,000, in shares of Tls. 50 each. The new company takes over Messrs. Trautmann and Co.'s steamers and wharf property, and intends to purchase two or three more vessels.

The Recorder says:—We hear that the officers of H.I.M.'s gunboat Forfait made arrangements for the men to land at Chefoo on the occasion of the Fete Napoleon, and that Mr. Viguier, the Inspector of Lighthouses, told the captain that he could not land armed men without the consent of the Commissioner of Customs. We imagine the intimation did not have much effect, but it is interesting as showing the lengths the Custom-house officials are willing to go.

We were glad to hear that we were not mistaken in our idea that Vice-Consul Markham would not allow the proclamation prohibiting the country people to supply provisions to foreigners to pass. In consequence, as we are informed, of representations made by him, the Taoutai has at length issued another notification stating that by Treaty foreigners are allowed to travel into the interior for the purposes of trade or pleasure, and are, therefore, entitled to every assistance from the authorities and people; and calling upon them to render such whenever required. We are informed also that a party of foreigners are making the diggings pay well, clearing about two dols. a day each. Strangely enough, the Chinese authorities do not object so long as they only wash for gold, but will not allow them to dig.

The Supreme Court and Consular Gazette has the following able article on the proposal to establish an Appeal Court for China, Japan and the Straits:—

"Our contemporary the Hong Kong Daily Press recently called attention to the want which is felt in many directions of some competent Court of Appeal from the decisions of the Supreme Court here and at Hong Kong, and has given sundry cogent reasons why such an institution should be established, as well as a suggestion as to the mode in which the remedy of the present state of things should be applied.

"With the reasons advocated by our contemporary we in the main agree. There can be no question that the existence of such a Court would work much good, both to the legal profession and also to the public. It must very frequently happen that a judge, whose duties are of so varied a character that he has to decide cases in almost all branches of law, would feel it to be a grateful relief from the sense of the responsibility which devolves upon him, if the means were at hand for an appeal from time to time to be made from his decisions, so that when, as will happen occasionally even with judges, he feels in doubt as to the correct view of a given question, he will be certain that his judgment will not work any serious injustice. As matters now stand, with the terrible expenses and delay attendant upon an appeal to the Privy Council, many decisions which may be open to question have to pass as final, and, what is of no small importance both to the public and also to the legal profession, the opportunity of establishing precedents, which would form useful guides in future cases involving points of mere local application, is entirely lost.

"It is not desirable upon grounds of public policy that the means of appeals from the decisions of a legal tribunal should be too easy; as this is likely to foster a spirit of litigiousness, which may tend to prolong the inconvenience and expense, and at times the ill-feeling, inseparable from disputes of all descriptions. In cases, however, where the amounts at stake are large, or the points at issue of importance, it is to the advantage of all that the means of appealing should be reasonably accessible. It has been suggested that probably a less important and consequently less expensive tribunal at home than the Privy Council would be suitable for this purpose; and that it might be desirable if an appeal should lie from the courts in Shanghai and Hong Kong in the first instance to the tribunals at home which ordinarily decide such cases as are the subject of such appeal. Thus, Admiralty cases could be referred to the High Court of Admiralty at home, commercial cases could go forward to the Queen's Bench, and equity cases might be carried into Chancery. This scheme, although it bears a certain appearance of desirability, would not, we think, be the most suitable; as, while the expenses and delay would be by no means inconsiderable, the probability is that in many instances further appeals would be made to higher tribunals.

"The suggestion thrown out by our Hong Kong contemporary of a meeting of the judges at Hong Kong once a year is probably the most practical; but it would be well to include the colony of Singapore in the number; both for the advantage of the residents there and also to secure the services of one or two additional judges. By this means a Court, consisting of the three chiefs, might easily be secured; and it is unlikely, except in rare cases, that the decisions of such a body would go far wrong. The expenses attending the institution would be small, and of course would be reduced by the fees that would have to be paid by the suitors; while the advantages which would be gained to the public both directly in the decision of their cases, and indirectly in the improvement in legal administration, which would naturally result, cannot well be over-estimated."

HONG KONG.

From this port we have four days' later news, the French mail having left on the 25th August. The outward mail of the 18th July reached Hong Kong on the previous day, with London telegrams to the 24th July. There is no local news likely to interest home readers, with the exception of an announcement issued by the Post-office, extending the money order system to China and Japan, the advantages of which are thus described in the Daily Press:—

The Gazette contains a notification signed by the Postmaster-General, to the effect that on and after the 1st October next, money orders, payable at any specified money order office in the United Kingdom, will be issued at Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Yokohama for amounts not exceeding £10. Current rates of exchange will prevail, and a charge by way of commission varying from 1¼ per cent. on a sum of £2 sterling, to 1 per cent. on a sum of £10 sterling will be levied to cover, it is presumed, the expenses of the office. An order may be had for so small a sum as five shillings, or if specially desired, as a curiosity, for the sum of one penny, the only limit in that direction being that orders for fractional parts of a penny are not to be indented for. As, however, the commission on the penny order would be sixpence, it is hardly to be supposed that the Postmaster-General will often be troubled for so trifling an amount. Sums of five, ten, fifteen, and twenty shillings will, however, be frequently remitted through the Post-office, for the purchase of books to be sent out by post, for subscriptions to magazines and periodicals, or as presents at Christmas and birth-day times, from anxious parents to eager little boys and girls at school. The local banks have granted bills for sums as low as two pounds sterling, but then only on London. It is difficult, if not impossible, to draw on Edinburgh, Dublin, or Liverpool, even for large amounts. There are thousands of little things residents in China and Japan would like to have sent them from England, if only there was a convenience for sending home the small amount requisite for the purchase. We all have not got London agents, nor do we all want to remit large sums of money. How few of the many in Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Yokohama have their homes in London at all. Some address to their friends in the north of Scotland, some in the far west of Ireland, beyond the limits of civilisation; others, again, to some quaint village on the coast of Cornwall. A remittance now to any of these places must be for a respectable amount and by a bill on London, which, when it arrives at its destination, must be discounted at a loss of money and time, and may have, perhaps, to be sent to London at considerable expense. Under the new system we can have our choice of 3,700 and odd post-offices, scattered all over the United Kingdom, on which to draw, and in all probability the postmaster or postmistress who hands our letter to the addressee will be prepared to honour our little draft on the spot. Local charities will profit by the extension of Post-office orders to China. Little boys and girls will rejoice thereat, and give our Postmaster-General (if they only knew him) all the honours of a hearty cheer. Poor relations, and we all have one or more, will benefit by the change, and we residents in the East will profit more than all the rest, because after the first of October next there are fifty little things, not to speak of books and pamphlets, the Post-office will bring us, which it could not have brought us before, because there was no way of sending the trifling amount requisite to purchase these little things, and enable our friends to obtain and forward them on.

The offices at Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Yokohama will not draw on one another—at least the notification in the Government Gazette is silent on the point. This is to be regretted, although, doubtless, good reasons can be assigned for it. There are many occasions when it is desirable to remit small sums from one port in China to another, and from inquiries we have made it appears very certain that the Chinese would largely avail themselves of the privilege, if granted them, of remitting from port to port through the Post-office. Perhaps in time Mr. Mitchell will see his way to the desired extension of the system. At present what is done must be looked on in the light of an experiment. When the new offices get well into the system, and learn to work freely and beneficially with the old-established offices in England, they may then extend the limits of their operations and work with one another, and with the offices in Australia and New Zealand.

"A curious freak or delusion, which nearly resulted fatally to two gentlemen, was indulged in by an old resident on Saturday night. Mr. James Brooks, auctioneer, who has been confined to his room for some days, it appears addressed two chits to Mr. Jarman (Assistant Superintendent of Police) during Saturday, which, from their rambling nature, led to the conclusion that all was not right. About half-past eight o'clock, therefore, Mr. Jarman, having known Mr. Brooks for very many years in the colony, proceeded with a friend to visit the sick man. On reaching the door of the house some difficulty was found in gaining admission, the servants appearing to have had orders to keep the doors fast and allow no one to enter. The door was ultimately opened, however, when the first object that caught the gentlemen's attention was Mr. Brooks himself, in dishabile, leaning over the banister and pointing a small Smith and Wesson's revolver straight down towards the entrance door. Somewhat taken aback by this reception, Mr. Jarman and Mr. Thompson, chemist (the gentleman who accompanied the assistant-superintendent), called out to Mr. Brooks, but were threatened in a most remarkable manner by the latter, who, it was now evident, was labouring under some terrible delusion or aberration of the brain. Brooks dared them to advance, and while this parley appears to have been going on, fired a shot which, passing close to Mr. Thompson's head, lodged in Mr. Jarman's left shoulder. Another shot was fired, which hit no one; and Mr. Thompson then ran for assistance, while Mr. Jarman rushed up and disarmed the temporarily insane auctioneer. Two police inspectors were speedily on the spot, and Mr. Brooks (who by this time was materially calmed down by the foolish act he had committed) was removed to hospital, on his way to which the poor man repeatedly expressed his sorrow for having attempted the life of so old a friend as Mr. Jarman was. Failing Dr. O'Brien, Dr. Kauffman was at once procured to attend to Mr. Jarman's wound, but happily it was found to be one of by no means a serious nature. The pistol pellet had entered behind the left shoulder and lodged a little way down amongst the shoulder muscles, so that considerable difficulty would be experienced in removing it. It was therefore resolved to leave it alone, as no danger whatever was likely to arise from its presence. We learn with regret that Mr. Brooks is not improving in the hospital, and that the feeling that he has injured an acquaintance who was endeavouring to do him good is also pressing upon his mind. It is said that recent misfortunes have had a large share in bringing the poor fellow into his present unsettled state."

On May 2nd we reached the hill of "Great Rest," Ta an shan, a busy little town high up among the mountains, and showing signs all round it of mining activity. The coal here produced is all of the red kind, by which is meant, as before explained, good anthracite coal, burning with a bright red appearance, and leaving little ash and no clinker. This coal is carried down the hill eight miles to Hung-mei-chang (where there are depot keepers established), on the backs of mules. The name Hung mei chang, is, literally, red coal establishment. Thirty-five miles have to be traversed from this point to the south-west gate of Peking, Chan-gi men. Here camels travel during all the year, except in the four hot months of summer. The camel is in North China a most valuable beast of burden, because of the great weight he carries, and the inexpensive nature of his food. He costs no more to keep than a mule, and bears twice as heavy a load. But though something is gained by the use of camels, the coal before the time it has reached Peking is very dear, and costs a little above two pounds of English money per ton. The advantage of tramways here would be immense. The diminution in prices of common articles occasioned by a railway system would yield intense satisfaction to Peking house-keepers, who would then be able to burn excellent coal for less money than they now give for the most inferior qualities.

Some donkey boys showed us the hills. The coal cropped out in many parts on the surface. Wherever it was possible terrace cultivation was carried to great perfection. Small millet was being sown on the lower grounds and panicled millet on the upper. Both kinds have a yellow round seed, like what we should call bird seed. The former is taken boiled, and is one of the commonest articles of diet in North China, holding the place of white rice in the south. Potatoes and the Chinese yam are also planted early in May; the sweet potatoe is not suited to mountain soil, it prefers the plain.

A coal dealer from the city of Tsi-nan, in Shantung, with whom I conversed at our inn, complained of the dullness of trade. The price of fodder has been very high for some time, through the drought of last year and the entire failure of the wheat crop. This has greatly increased the expense of mule conveyance.

To reach Chai-tang from Taan-shan we needed to cross a broad mountain shoulder for eight miles to Liang cha keu, "the stream of the double fork." We were two thousand feet above the plain along this piece of road, and had the opportunity of noticing that in every favourable part the labour of the agriculturist was visible even to the brow of the mountain. There was a profusion of broom blossom on the way. Down in the valleys in many spots were signs of mining. The name of the pass is Mei-wo-ling, "Pass of the coal nest." As we came to the northern end we saw the origin of this name. A cluster of villages appeared in the upper part of the valley, by which we were to descend, and their united name was Mei-wo, "coal nest." The anthracite is of the same kind as at Ta-an-shan.

At Liang-cha-keu we were at the junction of two roads with the Chai-tang road. Of these, one was that we had just traversed, and the other, more to the south-east, leads across the mountain shoulder called Ta-ho-ling, "pass of great harmony," to Men-teu-keu and Peking.

We now entered the Chai-tang valley, and proceeded five miles to the town. Across the valley, half a mile from the point where our road entered it, is a Roman Catholic village of forty or fifty families, who are visited by a native Catholic priest once a year. A schoolmaster there whom we met knew something of the Christian doctrine; at least, he knew the Ten Commandments in the Romanist form, which omits the command "Thou shalt not make to thyself any graven image," and divides the tenth into two. But he had not received baptism. What he knew he had learned from the Hwei-chang of the village, a lay elder who, in the absence of the priest, gives instruction. This order of elders is of great use in the Romanist system. How could faith live at all among these villagers visited only once a year by the native priest, and not at all by the foreigner, without this institution?

South from Chai-tang up the Kin-wo valley lie the principal bituminous coal mines, which have hitherto been kept open by the demand for coke. Coke is used in the Imperial Glazed Tiles Manufactory, and in melting iron cash. At present, in Peking, the useless heaps of iron money, amounting to hundreds of tons, are gradually being made into useful iron articles, as ploughs, hoes, stoves, and pans. At several of the establishments where Su-shun and others, fifteen years ago made iron cash, with so much energy and so little profit, as a financial measure to save the State, the manufacture into these articles is now proceeding, but it will be a task of many years to exhaust the vast collections accumulated.

The call for coke to make glazed tiles for the tomb of the present Emperor's father has been great, and still continues. This, with the prospect of an extensive foreign demand for coal at Tientsin, has occasioned the opening of some new pits on the right and left of the stream running down the Kin-wo valley.

On the left at one of the old pits, Pau-hing, we found ten men at work, who produce two tons in a day of twenty-four hours, working day and night. The coal produces half its weight of coke, and in this respect comes short of the pits on the Chai-tang side, where 60 per cent. of coke is obtained. A new pit adjoining it has been just opened and dedicated to the deities of alchemy and riches, and the local guardians of the neighbouring hills. The God who is supposed to preside over alchemy, and to be specially interested in coal mines, is no other then the philosopher Lau-kiun, whose followers, four hundred years after his death and a little before the Christian era, originated the science and imposture of alchemy together. How astonished would this profound thinker be, whose speculations were so ethereal and so far removed from the ordinary life of men, were he to return to life and find himself adored as the presiding genius of a coal mine. Alchemists cannot do without combustion, and he was the intellectual founder of the Chinese alchemy, and therefore had a better claim than anyone else to be made into the God of combustion. This syllogism he would not have been able, with all the depth of his reasoning, to think out for himself. Nor would he have been less astonished if he had returned to life in the West, in the era of the Arabian caliphs, and found the alchemy of his disciples transferred to Spain and the rest of Europe, and exercising a powerful influence on the western Mediæval mind, leading to the introduction of gunpowder, and sowing the germs of modern chemistry.

The coal appears to be inexhaustible on both sides of the Gold Nest (Kin-wo) Valley. The coal here is not tilted into vertical seams; but three miles to the north, nearer to Chaitang, where more coke is obtained per hundredweight, the seams are vertical, or nearly so.

We next day followed the Kin-wo Valley to the village of Malan, where the scenery becomes very picturesque, and the valley assumes the usual westerly direction. There are many substantial houses in this village, the owners of which have connection with the Kin-wo mines. The houses, as usual, are built round a square court, into which all the windows look. On the walls of one of these houses, into which we were invited, we saw not a few engravings pasted, which were cut from the Illustrated London News. Past this village the valley rose, and our road took us over a moderately high pass into another valley, where we proceeded towards the Ta-tsau mine, a red anthracite pit of great value. The coal is used in smelting raw iron, and was much used when the ironworks at Tsing Shui were in operation. The coke made from it is mixed with that of bituminous coal for use. The advantage gained in the employment of anthracite coke is in the greater weight of coke that it yields per cent. It produces seventy pounds per hundredweight.

Agriculture flourishes in these beautiful valleys. Beside the four kinds of millet, with potatoes and yams, all the usual fruits of North China except the soft apples are found here. Walnuts, peaches, pears, hai-tang (or Siberian crab), plums, apricots, Chinese date (a sort of plum growing on a prickly tree), and hard apples. The lack of soft apples seems to be connected, like the want of the white-barked pine, with the absence of lime. Wheat and hemp are also grown. Inundations, when they occur, do great harm to the autumn crops. In the valleys which are narrow the water often rises ten feet. Where the valley is broad, as at Chaitang, it reaches three feet. These heavy inundations occur once in about thirty years. The latest crop sown is buckwheat, which follows hemp, as hemp in its turn has followed wheat.

The country round Chai-tang is all sandstone, but we were told there was lime, and the lime used in cement was a visible proof of it. We went in search of lime in order to solve this mystery. We were told there were lime kilns, and a short walk from the west village brought us to a valley running down from the north. Here at intervals we saw broad and deep pits used in burning lime. The whole valley was strewn with stones, worn into pebble shape, and a large proportion of them lime. The lime made consists exclusively of these pebbles, and it is excellent in quality. Were it not for the distance, it would be in demand at Peking. We asked where the pebbles where supposed to come from. The people of the lime kiln valley answered at once from the limestone formation, five miles to the northward, and itself ten miles wide. Doubtless this is an extension of the limestone crossed at the opening of the Nankeu pass, thirty miles north-west of Peking, on the route to Kalgan and Russia. The lime is burnt in the pits for six or seven days. The pebbles are placed with coal in alternate layers to the number of six or seven, or more if required, according to the depth of the pit and the wish of the workmen. A fire of wood is kindled below.

Near this valley is a clay-pit, from which the Tsing-hwei, already alluded to, is taken. This clay is superior to that found near the outlet of the Hwun ho from the hills, being softer and more easily dissolved in water. Beyond this black or blue clay is a bad anthracite, which begins 60 yards from the entrance of the pit.

The next day, May 6th, we visited the iron-stone hill at Tsing shui, five miles from Chai-tang. This has been only worked of late years during the iron-money delusion in the reign of Hien feng. Over the valley, where the road to the iron-stone lies, are scattered pebbles of porphyry, basalt, green sandstone, and limestone. There were extensive alluvial beds of rubble, mould, and pebbles. The iron-stone we found to constitute a mountain, on the sides of which were several superficial pits, from which the stone has been taken. The stone has been picked out with axes, to the depth at most of 20 feet, and taken to the smelting furnaces at Tsing-shui. Here Shan-si workmen, accustomed to the working of iron, were employed for as long as the unfortunate mania for iron cash lasted. The stone yields about 25lbs. per cwt. of iron. The iron was worked for six years, from about 1854 to 1860. Close to the iron-stone hill is a coal mine of the finest bituminous coal, which, on account of its long bright flame, brings a better price than even the Chai-tang coal. It is used at present in the imperial glazed tile manufactory.

The mines are private property, and the coal is bought by the Government by contract. No custom or duty is levied on coal. The only expenses connected with the opening of a mine are a small payment of from three to five pounds, to be distributed among the servants of the Yamen in Peking, which grants a sealed certificate to openers of mines on application. The landowner opens the mine himself, or, as frequently happens, lets it to a gang of workers, from four to ten or more in number, who pay an annual rent.

Two or three persons at Chaitang came to have conversation on the subject of Christianity. But the minds of the people are not open to much impression at present. Idolatry has on them more the hold of custom than of conviction, and like their own superstitions, religious truths derived from revelation, are at first hearing viewed as unimportant. The remarkable State document of Tseng-kwo-fan recently presented to the Emperor exemplifies the view taken of Christianity by the native mind generally. It is regarded as a thing that is good because of its morality, and can do no harm by its doctrine of the supernatural. Its reception by a part of the population is, they think, not likely to affect the Confucian system, and its followers need not be proscribed.

In returning we chose the route by Ta-ho-ling, leading to Men-teu-keu, where the largest part of the coal consumed in Peking is found. On the way we heard much of the wild animals which abound on these hills. They frequent the uninhabited parts, and roads which lie where there are no villages are not safe for single travellers. Wolves come down at night to the villages and carry away pigs and dogs. The number of dogs destroyed by wolves is very great. Tigers and leopards are also found. The people say that the tiger was invested with the dignity of king of beasts by the celebrated Emperor Kwang-woo, of the Han dynasty. Since that time it is fabled that this beast bears on his forehead three horizontal strokes and one vertical crossing them in the middle. This is the character Wang-king.

The valley route from Ta-an-ling is very beautiful, and there is a magnificent prospect from the top of the pass itself. The valley by the extension of the coal traffic has become thickly inhabited, and we found villages occurring at intervals of a mile. As we descended we noticed the abundant growth of shrubs on the mountain sides. Every spot was green except the facings of rock, which could not become attachments for vegetation. The villages are here very picturesque. Roofs of slate bordered by pantiles, old-fashioned low gables, crowning high white-washed walls, of stone, brick corners, and square windows formed a very pretty-looking rural architecture. What a contrast to the mud villages on the sea coast, where nothing pleases the eye, and whose poverty-stricken appearance gives a too low idea to the newly-arrived traveller of the civilisation of the country.

Crossing another pass we came in sight of the Hwun-ho, and had described to us the manufacture of sand pottery, made in a village, the roofs of which we saw far below us. It is formed of ordinary brown clay and a black clay found near coal. These constituents are mixed in equal quantities. The potter's wheel employed is made of the wood of the saphora tree. The ware produced, when in the form of small saucepans, is as thin as a leaf, and enables the natives to procure boiling water with very little firing and in a very short time. In the form of pans and basins the ware is half-an-inch thick. Both kinds stand the fire, and with care are kept in use for a long time. It is cheap and efficient, and therefore popular with the Peking housewives, who, in their poverty, are fond of buying cheap things often rather than what costs more money and, being less fragile, is more economical in the end.

At Wang-ping-keu, the pass just mentioned, there are several kinds of coal,* which are varieties of anthracite, some in vertical seams and some in horizontal.

Proceeding to Men-teu-keu we admired the scenery of the hills as they open their valleys to the plain and disclose to view to the south-east the smiling Peking plain, which in this year of abundant rain presents a remarkably cheerful appearance.

Peking derives its chief supply of coal from Men-teu-keu, a valley only twenty miles distant from the walls. Twenty pits are kept working at present. The kind of anthracite there found is

* For example, Tsing-mei, a black 'sulphurous anthracite, having an unpleasant odour in burning. Tsz-tsz-mei is a kind which leaves forty per cent. of white ash, and when of good quality burns as well as the red anthracite, and will keep in for twenty-four hours.

hard and stony, but its being near insures a sale, and being in flat seams it is easily worked.

Here at the edge of the hills we are on the lowest strata of coal, for the hardest anthracite being closest in texture has sustained the greatest superincumbent weight. The "red coal," which is softer, and the bituminous, which is the softest of all, keep their places in regular succession, as the hills are penetrated by the traveller in a north-westerly direction.

The camels employed in conveying the coal from these mines to Peking cross the river several miles above Lu-keu-chiau, the bridge by which the great south-west road proceeds to Pau-ting-fu, and enter any of the four gates in the west wall of the metropolis.

In years when straw and corn are not exceptionally dear this coal is sold for about 33s. a ton in the Peking market. Mixed with clay and sold in the form of balls it costs a third less. These balls, part coal dust and part clay, are well adapted to the Chinese stoves, and are economical in use.

The bituminous coal mines are about thirty or forty English miles from the edge of the hills, and can only be brought so far on the way to Peking and Tientsin on the backs of mules. For the mules there is no return load, so that a ton of coals conveyed in bags on the backs of ten mules must be raised in price sufficiently to keep twenty mules in fodder for a day and the drivers in food and clothing. From 30s. to 40s. is as little as can be paid for this expenditure. If the route could be made practicable for camels it could be reduced one-half, because half the number would carry the same load.

An unsuccessful application to the Chinese Government to make a camel road through to Chaitang has been this year presented, and rejected on the ground of expense, of unpopularity with the inhabitants on the line of route, and of dangerous consequences to the Imperial tombs at the back of which Chaitang is situated. No disturbing operations should take place near graves for fear of interfering with the repose of sleeping ancestors and guardian spirits. In this case the desired road would be at no point nearer than about thirty miles to the tombs, and one would think that its construction might be risked without a severe shock even to Chinese veneration for the dead.

There is a Mahomedan military officer at Chaitang, who treated us with great civility, and whom we visited at his residence. The civil officer is a native of Kiang-su, who avoided having us call on him, but came to see us, and met us at his military brother officer's yamun. We learned from him that officials had been sent shortly before to make inquiries on the proposed road, but their written despatches, to be shown on the road to the officers of the towns they passed through, stated that the object of their journey was to know if the mining operations interfered with the graves of the people. Our mandarin friend from Kiang-su asked them quietly whether this was all. They told him that it was not, the real object being to make inquiries respecting a road, the construction of which was desired in the interest of foreigners. Our military friends knew nothing about it, nor did the mine owners.

We learned from this incident that nothing could have been quieter than the visit of this commission. Passing through the country with an ostensible object different from the real one, it was impossible for the people to express their opinions, and yet it was possible to make limited inquiries on the line of route from selected persons. When they reported to the central Government that the scheme of a road was unpopular with the inhabitants, they probably did what they were wished to do by those who sent them, but they had not taken the proper way to learn what the people thought, nor did their instructions require them to do so.

Several mine owners signed a request to Mr. Henderson to make a road at his own expense, pleading poverty as a reason for their not doing it themselves.

SHANTUNG.

THE GOLD MINES.

The correspondent of the Shanghai News Letter at Chefoo writes as follows, under date the 8th August :—

"You will doubtless be glad to learn of our safe return here, and the success of our prospecting survey among the Shantung mountains and ravines, in search of the gold which the Shanghai newspapers have, of late, so often been bringing up to the notice of their friends there and at home, to gaze and go mad upon. We organised a prospecting party of three—a Californian, an Australian, and a General Ward's man—immediately upon our arrival at 'Tulloch's Temple,' twenty miles from Chefoo, on the 29th ult. Our first effort was near a mandarin's tomb, where the Chinese said immense specimens were buried! A shaft was sunk, but a storm coming on flooded our claim, and we retired, demoralised, back to camp. The next day we prospected for some six miles to the northward, and toward 'Look-out Mountain,' fifteen miles south of Chefoo. Our China boy and muleteers early evinced a desire to fall back upon Chefoo, but we kept them in company, and went on seeking gold in the deep ravines by the way side. We raised mica, mundic, black sand, and everything except gold, and were going in after that with a will, when the headman of a village near by ordered our packs to 'move on.' We moved on, as otherwise we would have been obliged to do our own packing. At the Golden Hill Temple, fifteen miles south of Chefoo, we halted, and put up for the night. That afternoon a rough map of the country was made from the top of Look-out Mountain.

"The next day we went down to a creek near by and watched some thirty Chinese washing out gold. It was after the rains, and they were evidently making a good thing of it. They used a shallow wooden vessel, something like a bread tray, a blunted rake, dipper, and spade, and got through a good deal more earth than we could with our tin pans. A portion of the gold was evidently lost in the raking, yet nearly all the trays showed at least thirty cents after a few minute's washing. We selected a spot some little distance above these fellows, and with a pan soon brought up the colour with two shovelfuls only. This satisfied us of the richness of the creek, and when we went back to our quarters the Chinese followed us with their dust, some of which we bought at a fair exchange for Mexicans. After making another satisfactory prospecting tour of some twelve miles among the hills and ravines, we changed our camp to a range of mountains which bordered the view at a distance of fourteen miles to the south-west of 'Look-out Mountain.' The mountain sides were very rough and broken by deep and abrupt ravines, and sometimes difficult of passage; yet cultivation extended to all available places, and for the one hundred and fifty miles or more that we travelled during our ten days' excursion, richly cultivated valleys and terraced hills, with a teeming population of Chinese, met the gaze everywhere, and a fraction of the last was always at hand to disconcert us when we believed ourselves most alone in our deep conferences with the God of Mammon.

"We found the country people very friendly, and ready to meet us half way with their chickens and eggs, while the head men of the villages seemed to be never more satisfied than when they kept us moving on. We camped on the 31st ultimo at the foot of 'Fergusson's Beak,' which we attempted to cross, but could not for want of a pass. A solitary Chinaman was here discerned down among the boulders and deep cliffs of the mountain, washing his twenty-five cents to the tray. We tried the bed of a dry creek below our camp, but found no gold, though indications were sufficiently good to warrant explorations at a future opportunity. We found a pass the next day, and scrambled over it with the aid of some villagers, who shouldered our 'shenza,' or mule litter, where the path was too rough and steep for the animals to turn with their poles. After a night spent in a temple at the foot of the hills we struck off toward the westward, passing a broad valley and reaching camp, distant thirteen miles west of 'Temple Hill,' where we rested, and time being up, had to bring our excursion towards the 'Pintoo range' to a close.

"The next day a prospect of the ravines and hills was made to the distance of eight miles beyond, then we returned to camp, packed up and struck off down the valley in the north-easterly direction for Chefoo, which was reached on the second day thereafter, or the 5th inst., when the first prospecting party of Shantung miners broke up and went home to refit. On the following day a visit to the mining region recommended by the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson was made, in company with some friends from Shanghai and a well-known mineralogist of Chefoo; the direction being south-east of Chefoo twenty-eight miles. Our point of destination was reached after ten hours' travelling, and a temple made a snug sleeping quarters for the night. At early dawn a village was visited, but a mandarin's proclamation had been there before us, and the villagers made no sign, but evidently wished us well away. Our muleteers were clamorous for food, and for ourselves aid and comfort was needed; but the head man pointed to the notice forbidding any aid and comfort being given to foreigners, or any other roaming vagabond scoundrels, seeking convenient places to dig for gold! A learned sinologue of the party quoted some of the golden maxims of Confucius (who, by-the-bye, was a Shantungite born, bred, and buried), consigning in the most concise terms all of his countrymen who would not feed a beggar in distress to the lowest depths of bad Fungshueydom; but it was of no avail, and after a brief look at the hills to satisfy us that gold was indicated thereabouts we packed up and left for Chefoo again."

NE-E-GATA.

The following interesting account of the new port, Ne-e-gata, is from the Japan Herald :—

At the present moment, when so many interests, commercial and political, native and foreign, centre in the town of Ne-e-gata, it will not be out of place to give our readers such information as the limited communication hitherto held with it by foreigners affords.

Ne-e-gata lies, as students of Japanese geography know, in the province of Echigo, at the mouth of a great river, or rather at the confluence of several rivers which take their rise in the provinces of Dewa, Mutsu, Kodzuke, and Shinano. These rivers are navigable for boats for a considerable distance into the interior, affording thus excellent facilities for the transport of goods both inwards and outwards. Unfortunately, however, as is the case with every Japanese river, the current is so strong as to create a very obstructive and dangerous bar at the mouth, so that no European vessel can enter, and even Japanese junks have to unload their cargoes outside.

The town, which lies about half a mile inside the mouth, is of considerable size, and neatly laid out in squares, with narrow canals just big enough for small boats to pass along intersecting it crossways. In spite of the rather dirty water which these canals contain, they add considerably to the appearance of the place, fringed as they are with willow trees throughout.

The climate of Ne-e-gata is much more severe in winter than that of Yokohama, and the snow usually falls to the depth of two or three feet. The houses are built with their gables towards the streets, and the roofs are prolonged beyond the walls in such a way as to prevent the snow from blocking up the windows. In several thoroughfares the path runs under the eaves of the lower story, so that locomotion is easy and comfortable in all weathers. The temperature in summer also appears to be much cooler than that of any of the other ports, with the exception of Hakodati, and life is made more endurable by the liberal supplies of frozen snow which are procured from the mountain of Aidzu.

The country round Ne-e-gata for a considerable distance, probably forty miles at least, is perfectly flat, and appears very fertile. No doubt it is well adapted for excursions on horseback, and in that respect probably will be found to surpass any other part of Japan as yet opened to the residence of foreigners.

The manufactures of the town are apparently not extensive. A great quantity of lacquer ware of a coarse kind is made there, and articles of a peculiar pattern called mokusa nuri or seaweed lacquer are brought for sale from Aidzu, where they are produced. A bad species of red porcelain is also procurable. In the country districts a fabric of flax, called Echigo chijimi, a sort of muslin, is manufactured, but the patterns are such as would probably prevent its ever forming an article of export. Silk and silk-worms' eggs are no doubt obtainable in considerable quantities from Dewa and Shinano, but the trade in those staples has yet to be created. The district of Aidzu contains coal, which, if worked, will supply steam vessels trading thither with fuel for their return voyages. Another product which may probably some day or other form an article of export is petroleum oil, which issues out of the ground in considerable quantities, and is to a certain extent used by the natives in their lamps.

The climate of Echigo being so temperate is probably well adapted for the growth of European vegetables and fruits. Indeed there is already a species of apple to be found there, which far surpasses both in taste and size the specimens of that fruit which the neighbourhood of Yedo produces.

Of the inhabitants, of course, little is as yet known. They appear, however, very well disposed towards foreigners, and have the great virtue, which is rare in this country, of being extremely hardworking and industrious.

Owing to the badness of the anchorage at Ne-e-gata, arrangements have been made by which vessels can anchor at Ebisujima, in the island of Sado, where they can unload and store their cargoes whenever the occurrence of bad weather on the bar at the former place renders landing there an impossibility. Ebisujima itself is, however, not the sailor's beau-ideal of an anchorage, being exposed to the north-west gales; but, unfortunately, there is no other place in the neighbourhood which is equally advantageous, and we shall probably have to content ourselves with it until measures can be taken for rendering the mouth of the river at Ne-e-gata navigable for vessels of moderate burthen. It is truly a pity that a town with such capital internal communication should lack that upon which, after all, the development of its trade to any great extent really depends.

No foreign settlements have been set apart either at Ne-e-gata or Ebisujima. The experiment is to be tried of allowing foreigners to rent houses in the two towns, and live among the natives. No doubt it will answer well at first, while the number of residents is small, provided good insurable godowns are built in a spot where the danger of fire will be small; and no doubt when foreigners assemble there in large numbers they will find means of renting land and buildings in a quarter for themselves. The theory of intercourse with the Japanese naturally supposes that we should live amongst them; and, in fact, the treaties all recognise this theory, no provision having been made in the case of any port or city for any exclusively foreign quarter; and we are glad to find an opportunity of trying whether any other relations than those of mere buyer and seller are possible for us.

At the present moment it is doubtful in whose hands Ne-e-gata is. The result of the fighting which has lately taken place in Echigo is said to have been favourable to the Kioto forces, and if their successes continue we shall probably hear before long that the Mikado's officials have taken possession. By the last advices they were reported to have captured the fortress of Nagaoka, which commands the upper waters of the Shinano river, and from thence to Ne-e-gata the country is quite level, offering no obstacles to an invading force.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

(Received via Galle, Oct. 6.)

Hong Kong, Sept. 17.—Gray Shirtings, 6¼ catty, $2.90. Water Twist, $125. Cotton, $17. Tea, at Canton, very quiet; better demand at Foochow, at reduced prices. Total export, 95,000,000 lbs. Exchange on London, 4s. 7d. The Hong Kong money market is very tight.

Silk, dull and declining; No. 3 Tsatlee, 580 taels; settlements in fortnight, 3,500 bales; export to date, 35,750 bales. Exchange on London, 6s. 1¼d. Freights, tea and silk, £3 10s.

The Pacific Railroad is making rapid strides. The road is now completed for a distance of about 850 miles from the New York end, and from the San Francisco end about 250 miles, leaving a distance of about 600 miles intervening, which is performed by caravans or stage coaches; by the end of this year the distance will be further reduced, and is to be finally completed next year. The time at present occupied between San Francisco and New York is now only thirteen days. The service is a daily one, and several persons have lately come through that way from China and Japan. The cost of telegraphing between San Francisco and New York is £1 for ten words.

SHIPS REPORTS.

The British barque Luzon, from Sunderland, reports having had fine weather to the line, which was crossed on the 6th May, in long. 26 W. Had light S.E. trades and moderate weather to the Cape of Good Hope, the meridian of which was passed on the 8th June, in lat. 37 S. Sighted Java Head on the 27th July, and passed Anjer on the same day. Up the China Sea had fine weather until near Pulo Sepatoo, when experienced a strong gale from N.W. to S.W. Afterwards had moderate weather to arrival; 136 days out.

The North German barque Ellen Rickmers, from Bremerhaven, reports having had very fine weather the whole passage out, with the exception of a few days dirty weather off the Cape of Good Hope. Arrived at Singapore on the 2nd of July, and having discharged part of the cargo, took in some Chinese passengers, and left again on August 6th, experienced in the China Sea variable weather to arrival.

The American ship Gamecock, from New York, 11th May, reports having had fine weather and light winds to the line, which was passed on the 10th of June; 33 days out. Experienced bad S.E. trades and dirty weather to the Cape of Good Hope, the meridian of which was passed on the 8th July; 58 days out. The run to Java Head was made in 24 days, and Anjer was passed on the 1st August; 82 days out. Up the China Sea had light and variable winds to arrival; 95 days out at sea.

The British steamer Shantung, from Glasgow, April 13th, reports having had a gale of wind off the West Coast of Ireland on the 19th, 20th, and 21st April, during which the starboard lifeboat got unhooked and washed away. Sighted Madeira (9 miles distant) on the 30th of April. Crossed the line on the 17th May in long. 22.10 West. Passed the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope on the 14th June, and experienced stiff weather in running down the Easting. Made Java Head on the 20th of July, and passed Anjer on the 24th July, afterwards up the China Sea had generally light winds, except on August the 2nd, when the weather became threatening, and the barometer fell. On the 3rd August the Shantung lay to and also on the 4th, the wind shifting from N.E. to S.W. and S.E.; afterwards had moderate winds to arrival; 119 days out.

THE CHINA TREATY QUESTION.

(NEW YORK HERALD.)

The Times asserts that the Chinese have been "agressive" towards Britain, and exhibited a "disregard of treaties," "fraud," "ill faith," and "evasion," until the authorities in Peking had come to attribute the "leniency" of England towards them to fear, and now give her the "go-by as the principal leading Power in foreign policy." The word "go-by" is very expressive, but in our opinion England should be greatly rejoiced to receive the "go-by" from a government so faithless and ungrateful as the Chinese has proved towards her, as set forth in the editorial indictment, and we think that Queen Victoria and Lord Stanley should be very much obliged to Mr. Burlinghame for his successful effort to aid them in dealing with a nation which is evidently inclined to interpret matters affecting its own peculiar interests in a sense different from theirs. The main clauses of the treaty of Tientsin are to be placed, we are told, in abeyance "indefinitely" by the Chinese; but England cannot be injured by this, as Mr. Burlinghame will, no doubt, present to the Cabinet in London a clean copy of his simple China-American treaty, which Mr. Disraeli may adopt in its stead, with suitable modifications, if he so choose.

The cable summary of the London Times' article leads one to infer that this will not be done, for in it we have a one-sided allusion to war in the words "China will not be the theatre of war between foreign Powers unless by a result of American policy." American policy will not originate foreign war; it has never tended in such direction. Our policy never tended in such direction. Our policy towards China is a policy of railroads, telegraphs, steamboats and steamships, miners and crowbars, trade and travel by San Francisco, the Pacific Railroad, New York, and vice versa, an honest barter and exchange, missionaries, and the free acceptance of China into the family of nations as an independent Power. Mr. Burlinghame will assure the Queen of England of all this and more. The London Times, however, hints that Great Britain may prove obstructive to some extent. It is charged that the rulers of China are "exclusive," but it is the "people" who want "free intercourse," and "it is the duty of England to sustain the people against the rulers." The first part of this accusation is disproved by the fact of the Chinese government having confided such an important and civilizing mission to Mr. Burlingame; while the intimation of an English remedy for these difficulties by exciting rebellion in the empire sets forth the desperate strait to which her diplomacy in Asia is likely to be reduced. When before did Great Britain ever talk of sustaining a "people against their rulers," with the exception of an interested and left-handed aid to Greece? An official endorsement of the spirit of the London Times by English action in China would be very likely to lead to war somewhat to the eastward.

MANILA.

The complete and unexampled success of the Spanish revolution, which at present occupies the attention of all Europe, forms by far the most important item of news conveyed by the outgoing mail. The definite result of the movement will have been awaited with anxiety throughout the East, but nowhere so much as in the Philippines, to which colony the event is fraught with serious import. Here it is noticed that there has been very little speculation as to the effect of the revolution in Spanish possessions abroad; and what little attention has been turned towards them is entirely monopolised by Cuba, probably owing to its comparative proximity, and the well-known desire of the United States to "annex" that rich dependency at the earliest possible opportunity. The Navy, it will be seen, has pronounced for the revolution en masse, and it is hardly likely that the leaders have neglected so obvious a precaution as to detach a portion of the fleet to take possession of Cuba in the name of the Provisional Government. But Manila being so much more remote cannot be so readily dealt with, and we shall await with deep interest the news of the reception there of this important intelligence. So little doubt is there that the expulsion of the Bourbon dynasty is complete and final, that the best course for the authorities to adopt will be to give in their adhesion. at once and unreservedly, to the Provisional Government. It is true that the ultimate form of government is still uncertain; but all probabilities point to the adoption of a constitutional monarchy. At any rate, no change that can take place can possibly be for the worse; on the contrary, we have every reason to hope that a new era is now to be inaugurated that will not only be favourable to civil and religious liberty, but to commerce as well, and this latter of course indicates renewed prosperity to the Philippines.

TRANSIT OF THE MAILS THROUGH FRANCE.

A good deal of dissatisfaction is expressed at the miserably inefficient arrangements of the French authorities for expediting the transit of the homeward India and China mails through France. As a rule, the P. and O. Company's steamers have kept admirable time under the new contract, and on several occasions have delivered the mails at Marseilles in advance of their due date, but we have derived no advantage from this for the reason above named. The last mail, for instance, was delivered at Marseilles by the Pera at 11 P.M. on Thursday, the 1st instant, and, had a train been provided for its conveyance to Paris, letters would have been received here on the morning of Saturday, the 3rd; instead of this, it had to wait at Marseilles until 11.30 the following morning, a detention of twelve hours and a-half, which, as Sunday intervened, practically caused a delay of forty-eight hours in the delivery of the letters in London. It has been suggested that in such a case as this a special train ought to be put on, unless the steamer is signalled and known to be close at hand when the ordinary train is leaving, when it might be detained to convey the mails. We understand that the outward French mail of the present month will leave Marseilles on the 19th as usual; the arrangements for despatching it on a fixed day of the week could not be perfected in time to affect this one, but will probably come into operation, as we have already announced, next month.

DUTCH RESTRICTIONS ON FOREIGN TRADE.

We recently had occasion to comment on the absurdly illiberal policy pursued by the Dutch Government in imposing double duties on all goods imported into Java such as are not manufactured in Holland. This, it was remarked, acted as an incentive to foreign shippers to adopt any device that presented itself to get their goods certified as being of Dutch manufacture—such, for instance, as sending English-made cotton goods to be bleached in Holland and shipped thence. Further inquiries into the subject show the absurdity of the system in a still stronger light, for we are credibly informed that the Dutch Government is not only fully aware of the existence of these modes of evasion, but actually afford facilities for carrying them on a fact; which pretty clearly indicates that they are satisfied that their own manufacturers have no need to fear open competition with ours. What, then, can be the object of continuing a regulation which becomes practically non-existent, owing to its evasion being officially winked at? Simply, it would seem, that by its pressure our shippers may be induced to send their cottons to Holland to be bleached, dyed, or printed, and to ship them thence in Dutch vessels, whereby the Dutch bleacher or dyer, and the Dutch shipowner, each pocket a portion of the profit. In point of fact, what they say is:—"Send us "your gray goods—we will charge no duty on them here; "and if you have them dyed, bleached, or printed in Hol- "land we will give you a (false) certificate that they are "of our own manufacture, and thus enable you to land "them in Java at half the duty you would otherwise pay." Some people ask, what does it matter, so long as our goods are brought into the market, how they get there? To us it seems a matter of considerable importance; the trade is an increasing one, and it would be far more satisfactory if English merchants could ship direct to the port of consumption. Under present circumstances it is evident that Dutch manufacturers can compete successfully with our own. Of late, English firms have been making regular purchases in Holland of shirtings and drills for Java, and T-Cloths of good quality are also procurable there. It is a pity that our Government does not bring a little quiet pressure to bear on that of Holland, to induce a revision of the antiquated system of restrictions by which the Dutch colonial trade is fettered.

NOTES FROM FRANCE.

Our Paris Correspondent sends us the following notes on topics likely to have a special interest for our readers:—

The expedition sent out under the direction of Captain Dondart de Lagree, of the Imperial navy, two years since, to explore the River Camboge and Indo-China has returned to France. The expedition left Saigon on the 5th June, 1866, and went up the river in a gunboat as far as Cratich. Above this navigation is impossible for a steamer, and the expedition made its way in native boats as far as Bassac, an important point in Lower Laos, and there waited according to instructions for the return of the dry season, and the arrival of passports and certain instruments. The rebellion of Camboge, however, broke out, and all communication with Cochin China was cut off. After an ineffectual attempt to descend the river the officer second in command, by taking a circuitous route towards the west, succeeded in reaching Puum-Peinh, and in rejoining the expedition with the required passports. The whole party then started for the north, and in the following month of May reached Luang-Prabang in Laos, 920 miles from the mouth of the river, where the French explorer, Monhot, had previously lost his life. Here the rainy season set in again, and the difficulties of the expedition were increased by the suspicious and defiant conduct of the native chiefs. It required all the energy of the head of the expedition and many painful sacrifices to enable the expedition to proceed. In order not to abandon the geological and botanical specimens collected they were compelled to leave behind them a part of their instruments, books, and most of their effects; serious maladies attacked nearly the whole of the party, who reached the capital of Yunnan in the last week of December, 1867, in a state of great exhaustion, and stripped of almost everything.

The cordiality exhibited by the Chinese authorities towards the travellers is said to have been complete, and the expedition, recovered from its fatigues, might have reached the navigable part of the Yang-tsé-Kiang in twenty-five days; but Captain LAGREE, supported by the unanimous advice of his companions, resolved to explore the Me-kong at the point where it quits Thibet. The war which then raged between the Mahomedan party and the Chinese Government made it necessary to take a circuitous route, remounting the Yang-tsé-Kiang, and making the town of Taly, situated on the banks of a lake which was known to empty itself into the Me-kong. Poor Captain LAGREE unfortunately fell ill at Tong-Tchouan, where he remained alone with Dr. JOUBERT, while M. GARNIEUR, second in command, conducted the rest of the party as far as Taly, but the threatening attitude of the Mussulman authorities forced them to retrace their steps to Tong-Tchouan, which they reached in April, and found that Captain LAGREE had been dead three weeks. The expedition then descended the Blue River, and reached Shanghai on the 12th June.

The results of this expedition are given as follows:—The course of the Me-kong has been ascertained to the extent of 1,500 miles, and that of the Yang-tsé-Kiang 300 miles beyond the point reached by the last English expedition; the sources of the Tong-king have been ascertained, and the basins of the Menam and the Salveen more precisely determined. In an archæological and ethnographical point of view the expedition is said to have brought home some important and interesting documents, which, if they do not entirely solve the complicated problem presented by Indo-China, go far to facilitate future research.

A very sharp discussion is said to have taken place recently between the Ministers of the Viceroy of EGYPT and M. DE LESSEPS respecting the port of Suez. It appears that the energetic President of the Isthmus of Suez Company, taking advantage of a clause in the treaty between the VICEROY and the company, allowed all merchandise, whether from the East or elsewhere, to enter Suez duty free. Against such a construction of the treaty the Egyptian Governments protested loudly, and when the last news left the question was being arbitrated. Of course such an arrangement as that of M. DE LESSEPS would have a considerable effect in inducing merchants to import by way of Suez, and if the treaty in question contain such a provision we do not see why it should not be carried out; but we do not understand how M. DE LESSEPS could have the power to admit goods duty free by way of Suez—he is not quite as much master there, we presume, as at Port Said.

The Paris journals have been making a great fuss about the magnificent banquet given by the French Consul-General, M. POUJADE, to MEHEMET PACHA, heir to the Viceroyalty of Egypt; we are told how the Prussian Consul had a fit of jealousy, offered the Prince an entertainment at a village two leagues from Alexandria, how the affair was a complete failure, and how "all the world laughed and is laughing still about the affair from Alexandria to Cairo." Of course when ridicule is abroad our friends here in Paris never forget England, and the Ganlois finishes its account with the following imaginary and complimentary paragraphs:—"The "Consul-General of England, warned by experience, sought "and discovered a better compensation. The telegraph having "carried to the Foreign-office the news of the prestige of "France in the above circumstances, Lord STANLEY decided "immediately that the VICEROY should receive the insignia "of Knight Grand Commander of the Order of the Star of "India. The despatch (of Lord STANLEY) being received at "the British Agency, was sent without delay to the VICEROY, "who unfortunately received coldly this sterile mark of the "friendship of the English leopard. In a word, France "holds the reins in the East, and she will keep them." The policy and delicacy of the above lines require no comment. As a certain writer said of his father we may say of the Ganlois—"If we cannot take it as an example we can use it as warning!"

THE UNITED STATES AND JAPAN.

WE learn from San Francisco that the Japanese Commissioners who were recently in the United States purchasing war vessels, and who returned to Japan in the ram Stonewall, have arrived once more in San Francisco, in the steamer Great Republic. They were compelled to leave Yokohama for their personal safety. The Japanese authorities (of the Southern faction) threatened, it is said, to decapitate them if captured, so they are determined to remain in the United States until political affairs in Japan are settled. They say they have been under the protection of the American Minister ever since their return to Japan. A despatch from Washington states that Captain BROWN, U.S.N., who was detailed to carry the rebel ram Stonewall to the Japanese Government, to whom she has been sold by the United States, is still in command; and although he flies the American flag at the mast-head, he repudiates any authority of the United States over her, and will hold her against all the Powers combined, if necessary, until he turns her over to the Japanese Government, in whose employment he now is. The impression is that the civil war in Japan will soon close, when the Stonewall will be delivered to the winning party.

THE YANGTSZE RIVER TRADE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—It may be interesting to the readers of this valuable paper to know something about the steam communication on the great river Yangtzekiang, China, and it will no doubt be a matter of surprise to them to find that the whole of the important trade, import and export (the latter with reference to tea) should be conveyed to and from Shanghai by American steamers, especially as the American stake in commerce in this river is, comparatively speaking, a mere nothing, the British merchants doing all the business.

The following are the steamers running, seven in number, viz.:—

	Nominal Horse power.	Carrying capacity. Tons.
American steamer Hirado	250	2,300
" " Fusiyama	250	2,000
" " Kiangloong	350	1,900
" " Tahwah	100	800
" " Plymouth Rock ...	400	2,300
" " Moyune	250	1,600
" " Fire Queen	400	2,400

all belonging to the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company. The riverine ports these steamers touch at on the passage to Shanghai are Chinkiang and Kiukiang, and there is not one American firm at either, all being English. The rate of freight for tea from Hankow to Shanghai is Tls. 5 a ton of 40 feet. Take the tael at 6s. exchange, and you have the rate in sterling, £1 10s. The distance is a little over 600 miles, and the voyage is performed in three days. Since the 1st June these steamers have conveyed to Shanghai 280,000 chests tea. A well organised English company started at home would be able in time to have all this trade under the English flag. Let practical men come out and inspect this great river, and see for themselves the class of boats running and improve on them, for they can be improved on, inasmuch as the hulls of the steamer can be made of iron instead of wood, as at present. I consider this a magnificent field for English capitalists. The Union Steam Navigation Company have as yet only two small steamers under the English flag. Surely the British merchant in the Far East is not going to allow the Americans to have the whole coast and river trade in China in their own hands, but have the British merchants' valuable cargoes of Manchester goods and tea carried under the English flag and protection. There are now a number of gentlemen long connected with China in London who would render any company forming their valuable advice and assistance. The rate of passage money is, for first class passengers from Shanghai to Chinkiang, Tls. 10, at 6s. equal to £3; from Shanghai to Kiukiang, Tls. 40, at 6s. equal to £12; from Shanghai to Hankow, Tls. 40, at 6s. equal to £12. Chinese passengers pay Tls. 15, or £4 10s. each. The rate of freight on Manchester goods is Tls. 6 per ton from Shanghai to Hankow; Tls. 6, at 6s. equal to £1 16s. per ton measurement.

The Shanghai Steam Navigation Company have nearly the whole trade to the gulf ports as well.

I trust you will give this a place in your paper, as some capitalists may be induced to take this matter into their consideration. I enclose my card.—I remain, yours faithfully, H.

Hankow, China, July 25, 1868.

As figures speak for themselves, here is one instance of what these American steamers make:—The American steamer Fire Queen left Hankow for Shanghai on the 19th inst. with 2,000 tons of tea belonging to English merchants (picking up more at Kiukiang), at Tls. 6 per ton, equal to Tls. 12,000, at 6s. exchange equal to £3,600, and arriving in Shanghai on the morning of the 22nd inst., say ninety hours' run. The steamers Hirado and Fusiyama cost Tls. 300,000, and paid for themselves in one year.

I enclose the reports to date of the companies.

Continental Intelligence.

NORTH GERMANY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

HAMBURG, October 6.

The North German corvette Vineta, Captain Kuhn, after an absence of three years has returned from Japan, and arrived at Kiel on the 1st inst. In the meantime, the commander has been promoted (ever since last autumn) to the rank of rear-admiral, and will probably be intrusted with the command of the Baltic squadron, vacant by the recall of Vice-Admiral Jachmann to Berlin, and his appointment to a seat in the Council of the Admiralty, and since then held as a temporary appointment by Captain, now Rear-Admiral Held, who was promoted to his present rank by the King of Prussia on the occasion of his late visit to Kiel.

According to the latest official returns the North German navy is now composed of 3 admirals (with the military rank of generals in the army), 4 full captains with the rank of colonels, 20 corvette-capitains or commanders (with the rank of lieutenant-colonel), 34 captain-lieutenants (with the rank of captain in the army), 47 lieutenants, 32 sub-lieutenants, and 174 naval cadets. Whilst the aristocratical element, as is well known, usurps the lion's share as officers in the land service, the commoners prevail in the navy; for among the 27 superior officers of the latter there are to be found the names of 5 nobles and 22 commoners, and out of the 113 subalterns are 37 nobles and 76 commoners. These proportions appear likely to exist for a long time to come, for among the 174 cadets only 56 belong to the aristocracy. Of the 47 lieutenants no less than 20 have been taken from the merchant service. A good many officers belonging to North German families, having been serving in the Austrian army, have quitted that service and found employment and better pay at home.

The latest accounts from the Amoor represent the goldfields as continuing to be exceedingly prolific. A letter from Nertschinsk states that M. Bernardaki employs more than 700 persons in washing gold at his place near Albasin, and has found so much of the precious metal that he is making arrangements to commence operations in the spring with a thousand workmen. In four private establishments more than 52 poods of gold have been obtained this summer. The richest district is that on the right bank of the river Unda, at a distance of only seven wersts from the settlement. Wood and water are there in abundance, and provisions are easily procurable.

Letters have been received here announcing the total loss of the Hamburg brig Antelope (belonging to Messrs. Ross, Vidal and Co., of this city), which on her voyage from Hamburg to Shanghai struck on a sunken reef in the Gaspar Straits, filled and went down so suddenly that the crew had barely time to take to their boats and escape with their lives, leaving everything on board. She was fully insured, and the Hamburg underwriters are losers to the amount of 300,000 marks banco.

Thirty-eight thousand muskets, mostly in good condition and serviceable, captured by the Prussian army in the war of 1866, have been sold to a house in this city. They are now being sent hither by railway, from the artillery depot at Stettin, and will be shipped for China by one of the vessels now loading here for Hong Kong.

COMMERCIAL.

There has been a good deal of business done in cleaned rice at full prices, whilst no transactions in rough are reported. Several cargoes have come to hand as reported below, but the 8,800 bags of Necransie, per Midas, from Akyab, as well as the 10,500 bags of Rangoon, per Undine, were sold some time ago for delivery on arrival, and the 6,000 bags from Bassein, per Codan, are still in the market. In teas there is no alteration to notice, and the sales were confined to a few hundred chests, chiefly of black. The stocks of cassia lignea are nearly exhausted, and prices are still rising. The next arrivals will find a ready sale, and a large profit cannot fail to be realised. There is more doing in cardamom and ginger. Pepper firm. The spelter market is steady and again looking up, though not so lively as last mail, the sales being only 1,000 centners loco. at 13 marks 8 sch. bco. and 1,000 ditto for spring delivery at 13.7½. The present quotations are 13.10 loco. and 13.8 for delivery. Discount 1½ to 2 per cent.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVED.—Duchess of Brabant, from Sourabaya (14,000 bags of sugar, &c.); Undine, from Rangoon (10,500 bags rice); Arracan, from Bombay (3,935 bales cotton); Codan, from Bassein (6,000 bags rice); Midas, from Akyab (8,800 bags rice).

SHIPPING AT BREMERHAVEN.

ARRIVED.—Ellina, from Bassein (5,000 b. rice); Hiawatha, from Rangoon (10,864 b. rice); Mercur, from Rangoon (9,288 b. rice); North Star, from Rangoon (12,610 b. rice); Overmann, from Saigon (10,560 b. rice); India, from Batavia (8,431 b. rice); Nydia, from Akyab (12,200 b. rice); Ernst, from Bangkok (10,980 b. rice); O. Thyen, from Bassein (9,530 b. rice); Athena, from Rangoon (15,542 b. rice); Northumbrian, from Bombay (2,840 b. cotton); Orient, from Rangoon (5,200 b. rice); Cameo, from Rangoon (13,258 b. rice); Susannah Bleasdale, from Rangoon; Energie, from Rangoon; Spitfire, from Saigon; Velocity, from Akyab—cargoes not yet reported.

LOADING.—For Rangoon: Constantia, Louis Henry, China, Mercur. For Hong Kong: Johann Smidt. For Honolulu: Ka Moi.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, October 6.

Parliament has been opened with a party fight upon the instruction question. The Opposition endeavoured to create a lenghthened debate in the First Chamber about this matter, when the members dealt with the reply to the speech from the Throne, and no less than four days were taken up with this question alone. Anti-revolutionists, clericals and Conservatives united in calling for a revision of the existing laws. Their object is to annihilate the neutral, that is the anti-sectarian school, which being under State control is the only one subsidised. They object to Jews, Protestants and Roman Catholics being permitted to learn in the same school, they object to religious instruction being prohibited, and notwithstanding that they are free to erect schools at their own cost, they are now agitating for a Bill to subsidise private as well as Government schools. The attempt has failed, the amendments being rejected, with an overwhelming majority. But this debate, as well as the mandement of the bishops, by which they opened a crusade against the Ministry, has greatly embittered party feeling. The other paragraphs of the reply did not call for much discussion; and the draft of the commission passed by fifty-nine against thirteen votes.

The Opposition has again endeavoured to raise a discussion about colonial matters, but without success. There will be, however, plenty of opportunity for such a debate when the India budget for 1869 is brought under discussion. This budget was laid before the members some days ago, and I extract from it the following particulars. The total expenditure is estimated to be f.103,415,666. Out of this sum the Home Administration in India takes f.47,892,136; the Department of Instruction, Public Worship, and Industry, f.7,237,249; Public Works, f.8,312,244; the War Department, f.21,384,340; and the Marine Department, f.7,678,514. The estimated revenue is f.119,034,024, including these items:—800,000 piculs of coffee, f.37,544,805; 700,000 piculs sugar, f.13,009,276; 800,000 piculs Banca tin, f.5,322,466; spices, f.988,863; opium, f.10,730,000; customs' duties, f.7,836,000; salt, f.6,200,000; and ground rents, f.12,638,500. The revenue leaves an estimated profit of f.15,618,358, that is f.4,812,489 more than in 1868. The Minister regrets that he was not able to lay this budget earlier before the members. The net profit, which is considerably larger than last year, has not been obtained by overrating the revenues of the cultures of the State. The Minister is en principe an enemy of the system of conveying produce to Holland to be sold, and he has ordered the quantity of sugar to be sold in India this year to be increased by 50,000 piculs. Finally the Minister promises next spring to bring in a Bill to amend the laws relating to sugar cultivation. It need not be said that this budget will cause a very lengthened debate, but is also quite certain that we shall not advance one step towards the solution of the India question, which has been so long before the House. Some of the papers regret that the Minister has not proposed a subsidy for a steam line between Java and Australia, which is an urgent necessity now that more produce is sold in India.

In the budget for Holland, which was delivered in one of the first sittings of this session, the revenue is estimated at 96,836,633f., and the expenditure at 96,727,022f.; say, Foreign Affairs, 525,094f.; Justice, 3,106,459f.; Home Department, 21,106,785f.; Navy. 9,383,561f.; National Debt, 28,073,637f.; Financial Department, 14,033,285f.; and War Department, 14,659,000f. The expenditure is about three million guilders less than in former years, whilst the revenues are only decreased by about 200,000f. These figures give much satisfaction, but the expenditure on behalf of the navy and army is still very high, and indeed absorbs about a quarter of the total revenue.

The following particulars I derive from the official returns of trade, for the year 1867, which were published some days ago. With reference to our commercial relations with the Far East, these returns state that from China only two vessels arrived, importing a value of 2,123,745f., whilst only one vessel was chartered for that country, exporting a value of 414,580f. In 1866 the import amounted to 1,675,731f., and the export to 242,512f. From Japan no merchandise was imported direct, but the indirect imports were valued at 1,850f., and four vessels sailed for Japan with cargoes amounting to 660,293f. During the past year 297 vessels arrived from Java, conveying produce to the value of 93,461,520f., whilst 141 vessels exported an amount of 57,136,907f. These figures only show a trifling difference from 1866, when the export was 53,482,593f., and the import 92,834,937f. The exportations to Australia amounted to 285,590f., against 425,723f. in 1866. No imports were registered. From the British Indies 33 vessels arrived, with a value of 7,946,305f., whilst 15 vessels sailed for those colonies with cargoes amounting to 2,799,604f.

Some of our Japan traders have again endeavoured to obtain from the Government an indemnification for the losses they sustained by the last war in Japan. They have addressed a memorial to the members of the States General, in which they do not set forth any right to demand an indemnification, but they urge that in equity and fairness they ought to be recompensed out of the sum of 645,000 dollars, of which the Japan Government has paid one-half. They state their ability to prove their losses by their books.

The Arnhemsche Courant publishes more bad news from the Coast of Africa. The Minister of the Colonial Department, who has been interpellated on the subject, has not given the asked explanations, but has promised a report shortly.

The secretary of the committee of the festivals, which will take place at Batavia to commemorate the 250 years' existence of the colony, on which occasion a statue will be inaugurated in behalf of Jan Pieterszoon Koen, has addressed a letter to Mr. J. C. Reynst, in order that he might encourage the Dutch to contribute to the fund. This correspondence has been inserted in the Staats Courant, and a large sum will be contributed in the mother country.

The question of Mr. Cd. Busken Huet, who, it is said, received a sum of 3,000f. from a Conservative Minister when he left to become the editor of the Liberal Java Bode, has been brought before the Second Chamber. Mr. Lenting asked for some explanations, whereupon the Minister promised that he would lay before the members all the documents regarding the matter.

the occasion of these rumours being brought into circulation. By making up the balance to June, 1868, it was shown that, up to that date, there was a loss of 330,000f., but this did not include the result of our operations in Netherlands India during that period, of which we have received favourable news. The said loss will be modified by the result of the second half-year of 1868." Further, it is stated that measures have been taken to prevent further losses of this kind; and that, notwithstanding the said loss will have a bad influence on the dividend, it will not affect the security which is given by the capital of the bank. This circular has given much satisfaction in financial circles, and of course it is better to know the truth. There are, however, some who do not find this circular quite clear; amongst them is a correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, who has asked for further explanations.

From the budget of Foreign Affairs I ascertain that the salary of the Consul-General at Japan, Mr. de Graef van Polsbraek, will not be increased, notwithstanding that the necessity of so doing was urged lately in Parliament.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Coffee.—On the 23rd ult. the Dutch Trading Company held a public auction, at which 122,126 b. Java and Padang were offered. The whole quantity was sold, but at somewhat lower prices than were paid in the sale of the former month, especially for the white Java and the Preanger qualities. Since the auction there has been a good demand, and the market closes firm. The following transactions took place:—500 b. Java, ex Susanne, at secret prices; 1,046 b. do., ex Vice-Admiraal May, at 42c.; 800 b. do., ex Cornelia Hendrika, from 17½c. to 33c.; and 700 b., ex Karel August. The total stock of coffee amounts to 575,250 b., against 461,100 b. in 1867.

Sugar (Raw).—On the 24th ult. the Dutch Trading Company held its auction, at which 48,963 mats were offered. The market being very dull it was generally thought that the result would be unsatisfactory. This, however, was not the case, the whole quantity being sold at 1f. under the July value—No. 13, 32¾f.; No. 14, 33¼f.; No. 15, 33¾f.; No. 16, 34f. The greatest quantity was bought by our home refiners, the desire to buy for abroad being very limited. There is now a good demand, and the following quantities have changed hands:—779 mats Indramajoe, ex Otto, No. 12, at 31f.; 445 mats Probolingo, ex Garibaldi, No. 10¾, at 29½f.; 165 mats Cheribon, No. 14, at 31½f.; 1,083 mats Sourabaya, ex Vooruit, No. 19; 218 mats do., ex County of Lanark, No. 11¾; 716 do. Samarang, ex Æolus, No. 12½, at 31½f.; 371 do. Sourabaya, ex Ternate, No. 15½; 493 do. do., No. 12¾; 226 do. do., ex Hollandstrouw, No. 14, at 32½f.; 256 do. do., ex County of Lanark, No. 10½, at 29½f.; 1,285 do. do., ex Bato, No. 10¾, at 30f. The market closes with animation. The unsold stock of the Trading Company was, on the 1st inst., 26,867 mats, against 16,017 mats in 1867. The private stock was 25,457 mats.

Rice.—There are no particulars of any importance; the market is dull, and buyers decline to operate.

Spices.—There is a lively demand for fine quality, and in general 2c. are demanded above the prices paid in the last auction. Nutmegs, No. 1, were sold at 76c., but they cannot be bought now under 77c. Mace in good demand; L D, 118c. to 119c.; L E, 114c. Cloves, No. 2, 27½ to 28c. The (warrants) stock of the Trading Company was on the 1st inst.:—Nutmegs, 4,986 casks; Mace, 721 casks; Cloves, 2,946 casks, Cinnamon, 453 mats; Pepper, 3,104 bales.

Tea.—A floating cargo direct from China, per Stinchar, of Java tea 7,827/4, 552/8, 240/12, and 90/16 chests will be offered in public auction on the 4th November. No valuation is known yet. The 227/4, 82/12 ch. Java and 17/4 and 74/12 ch. China, sold in auction on the 24th Sept., were paid with 85c. to 111c. for Congou, 77c. to 80c. for Joosjees, 91c. to 98c. for Souchong, 81c. to 112c. for Uxim, 84c. to 98c. for Tonkay, and 85c. to 95c. for Hysant. There is some demand for consumption, especially of low qualities.

Tobacco (Java leaves).—The market is rather dull and inactive. The transactions include 161 bales V. and H. Blitar at secret prices, but which are thought to be 75c.; 680 bales A. S. Malang; 389 b. K. P.; 220 b. V. S., all sold in average at 45c.; 608 b. Java, A. and L. Penawangan, ex Eva Johanna. On the 7th inst. about 4,000 bales will be offered in public auction. Manila meets with a lively demand, and higher prices are waited for. The stock of Java tobacco is 15,888 bales; of Manila, 8 bales.

Rattans.—On the 16th inst. the Dutch Trading Company have announced to sell at auction 7,740 piculs, which are valued from f.5 to f.12, per 50 kilo. In waiting for this auction the transactions were of no importance, and only included 29 piculs, ex Eva Johanna, and 91 piculs, ex Macassar.

Banca Tin.—The market opened very firm in the beginning of last month, but was, as I stated in my last report, thrown into a very unsettled state on the arrival of the East India mail, reporting the existence of a large stock of tin in the island of Banca, on the 31st of March last. Confidence being restored by subsequent official information, buyers came forward for large quantities, which again brought prices to their former level, holders mostly refusing to sell, in expectation of the result of the Trading Company's sale, which was held on the 30th ult., at which 89,587 slabs were offered. The result was most satisfactory, the whole quantity being realised at f.54½, whilst 1,421 slabs Billiton were sold at f.54. There was an extreme demand for speculation for Amsterdam, so that 89,587 slabs were sold to traders of that town. Of course there has been a lively demand since the auction for direct consumption, and the day after the auction 12,000 slabs Banca were sold, at prices varying from f.54½ to f.57, and 850 slabs Billiton, at f.55 to f.55½. The market closes very firm, and an advance must shortly be paid on present prices. It is said that 70,000 slabs out of the last auction were sold to one house. Stock of Banca of the Trading Company, on warrants, 111,241 slabs; of Billiton, 6,209 slabs.

Money and Stock Market.—Prices are in most cases well supported. Dutch funds have been quiet, without important fluctuations, but foreign classes, after exhibiting firmness, have relapsed a little. The demand for money at the Bank and in the open market is a little more active. Dutch Two Per Cents., 56½; Three Per Cents., 66; Four Per Cents., 87½; Trading Company, 127½; Rotterdam Bank, 80¾ to 81½; Netherlands India Trading Bank, 68.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

Arrivals.—Sept. 21, at Texel, from Batavia, Joseph Holmes; 23, at Texel, from Tjilatjap, Wildeman; 24, at Brouwershaven, from Batavia, Emilie; at Texel, from Batavia, Jane Kilgour; 26, at Texel, from Batavia, Hollandstrouw; 27, at Brouwershaven, from Sourabaya, Concurrent; at Hellevoet, from Sourabaya, County of Lanark; at Texel, from Batavia, Stad Leyden; at Zierikzee, from Batavia, Vooruit; 28, at Texel, from Nagasaki, Lady Love; from Padang, Manila 2; 29, at Brouwershaven, from Batavia, Aeolus; Oct. 3, at Texel, from Batavia, Golden Dream.

GOVERNMENT IN THE COLONIES.

We printed the other day a curious extract from M. Guizot's contribution on modern European politics to the last number of the Revue des deux Mondes, entitled "France and Prussia before Europe." It is worth while to recur to the passage, both as suggestive of some serious thought, and also because it illustrates oddly enough the extremely imperfect character of the knowledge which is acquired of our special affairs even by a writer so well acquainted with us as M. Guizot.

The time of the anecdote is laid during the discussion in Parliament on the Ceylon insurrection, and the measures used by Lord Torrington in suppressing it. M. Guizot represents Mr. Gladstone as having said to him on that occasion, "It is impossible to govern our colonies as we used to do." The responsibility of governors to Parliament, he goes on to say, is "as comprehensive, as minute, as difficult to bear as that of the member of a Cabinet who is present every day in Parliament. This cannot continue. . . . The colonies should be left pretty much to govern themselves, and the mother country should not have to answer at all hours for the whole of their government. That would be a new colonial system to establish. But where is it that something new is not needed now-a-days?" "England," he adds, "was of Mr. Gladstone's opinion;" and the colonies have been chiefly left to themselves accordingly.

From the tenor of this passage it would be inferred that Mr. Gladstone was inspired by the debates on the Ceylon insurrection with the happy thought that colonies ought to be left to govern themselves, and that hence arose the great change in our system, popularly termed the establishment of "responsible government" in colonies. If Mr. Gladstone really did talk in this way with M. Guizot it must have been in the way of very loose after-dinner conversation indeed. These debates took place in 1850. At that time the change in question had been long resolved on, responsible government was already in force in Canada, and the Colonial-office was hard at work in endeavouring to introduce it decorously and with due respect for vested interests in the other North American colonies.

But the supposed sentiments of Mr. Gladstone are still more curiously inconsistent with the real state of the case when looked at from another point of view. Ceylon is one of those colonies, or more strictly dependencies, in which a handful of Europeans is established amidst a large native population. Now, in respect of this class of colonies, there has never been any serious question about self-government. The Governor of Ceylon is just as powerful now—the colonists just as devoid of power—and consequently the former as directly responsible to the executive at home, and to Parliament, as was the case in 1850. Nay, the tendency of things in regard to this class of colonies has been precisely the reverse of that which the alleged conversation presaged. The relics of self-government, which to some extent existed among them in old days, are passing away. Jamaica governed itself a good deal more twenty years ago than it does now. Both those who attacked Governor Eyre and those who defended him quite rightly laid the responsibility for what was done there after the late disturbance on him, and not on the colonists. In some smaller West Indian communities also the old representative constitutions have been given up, and the absolute government of the Colonial-office reintroduced. In the last edition of the little manual of colonial regulations twenty colonies are still enumerated, out of nearly fifty in all, as "Crown colonies," that is, legislated for by the Crown, through nominee councils. Ceylon and Jamaica are both in the number.

This constitutes, on the whole, no doubt, an insignificant exception to the general course of events in favour of the extension of political liberties. But it is remarkable, nevertheless, that, notwithstanding that tendency, the conviction seems to increase that where stronger and weaker races live together the peace can only be maintained by the control of the executive and of its delegate the governor, and that representative institutions are unsuitable. And when we look at the line which events are taking in those unhappy Southern States of America—the blood feud which it seems almost hopeless to avert between the quondam slaves, now voters, and their former masters—one cannot but be tempted to wish, in the interest of common humanity, that the mockery of those institutions could be suspended for a while, and that the way towards a future and happier adjustment of the disordered elements could be paved under a strong and intelligent dictatorship.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for the month and eight months ending 31st August have been issued. The particulars they furnish show a very general falling off in most branches of business. The exports of British and Irish produce for August represented £16,427,597, against £17,880,099 in the corresponding month last year, and £17,450,156 in 1866, thus showing a falling off of £1,453,402, or about 8 per cent., in the declared value of our exportations compared with the corresponding month of last year, and about 6 per cent. from those of August, 1866. These figures, however, are less unfavourable than they appear, since in the two great branches of industry, cotton and woollen manufactures, there has been an increase in the quantity of goods shipped, although their money value has been less. In cotton manufactures there has been a reduction of 5 per cent. in declared value, and an increase of 6 per cent. in quantity, while in woollen manufactures there has been a reduction of 7 per cent. in value, and an increase of 5 per cent. in quantity. Cotton yarn shows a reduction of 15 per cent. in value, and 6 per cent. in quantity. For the eight months the totals are £125,265,820 in 1866, £121,056,913 in 1867, and £116,777,023 in 1868; being a reduction of 3½ per cent. from those of the corresponding period of 1867, and of 6¾ per cent. from those of 1866. The computed real value of merchandise imported in the seven months ending July 31st amounted to £132,283,806, against £128,935,900 in 1867, and £143,544,759 in 1866. The value of the wheat received was £15,320,539, being an increase of nearly £3,000,000 as compared with 1867, and of nearly £8,000,000 with 1866. Cotton shows a reduction in value of £1,361,942 contrasted with 1867, and of as much as £19,162,217 with 1866.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East :—

the occasion of these rumours being brought into circulation. By making up the balance to June, 1868, it was shown that, up to that date, there was a loss of 330,000f., but this did not include the result of our operations in Netherlands India during that period, of which we have received favourable news. The said loss will be modified by the result of the second half-year of 1868." Further, it is stated that measures have been taken to prevent further losses of this kind; and that, notwithstanding the said loss will have a bad influence on the dividend, it will not affect the security which is given by the capital of the bank. This circular has given much satisfaction in financial circles, and of course it is better to know the truth. There are, however, some who do not find this circular quite clear; amongst them is a correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, who has asked for further explanations.

From the budget of Foreign Affairs I ascertain that the salary of the Consul-General at Japan, Mr. de Graef van Polsbraek, will not be increased, notwithstanding that the necessity of so doing was urged lately in Parliament.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Coffee.—On the 23rd ult. the Dutch Trading Company held a public auction, at which 122,126 b. Java and Padang were offered. The whole quantity was sold, but at somewhat lower prices than were paid in the sale of the former month, especially for the white Java and the Preanger qualities. Since the auction there has been a good demand, and the market closes firm. The following transactions took place:—500 b. Java, ex Susanne, at secret prices; 1,046 b. do., ex Vice-Admiraal May, at 42c.; 800 b. do., ex Cornelia Hendrika, from 17½c. to 33c.; and 700 b., ex Karel August. The total stock of coffee amounts to 575,250 b., against 461,100 b. in 1867.

Sugar (Raw).—On the 24th ult. the Dutch Trading Company held its auction, at which 48,963 mats were offered. The market being very dull it was generally thought that the result would be unsatisfactory. This, however, was not the case, the whole quantity being sold at 1f. under the July value—No. 13, 32¾f.; No. 14, 33½f.; No. 15, 33¾f.; No. 16, 34f. The greatest quantity was bought by our home refiners, the desire to buy for abroad being very limited. There is now a good demand, and the following quantities have changed hands:—779 mats Indramajoe, ex Otto, No. 12, at 31f.; 445 mats Probolingo, ex Garibaldi, No. 10¾, at 29½f.; 165 mats Cheribon, No. 14, at 31¾f.; 1,083 mats Sourabaya, ex Vooruit, No. 19; 218 mats do., ex County of Lanark, No. 11¾; 716 do. Samarang, ex Æolus, No. 12½, at 31½f.; 371 do. Sourabaya, ex Ternate, No. 15½; 493 do. do., No. 12¾; 226 do. do., ex Hollandstrouw, No. 14, at 32½f.; 256 do. do., ex County of Lanark, No. 10½, at 29½f.; 1,285 do. do., ex Bato, No. 10¾, at 30f. The market closes with animation. The unsold stock of the Trading Company was, on the 1st inst., 26,867 mats, against 16,017 mats in 1867. The private stock was 25,457 mats.

Rice.—There are no particulars of any importance; the market is dull, and buyers decline to operate.

Spices.—There is a lively demand for fine quality, and in general 2c. are demanded above the prices paid in the last auction. Nutmegs, No. 1, were sold at 76c., but they cannot be bought now under 77c. Mace in good demand; L D, 118c. to 119c.; L E, 114c. Cloves, No. 2, 27½ to 28c. The (warrants) stock of the Trading Company was on the 1st inst.:—Nutmegs, 4,986 casks; Mace, 721 casks; Cloves, 2,946 casks, Cinnamon, 453 mats; Pepper, 3,104 bales.

Tea.—A floating cargo direct from China, per Stinchar, of Java tea 7,827/4, 552/8, 240/12, and 90/16 chests will be offered in public auction on the 4th November. No valuation is known yet. The 227/4, 82/12 ch. Java and 17/4 and 74/12 ch. China, sold in auction on the 24th Sept., were paid with 85c. to 111c. for Congou, 77c. to 80c. for Joo-jees, 91c. to 98c. for Souchong, 81c. to 112c. for Uxim, 84c. to 98c. for Tonkay, and 85c. to 95c. for Hysant. There is some demand for consumption, especially of low qualities.

Tobacco (Java leaves).—The market is rather dull and inactive. The transactions include 161 bales V. and H. Blitar at secret prices, but which are thought to be 75c.; 680 bales A. S. Malang; 389 b. K. P.; 220 b. V. S., all sold in average at 45c.; 608 b. Java, A. and L. Penawangan, ex Eva Johanna. On the 7th inst. about 4,000 bales will be offered in public auction. Manila meets with a lively demand, and higher prices are waited for. The stock of Java tobacco is 15,888 bales; of Manila, 8 bales.

Rattans.—On the 16th inst. the Dutch Trading Company have announced to sell at auction 7,740 piculs, which are valued from f.5 to f.12, per 50 kilo. In waiting for this auction the transactions were of no importance, and only included 29 piculs, ex Eva Johanna, and 91 piculs, ex Macassar.

Banca Tin.—The market opened very firm in the beginning of last month, but was, as I stated in my last report, thrown into a very unsettled state on the arrival of the East India mail, reporting the existence of a large stock of tin in the island of Banca, on the 31st of March last. Confidence being restored by subsequent official information, buyers came forward for large quantities, which again brought prices to their former level, holders mostly refusing to sell, in expectation of the result of the Trading Company's sale, which was held on the 30th ult., at which 89,587 slabs were offered. The result was most satisfactory, the whole quantity being realised at f.54½, whilst 1,421 slabs Billiton were sold at f.54. There was an extreme demand for speculation for Amsterdam, so that 89,587 slabs were sold to traders of that town. Of course there has been a lively demand since the auction for direct consumption, and the day after the auction 12,000 slabs Banca were sold, at prices varying from f.54½ to f.57, and 850 slabs Billiton, at f.55 to f.55½. The market closes very firm, and an advance must shortly be paid on present prices. It is said that 70,000 slabs out of the last auction were sold to one house. Stock of Banca of the Trading Company, on warrants, 111,241 slabs; of Billiton, 6,209 slabs.

Money and Stock Market.—Prices are in most cases well supported. Dutch funds have been quiet, without important fluctuations, but foreign classes, after exhibiting firmness, have relapsed a little. The demand for money at the Bank and in the open market is a little more active. Dutch Two Per Cents., 56¼; Three Per Cents., 66; Four Per Cents., 87½; Trading Company, 127½; Rotterdam Bank, 80¾ to 81½; Netherlands India Trading Bank, 68.

GOVERNMENT IN THE COLONIES.

(PALL MALL GAZETTE.)

We printed the other day a curious extract from M. Guizot's contribution on modern European politics to the last number of the Revue des deux Mondes, entitled "France and Prussia before Europe." It is worth while to recur to the passage, both as suggestive of some serious thought, and also because it illustrates oddly enough the extremely imperfect character of the knowledge which is acquired of our special affairs even by a writer so well acquainted with us as M. Guizot.

The time of the anecdote is laid during the discussion in Parliament on the Ceylon insurrection, and the measures used by Lord Torrington in suppressing it. M. Guizot represents Mr. Gladstone as having said to him on that occasion, "It is impossible to govern our colonies as we used to do." The responsibility of governors to Parliament, he goes on to say, is "as comprehensive, as minute, as difficult to bear as that of the member of a Cabinet who is present every day in Parliament. This cannot continue. . . . The colonies should be left pretty much to govern themselves, and the mother country should not have to answer at all hours for the whole of their government. That would be a new colonial system to establish. But where is it that something new is not needed now-a-days?" "England," he adds, "was of Mr. Gladstone's opinion;" and the colonies have been chiefly left to themselves accordingly.

From the tenor of this passage it would be inferred that Mr. Gladstone was inspired by the debates on the Ceylon insurrection with the happy thought that colonies ought to be left to govern themselves, and that hence arose the great change in our system, popularly termed the establishment of "responsible government" in colonies. If Mr. Gladstone really did talk in this way with M. Guizot it must have been in the way of very loose after-dinner conversation indeed. These debates took place in 1850. At that time the change in question had been long resolved on, responsible government was already in force in Canada, and the Colonial-office was hard at work in endeavouring to introduce it decorously and with due respect for vested interests in the other North American colonies.

But the supposed sentiments of Mr. Gladstone are still more curiously inconsistent with the real state of the case when looked at from another point of view. Ceylon is one of those colonies, or more strictly dependencies, in which a handful of Europeans is established amidst a large native population. Now, in respect of this class of colonies, there has never been any serious question about self-government. The Governor of Ceylon is just as powerful now—the colonists just as devoid of power—and consequently the former as directly responsible to the executive at home, and to Parliament, as was the case in 1850. Nay, the tendency of things in regard to this class of colonies has been precisely the reverse of that which the alleged conversation presaged. The relics of self-government, which to some extent existed among them in old days, are passing away. Jamaica governed itself a good deal more twenty years ago than it does now. Both those who attacked Governor Eyre and those who defended him quite rightly laid the responsibility for what was done there after the late disturbance on him, and not on the colonists. In some smaller West Indian communities also the old representative constitutions have been given up, and the absolute government of the Colonial-office reintroduced. In the last edition of the little manual of colonial regulations twenty colonies are still enumerated, out of nearly fifty in all, as "Crown colonies," that is, legislated for by the Crown, through nominee councils. Ceylon and Jamaica are both in the number.

This constitutes, on the whole, no doubt, an insignificant exception to the general course of events in favour of the extension of political liberties. But it is remarkable, nevertheless, that, notwithstanding that tendency, the conviction seems to increase that where stronger and weaker races live together the peace can only be maintained by the control of the executive and of its delegate the governor, and that representative institutions are unsuitable. And when we look at the line which events are taking in those unhappy Southern States of America—the blood feud which it seems almost hopeless to avert between the quondam slaves, now voters, and their former masters—one cannot but be tempted to wish, in the interest of common humanity, that the mockery of those institutions could be suspended for a while, and that the way towards a future and happier adjustment of the disordered elements could be paved under a strong and intelligent dictatorship.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for the month and eight months ending 31st August have been issued. The particulars they furnish show a very general falling off in most branches of business. The exports of British and Irish produce for August represented £16,427,597, against £17,880,099 in the corresponding month last year, and £17,450,156 in 1866, thus showing a falling off of £1,453,402, or about 8 per cent., in the declared value of our exportations compared with the corresponding month of last year, and about 6 per cent. from those of August, 1866. These figures, however, are less unfavourable than they appear, since in the two great branches of industry, cotton and woollen manufactures, there has been an increase in the quantity of goods shipped, although their money value has been less. In cotton manufactures there has been a reduction of 5 per cent. in declared value, and an increase of 6 per cent. in quantity, while in woollen manufactures there has been a reduction of 7 per cent. in value, and an increase of 5 per cent. in quantity. Cotton yarn shows a reduction of 15 per cent. in value, and 6 per cent. in quantity. For the eight months the totals are £125,265,820 in 1866, £121,056,913 in 1867, and £116,777,023 in 1868; being a reduction of 3½ per cent. from those of the corresponding period of 1867, and of 6¾ per cent. from those of 1866. The computed real value of merchandise imported in the seven months ending July 31st amounted to £132,283,806, against £128,935,900 in 1867, and £143,544,759 in 1866. The value of the wheat received was £15,320,539, being an increase of nearly £3,000,000 as compared with 1867, and of nearly £8,000,000 with 1866. Cotton shows a reduction in value of £1,361,942 contrasted with 1867, and of as much as £19,162,217 with 1866.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East :—

THE HONG KONG & SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION.

SIXTH REPORT OF THE COURT OF DIRECTORS

To the ORDINARY HALF-YEARLY GENERAL MEETING of SHAREHOLDERS held at the Banking-house of the Corporation, HONG KONG, on THURSDAY, the 13th August, 1868.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF THE HONG KONG AND SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION.

Gentlemen,—The Directors have the pleasure to submit for the approval of the Proprietors the Sixth Half-yearly Report on the operations of the Corporation, ending on the 30th June last.

The net profit for that period, including 57,276.60 dols., brought forward from last account, after paying all charges, deducting interest paid and due, and making full provision for bad debts, amounts to 396,981.96 dols., of which, after taking out rebate on bills not yet due, and remuneration to Directors, there remains for appropriation 375,674.14 dols. From the latter sum the Directors recommend the distribution of a dividend of 7.50 dols. per share on the paid-up shares, and of 1.50 dols. per share on the new shares, being equivalent to 6 per cent. for the half-year, or 12 per cent. per annum; this will absorb 180,000 dols., and of the balance the Directors propose carrying 125,000 dols. to the reserve fund, thus raising this fund to half a million of dollars; and 70,674.14 dols. to the credit of new profit and loss account.

The growing success of the Bank, resulting, as it has done, in such an eminently satisfactory statement of accounts as is now submitted, would have justified the Court in recommending the distribution of a larger dividend than the one above suggested, but, faithful to the policy to which they have always adhered, the Directors consider it more conducive to the true interest of the Corporation to continue strengthening the Reserve Fund by a liberal appropriation out of the realised profits; a course of action likely to be thoroughly appreciated by the general public, and a steady perseverance in which must further raise the credit and standing of the Bank.

UNCALLED CAPITAL.

The Directors are happy to inform the Shareholders that the application made by them to the Home Government, through the colonial authorities, for an extension of the time within which, according to the ordinance of incorporation, the remaining portion of the Subscribed Capital of the Bank would have to be called up, has been favourably entertained, and that, thanks to the kind intervention of his Excellency Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell, C.B., the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have consented to modify the terms of the Bank's Charter, so as to defer the compulsory payment of the uncalled capital (viz., two millions of dollars), until the 31st December, 1874, being five years beyond the date originally fixed as the ultimate limit.

DIRECTORS.

Since the date of the last report the following changes have taken place:—Mr. W. H. Foster, jun., has retired, and Messrs. J. P. Duncanson and W. H. Forbes have been elected as Directors in the place of Messrs. Sutherland and Foster.

The Court have also considered it advisable to invite Mr. R. Rowett, of the firm of Holliday, Wise, and Co., to join the Direction, and would ask the shareholders to confirm their act when adopting this Report. Mr. E. R. Belilios has offered himself as a Director, and the Court recommend the application to the favourable consideration of the Shareholders.

AUDITORS.

The Honourable W. H. Rennie having returned to the colony, has been requested to resume his functions as Auditor; Mr. W. C. Hunter, who acted in that capacity during Mr. Rennie's absence, having recently left China.

GEORGE J. HELLAND, Chairman.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lightersge from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

BISHOP'S

GRANULAR

EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA,

INVENTED, INTRODUCED, AND PREPARED BY

ALFRED BISHOP, Manufacturing Chemist,

17 & 18, SPECK'S FIELDS, MILE END NEW TOWN, LONDON.

THIS perfectly white and delicately clean granulated preparation possesses remarkable effervescent qualities, which far surpasses the ordinary Seidlitz Powder in its cooling, refreshing, and mild aperient properties, as well as in its flavour as a saline draught. It is particularly well adapted for women and young children, on account of its most agreeable flavour and mild effect.

N.B. The genuine has the name BISHOP upon the Bottle, also the Name and Trade Mark upon the Label, and is sold in convenient sizes, and secured in so perfect a manner that it may be shipped with safety to any part of the world.

Manufacturer also of Granulated and Effervescent Carbonate of Iron, Citrate of Iron, Citrate of Quinine, Citrate of Quinine and Iron, Carbonate of Lithia in Tubes, Citrate of Lithia, Vichy Salt, Seidlitz Mixture and all other Granulated Preparations.

IN CHANCERY.—CAUTION.—BISHOP'S GRANULAR EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA.—Mr. Bishop, having discovered that the Label which he has used for the last five years was being imitated, recently applied to the COURT OF CHANCERY for an INJUNCTION to restrain such imitation. The injunction was immediately granted, and the defendant was ordered to pay all Mr. Bishop's costs and destroy the Labels complained of.

Mr. Bishop is determined to stop the imitation of his label, and will, without notice or delay, take proceedings in Chancery against any person who may copy or colourably imitate the same.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—There is no question whatever that rheumatism, neuralgia, and such like painful maladies are ever prevailing amongst a large proportion of our population. The number of testimonials of cures effected by Holloway's remedies is unprecedented, and should be enforced on the attention of all sufferers from these complaints. The parts in pain should be fomented for some time with warm brine, dried, and immediately well rubbed with the Ointment. It will pass into the pores of the skin, and give the greatest relief. Many valuable lives are annually lost which might be saved if early recourse in illness were made to these remarkable remedies, which must necessarily prove beneficial, and cannot do harm.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

OSAKA AND HIOGO.

News from the North informs us that Ooeno Mia Sama has been set up as Mikado by the Northern party. The Japan Gazette thus announces this important step:—

"Recent advices from the North confirm our former information. The Mia Sama has formally assumed the Mikadoship, and resides at Hagurosan, near Shonai, in Dewa. His first act was to change the name of the year; his second to appoint Kujo Dainogon a Daijo Daijin. We hope this will not displease our contemporary the Japan Herald, who has strange notions about the Daimio Kujo and his whereabouts.

"The Kanguns are now reinforcing Yedo to the utmost, and it is certain that there will be one of the main seats of strife. Japanese say that now the war will be very severe and very long; that there will be an immense amount of distress in the city, that we shall have as large a quanity of silk this year as they can possibly press into the market, but that next year there will be hardly any; that the country will swarm with ronins, and the authorities will be powerless to deal with them until the whole of the troubles are over, and a strong Government is re-established; and that this can never be the case until the South is literally crushed. So we see what we have to expect.

"It is reported that the Tokugowa have requested that all the French officers engaged by the late Shiogoon will immediately join the Shin Kangun forces."

YOKOHAMA.

Dates from this port by the incoming P. and O. mail are to the 23rd August. The French and English mails of June 18 and 19 arrived out together on the 8th August with London telegrams to July 13. The outward mail of July 3 was hourly expected, as also the homeward Pacific mail steamers from Hong Kong and Shanghai.

The following summary of news is from the Japan Times' overland edition.

The fortnight has been a very quiet one in every particular. Abundance of rumours without foundation are industriously circulated by those in favour of the rebel party, but the fact is that the Mikado's Government is quietly strengthening itself every day. In no way can this be done more effectually than in that pointed out by us in discussing the difficulties of the new men, in the department of the Customs, in our last; the employment of foreigners in their various departments of administration; and this truth appears to have been realised by them, for we have now to announce the appointment as Comptroller of the Navy, or something analogous to that officer in our service, of an American gentleman. Mr. W. H. Grinnell has been for some years in the United States navy, which he has left to take up the position offered here, and is for many reasons well fitted for the post he is assuming. The name of his father will be familiar to Englishmen as that of one of the leading merchants of New York, whose generous enthusiasm in the attempt to rescue Sir John Franklin is fresh in our minds. A similar appointment for the army is spoken of, and general Paul Frank, late American Acting Consul at Hiogo, is stated to have received the offer of it, but it has not yet, we believe, been definitely accepted.

A factitious excitement is being got up, we remark from the China papers, respecting alleged persecutions of native Christians in Nagasaki. We shall take an opportunity shortly, in all probability, of discussing this subject. Meanwhile, we have to warn readers at home against giving credence to the rumours they will hear about noyades of martyrs and other atrocities, respecting which there is no single fact as yet established as true. We may state broadly that we disbelieve the whole story. Some weeks ago we drew attention to an abominable nuisance which annoyed decent people walking the Yokohama streets at night; this public remonstrance, backing a private and influential appeal to the governors of Yokohama, was happily rewarded with success, and some thirty or forty public women were arrested and forbidden the practice of their miserable calling. Two days afterwards, a local paper issued an extra, setting up the same cry of "Persecution of Native Christians!" There is clearly something more than meets the eye in these Nagasaki fables, and we cannot but view with great suspicion the coincident circumstances of the presence in these waters of a far larger French squadron than usual, and of the delay on the part of the Emperor to give formal recognition to the Mikado's government. The Jesuit missionary has more than once been the shadow cast before the Chasseur d' Afrique.

The local Government surprised the foreign settlement three days ago by closing the gates at the points of exit to all Japanese not in foreign employ, and flocks of canards were quacking about for an hour or two. It was soon ascertained, however, that the purpose of the authorities was a thoroughly legitimate one, the arrest of the silk and silk-egg men from Oshiu and other northern provinces, some of whom were believed to be spies of Aidzu's in disguise. It is by no means improbable that this will be followed by a more vigorous act, the stoppage of all returns in coin for the produce already brought in from these sources, but it is difficult to see with what justice foreign Powers can interfere. The abrogation of the Treaties of 1858 with the Shiogoon is a fact accomplished by the abolition of the Shiogoonate and both the contending parties acknowledging, as they do singularly enough, that the Mikado is the real sovereign of the country, interference would be most unjust on the part of any of the foreign Powers that have delayed recognising him as such; while the duty of the English Minister is clear, to stand by his new ally.

We have no local matters of much importance to record. We have had the usual little excitement of a drunken Yakonin frightening a foreigner, a murder or two and a suicide in the native town, and the tail of a typhoon passing over the settlement. The French packet left on the 13th with 384 bales of silk only, a very small quantity for this time of year; and the Great Republic is expected from Hong Kong to take the American homeward mail. The Hermann has left for her trip to the north, and the Albion has not yet returned from Nee-e-gata. A most successful dramatic performance was given on board H.M.S. Ocean by the men, and almost all Yokohama availed itself of the hospitality of Captain Stanhope and the officers of that magnificent ship. The fete Napoleon on the 15th went off very quietly, and the public demonstrations of enjoyment were less conspicuous than we have seen them. The weather generally has been exceedingly pleasant, and the health of the settlement is good.

LATER ADVICES BY THE PACIFIC ROUTE.

By the Pacific mail route, via San Francisco and New York, we have Yokohama advices to Aug. 27th, four days later. The following is given as a summary of the news:—

"Although no decisive battles have taken place between the two contending powers in Japan, and although actually but slight changes have occurred in the relative positions of the parties, an end to the present difficulties will not improbably ensue within a very short period. The party of the North have resorted to a bold move by appointing a new Mikado. Oeeona Mia Sama, Chief of the Seven Mias or High Priests of Japan, whose residence, it will be remembered, was attacked and burned at Yedo, on the 5th of July, after that affair, fled in disguise to Aidzu. Several Northern princes also met here, and the result of the conference was a proclamation declaring Oeeno Mikado. It was stated in the proclamation that they did not desire altogether to supersede the other Mikado, but that the appointment was made simply to have a head for the Northern party. Nevertheless it was understood that the newly-appointed Northern Mikado is to be a permanent arrangement. Oeeno Mia Sama is the uncle of the Southern Mikado, and is his natural successor. The results of several engagements which have already taken place, and of which we have been already advised by telegraph, has considerably demoralised the Southerners, and their Mikado entertains serious notions of resigning. Should he do this the probabilities are that the country will again subside into a peaceful condition. If, however, the Southerners hold out, it is not at all improbable that a compromise will be made on the basis of the secession of the North from the South, each section to have its own Mikado."

CHEFOO.

A correspondent writing on the 28th August says:—"I cannot come to any fixed opinion about the gold mines. A party of men went out there a few days ago and dug a hole about twelve feet deep, when they came to the black sand. Water coming into the hole prevented them from working, and one of them returned last night to Chefoo for a pump, and another left, as he was wanted here. The Taotai sent out fifty men and filled up the hole early this morning, and I have just got the particulars. Now, I must confess that when I heard of the hole being dug so deep without finding gold I began to think that gold was not to be found in the hill, and I was waiting for the water to be pumped out to get at the real truth. If the Taotai had only left the men alone, perhaps they would have come to the conclusion that there was no gold, and the whole lot of diggers would have left the place; but this action of the Toatai has prevented the truth from being known, and moreover has given rise to the feeling that there must be gold there, or else these steps would never have been taken to fill up the hole.

"At all events the question remains in statu quo, and the endeavours that were being made to resolve all doubts have been frustrated by the action of the mandarins, and an incentive still exists to prospect again. If there had been twenty diggers instead of four, the hole would never have been permitted to be filled up. The probable result of this will be that a larger number of men will go to Kiu-san and dig, in spite of the mandarins, until they bring the affair to a test. I do not think that anything that has been said and written as yet on the subject will bring over diggers from California, but if they come I don't think that any such deplorable results as imagined by the alarmists would be the result. If there is no gold at Kiu-san, which is far from uncertain, there are the gold districts of Mo-san, of Tsi-hia, and of Ping-too, and from the most reliable reports the last-named place is very rich in gold, so that the emigrant diggers would always find some place to work it. If Californians come over and determine to try for gold, insisting on having the same rights in China as Chinese get in California, they will not be thrown away in Shantung. There can be no doubt about the lead mines, and a miner could easily get two piculs of ore a-day. I know that I got a picul of lead ore brought to me a few months ago by a Chinaman, who got it from the side of a hill about twelve miles distant from this."

A postscript dated the 20th says:—"The diggers have begun to sink a new hole, and have now pitched their tent close to it, to keep guard over it. It was not the Taotai who closed the last hole, but the villagers, excited by the Taotai's orders and threats that he would make them smart if the foreigners were allowed to dig. The proclamation posted up at Mosan, forbidding the natives to sell food—has been withdrawn, and another published, authorising the people to deal with foreigners. The Taotai has had to knock under, thanks to the energetic remonstrances of the Treaty Consuls here. A large party of American and French naval officers have been to the diggings, and Kinsan-sze is becoming the resort of all visitors to Chefoo."

SHANTUNG.

The rebels have re-entered Shantung, and the people have requested the mandarins to abstain from interfering, and to leave them to their own resources, saying that they can protect themselves, or at any rate can better support one plundering body than two. It is even said that they did gain one victory over the marauders, but that the Imperialists under Tsoh came up at the last moment, and not only took the matter out of their hand, but pitched into them for interfering. This incident is said to have been truly reported at Court by the Futai of Shantung, and to have caused great sensation. The intention to send Li and Tsoh to their viceroyalty has not been carried out; they are too strong; but both have been reduced three steps in nominal rank.

Further advices from Shantung state that the Imperialists have succeeded in gaining a decisive victory over the rebels, and in killing the chief wang, an Anhwey man named Chang-tsan-yu, together with a large number of his followers. Twenty thousand is the number of slain given out, but this report must be taken for what it is worth. The Chinese never kill less than ten thousand. Li, Tsoh, and the Tartars are said to have all participated in the event.

SHANGHAI.

The English mail of July 3 arrived on the 17th of August, with London telegrams to July 21. Later telegrams to August 7 had been received via Kiachta. The present homeward mail left on August 29.

We gather the following items of news from the North China Herald:—

A meeting of shareholders in the China Fire Insurance Company has been held, at which the company was shown to have Tls.125,000 in hand beyond its capital. The directors were empowered to wind up the company after the 31st December. (A report of the proceedings will be found below).

An extraordinary meeting has been held of the subscribers to the British Church Establishment, at which Mr. F. H. Bell was elected a trustee, in place of Mr. W. J. Bryans, who has resigned office on leaving this port for Hong Kong.

We hear that the Gas Company have determined to lay on mains up the Bubbling Well-road, as far as the old toll bar; so that the new houses which are being built there will be supplied.

An informal meeting of bund lotholders has been held at the Club, to ascertain if common action was possible in the matter of extension of the bund. It proved, after some discussion and interchange of views, that there was much variety of opinion upon the main points; and also that, with many of the bund lots, nothing can be done at present for want of sufficient authority from the absent owners to their representatives. The majority of the meeting were decidedly not ready to say that they would en close and pay for any reclaimed land abutting on their frontage, nor was there even unamity of opinion as to whether the bund-holders should yield up their beach rights in favour of ship wharves and pontoons, or in favour of cargo-boat wharves and pontoons, or whether they would yield them on any consideration. As plainly nothing can be done in the matter of extension by the general community until some understanding is come to with that section of it owning the bund lots, this important improvement will probably be deferred until the pressure of an increasing commerce forces the bund lotholders to take the initiative in proposing and carrying out some comprehensive plan.

A case illustrating the "security" question has been heard before the Mixed Court. The U. S. Assessor distinctly repudiated the doctrine laid down in the Alcock-Medhurst Notification; and the Chinese Magistrate acquiesced in the view that security chops were unquestionably binding in the full sense of the term. Indirect attempts are being made to explain that the famous Notification in question was only intended as a "warning" to English subjects to use caution in the acceptance of security. But the wording is unfortunately antagonistic to this view. It says distinctly that the "Chinese are in the habit of regarding a surety rather as a person who comes forward to recommend his principal * * than as an individual who binds himself * * * * to fulfil all his obligations with and for him." It is exactly this theory of recommendation which the U. S. Assessor repudiated, with the assent of the Chinese Magistrate. Apropos of "Security Chops," we may mention an instance that has come to our knowledge in which a Chinaman, secured by another, contracted to deliver a certain quantity of tea to a foreigner, who advanced Tls. 8,000 on the contract. The market went up; the Chinaman failed to deliver; and the foreigner came down on the guarantor, who not only refunded the advance, but added the difference in price, i.e., the profit which the foreigner would have made had the contract been fulfilled.

A local paper notices that there has of late been a startling increase in the number of cargo-boat robberies which have taken place in this port, and warns the public to be on their guard against the rascally manœuvres of the Chinese thieves. In one vessel, through the vigilance of the police, a system of plunder was discovered which will land the captain in a loss of probably not less than 400 or Tls.500. In connection with this case a most ingenious trick for robbing tin-lined boxes is mentioned. A case was taken and the bottom carefully lifted off. The whole of the tin lining was then allowed to slip out and a hole cut in at the top, through which the goods were abstracted; the case was then put together as before, and upon being landed was of course suspected on account of its appearing to have been broken open at the bottom. It appearing, however, on removing the wood, that the tin at the bottom was uninjured, it was at first concluded that the case had not been opened; but fortunately further investigation proved the nature of the fraud that had been perpetrated.

Our readers will be glad to learn that the Asiatic Society are taking active steps towards completing arrangements for an expedition, having for its object the exploration of the Yellow River. A committee has, we hear, been appointed to arrange the details; and it is expected in the course of a little while that the plans will be entirely matured. We hear, also, that a project for the publication of a digest of the more important papers in the China Repository is occupying the attention of the above-named body.

A correspondent in Hankow states that the Rev. Mr. Hoking, of the American Protestant Episcopal Mission (under the charge of Bishop Williams, at Wuching), was grievously assaulted on Monday, the 7th inst., by some military students, who followed him from the Parade Ground, whither he had accidentally wandered with a Chinese Christian priest. They pursued him into the Chinese town, throwing stones at him all the way. He had a very narrow escape.

ATTACK ON MISSIONARIES AT YANGCHOW.

News has just reached us of a very serious attack on Protestant missionaries in Yangchow, which claims prompt and decided action by the Consular authorities. Our readers may not be aware that Mr. J. Hudson Taylor established a Protestant mission, about two months ago, at Yangchow—a large city about fifteen miles due north from Chinkiang, on the Grand Canal. This is an important literary place, and is also an official centre, being on the high road to Peking from the south. About ten days ago inflammatory placards were posted all over the city, charging the missionaries with the abstraction of children and with boiling them up for medical purposes. They were also accused of administering, to Chinamen, drugs and philters which converted them into foreigners. The consequence was that the missionaries were mobbed and pelted through the streets, their windows broken and doors smashed in. The literary class are said by the Chinese to have been at the bottom of the whole affair. Six of their head-men called a sort of guild meeting at the Confucian temple about a fortnight ago, and it was there decided that the foreigners should be expelled from the city at any cost. These head-men are well known, and their apprehension may be effected without difficulty.

About five days ago Mr. Taylor's house was broken into and besieged a second time; but on the afternoon of the 22nd inst. a much more serious attack was made. A mob of several thousand people surrounded the house—a two-storied one—and eventually broke into it and set fire to the lower story in several places, trying to burn the occupants to death. Some of the ladies and children were badly wounded, and the Rev. Mr. Reid lost one of his eyes. Our correspondent tells us that ten ladies, who were on the upper floor with the children, were obliged to throw these out of the windows, and then jump after them themselves. One lady was within a month of her confinement, and serious fears are entertained for her life. After the party had escaped all the furniture, books and clothes were burned. The report of these proceedings reached Chinkiang on Sunday evening; and Mr. Allen, the Assistant in charge of H.M.'s Consulate, proceeded at once to Yangchow, accompanied by some members of the foreign community, to try and settle matters. They returned on the 24th instant, together with the missionary party, whom they met coming down by boat under escort of a body of troops belonging to the Commander of the Yangchow garrison. From their account, it seems that the native authorities gave assistance and protection on Sunday evening; but that they delayed doing so until the matter had reached the crisis we describe, and when the very lives of the missionaries were in serious danger. It is likely, however, that the Che-foo could have suppressed the disturbances several days earlier had he tried. At any rate, he was clearly either unable or unwilling to do this; so that whichever supposition be true, he deserves to lose his post. There seems little real doubt that he wished to get rid of the foreigners.

We need not point out that unless prompt and decisive punishment is inflicted for this outrage there will be no safety for the life of any missionary in this country. The Chinese are gradually beginning to feel that Consular action in the provinces is weak and inoperative; and they now look upon it as the mere shadow and ghost of authority. It is feared by neither the officials nor the people, and is practically a myth. Take the present case as an instance. It is almost certain that no strong action will be taken or can be taken without reference to Peking. This will require several weeks, probably months, and the question will then be consigned to the Chancery of Her Majesty's Legation. If anything is finally done, it will only be when the affair has passed out of the minds of the people, and the ringleaders have all disappeared, and are nowhere to be found. The idea of centralising all the influence and weight of H.M.'s Government at Peking may be good in the abstract; practically, however, the pressure is frequently much more needed in the provinces; and the absence of it is a source of new dangers and difficulties. The Chinese cannot respect officials who possess no real power; and that is how H.M.'s Consuls are at present circumstanced. If prompt punishment be not exacted for this barbarous outrage it will be a disgrace to our policy. If a French mission were in case, there would be little peace for the authorities, local or central, till it had been thoroughly avenged. We remember, indeed, a few years ago, M. Chevrey-Rameau marching a body of troops to a place near Kahding, and settling a much less serious difficulty on the spot. We can hardly look for any such decisive action here; but we do trust that a thorough investigation and condign punishment of ringleaders will be promptly and emphatically demanded. The ringleaders should be first made an example of; but, if inquiry bear out our information, the prefect and subordinate magistrates should also be degraded. It is true that the Chinese populace are slow to anger; but it is also true that, once excited, they form most dangerous mobs. It is especially the duty of local officials, therefore, to check outbreaks in time, and there seems little doubt the authorities at Yangchow could have checked this outbreak a week previously had they tried. If we pass over their neglect merely because they are now willing to make amends, it will be silly and weak.

CHINA FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

A meeting of shareholders was held on the 20th August—Present Mr. F. H. Bell, Chairman, Messrs. Cunningham, Probst, Overweg, Dow, Groom, Gamwell, Brown, Maccall, Maclean, Cameron, Lavers, Porter, White, King, Simpson, &c.

The minutes of the preceding general and special meeting were read and confirmed. The Directors' Report was also read as follows:—

"The Directors have to lay before the Shareholders a report of the working of the Company, from 1st January to 30th June, 1868, and a balance sheet showing its position at the latter date.

"It appears from the accounts, which have been duly audited, that there was at credit of the company a balance, exclusive of capital of Tls. 125,294.92

"The directors regret that there should again appear in the account so large an item under the head of losses, the greater part of which, viz., Tls. 51,957.38 was occasioned by the fire at Foochow.

"In consequence of the resolution passed at the extraordinary meeting of the shareholders, held on the 7th of April, 1868, the company has ceased doing business at the outports, and only grant risks in Shanghai up to the 31st of December next.

"Since the date of the accounts the sum of Tls. 34,000 has been placed to fixed deposit account.

After an inquiry by Mr. Maclean regarding the suspense account,

Mr. Groom proposed and Mr. Dow seconded—"That the report as presented be accepted, and the accounts, as shown by the balance-sheet to June 30, 1868, be passed."

Carried unanimously.

The Chairman then said that, in accordance with the vote passed at the last meeting, the directors had ceased taking risks at the outports, confining their business to Shanghai. But they found, after the 30th June, that it would be unsafe taking risks even in Shanghai. They could only get risks at the annual rate; that is to say, if they accepted a risk for three months they could only get the annual rate. This was an unsafe basis for any fire insurance company to work on, and the directors had therefore discontinued all risks, pending any remarks the shareholders might have to offer. The most important questions now seemed to be—whether they should take any more risks, and whether they should reinsure the remaining outstanding risks or allow them to run off.

Mr. Groom asked whether their risks in Hong Kong had been reinsured, or whether any steps had been taken to do so.

The Chairman replied in the negative.

Mr. Groom asked whether any steps had been taken in regard to winding up the company. It seemed the business of this meeting to decide on the future existence of the company.

Mr. Cunningham thought that point had been decided at the last general meeting.

Mr. Groom admitted that it had been so virtually; but if any idea of continuing the office did exist, it behoved them to elect a provisional committee at this meeting. It might be better to take the opinion of the shareholders present, and to settle the matter, and thus save the trouble of calling an extraordinary meeting.

In reply to Mr. Maccall, the Chairman said the directors had ascertained some time ago that the cost of reinsuring their risks would be Tls. 45,000. He could not say exactly what it would be at present—probably about Tls. 25,000. If the question of reinsurance were left to the directors, they would of course do their best to save the shareholders from risk.

Mr. Cunningham now proposed, and Mr. Probst seconded,

"That, in pursuance of the action of the shareholders at the special general meeting held on the 7th April, 1868, the directors are empowered to close the business of the company definitely on the 31st December next, and to make distribution of the capital and accumulated profits as soon thereafter as possible."

The Chairman having assented to a remark by Mr. Lavers, that in the meantime no further risks would be taken, this resolution was carried and the meeting separated.

SWATOW.

By the S.S. Azof, which arrived at Hong Kong on the 21st August, intelligence of more disturbances at Swatow is to hand. It appears that on the 17th ult. a row took place in a gambling-house, close to the English concession, which led to much bitter feeling among the natives, and a fight was anticipated. Little petty disturbances took place; but on the evening of the 18th instant a body of 300 men, armed and equipped, crossed over from the north side of the river, in boats, and, on arrival, made a deliberate attack on the town. It was evening when the fight commenced, and it continued without intermission for some three or four hours, during which time it is rumoured that no less than forty men were killed. The fight took place in the streets, and many were the atrocities that the parties on either side committed, among which may be mentioned, cutting and slicing of an enemy's dead body, &c. H.M.'s gunboat Drake was anchored off the town to protect the Europeans, and it was intended that her crew should go on shore in the event of further hostilities. Another fight was expected to take place on the night the Azof left, that is the 19th; but owing to some mandarins having arrived, it was reported that a reconciliation between the contending parties would be brought about. Of course, during such scenes as this business is entirely suspended, in proof of which the steamer Azof brought no passengers and very little cargo from Swatow.

HONG KONG.

The present mail left Hong Kong on the 4th September. The outward mail of July 17 was delivered on the 24th August; the latest London telegrams received were to August 8. The local news is neagre in the extreme.

The Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company, Limited, held their annual meeting on the 25th ultimo. The Report was most unsatisfactory; no dividend was declared. The amount of debt had largely increased; there was little or no money in hand, and it was decided to call up the rest of the capital.

MR. POLLARD'S CONTEMPT OF COURT.

The Pollard contempt case has come once more before the public, chiefly through some ill-advised proceedings on the part of the Chief Justice, thus recounted in the China Mail:—

His Lordship on Friday last handed a bulky manuscript document to the reporters, and desired that it should be printed at full length, not only in the daily issues of the China Mail and of the Daily Press, but also in their overland editions. His lordship coupled his request with an intimation that if it was not complied with he should regard the conductors of both papers as "malicious slanderers." The manuscript was a full report of the proceedings before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in re the locally celebrated "contempt" case, upon which the editors of both papers freely, but not improperly, commented at the time of its occurrence. It was impossible, for various reasons, to observe his lordship's behests, and the manuscript, after having been submitted in the proper quarters, was returned to his lordship, who was referred to the conductors of the papers, in the hope that personal communication with them would enable him to understand the mechanical difficulty which prevented their printing the manuscript in the manner required, and that he would be induced to withdraw the offensive alternative contained in the words "malicious slanderers." His lordship has taken no notice of the message. The use of the words is not, we understand, denied by his lordship, but he avers that he uttered them in a jocular tone. Such "jocularity" is very apt to be considered offensive to a sense of self-respect, and in this case the epithet "malicious slanderer" had an effect not contemplated by his lordship. . . . . The report will, we hear, be printed for circulation at his lordship's private expense, in which event the whole circumstances of the case may again come before the public. It was nearly forgotten, and even now had better rest where it is.

THE "THERESA" COOLIE MUTINY.

A correspondent of the China Mail gives the following interesting account of the capture of the ringleaders in the Theresa coolie tragedy:—

The Chinese gunboat Tienpo, Captain de Longueville, left Canton on the 2nd August, to search for certain individuals accused of having in the early part of July last committed acts of piracy and murder on board the Italian coolie ship Theresa. She returned to Canton on the 29th ultimo, having succeeded in perfectly accomplishing the object of her cruise.

Captain de Longueville provided with instructions from the Viceroy of Canton and Baron de Trenqualye, H.I.M. Consul at that port, arrived at Macao on the 3rd August, to obtain information regarding the affair from Baron do Cercal, the Italian Consul, and to receive on board as passengers Mr. Dublé, late second mate of the Theresa, and two sailors of the same vessel, who as it turned out were important witnesses. On the 4th the gunboat anchored in the neighbourhood of the Bay of Tsahpo, in the island of Hailing, district of Yong Kong.

After a most minute search and frequent cruises by the gunboat around the island of Hailing and in the unfrequented bay of Yong Kong, the following results were arrived at by the chief Chinese mandarin in the neighbourhood, in concert with Captain Longueville:—Six prisoners were arrested, four of whom were recognised as the ringleaders in the revolt of the coolies, and as the instigators of and actors in the murders which occurred during the three long months of the unfortunate vessel's return from south of New Zealand to the China coast. These same individuals had negotiated directly with the Chinese merchants of the neighbourhood for the sale of the goods on board the Theresa. In a word, there is a complete proof against the prisoners of piracy and assassination, the murder of the second mate, brother of the captain, Bollo, having even taken place at Tsah-po on the very evening of the vessel's arrival. The two other prisoners are a Chinese cabin boy and a female domestic of Madame Bollo, both very young, but from whom the most complete information can be obtained.

Besides the prisoners, a certain sum of money paid for the boats of the Theresa, burnt in the environs of Tsah-po, or arising from fines imposed on the merchants who treated with the pirates, has been given up by the delinquents, and taken in the Tien-po to Canton. She has also recovered some boxes containing a quarter part of Madame Bollo's effects, which were found in possession of the chief ringleaders of the mutineers.

It may therefore be assumed that from the abundance of information obtained, and of proof against the criminals, the affair is in good train, and the Italian Government is already about to obtain legitimate satisfaction, so far as the punishment of the murderers can be so termed. It would have been difficult for the Tien-po to have better fulfilled her mission, especially if it be recollected that the neighbourhood is hitherto unexplored, and that bad weather prevailed during her visit to it. Captain de Longueville deserves great credit.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

From this port our advices are to Sept. 12th. The outward mail of July 31st was received on the 1st Sept. The latest London telegrams were to Aug. 23rd. The news, which is of little importance, is thus summed up by the Straits Times :—

The Legislative Council have had two meetings, on the 4th and 7th instant, but its proceedings do not call for much notice. A "Gambier Adulteration Bill" has been introdueed by one of the unofficial members, the Hon. T. Scott, and is likely to become law. The Bill is the result of a representation to Government by the Chamber of Commerce, but it is a matter of considerable dispute whether it is desirable or wise to pass such a measure at all, and whether it should not be made more comprehensive, so as to include all produce. The other measures before the Council are not of much interest except to those immediately concerned. The public generally do not take the slightest interest in the Council, which was so eagerly wanted, and of which so much was expected, and public opinion on this point is right in the main in regarding such a sham of an institution with mingled feelings of impatience, contempt, and dislike.

An interesting communication has been received from the King of Siam, in regard to the eclipse. His Majesty, it appears, amongst his other accomplishments, has turned his attention to astronomy, and made calculations with regard to the eclipse with the accuracy of a Senior Wrangler or an Astronomer Royal. It would be difficult to find another King capable of doing the same.

A good deal of talk has been caused by the action of Government in dealing with two swindling Chinamen, who suddenly decamped from Mauritius with a considerable sum of money, leaving heavy debts behind them. They were overtaken here by a Mauritius corporal of police, with all their plunder. It is hardly credible, but it is a fact, that nothing was done to the rogues. They were released by direct order of his Excellency the Governor, and all their stolen property restored to them, with, it is said, an apology from the Commissioner of Police, and they left for the Flowery Land next day, with rejoicing and triumphant hearts, in the P. and O. steamer Norna. It was all done according to law, it is averred, but if so, we can only repeat Bumble's pithy remark, seeing more force in it than ever we did before, that "the law is a hass."

It is said that the 73rd Regiment, at present stationed at Hong Kong, is coming down here about the beginning of next year. So many canards have been current, however, with regard to a European regiment coming to the Straits, that this, the latest on dit, is regarded with suspicion.

H. M. S. Avon, Commander Fitzroy, a new gunboat, intended for the suppression of piracy in China waters, arrived here on the 10th inst.

Tenders have been invited by Government for the construction of a steam launch. With another building at home by White, of Cowes, and with a large steamer also on the stocks, the present plethoric condition of our revenue will soon be considerably relieved.

A change of proprietorship has taken place in regard to this paper, the result of the recent judgment in the Gunpowder case, but no change will be made in existing arrangements.

Business has never been so dull before in the recollection of the oldest inhabitant, but there is a considerable amount of it done all the same. The bazaar is in anything but a satisfactory state.

The half-yearly meeting of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company was held on the 26th August. The directors' report and statement of accounts were most satisfactory ; the net profit for the half-year, from the wharves and warehouses alone (the dock being still incomplete), was over 5 per cent. on the entire outlay, and far better results are justly anticipated when the whole establishment is in working order. The Straits Times considers the success of the undertaking wonderful.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

Yokohama.—There had been a great want of animation in the market throughout the interval, and the business had been only to a limited extent at a decline in rates. Cotton Yarn : Quotations nominal, a very small business done, and to effect sales a sensible reduction would have to be accepted. Grey Shirtings : A few sales had been made, but holders were not inclined to sell at our quoted rates. Deliveries of sold goods had been freer. T-Cloths : Nothing doing. Quotations nominal. Velvets : Only black saleable, these freely. Other Cotton Goods were not inquired for. Woollens : In very small demand, and quotations mostly nominal. A few Black Camlets had been quitted at $17.0. Some Figured Orleans had been sold at quotations which showed a heavy loss. Cloth : In small demand, but some business had been done. Blankets : Recent arrivals had recruited stocks, and the market was sensitive, but a fair business had been done. Metals : Re-export of lead going on on Japanese Government account ; otherwise dull. The current quotations were as follows : Grey Shirtings : 7 lbs., $2.25 to 2.35 per piece ; 8.4 to 8.8 lbs., $2.78 to 2.85. White Shirtings, 56 to 60 reed, $3.10 to 3.20 ; 64 to 66, $3.50 to 3.70 ; 68 to 72, $3.70 to 4.10 ; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.90 to 2.0 ; 6.8 to 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.30. ; Turkey Red Cloth, 24 yards 32 inches, 2.80 to 3.10 ; Spotted Shirtings : White, 3.25 to 3.50 ; Dyed, 3.40 to 3.60 ; Camlets, S., $16 to 17 per piece ; S.S., $15.50 to 16 ; S.S.S., $13 to 14 ; B.B., $16 to 17 ; B.B.B., $16 to 17 ; Cloth, Medium, Good Black, $1 to 2 per yard ; inferior, $0.60 to 1 ; broad, Good, $1.25 to 2 ; inferior, $0.60 to 0.80. Metals, &c., Iron Nail Rod, $3 to 3.50 per picul ; Hoop, $4.25 to 4.50 ; Bars, $2.75 to 3.50 ; Pig, $1.30 to 1.50 ; Wire, $6.50 to 7 ; Lead, $7 to 7.75 ; Tin, $17 to 18 ; Tin Plates, $8 to 8.5.

Tientsin.—Large supplies of goods had been forwarded into the interior, and the market was quiet. An advance of 3c. to 4c. per piece had been established on Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs. being quoted Tls. 2.3.8 to 2.4.0. Camlets, SS Scarlet, in good enquiry at Tls. 13.5.0. to 14.0.0.

Shanghai.—Cottons : A limited business had been transacted in Plain Cottons, at prices which in most instances, showed a decline. Importers had made very few sales, either of goods on the spot, or for arrival. The principal sales were by native speculators. Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs. : resales had been effected at a reduction of 5 cents to 1 mace on last mail's quotations, and offers were being made for arrivals at Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.4.5. White Shirtings and T-Cloths were quiet and dull of sale. English and American Drills still continued in good demand. Fancy Goods, generally, were in very poor request. Woollens : Spanish Stripes, Medium Cloth, and Habit Cloth were neglected, with the exception of a trifling enquiry for best makes of Medium Cloth. Camlets of favourite assortments were in moderate request. Long Ells, scarlet, were difficult of sale. Assorted colours were in good demand. Lastings : a few sales had been made, but the market was very dull. Figured Lustres : further sales were reported at Tls. 3.7.5 to 4.0.0. Metals : There had been rather more enquiry for Nail Rod and Bar Iron, and higher prices than were ruling at the departure of last mail could be obtained. Lead, Steel, and Pig Iron were dull of sale. Tin Plates in improved demand. Quicksilver, Tls. 49 to 50. Coals : English Coals were not in demand. A cargo of American was sold for arrival. From ship, Australian Coals had been disposed of at Tls. 9.0.0 to Tls. 9.2.5, but consignees were inclined to land and store cargoes rather than accept these terms. Superior Japan Coals had fetched Tls. 6.1.0. Sales of Formosa had taken place at a decline on previous prices. Arrivals : From Great Britain, 2,573 tons ; from America, 309 tons ; from Australia, 5,019 tons ; from Japan, 475 tons ; from Formosa, 2,755 tons ; and from Saghalien, 450 tons ; in all, 11,581 tons, of which 3,373 tons were to order. The current quotations, at the departure of the mail, were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.3 to 2.0.8 ; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2.3.3 to 2.3.8 ; 9 to 9.12 lbs., Tls. 3.0.0 to 3.3.7 ; White Shirtings, 56 reed, Tls. 2.0.5 to 2.1.0 ; 60 reed, Tls. 2.1.5 to 2.2.5 ; 64 reed, Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.4.0 ; 66 reed, Tls. 2.4.5 to 2.5.5 ; 72 reed, Tls. 2.7.0. to 2.8.0 ; 80 to 84 reed, Tls. 3.0.0 ; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., Tls. 1.5.5 to 1.9.0 ; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.8.0 to 2.1.5 ; 8 to 8.4 lbs., Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.6 0 ; American Drills, 40 yds., Tls. 4.4.5 to 4.6 5 ; American Jeans, 30 yds., Tls. 3.5.0 to 3.6.5 ; American Sheetings, 40 yds., Tls. 4.1.5 to 4.2.0. ; English Drills, 40 yds., Tls. 4.2.0 to 4.4.0 ; Dutch Drills, 30 to 40 yds., Tls. 4.0.0 to 4.3.0 ; Velveta—Black, 22 in., per yd., Tls. 0.2.2 ; Blue, 22 in., Tls. 0.2.1. to 0.2.2½ ; Camlets, English, S.S., Tls. 12.2.5 to 13.2.5 per piece ; Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.5 to 0.7.0 per yard ; Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths, Tls. 1.0.0 to 1.2.5.

Foochow.—The following sales had been reported during the fortnight:—1,600 pieces, 8½ lbs., Grey Shirtings, at $3.20 to $3.30 per piece ; 250 pieces, 7 lbs., T-Cloths, at $2.50 per piece ; 1,000 piculs, Lead, at $9.00 per picul (against tea).

Hong Kong.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated 3rd Sept., contains the following :—Cotton Yarn.—Transactions have been confined to the settlement of two small parcels, Nos. 16 and 24 Bombay, but coast advices have induced more firmness on the part of holders, who are now demanding an advance of $2.50 per bale. Piece Goods.—Very large parcels both of Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths have been forwarded to Shanghai by importers during the fortnight, the shipments amounting to about 2,800 bales, and including all the finest 7lb. T-Cloths in stock. The reduction of stocks and the continued favourable advices caused an advance of 5 cents per piece, but purchases have been confined to actual requirements, and two vessels having arrived from London, this improvement has been lost in Grey Shirtings, but White Shirtings and T-Cloths still command the enhanced values. Turkey Reds are very firm. Drills have been inquired for, and all descriptions show a marked improvement. A fair business has been done in English, and the only parcel of Dutch on offer has been taken, but only one sale of American has been made, holders demanding prices above the views of buyers. A fair quantity of American has been shipped north on importers' account. Quotations for Jeans and Shirtings are quite nominal. Woollens : Long Ells have met with some inquiry, and are fully 10 cents dearer. One parcel of extra quality H.H. Assorted has fetched as high as $9.15, but this can hardly be called a quotation. Spanish Stripes are quite neglected, and nominal values are again lower. 10 lb. Blankets are unchanged, but 7 lb. are wanted and dearer. Lastings and Crape Lastings are very firmly held. Camlets have been taken to a fair extent on former terms, and an advance in prices is not improbable, stock not being excessive. Metals: Nail Rod and Bar Iron are again lower, and Hoop is weak. Wire is unchanged, and Steel very firm. Lead shows a marked decline. Tin is scarce and wanted at an advance of 50 cents per picul. Tin Plates are lower. Quicksilver quiet and easier.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—During the fortnight a steady business has been doing, and settlements amount to about 2,500 piculs, consisting of most grades, principally for the American market; arrivals had come forward fairly, and a few fine parcels had been settled. Stocks, except for low quality, were small. Prices ruled firm, as last quoted. The vessels reported as loading had sailed, bringing the export to up to date 1,381,754 lbs., more than double that of last year. Quotations:—Common, $22 to 23 per picul; Good Common, $24 to 25; Medium, $25 to 26; Good Medium, $28 to 30; Fine, $30 to 35; Finest, $36 to 40; Choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: The market remained inactive for some days after the departure of the last mail, and prices appeared to be drooping. Since then, however, buyers had eagerly pressed forward, and the result had been large purchases at previous prices for all but common descriptions, the latter having sustained a decline of from Tl. ½ to 1. Supplies had been liberal, and notwithstanding the large settlements the stock remaining was considerable, being fully as large as at the date of the departure of the last mail. Natives, who had appeared to be desponding, were more confident, and the market closed firm. Settlements for the fortnight, 24,450 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 11,000 chests; stock, 89 chops, or 35,968 packages. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 2⅛d. per tael, and freight at £3 10s. per ton:—Hohow, common to fair, 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 4d.; Oonam, ditto, 1s. 0¾d. to 1s. 4¾d.; Ningchow, fair, 1s. 2¾d. to 1s. 4d.; Oopack, fair to good, 1s. 2¾d. to 1s. 5½d. per lb. Green: The principal feature was the opening of the market for Teenkai Teas, and purchases had been made at prices fully Tls. 5 to 6 over the early settlements of last season. Most buyers held aloof at these high rates, and lower ones were anticipated. Pingsuey Teas had been purchased at rather easier prices. The following had been bought:—Teenkai, Tls. 40 to 48; Fychow, Tls. 34 to 41½; Pingsuey, Tls. 30 to 40; Shanghai packed, Tls. 28½ to 37½. The stock was considerably increased. Settlements for the fortnight, 24,000 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, nil.; stock, 35 chops, or 29,518 half-chests. Quotations, exchange, &c., as above, for Fychow and Teenkai Teas, were:—Gunpowder, 1s. 8d. to 3s. 10d.; Imperial, 1s. 4d. to 3s.; Young Hyson, 1s. 3d. to 3s. 2d.; Hyson, 1s. 3d. to 3s. 10d.; Twankay, 10d. to 1s. 8d. per lb.

HANKOW.—The market had been very quiet, consequent on the unfavourable advices from home, and the large export from every port in China. Prices were Tls. 1 to 2 lower, and but for the reduced supplies would have declined further. Shipments to Shanghai on native account had again been large. Quotations were: Oopacks, fair to medium, Tls. 16.6 to 19.5, equal to 1s. 3½d. to 1s. 5½d. per lb.; Oonams, fair, Tls. 17 to 19.5, equal to 1s. 3¾d. to 1s. 5¼d. per lb.

KIUKIANG.—Only one trifling settlement of Congou had been made. Supplies were coming forward very slowly, the unsatisfactory prices ruling leading teamen to restrict their operations to up-country. Only one small chop of Green Teas had come to hand, but considerable quantities of Moyune were close at hand, delayed by adverse winds, and would arrive very shortly.

FOOCHOW.—Teas settled during the fortnight had been principally for the colonies, prices paid being too high to induce much business for the English market. Rates had not altered much, but in some instances, taking exchange into consideration, there had been a rise of nearly 1 tael. Congous: Early in the interval the market was very quiet, with a downward tendency, but since then large purchases had been made on Australian account, and one or two houses had bought rather freely for England, so that at the close we are unable to note any change in quotations, the teamen being very firm holders, though stocks had considerably increased. Souchongs had been in fair inquiry at about previous quotations. Oolongs: Some large purchases effected before the departure of last mail had been reported, but the actual business done during the fortnight had been very limited, buyers wanting a considerable concession in price. Scented teas were rather cheaper and had been taken to a fair extent. Flowery Pekoes were neglected. Settlements for the fortnight had been:—Congou, 27,757 chests, at Tls. 9.7 to 25.3 per picul ship off; Souchong, 3,119 chests, Tls. 19.8 to 39.3; Oolong, 18,207 half-chests, Tls. 26 8 to 38.8; Scented teas, 9,814 boxes, Tls. 22.8 to 27.3; Flowery Pekoe, 60 chests, Tls. 32 8.

CANTON.—Two chops Congou have been received; two sold at Tls. 25 and Tls. 27, and one small chop at Tls. 30½, which left the stock three chops—2,258 chests. Scented kinds had been bought to a fair extent at a slight decline on previous rates. District Gunpowders had met with some attention for the Buenos Ayres market. The following sales were reported: Country Congou, 3 chops, at Tls. 25 to 30½; Canton District ditto, 4,500 boxes, at Tls. 21 to 23½; Scented Orange Pekoe, 2,500 boxes, at Tls. 22 to 31½; Scented Caper, 10,000 boxes, at Tls. 20 to 27; Canton Gunpowder, 2,000 boxes, at Tls. 22 to 24.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—An active business had been done during the fortnight, and consequent on the continued good advices from home, prices had advanced in average fully $30 per picul on former quotations. Fine parcels of Hank sorts were in great request, what few lots had arrived had been eagerly bought at extreme rates. An improvement generally was noted in the quality of the parcels that had lately reached the market; they had, however, consisted almost entirely of Hank sorts. Silk-worms' Eggs: Arrivals amounted to 1,340,000 cards, and total settlements were computed at 1,100,000, against arrivals to same date last year, 400,000. The supplies were therefore decreasing, and the stock on offer was largely composed of rejected and inferior. A few Bivoltini had appeared. Second quality had been offered at low rates, and some reduction was noted on even best sorts. Quotations were: Best (green) Oshu, $3.75 to 4.25; Good, ditto, $3.0 to 3.50; Best Sinchu, $2.75 to 3.0; Good, ditto, $2.0 to $2.50; Common, $0.50 to 1.75. Quotations for Silk were as follows (including all charges to London at exchange, 4s. 8¼d.):—Mybash, Nos. 1 and 2, 37s. 8d. to 38s. 5d.; Nos. 1, 2, and 3, 34s. 6d. to 36s. 10d.; Nos. 2, 3, and 4, 32s. 6d. to 33s. 8d.; Oshu inferior, 26s. 1d. to 28s. 6d.; Coshu, medium, 29s. 8d. to 31s. 8d.; ditto, inferior, 26s. 3d. to 28s. 11d.

SHANGHAI.—Messrs. Skeggs' and Co.'s report, dated August 27th, offers the following remarks:—The English mail left on the 15th August, taking 2,396 bales Chinas and 364 bales Japans; the American mail of the same date took 98 bales Chinas, and the French mail, on the 20th August, had 1,063 bales Chinas, and 384 Japans. Before the departure of the Messageries steamer, prices for nearly all descriptions, except chops and finest Silks, declined from Tls. 10 to 20 per picul, which has not since been recovered, and as we write a further weakness on the part of holders is evident. Buying throughout the fortnight has been pretty general, and we give the following as the more notable settlements: Choopings chop at Tls. 580 for No. 3; Koo-fong-sings, Tls. 575; Dragons, Tls. 570; Donkey, Tls. 565; Blue Flags, Tls. 540; and Red Peacocks, at Tls. 470 per picul, the two latter being very inferior, and not nearly up to the standard of the season. About 300 bales of Chop Silks have been taken, but most of the purchases consist of medium and good Tsatlees, from Tls. 440 to 480 per picul, and the market is now rather bare of desirable parcels of this kind. Fat Mow Hainins, No. 2, have fetched Tls. 480, but they are still in little demand. Taysaams, owing to their relative price, have commanded some attention, but the greater portion of them go forward on native account. Re-reeled Hainins and Tsatlees have been in good enquiry, and the "Pang E Tah" chop is reported to have been settled at Tls. 635, while some of equally as fine and good quality has been bought at Tls. 600 to 605. Throwns are neglected, owing to the extreme prices asked. About 800 bales going forward are said to be on account of Chinese. Arrivals from the country have been in proportion to settlements, thus leaving the stock unaltered.

CANTON.—This market was very quiet, nearly the whole of the settlements reported having been made in the first few days of the interval. Finest kinds were scarce and firmly held, but market descriptions were in good supply. Excepting for finest sorts prices have considerably declined, and were $15 to 20 below last quotations. Re-reeled Cumchook of very good quality could be bought at $560. The following sales had been made:—Tsatlee, sales 150 bales, at $550 to 560; Loongkong 450, at $545 to 575; Kow-Kong 450, at $50; re-reeled Cumchook quoted at $560 to 570.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

The Chinese Embassy remains at the Grosvenor, and, with the exception of a visit to the Lyceum Theatre last week, has given no public sign of its presence in this capital. On his visit to Lord Stanley to present his credentials, Mr. Burlinghame was accompanied only by the two Associate Ministers (Chih-tajen and Sun Tajen), and the interview was purely of a formal nature, it being understood that no business would be transacted until the assembling of Parliament and the return of the Queen from Scotland. In fact (apart, of course, from the election agitation), political life here is, for the present, at a complete standstill; and, although this and the unfavourable time of year have prevented any excitement being roused by the arrival of the Embassy, we believe Mr. Burlinghame and his colleagues are well content to avail themselves of a period of inaction while recovering from the effects of their passage across the Atlantic, which have been severely felt by nearly every member of the party.

Another long article on Mr. Burlinghame's Mission has appeared in The Times, and will be found entire in another column. It will be remembered that in former articles the leading journal unreservedly condemned the new treaty presented to the United States as being hollow and deceptive. The present article, however, is devoted more to a consideration of the real nature of Mr. Burlinghame's personal position, and to the good he may effect if he proves himself genuinely desirous to promote a closer intercourse between China and Western nations generally, without seeking to push the interests of the United States at the expense of all others. The Mission, it observes, is "either an elaborate plot to throw dust in the eyes of the world," or an evidence of a voluntary abandonment of the old policy of isolation and exclusion. If Mr. Burlinghame is not duly authorised to pledge his Government to this step, then his Mission must soon be revealed as a mockery and a delusion, in which he will be the principal victim. This is all very well; but does not the treaty just concluded with the United States bear on its face the character of a hollow sham? Does not the concluding clause virtually nullify all the others? and although no special propositions for a similar treaty have as yet been presented to our own Government, is it likely that Mr. Burlinghame will offer us any better terms than he gives his own countrymen? Moreover, any hopes that might have been raised by the arrival of an accredited Minister, with regard to a prospective improvement in our position in China are entirely crushed by our late advices from that country. How can we give credit for sincerity to a Government which, while sending a Minister to demand admission into "the family of nations" and make a treaty of reciprocity and international rights, is all the time seduously labouring to exclude us from any advantages to be derived from the construction of roads, railways, or telegraphs, or the construction of mines? Mr. Burlinghame may be willing, in all good faith and honesty of purpose, to enter into such engagements on behalf of his employers as we have a right to ask; but it is very hard to believe that such engagements will be kept by them a moment longer than may happen to suit their convenience. After all, there is much truth in an opinion expressed in The Times, that Mr. Burlinghame's real business will be much more with his own than with European Courts; he will be more effective as a non-resident adviser of his own Government than as their delegate to others. He should also make it his special duty, says The Times, "to "trace, for the information of the Chinese Government and "merchants, the directions in which trade between the West "and China tends." But here is another little difficulty—is he likely to find it "tend" in any other direction than that which will most benefit the route through the United States? Finally, The Times says the Envoy will have accomplished much both for China and the rest of the world if he will "act as if there could be no separate national interest in "Europe and America." That he ought to act thus there can be no doubt, but after his speech to the New York merchants, can we reasonably expect it? We fear not; but a little time will show.

SIAM AND ITALY.

We have frequently commented on the careless style in which subjects connected with China and other remote eastern countries are handled by the London press, and notably by the Daily Telegraph, whose writers take up topics with which they are manifestly incompetent to deal, covering their ignorance by a wordy display of facetiousness that not unfrequently degenerates into imbecility. A little while ago the Chinese Mission was made the theme of a column or so of stupid jokes and pointless witticisms; and in our last issue we had to notice a paragraph in that paper in which the recently signed treaty between Italy and Siam was used as a peg whereon to hang a very stale jest about the "King of the Cannibal Islands," and "potentates whose subjects dine on roast missionary." Probably the writer does not know where Siam is, and he cannot therefore be expected to understand its rising importance among eastern nations, the increasing value of its commerce, or the respect due to its enlightened ruler; still such flippancy deserves a rebuke, and has received it. "J. B." writes to the Editor of the Telegraph showing how unworthy is the ridicule thus cast on Siam. Sir John Bowring (for there is little doubt as to the authorship of the letter) explains that since the Treaty negotiated by him in 1855, all the great Powers of Europe and America are represented at the Chinese Court; that according to the latest returns ninety-eight British vessels and as many or more under other foreign flags are employed in the trade of Bangkok alone, besides 125 Siamese ships. He also points out that at the present moment the Austrian Government is sending to Siam a splendid scientific and commercial mission, bearer of Imperial presents, and charged with the negotiation of a reciprocal Treaty; that the King personally is distinguished for his scientific acquirements, for his beautiful collection of philosophical instruments, for his acquaintance with the English and Latin languages, and with the best of modern literature; that, by the last news, he had gone with his Court to Wai-wen to meet the expedition sent by the French and English authorities to observe and report on the eclipse of the sun—the King himself having long prepared the astronomical calculations for the Bangkok Calendar; and he enumerates other facts which fairly entitle the country and its King to be respectfully spoken of. But this remonstrance is unfortunately not likely to be of much use with writers who think it clever to assume that all Eastern potentates are cannibals, and can find nothing to say about a Chinese mission, except to make fun of their long and (to English ears) unfamiliar-sounding names. Mr. Burlinghame's Mission will have had one good result if it only teaches some of our journalists to think a little more seriously of these matters.

In our last issue we announced that, notwithstanding some rumours to the contrary, the Galatea, the Duke of Edinburgh's frigate, would include China and Japan in her next cruise. We are now enabled to state that in all probability Englishmen in Japan and China will have an opportunity of welcoming their "Sailor Prince" even sooner than was expected, as—according to present arrangements—the Galatea will visit those countries before proceeding to India. This will be good news to the residents there, for, apart from the interest and natural curiosity excited by the visit of a Royal Prince for the first time to these distant settlements, the Duke enjoys a special popularity that has rarely been equalled. His welcome in the purely commercial settlements of China and Japan will probably lack the almost mad enthusiasm exhibited in the Australian colonies, but will not be the less genuine on that account. No change is announced in the day originally fixed for his departure, namely, the 20th instant.

Continental Intelligence.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, October 15.

The members of the Second Chamber of the States General are busy intra muros with the examination of the India budget for 1868. It seems that the discussions in the sections are very prolix; and as the Minister of the Colonial Department is very laconic and concise, perhaps Mr. de Waal will have to reply to a very lengthened section report.

The Colonial Minister has published his report upon the colonies. It does not contain any particulars of great interest beyond those facts already published by the papers. We now know officially that tranquillity continues to prevail in Java, and that there is no reason to apprehend that the favourable condition of affairs will be disturbed. The Minister, however, does not conceal the fact that great discontent is caused in India by the uncertainty with regard to our future policy.

I read your article entitled "Dutch Restriction on Foreign Trade" with great interest, and I quite agree with you that a revision of our antiquated system of checks upon our colonial trade ought to be introduced. I, however, do not think that any pressure on the part of your Government will be necessary to effect this result. Our home commerce experiences the advantages of a most liberal policy with regard to customs, and it is only natural that it should be advocated by our Liberal party for adoption in India also. With respect to the removal of these restrictions, Mr. de Roo van Alderwerelt, M.P., writes as follows in an article entitled "The India Budget," which appeared in the September number of our leading periodical De Gids. "We have in our hands," the author says, after having explained our system of defence in India, "the power to prevent any attack by a foreign country upon our colonial possessions; although the political eventualities which could lead to an attack upon our colonies are not within the bounds of calculation, yet it is the duty of every Government to apply as many measures as are needful for the safety of its possessions. Restrictive stipulations with regard to trade and shipping will instigate other nations to break the chains, by which their commerce is fettered. Excluding the stranger is inviting a conquest, and no lines of the Toen-Tang, no coast batteries or prad joerits, will avail to resist the conqueror, if, by a petty and ignorant policy, the population is made to perceive that any alteration would be an improvement." From this you may see that the Liberals are strongly urging the abolition of the restrictions upon commerce.

About the Rotterdam Bank a great many rumours are in circulation, which, of course, may be more or less true. I think that nothing of consequence will transpire until the result of the meeting of shareholders—which is announced to take place on the 17th proximo—is made public.

I have repeatedly written respecting the Huet scandal; the Conservative papers now state that the Liberals acted several times in the same manner as the Conservatives are said to have done, and they insinuate that a passage was paid by the present Government on behalf of Mr. v. Bosse, a cousin of the Minister of the Financial Department. Mr. Fransen van de Putte has requested the Minister to lay before the members all the documents referring to the matter.

The Conservative paper De Amsterdamsche Courant recently published a series of articles throwing discredit upon the Liberal colonial policy. It has now been proved that these articles, which caused some sensation, were written by a certain Dr. Feist, a German sugar contractor, who does not understand one word of the Dutch language.

According to official returns the population of the Netherlands reached the number of 3,592,416 on Dec. 31, 1867. This shows a considerable augmentation, and the number of members for the Second Chamber will have to be increased in consequence.

Her Majesty the Queen will start on the 20th inst. for England. She will pass some weeks at Torquay for the benefit of her health.

In this year only 323 soldiers remain to be forwarded to Java to reinforce the East Indian army.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 16.

The examination in the Sections of the India Budget is finished, but no report has been published. A Commission has been constituted at the Hague to secure the erection of a statue to Mr. J. P. Koen, at Batavia. Professor M. des Amorie Van der Hoeven died suddenly at Amsterdam yesterday. The ex-Minister of the Colonial Department, Mr. Hasselman, has published an article in the Dagblad, in which he endeavours to justify his conduct in giving a free passage to Java to Mr. Busken Huet, editor of the Java Bode. He says that he charged Mr. Huet with a commission, but he does not name its character.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The Trading Company has announced its auction for the 21st inst., when 106,100 b. Java will be offered. The market since my last report has been very inactive, there being but little demand. The private transactions only include 1,423 b. Padang, ex Karel, August, which were sold at 34½c. to 37c.

SUGAR (Raw).—The market remains very firm, and a good business has been done at unaltered prices. The following parcels have been sold:—382 mats Samarang, ex Concurrent, No. 15½; 369 Sourabaya, No. 17½; 1,510 mats Passaroeang, ex Golden Dream, No. 12, at 30¾f.; 324 mats Sourabaya, ex do., No. 17½, at 33¾f.; 593 mats do., ex do., No. 13¾, at 32¼f.; 251 mats Sourabaya, ex Baltimore, No. 15, at 33¾f.; 308 mats Batavia, ex Cosmopolite, No. 15½; 650 mats Sourabaya, ex County of Ayr, No. 11½, at 30f.; 920 mats Samarang, ex Hollandstrouw, No. 14, at ½f. under September; 940 mats Samarang of the new crop, ex Neckar, No. 14½, at 33½. The stock in bond on the 30th September was 45,094,195 kils.

SPICES.—There is still a good demand for export, so that somewhat higher prices are realised. Nutmegs, No. 1, 77c., but at the closing of the market holders declined to operate under 78c.; No. 2, 68c. to 69c. Mace, D, 119c.; E, 114c. There was also a good demand for Cloves. No. 3 was paid with 25c. to 25½c. Nothing can be bought now under 26c. The 846 b. Pepper, ex Bato (damaged) were sold at very high but secret prices.

TEA.—The market is very quiet in waiting for the forthcoming auction of 7,370/4, 310/8, 240/12, and 90/16 ch. Java, of which the valuation was published some days ago.

TOBACCO (JAVA LEAVES).—The market is very animated. 650 b. Java V and H Blitar were sold at 70c.; and 201 b. Blitar, ex County of Lanark, were realised at prices which did not transpire: In public auction were sold 547 b. Java BDL/AA at 81c. in average, 293 b. JHW at 33c., 473 b. WGJ at 48c., and 1,364 b. Java A. J. Walter ex Ternate. Good quality is very high. It seems that the importers will henceforth offer more parcels by inscription. The stock of Java is 18,005 b.

INDIGO (JAVA).—About 140 ch. were sold at unaltered prices.

BANCA TIN.—The rise in prices caused very large quantities to be offered at f.57½, in consequence of which rates have declined f.½. The transactions have been as follows:—500 slabs Banca at f.57, 500 do. at f.57½, 2,700 do. at f.57½, 500 do. at f.57¾, 1,300 do. at f.58, 500 do. at f.57¼, 1,000 do. at f.57, 1,000 slabs Billiton at f.56, 1,600 do. at f.56½, 500 do. at f.56, 500 do. at f.56½, 1,700 do. at f.55¾. The market closes firm.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Cocoa-nut Oil: Prima Ceylon, 32f. Rattans: the following parcels were sold—50 pic. ex Karel, August, 100 pic. ex Joseph Holmes; 175 pic. ex Baron Van Hardenbroek, Mother-o'-Pearl Shells: 30,000 ko. Macassar, ex Doesborgh, were sold at prices that did not transpire. Cassia Vera: Great quantities are offered floating, but there are no buyers. Gum Damar: Some transactions at firm prices. Camphor: Nothing doing.

STOCK AND SHARES.—The Stock Markets have been very quiet, and quotations close without any important change. Foreign Securities have been rather dull. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents., 66½; Three per Cents., 66; Four per Cents., 88. Trading Company, 123¾; Shares: Billiton Company, 94; Rotterdam Bank, 84; Netherlands Bank, 244½. There has been a rather active inquiry for money in the open market. Rates however remain unaltered.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY IN LONDON.

Under this head, a writer signing himself "A Travelled Country Cousin," has addressed the following letter to the Editor of The Times:

"SIR,—The Empire of China is reputed to contain 300,000,000 souls, or one-third of the inhabitants of this planet. China sends us every year more than 100,000,000 lb. of tea, and takes from us in the same period more than 100,000,000 yards of Manchester and Yorkshire fabrics. English steamers reach the very heart of China by ascending the great river Yang-tze-kiang, and arrive within eighty miles of the capital by going up the Peiho.

"In no country can a more industrious people be found, or one that more loves peace. If the Chinese nation were warlike and military, and led on by such a general as Alexander or Napoleon, they could in a few years overrun the rest of Asia, swallow up Russia, and probably the remainder of Europe, even if they only acted on the locusts' idea of warfare.

"The policy of such a nation must, then, be of some importance to the rest of the world, and particularly to England.

"I have, therefore, been looking daily in your columns for some account of the official reception given to the Chinese Embassy now in London, and I am driven to the conclusion that the reception, if it has already been given, cannot have been of a very brilliant character.

"If the Hereditary Grand Duke of Stiff-und-Starkenstein, whose dominions consist of half-a-dozen square miles, predestined to be gobbled up by Prussia, and whose exports to England are represented by some thousand dozens of Seltzer water and a few gross of meerschaum pipes per annum, had paid us a visit, a special train would have conveyed His Serenity from Southampton to London, a deputation of directors would have been in attendance at each railway terminus; Her Majesty's carriages, accompanied, perhaps, by a squadron of Life Guards, would have conveyed the illustrious stranger to Windsor; he would have dined in state at the Mansion-house, and feasted with civic companies.

"But for the representatives of one-third of mankind we have no national welcome to offer. For all we hear of them, they might be a group of private gentlemen who had come to London to see the Tower and Madame Tussaud's waxworks. I know enough about Chinamen to feel pretty confident about their feelings on the subject, and if it be our aim to humiliate and vex them, our policy is likely to meet with entire success. But the Americans, who are not bad judges in such matters, acted on quite a different principle when they had such an opportunity as we are now neglecting. I can imagine the astute New Englander who is at the head of the Embassy smiling grimly over our mistake. Americans may live to profit by, and we to deplore, the contrast that will probably be drawn in Peking."

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

(THE TIMES.)

The visit of the Sultan has spoilt Londoners for feeling any eager interest about foreign guests from a mere personal point of view; but the recent arrival of an Ambassador from China is of higher material significance to this country than a visit from the representative of the Prophet himself. The mystery of Chinese civilisation, so minute and so defective, no longer appeals to the imagination as it did a century back, when philosophers were looking for a new type to substitute for the European. But the spinning-jenny has developed among Englishmen, in exchange, a wonderful curiosity of another kind in a country which has four hundred million possible wearers of British prints. We welcome this Mission as a means of gratifying that very laudable curiosity. The circumstance that the actual Chinese Ambassador is not himself a Chinese does not diminish its value in this respect. The romance attaching to a travelling Chinese as such was dissipated long ago. Australia has been made fully aware that in the masses of the Chinese population there is, in fact, a pronounced taste for wandering; and the British colonists are by no means pleased at the discovery. Chinamen swarm in the islands of Asia; they are laundresses and cooks in San Francisco. If there be any desire to study native-born Chinese, Wapping and Ratcliff Highway can supply "Citizens of the World" in any number. But the Chinese Government ha hitherto had tendencies different from those of the Chinese people. The traditional exclusiveness of the Empire is due solely to it, and not to its subjects. It has been jealous of countenancing communication from without, not because it feared conversion for itself, but from alarm at the possible propagation of new ideas among them. If the Mission is not an elaborate plot to throw dust in the eyes of the Western World, it must amount to an acknowledgment by the rulers of the empire that circumstances make perseverance in this policy impracticable or dangerous. That they have at last accredited a Minister to foreign Governments is the important fact. The only work he can do in Europe and America for China is to facilitate communication between China and them. If he have authority from the Chinese Government to pledge it to the measures he takes for this purpose, the authority will not be less respected by foreign Governments because it is in hands which can exercise it on something of the same principles on which a Minister of their own to China would exercise his. If he have not this authority, his appointment has no meaning; but we are not disposed to think Mr. Burlinghame likely to have exchanged either consciously or in ignorance the substantial duties and powers of United States' Plenipotentiary at Peking for a post which would speedily be revealed as a delusion and a mockery, in which he would be the principal victim, even though it should be accompanied by the right to wear the most distinguished of But ons.

The functions of Chinese Ambassador to Europe are, in fact, such as may be performed by a foreigner as thoroughly as by a native. London drawing-rooms may lose the attractive spectacle of a Mandarin button of the first-class. But that need be the only ambassadorial essential missing. European States may have invented the office of resident Envoy that they might have licensed spies to detect and give early information of conspiracies in progress against them. Resident Ministers themselves may not have wholly abandoned this function now. But their more legitimate duty has always been to smooth down obstructions which circumstances have raised in the way of good relations between two Powers without any impeachment to the honesty of either. They further act as a species of supreme Consul in respect of commercial transactions. Finally, by another and yet more modern extension of the office, they now make reports upon any useful arrangements and institutions in operation abroad for the edification or warning of their own countrymen. There are none of these duties which Mr. Burlinghame cannot fulfil as satisfactorily as a Chinese. A Chinese would be as useless as he in regard to the first, for the simple reason that England and France, Holland and the United States, have not the least interest in plotting against the peace of China. Mr. Burlinghame, again, will not, perhaps, find much scope for diplomatic ingenuity in arranging international difficulties. It is at the Court of Peking, where they were concocted, that they would have to be settled. But when, if ever, they do arise from misapprehensions on the part of statesmen here, he will be better able to appreciate and explain them away than an Oriental, whose diplomacy would prove far too subtle for our Foreign Secretaries to tolerate. But Mr. Burlinghame's substantive business as Chinese Envoy will be much more with his own than with foreign Courts. He will be a non-resident adviser of his Government on foreign affairs. He will be also Consul for China in Europe and America; and, particularly, he should make it his duty to trace, for the information not only of the Chinese Government, but of the Chinese merchants, the directions in which trade between the West and China tends.

Mr. Burlinghame may do much in his position towards developing the Chinese foreign trade. If it amounts now to a hundred millions sterling, the amount might be doubled or trebled. At present the merchants from this side know to a certain extent what goods which China can supply their countrymen require. But even this knowledge might be usefully supplemented by an independent authority. The enormous and many-sided industry of China produces much besides its tea, and its porcelain, and its ivory carvings which would find purchasers in Europe and America. But, at all events, our merchants' seclection of goods for the supply of the Chinese market in return is too much in the nature of guess-work. China has no representative here answering to the representatives which the English and other foreign merchants are in relation to their several countries, to choose, as it were, the goods which the population would like in exchange for its tea. A sort of Chinese Commercial Corresponding Bureau, with its head-quarters in London, might open up new sources of trade, and regulate very advantageously the course of the existing streams. It is the faith of Manchester that the hundreds of millions of China would present a strikingly improved appearance if Manchester had the clothing of them, and that their conversion to this belief would follow of course if it could but get at them to preach it. Doubtless, on the other hand, multitudes of the ingenious artificers of China only wait to have their workmanship brought to the knowledge of foreign nations for the latter to become customers. A Chinese Ambassador offering himself as a commercial missionary or interpreter to interpret the wants of either side, and to indicate the prices it could offer for their supply, and whose renderings should be circulated by his Government through the Empire, would benefit both countries equally. It is possible that in time duties like this might be performed by native officials. But at present China does not possess them. The diplomacy which is satisfied with outwitting others would be out of place where, as must be assumed of the appointment of a Chinese Resident for Europe and America, the object is to bring China and them into closer permanent relations for their joint advantage. But a Chinese has no other notion of diplomacy. One of the objects of Mr. Burlinghame's appointment is to train the natives associated with him to the habits of European diplomacy. But it depends upon the way he himself launches his very novel office whether the experiment will be persevered in. We think the fact that he is not a Chinese is no bar to his success. The Courts to which he is accredited will forget it if he forgets it. If he abstain from all interference with political intrigues in which China can certainly have no healthy or natural interest; if he act as though there could be no separate national interests in Europe and America, as, indeed, there are not, so far as their relations with China are concerned; and if he accept it as the primary function of his mission to discover and explain what are the best lines of trade both for China and the Western countries, he will have accomplished much for China and something for the rest of the world. No State can have so personal an interest in his success of this sort as Great Britain, and none could be more willing to contribute to it.

THE BRINDISI ROUTE.

A traveller by this route having written to The Times complaining of the hotel accommodation at Brindisi, another traveller (Mr. Edward Lear) replies as followes:—

"Sir,—In a notice entitled 'The Brindisi Route,' published in The Times a few days since, the writer, who dates his letter from the Hotel d'Orient, complains that there is no decent inn in Brindisi.

"Will you permit me to say through The Times that there is another and very tolerable inn in that town of which your correspondent was probably not aware—namely, the Hotel d'Angleterre, kept by Sebastian Gallo? The landlord, who has lived as servant in the families of the late Lord Seaton and of General Sir George Buller, at Corfu, and with the late Captain Murray, Resident of Paxo, is well acquainted with the ways and wants of English families, and his inn may be justly recommended to persons going by the Brindisi route to or from Egypt. I stayed two days at Sebastian's inn last summer, and was made as comfortable in every way as the limited size of the house he then occupied would allow of; he has since moved into one larger.

"Allow me to add that for families who do not wish to make the railway journey from Bologna to Brindisi without rest there is an excellent hotel at Rimini, called 'I Tre Re.' At Ancona (unless there is some new inn) I cannot recommend a halt, but at Barithe 'Risorgimento d'Italia' may very well be made a resting-place, if a break in the journey is necessary."

THE COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION.

A report has been issued to the creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East, in liquidation, by the committee appointed to investigate the affairs of the company. They state that they have investigated the arrangements, ending in what has been termed the amalgamation of the two banks, first commenced so far back as February, 1862; and it appears to them that the actual results of these arrangements were the change of name of the old bank, the introduction of new partners and new capital, and the adoption by the corporation of the assets and liabilities of the old bank, as they stood on the 31st December, 1864. These assets and liabilities, the committee state, have from the 1st January, 1865, been dealt with by the corporation in every respect as if they were its own absolute properties and obligations. From information obtained from Mr. Holyland, the official liquidator, and also from the statement of assets and liabilities presented at the first general meeting of the corporation in April, 1865, it appears that the company then treated the assets handed over to them on the 31st December, 1864, by the old Commercial Bank, as amounting to £6,194,314 8s. 8d., less new capital paid by shareholders in the corporation prior to the 31st December, 1864, included in the above, £446,872 10s., making a net total of £5,747,441 18s. 8d. Particulars are next given of these assets and their estimated present value. The liabilities of the old bank to the public, including the so-called China Loan for £633,777, were by the same statement taken as amounting to £5,045,490 9s. 9d. Of these the corporation have paid or liquidated £4,728,601 19s. 9d.; and there yet remains £316,888 10s. represented by the balance of the depositors' claims objected to by Mr. Harrison. But it appears from the balance-sheet presented to the shareholders of the corporation in April, 1865, that the assets handed over were valued and accepted by the corporation as on 31st December, 1864, as £5,747,441 18s. 8d., and the liabilities on the same date as £5,045,490 9s. 9d., leaving a balance in favour of assets of £701,951 8s. 11d.; and that, after charging the old bank with the £500,000 for shares of the corporation allotted to the members of the old bank, there would remain £201,951 8s. 11d. The committee remark that they have endeavoured to ascertain in what possible way the litigation can benefit either the shareholders of the corporation or the creditors who are admittedly such, and the conclusion they have arrived at is, that its only result can be to diminish by legal and other expenses the assets, which, with the amount estimated to be realised from the uncalled capital of £15 per share, are not now sufficient to pay the debts; and, unless some arrangement is made for a general compromise, the creditors must insist that the shareholders be called upon to pay forthwith the balance of £15 per share upon their holdings. The application of the official liquidator for this call, made in consequence of the proceedings of the liquidators of the Bank of Hindustan taken last July, is to be heard before the Master of the Rolls on 30th October inst. The effect of continuing the litigation must, so far as the shareholders are concerned, result in calling up the whole £15 per share at once; and, as regards the creditors, in preventing them from receiving a further dividend for an indefinite period.

Monetary and Commercial.

The well-known East Indian agency firm of Messrs. Smith, Elder, and Co. has been dissolved by the retirement of Mr. George Smith from the home, East Indian, and foreign agency and banking business; and the formation of a new firm for the before-mentioned branches, under the style of "Henry S. King and Co.," is announced. Mr. King, who was a partner in the old house for fifteen years, is now the principal, and will carry on the business in the same premises at Cornhill and Pall-mall. Mr. Geo. Smith retains the publishing business of Smith, Elder, and Co. for himself exclusively.

The suspension has been announced of Messrs. Salavy and Co., a French house of about seven years' date, chiefly in the silk trade, with connections at Marseilles. The liabilities are stated to be about £100,000, but the ultimate balance to rank on the estate is expected to be about £40,000. The result of the liquidation is regarded as very uncertain. The books are in the hands of Messrs. Lovering and Minton.

The biddings for Rs. 20,00,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held on the 7th at the Bank of England. The whole amount was allotted to Calcutta. The minimum price was fixed as before, at 1s. 10⅛d. on both presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11⅛d. will receive about 84 per cent. These results show little change compared with those noticed on the last occasion.

From the commencement of the ill-omened litigation in the matter of the Commercial Bank Corporation we deprecated it as being certain to prove disastrous alike to shareholders and creditors. Our anticipations have been speedily and fatally verified. The committee appointed to investigate the matter have issued a report, in which they state that the effect of continuing the litigation must, so far as the shareholders are concerned, result in calling up the whole £15 per share at once, and, as regards the creditors, in preventing them from receiving a further dividend for an indefinite period. The committee think this is eminently a case for some concession on both sides, and that the shareholders should voluntarily assist the creditors to arrive at some basis upon which it could be settled without further contention. The report is noticed at length in another column; it concludes by calling a meeting of creditors at the Guildhall Tavern, on the 20th inst. at two P.M., to decide on future proceedings.

The arrangements of the East India Telegraph Company in New York in getting the necessary capital subscribed have been much retarded by the elections now going on for the Presidency. On the completion of the subscriptions in New York it is intended to introduce the company into the London market and form a London board of directors, and by this means make the undertaking of an international character. The cable will be manufactured and sent out to China from England.

The Council of India will receive tenders on the 21st inst. for bills on Calcutta and Madras to the amount of £200,000.

The Mexican dollars brought by the French steamer Washington have been disposed of (chiefly for China) at 58⅞d. per ounce showing a decline of ⅛d. from the last price. The dollars by the West India packet just arrived (about £400,000) have fetched the same price. There is an increased demand for this coin for transmission to China at the present low price, and the next packet from Southampton is expected to take a considerable amount for that quarter. Some inquiry is also observable for bar silver, and the quotation is firm at 5s. 0¼d. per ounce; the supply here is very moderate.

An extraordinary meeting of the Singapore Gas Company (Limited) is called for the 27th inst., to declare a dividend.

The Hong Kong and China Gas Company (Limited) have declared a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. for the past year.

It is announced that the 1866 cable of the Atlantic Company was repaired on the 12th inst.

The joint committee of management of the Anglo-American and Atlantic Telegraph Companies have resolved on and after the 1st of November to count cable messages by words only, instead of counting by words and by letters as at present.

The last report sent by M. Ferdinand Lesseps gives a most glowing account of the Suez Canal; from the 25th July to the 15th of August 2,114,450 mètres of work have been completed; 2,500 mètres only are wanting to finish this gigantic undertaking.

At a recent meeting of the council of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Reed called attention to the insecurity of the present system of granting bills of lading in batches of two, three, and four, all of the same tenour and date, and suggested that Parliament should be petitioned in favour of the constitution in every port of departments for the registration and stamping of bills of lading, and that the registration be only at the port of discharge and at ports where vessels call for orders. Mr. Reed remarked that under the present system it was easy to obtain several advances on one bill of lading, and one firm in that building had lost £30,000 within a year from that source. After some discussion, the subject was referred to the Commercial Law Committee.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Syria, from Southampton on the 17th inst., was in gold to Alexandria, £15,000; to Bombay, £13,750; to Galle, £5,000; to Madras, £874; to Singapore, £550; in silver to Bombay, £89,000; to Singapore, £20,100; to Hong Kong, £15,813; total in gold, £35,174; in silver, £124,913.

BULLION AND SPECIE.

The current quotations are as follows:—Bar gold, 77s. 9d. to 77s. 11d. per ounce standard; Spanish doubloons, 74s. 6d. to 75s. per oz.; bar silver, 5s. 0⅛d. per oz. standard; do., containing gold, 5s. 0⅜d.; Mexican dollars, 4s. 10⅜d. per oz.; five-franc pieces, 4s. 11⅛d. The following is from Messrs. Mocatta and Goldsmid's Circular:—There is no alteration to report in the state of the silver market; the arrivals have not been large, and the bulk has been exported to Hamburg, with occasional unimportant transactions for India.

Mexican dollars for some time maintained a high price, owing to their scarcity and to a very moderate demand for China. Now, however, that the French packet has brought some quantity of dollars and about two millions more are shortly expected by the Royal Mail steamer, the rate will decline, and the nearest quotation is 58s. 0⅞d.

No very large quantity of gold has been received during the past fortnight, and most of this has been taken to the Bank, there being no continental demand. A few shipments are being made for India in bars and sovereigns, but probably these will not long continue.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson's Circular, dated the 16th inst., is as follows:—There has not been any improvement in the market to notice during the past week, nor have there been any fresh arrivals. For the commonest grades of Congou there has been a little more inquiry, but for all fair to good qualities the dealers hold back from purchasing, even at the low rates lately ruling—awaiting the arrivals of the various clippers now due.

FOOCHOW CONGOUS.—Several parcels of good to fair, of old import, have been brought forward privately, and sold at 1s. 0⅛d. to 1s. 0⅛d. per lb. In new import little has been done at about late quotations, the only inquiry being for finest, and this only to a small extent. A chop of extra fine has realised 2s. 9d. per lb. Black-leaf Congous:

Digitized by Google

Good common is saleable at 1s. 0½d., but there is little to be had at this price; fair to medium, of old import, at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d. per lb., these grades showing a slight improvement. Good, of new import, have been sold in small quantities at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 9d. per lb.; fine at 1s. 11d. to 2s. 2d. per lb., and the market is now bare of these descriptions. Oolongs are as unsaleable as before. Scented Teas also remain without alteration. Green teas have been more inquired for, chiefly for shipment to America and Canada, and prices in some cases are rather better, especially for the lower grades of Young Hyson and Imperial.

There have not been any arrivals, but the Forward Ho and Titania are reported off the coast. Prices generally do not show any alteration; but common to fair black leaf Congous of old import are rather dearer, also the lower grades of Green tea.

Messrs. Jas. Steains and Co.'s Circular contains the following:—

The past month has been one of unusual dulness in the tea market, owing to the wretched quality of the cargoes from Foo-chow-Foo, the non-arrival of Monings, and buyers for export and home consumption taking only what they require for immediate wants, nor do we see any chance of improvement in face of the immense quantity now afloat. Congou: Dust and broken leaf are unaltered in value; common red and black leaf slightly dearer; medium qualities very dull; fine in improved demand at full prices. Souchongs: Old season's of fine quality more inquired for in the absence of arrivals of this season's make. Paklings show a fall of 3d. to 4d. per lb. Oolongs still continue to exhibit great depression. Scented Teas: There have been no fresh arrivals since our last. Greens: Part of the cargo of the Diomed steamer has been placed on the market, and met with a ready sale at firm prices.

Silk: The market remains without any change of importance.

Cotton.—A slight improvement was manifested in the Liverpool market on the 10th inst. (the day after the departure of the last mail), and on the 11th there was a large speculative demand at an advance of ⅛d. per lb. There has since been a reaction, the previous advance has been lost and a further decline of ⅛d. established, the current rates being as follows:—American, 8¼d. to 11½d.; Smyrna, 8½d.; Peru, 9½d. to 10⅞d.; Surat, 6d. to 9d.; Bengal, Scinde, &c., 6⅝d. to 7¼d.; fair Dhollerah, 8d.; fair Oomrawuttee, 8d.; fair Broach, 8¼d.; fair Bengal, 7d.; fair Egyptian, 11¾d.; fair Pernam., 10¾d.; middling Boweds, 10⅜d.; middling Orleans, 11d. The more recent sales "for arrival" have been at the following prices:—American, basis of middling, Mobile, October-November shipment, 10d.; New Orleans, ship named, 10¼d.; Dhollerah, fair new merchants, June sailing, 8 1-16d.; Oomrawuttee, fair new merchants, sailing early June, 7 15-16d.; ditto, July, 8d.; and Scinde, fair new merchants, June sailing, 7d. The London market has followed the course of that at Liverpool, and is now quiet with only a moderate demand at the reduced rates.

Coffee.—Messrs. Carey and Browne offer the following report on the market:—"The unusual course pursued by the Dutch Trading Company in announcing the quantity of coffee it will offer in November before the October sale has been held, has been a relief to the market, for, as only 80,000 bags will be brought forward instead of 140,000 bags, as had been expected, business has been transacted with more freedom, and in some descriptions at improved prices. Privately 4,000 to 5,000 bags and some casks Native Ceylon have changed hands, chiefly at 44s. to 45s. for fair to fully good ordinary, and there are now no sellers under 46s., at which one parcel has been taken. Plantation Ceylon has met a ready sale, and in some instances 1s. advance has been paid. Mysore and the other fine kinds of East India Plantation have gone off with better spirit, the common sorts alone remaining dull of sale. Native Mangalore and Wynaad in public sale were dull, and a good portion bought in; privately, about 700 bags Coorg have been sold at 49s., being a better price than was obtainable last week. The sales of Ceylon during the interval have comprised 693 casks, 693 barrels and bags Plantation, good ordinary to fine fine ordinary 54s. to 65s., low middling and middling 66s. to 74s., good middling to good bold colory 76s. to 86s. 73 casks, 1,879 bags Native, principally sold, common 41s. 6d. to 43s., good to fine ordinary at 44s. 6d. to 46s., fine bold 50s. to 55s.

Coir Goods.—Small sales are reported at rates corresponding with those current at the date of our last.

Cocoa-Nut Oil.—There is a steady market at £50 10s. to £51 for Ceylon.

Camphor.—There is still an almost entire absence of business.

Gums.—Benjamin: We have to report the following transactions since the date of our last:—Of 99 cases Sumatra about 36 sold, good seconds £11, good with some rather dark £9 10s., dark to fair £7 15s. to £8 15s. Of 8 cases Siam 3 cases sold, medium to small almond in block £24, ditto dusty £20 5s., seed ditto £17, ordinary drossy £9 5s. Gum Damar: The offers at the auctions have included 15 cases good pale Batavia, which were bought in at £4 17s.

Galls.—There is still a quiet market, and the only sale has been of 300 bales Japan, small and partly broken, which realised 50s. per cwt., one ot 50s. 6d.

Gambier.—The market has become quiet; of 480 baskets offered at auction the good qualities were bought in at 26s., and 100 baskets very ordinary realised 21s. to 21s. 6d.; 400 bags soft red block were bought in at 17s., and 700 bales ex ship have been sold at 17s. per cwt.

Japan Wax.—We have no change in the tone of the market to report. Of 125 cases offered at the public sales 24 cases sold, realising £5 5s. for good but rather small saucers, and £5 2s. 6d. per cwt. for inferior.

Manila Hemp.—Since our report of the 9th inst. the offers at auction have comprised 362 bales, of which 201 bales damaged sold at £42 10s. to £47 15s. for fourth to first-class quality, the remaining sound portion being bought in at £48 15s. per ton.

Pepper.—Black: Penang continues in request, and 1,773 bags at public sale brought the higher quotation of 3¼d. to 3⅜d.; 407 bags Trang were withdrawn; 936 bags Singapore sold steadily at 3⅜d. to 3 7-16d. Private about 1,000 bags have been taken—Singapore at 3 7-16d. to 3½d., Penang at 3½d. cash, and Trang at 3⅜d. White: 1,057 bags Singapore met few bids, and only a small proportion was sold at 4½d.; 108 bags Penang were bought in at 4⅜d. to 4¾d. 200 bags have been sold privately at 4⅜d. to 4½d.

Plumbago.—A sale is reported of 44 barrels Ceylon, which realised 21s. to 21s. 6d. per cwt. for medium dusty lump, and 16s. 6d. for dust.

Rice.—There has been little disposition shown to buy landed parcels, and prices have been barely supported, 2,034 bags middling white Bengal having been sold at auction at 10s. Privately, 1,500 bags Madras have been taken at 9s. to 9s. 6d., and 500 bags fine white Bengal at 16s. A floating cargo of 1,400 tons Nekransie has been sold for the Continent at 10s. 9d.

Spices.—Mace: About 20 cases have been sold, common at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 8d., and fair at 2s. 2d. to 2s. 3d., these prices showing a reduction on those previously current. Nutmegs: At the public sales 34 cases Penang were offered and nearly all withdrawn, only a few lots good bold being taken at 3s. 11d., while 44 packages Batavian were also withdrawn.

Sapanwood.—Since our last report 14 tons Siam have been bought in at £15, and 19 tons Manila at £7 10s.

Sugar.—A dull tone prevails in the market, parcels being firmly held, and the desire to buy having diminished. At the public sales 367 bags Penang have realised 31s. to 32s. for brown, and 33s. to 35s. for low to good soft yellow. Of Manila 9,279 bags, ex Castleton, from Iloilo, duty 9s. 7d., were sold—good brown at 29s. 9d. to 30s. 6d., low yellow at 31s. to 31s. 6d., a few lots at 32s. This import of Manila appears to be neither genuine Clayed nor Muscovado; it has more the character and smell of some of the better class of Native East Indian sugars, and has probably undergone a similar preparation. Clayed and Muscovado are offering; fair (8s. duty) Clayed might be sold in small quantities at 29s. 6d., but Muscovado is not wanted at the moment, and to effect sales some concession in price would have to be made. The business on the spot by private contract has been confined to 2,000 bags Clayed Manila, duty 8s., at 29s. 6d. per cwt.

Tin.—The activity in the market for Straits reported in our last issue has continued without check. Considerable business has been transacted in Straits at advancing rates; £96 spot, and £96 10s. afloat has been paid, and holders now ask 10s. more. The current quotations being fine Straits on the spot £96 10s., afloat £97; Banca £97 per ton.

Messrs. French and Smith report:—Copper without change; Lead quite firm; Spelter rather higher; and Zinc advanced to £27 per ton.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Mr. Sam Mendel's Report says:—"In face of the continued activity in Liverpool at higher rates, both spinners and manufacturers find it difficult to obtain a corresponding improvement. The business done has been on a limited scale for Yarns and Goods, yet producers show no desire to give way, as current rates leave a serious loss."

Messrs. Alexander Collie and Co.'s Monthly Circular, dated 16th inst., contains the following remarks:—

At the date of our last Circular middling American cotton was at 10d. per lb., but, under the influence of the current rumours of serious injury to the crops in America and India, a large speculative demand for the staple set in, and has continued with various degrees of excitement. On 5th inst. the price had reached 11d., to-day it is 10½d. firm. The trifling effect produced in this market among all classes of buyers by these reports may be judged from the fact that current quotations for goods and yarns, especially the former, scarcely vary from those of 17th ult.

Shirtings, being the largest staple branch in the market, have suffered most from the unceasing fluctuations in cotton during the past four weeks, and transactions in them have been confined to the fulfilment of small orders requiring immediate execution. Buyers here having been quite unaffected by the excitement in Liverpool, these orders have been placed generally at prices under producers' quotations of the day. In China 39 in. qualities there has been a little more activity, but in cloths suited to India the adverse advices have afforded little encouragement to operate.

T-Cloths have held a firm position, and the better qualities have been in steady but moderate request, at prices rather against the buyer. In the last week of September producers established an advance at which in several instances they succeeded in obtaining fair orders, but the collapse in the cotton market a week ago resulted in their receding to the old figure. Ordinary kinds have been in less demand, but have not varied so much in price.

Long Cloths and Domestics have been in quiet but continuous inquiry. The former are light in stock, and makers of them being generally well engaged, adhere firmly to their quotations. Domestics, on the contrary, are pretty heavily held. In common with other goods, the prices of both were advanced at the beginning of the month, but no response in orders having been made by buyers, they have relapsed to a rather worse position than before, the demand for them having become very languid towards the close.

Madapollams have been the subject of less business than any other export goods since our last issue. The late heavy cotton speculation caused a nominal advance in the quotation, but neither that nor the subsequent decline has induced any inquiry for them.

Printers, both in 7/8ths and 9/8ths widths, have been selling steadily, but at no time extensively. In the first few days of October they were advanced about 6d. per piece, which at once acted as a check to buyers, who have not since had spirit to operate at the decline to nearly old prices.

Jacconets and Mulls, with other light fabrics, have of late been almost entirely neglected. The few purchases reported have been of quite a retail character, so that their present actual value, as compared with the heavier manufactures, cannot be accurately tested. Nominally they have undergone no alteration in price.

Yarns have had to depend very much upon the current advices from the markets for which the different spinnings are suitable. China qualities of Water Twist have been steady throughout, although it has been found impossible to obtain upon them the advance asked from time to time. India Mules, 30's, 40's, and finer counts for that trade, have been in less demand, and to induce any important operation in them spinners would have had to make considerable concessions. Continental qualities have been very languid. Coarse kinds, in comparison to the gross transactions, have been more active than for months past; and the contracts in the finest numbers have been sufficient to engage their spinners, and to enable them to adhere to late quotations, although not to obtain any advance.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth freights to the Eastern ports continue firm, but business is not very brisk; we have no alteration to note in coal freights from the Northern outports.

Current rates of freight for vessels on the berth:—To Yokohama: 40s weight, 45s. meast. To Nagasaki: 45s. weight, 50s. meast. To Shanghai: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Hong Kong: 40s. weight, 30s. meast. To Singapore: 30s. weight or meast. To Penang: 30s. weight or meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 35s. meast. At New York to China: $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear or Tyne per keel.—For Shanghai: £45. For Hong Kong: £36. For Singapore: £27. For Galle: £23. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton. — For Yokohama, £2 7s. 6d. For Shanghai: £2 8s. For Hong Kong: £1 19s. For Manila: £1 7s. 6d. For Singapore: £1 8s. For Galle: £1 2s. 6d.

The Admiralty have invited tenders for the conveyance of 475 hhds. malt liquor, in ships of the burthen of about 400 tons register, from England to Hong Kong.

CASUALTIES.

The Halden, Ekstein, which sailed from Liverpool Sept. 22, for Galle arrived at Queenstown, Oct. 1, leaky in topsides.

The Maria y Vicenta, which sailed from Liverpool, September 18, for Manila, arrived at Ferrol on the 27th with mainmast cut away during a gale.

The Chaturanga, which sailed from Cardiff, Oct. 3, for Singapore, arrived at Milford on the 8th, leaky and with loss of topgallantmast, bulwarks, &c. She has been found to be too deep, and will have to be lightened of about 80 tons of coals; her topsides were found to be strained, and would have to be caulked.

Advices from Amsterdam, dated Oct. 7, state that the Stad Oldenzaal, Hoogtorp, from Rotterdam to Hong Kong, put into Bahia, Aug. 28. She had lost a great portion of her rigging on the 23rd, but the vessel was tight.

The London Castle, Thyne, which sailed from Glasgow, Sept. 27, for Singapore, bore up to Rothesay Bay with rudder head loose and one man lost overboard. She had been 150 miles to the westward, and on the 5th Oct. experienced very heavy weather.

MISCELLANEOUS.

At St. Helena.—Aug. 29, Helene, Meyeville, from Saigon, and sailed 31 for Belle Isle; 30, Jane Woodburn, McDonald, from Hong Kong, and sailed 31 for New York; Paix, Labarbe, from Saigon, and sailed 31 for Belle Isle; 31, Fleetwing, Bray, from Manila, and sailed for New York; Sept. 1, Prinses Amalia, Bentveld, from Batavia, and sailed 2 for Rotterdam; 3, Glen Roy, Warden, from Saigon, and sailed for Antwep; 4, Jacob Drenth, from Bangkok; 5, Palais Gallien, Richard, from Saigon, and sailed for Belle Isle; 6, Everest, Clarke, from Foochow, and sailed for Liverpool.

Off St. Helena.—Aug. 31, Fontenaye, from China, for Bremen; Sept. 3, Princess Beatrice, from Ceylon, for London; 4, Jane Anna, from Colombo, for London.

Off Ascension.—Sept. 15, Argus, from Batavia, for Rotterdam.

At St. Helena.—Sept. 8, United Service (s.s.), Gaine, from London, for Singapore, China, &c.; 9, Ocean Belle, Jarvis, from Padang, and sailed for New York; 10, Granite City, Leslie, from Singapore, and sailed for London; Lady Alice, Stranack, from Bangkok, and sailed 11 for Falmouth; 11, Anna Bok, from Batavia, and sailed for Rotterdam; Ida Elizabeth, Dooren, from Batavia; Argo, Ankringa, from Batavia, and both sailed 12 for Rotterdam.

Off St. Helena.—Sept. 9, St. Andrew's Castle, from Colombo, for London; 10, Taitsing, and Hoang Ho, from Shanghai, and both sailed for London.

The Hebe, which sailed from Liverpool Oct. 3 for Singapore, has since put back.

LAUNCHES.

There has been launched from the west shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Charles Connell and Co., at Over-Newton, a finely modelled composite sailing ship of 1,174 tons, to class sixteen years A 1 at Lloyd's. She was named the County of Berwick. She is owned by Messrs. R. and J. Craig, shipowners, Hope-street, and is intended for their Java line of packets.

Messrs. Randolph, Elder, and Co. have launched from their shipbuilding-yard at Fairfield, Glasgow, the Carrick Castle, a composite sailing ship of 1,074 tons builders' measurement of the following dimensions:—Length over all, 217 feet; breadth, 34 feet; and depth (moulded), 21 feet. The Carrick Castle has been built to the order of Messrs. Thomas Skinner and Co., of Glasgow, and is intended to form one of their "Castle" line of Singapore and China traders.

Messrs. Wm. Denny and Brothers launched on the Clyde, on the 3rd inst., a very handsome iron screw steamer, her dimensions and particulars being as follows:—Length, keel and forerake, 345 feet; breadth, 42 feet; depth, 31½ feet; tonnage, builder's measure, 3,000 tons. Her machinery is of the direct-acting surface condensation construction, and 600-horse power nominal, by Messrs. Denny and Co. This magnificent vessel, originally intended to be called Magdala, but finally arranged to be named Deccan, is the property of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, and will be fitted up for the accommodation of 183 first-class and 57 second-class passengers, with every convenience and luxury requisite for their service.

Messrs. John Reid and Co., of Port Glasgow, have launched an iron sailing-ship of 1,380 tons register, called the Ivanhoe, belonging to Messrs. Williamson, Milligan, and Co., of Liverpool, and forming one of their Waverley line of East India packet ships.

Messrs. Robert Duncan and Co. have launched, on the Clyde, a new iron clipper ship, named the Scinde, owned by John Kerr, Esq., Greenock. The Scinde is of the following dimensions:—Length, 220 feet; breadth, 36 feet; depth, 22½ feet; 1,200 tons register. She is for the East Indian trade, and is to be commanded by Captain M'Millan, late of the ship Trochrague.

Messrs. Henderson, Coulborn, and Co. have launched a composite steamer of about 650 tons burden, for the China and Japan trade. She has been named the Ocean Queen, and is fitted by Messrs, Henderson, Coulborn, and Co. with compound surface condensing engines of 80-horse power nominal.

Messrs. Oswald and Co., shipbuilders and engineers, Pallion High Yard, Sunderland, have launched for Messrs J. S. De Wolf and Co., of Liverpool, the iron sailing ship Cashmere, for the East India trade, to class Aa at Lloyd's, and 20 years red in the Liverpool book. Dimensions:—Length between perpendiculars, 216 feet; ditto on low water level, 208 feet; breadth extreme, 36 feet 9 inches; depth of hold, 23 feet; tonnage O.M., 1,402; gross register, 1,250. This is the eighth vessel launched by Messrs. Oswald and Co. this year, making an aggregate gross register tonnage of 6,707 tons. There are also two large sailing vessels ready for launching next spring, of 1,402 and 767 tons respectively.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—No Risk.—When the surgeon shakes his head and the patient feels despondent is the fittest time to try these noble remedies. Inflammations, sores, eruptions, ulcerations, bad legs, and a far longer list of external tortures, can always be cured by these incomparable medicaments. If the cure be not always rapid, it will always be complete, and leave behind no danger of relapse. That this Ointment exerts the most cooling, soothing, and healing powers over the most irritable, painful, and chronic sores is an established fact, which is daily confirmed by the unsolicited testimony of sympathising patients, whom (to use their own expressive phrase) Holloway's remedies have rescued from the very verge of death.

Per P. and O. steamer Massilia, from Southampton, Nov. 28.—To Ceylon: Mr. H. E. C. Grey.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from this port by the mails delivered on Saturday night extend to the 5th September. The outward English mail of July 3rd arrived in Yokohama on the 24th September. The latest London telegrams received were to the 31st July, brought via New York and San Francisco by the Pacific mail steamer Japan, which arrived on the 26th September.

The Japan Times thus sums up the news of the fortnight:—

The political situation has undergone no change. The Northern rebels are reported to be waiting for the winter, to which they trust for starving the Mikado's troops out of Yedo, and, judging from the recent change in the appearance of that city, the possibility of the Imperialists abandoning it is not altogether chimerical. The mint and arsenal have both been transported to Osaka, the greater part of the palaces of the Daimios are dismantled, the hinges and heavy bronze ornaments torn off the doors, and in many cases the inner houses pulled down, and their stone and timber sold to builders. A landslip had occurred at an important point in the second wall of the castle, where a breach now exists of some forty or fifty rods in width, the debris from which has fallen down and shallowed the moat. No attempt is being made to repair this, nor the many minor damages which the walls and guard-houses suffered during the heavy rains of July. Very large numbers of the people have been sent down to the South, merchants, artisans, and labourers, and crowds of others have left of their own accord. We shall not be surprised to find the Mikado's troops leaving the place during the coming winter; but if they do, they will probably leave it in ashes, and future visitors to Japan will only be shown the spot where Yedo was.

It is but a month ago since we detailed at some length a few of the grievances which foreign residents had against the officials of the new Government. On the 25th inst. one of these interferences with native servants in foreign employ reached its climax in an assault upon a groom in the service of the Prussian charge d'affaires, M. von Brandt, who chanced to be driving through the main street of the Japanese town in his phaeton, with his "betto" sitting as usual behind him in the rumble, when he came up with the train of Higashi Kuze Saki No Chiujo, who represents the Board for Foreign Affairs here. M. von Brandt's carriage was stopped, and his "betto" ordered to descend and perform obeisance to the Japanese noble, as all the other native passers by were doing. To this the Minister could hardly be expected to submit, but he had to choose between driving on and forcing his way through a number of guards, no very dignified proceeding, or protesting against the indignity to which he was subjected and reserving his action for a future period. The latter course he wisely adopted. His betto was then compelled to leave the carriage and perform the customary salute, and M. Von Brandt proceeded on his way. He at once demanded an apology and the punishment of the two samurai who dragged his betto from his seat, and in this he is believed to have been fully supported by his foreign colleagues. M. Von Brandt's reputation for ability and stedfastness of purpose led us all to congratulate ourselves upon the event having happened to him, believing that he would seize the opportunity of distinctly establishing proper relations between ourselves and the obnoxious native guards. It is therefore with dismay that we record the lame and impotent conclusion. After threats of breaking off diplomatic relations immediately, if not sooner; after invoking the help of his colleagues; after parading before the unimaginative Japanese the dread wrath of the divine Bismarck and the collossal power of the Prussian Navy; after all this, his Excellency, whose aristocratic pride has been proverbial here as almost equalling that of the principal character in "Paradise Lost," declares himself "fully satisfied" with the following:—

"With regard to the improper behaviour which men of my escort have shown towards the Prussian Minister, by pulling down his betto from his carriage on the 25th instant, I have expressed my deep regret to the Minister. Let every one keep well in mind that henceforward nobody, whoever he may be, shall conduct himself in such an improper manner towards a Minister or a foreigner. The above decree of Higashi Kuze no Chiujo shall be published in the town to all people without any exception.

(Signed) "SAIBANSHO, of Kanagawa."

Mr. Midshipman Easy's ingenious apology to his superior officer has excited the laughter of two generations of school boys, yet this of Higashi Kuzé to M. Von Brandt, one of about the same value, is gravely accepted as sufficient. No punishment is submitted to, by either the chief or his followers; the fact that an Article of the Treaty has been tampered with is totally ignored—an Article the meaning of which, as affecting bettoes riding with their masters, was affirmed two years ago, and re-affirmed within a couple of weeks of this occurrence; the offender does not even ask pardon—he only "expresses his deep regret," a very easy thing to do. "Henceforward" all are to bear in mind that they shall not do likewise, but no penalty is attached to the offence committed, nor any threatened for the future. And this, after four days' diplomacy! Few gentlemen in any other relation of life but would decline such a fragment of satisfaction, but perhaps M. Von Brandt thought "half a loaf was better than no bread," and indeed it was whispered for a couple of days that he was in serious danger of getting no apology at all. Higashi Kuze was said to have asked "who he was," alluding to the fact that he had hitherto declined to visit the Mikado's Court; to have referred him to "his friend the Shiogoon," and other impertinences. Some quid nuncs went so far as to affirm that when he threatened to take his departure the malicious Japanese sent him the usual valedictory gifts—a box of eggs and a piece of silk (colour, Bismarck malade) —but this we cannot believe. What we have before us is sufficient—that a meagre amende has been accepted for a serious insult, and that our position towards Japanese officials remains as unsatisfactory as ever.

On the 26th September the Great Republic started for San Francisco, but ran aground on the Kanagawa side, and was not got off until two days afterwards. She proceeded on her voyage during the night. The Costa Rica, which had been detained to assist in pulling off the Great Republic, left for Shanghai via the Inland Sea yesterday afternoon. She, too, appeared to be twice nearly on the other danger known as "the spit," backing and filling about in a curious manner before she finally went off. It is worth inquiry by shareholders, in the P. M. S. S. Co., whether, among other faults of their agents' management here, they dispense with pilots.

The Albion has returned from Nee-e-gata after a most unsuccessful trip—only 14,000 cards of silk eggs having been obtained. Trade, except in arms and munitions of war, is quite dead there, and even such illegitimate traffic is carried on at great risk, for the Mikado's forces may at any moment occupy the place, and we can see no reason whatever to prevent his ships siezing any of the steamers now engaged in the business. No such accident has, however, happened at present.

Admiral Keppel returned from the Amoor on the 3rd Oct. in the Salamis. The Rattler preceded him by twenty-four hours.

The Japan Gazette gives the following additional items:—

On the 29th August the Representative of the Netherlands applied to the Saibansho for an escort to accompany him to Yedo. The Governor of Kanagawa most earnestly requested him to postpone his visit for some days, as the city was in a very disturbed state, on account of the arrival of large bodies of troops belonging to the South, who were to march to Shiracawa. It appears that these troops are behaving in so disorderly a manner as to cause great anxiety to the Government itself. The U.S. Minister has also foregone an intended visit to Yedo on similar grounds.

On the 30th a conference was to have taken place at the castle of Yedo, between some high dignitaries of the Mikado's court, the Prince of Hosakawa, and some high officials of the ex-Shiogoon.

All the Japanese newspapers published in Yedo are said to have been stopped by the Kangun Government some weeks ago.

Kiisiu (once Tokugawa), whose troops were lately in Yokohama, is said to be going home. It is reported that two steamers were chartered to take them, and that one of the steamers belongs to the P. M. S. S. Co., is named the Costa Rica, and contracted to convey men from Yedo to Tomo.

It is an undoubted fact that the Shin Kanguns, the Northerners, have reached Lutzeregawa, half-way between Otawara and Udsinomia, which latter place is just ten ri from Yedo. The whole country round Yokohama is occupied by Kangun's troops, as there is a strong conviction that Aidzu will pass this way to Yedo. At Kanasawa there are fifty soldiers and two fieldpieces; the same at Kamakura and other principal places. It is asserted that the new Mikado has sent to his nephew at Kioto, peremptorily ordering him to resign within a month from the 1st of 7th moon, Japanese. Also, that he has ordered Arisugawa Mia Sama, now in Yedo, to return to Kioto and never attempt to disobey his orders. Finally, that he has raised the revenue of Prince of Aidzu from 28,000 kokus to 70,000.

From Hakodate we, Express, learn that the American steamer Kanga No-kami, belonging to Byron Binninger, Esq, of Shanghai, has at last been definitely sold, her nominal purchaser being the Prince of Akitas, although all the details were arranged by the Custom-house people. Her price is 67,000 rios, or about 90,000 dols., half paid down in cash and half on short credit.

The Japan Gazette says:—"During the thunder storm on the 3rd September there was seen from the Bund a vivid flash of lightning, described by an eye witness as the brightest by far of any he had ever seen, that, lasting some three or four seconds, seemed to play about the Ocean and the U.S.S. Shenandoah, and at last palpably burst; it was evidently quite close, for the thunder clap followed instantaneously. On inquiry, it proved that the flash had gone down the lightning conductor into the water, but was apparently most unwilling to leave the iron sides of the great armour plated Ocean. At length, on reaching the water, those on board tell us it burst with a considerable noise—'like a hundred hand-grenades" was one account, and another that it was 'like a case of loaded rifles all going off together;' and a shower of large sparks were pelted against the sides of the ship and all around. No damage was done, nor, indeed, was any trace of the dread visitor discernible. The value of good lightning conductors was never more conclusively proved."

Under the heading of "Latest Intelligence" the Japan Times gives the following welcome scrap of news:—"We are glad to be able to state, on good authority, that the restrictions upon the export of copper are likely soon to be removed."

CHINA.

PEKING.

A correspondent writes that he hears revision of the treaty is postponed till after the return of the Chinese embassy from Europe. If so, the question becomes interesting, when is this likely to occur? The report gains truth from the fact that Sir Rutherford's return to England is deferred till the close of next year. Our correspondent strongly advocates Sir Harry Parkes as his successor. He does not believe the Chinese would think of former times as an objection; and urges that he has a knowledge of China and Chinese which it would take a new man half a life time to acquire; and at present we want a man with this knowledge and also with energy—a man the Chinese will fear. But even all these good abilities will be thrown away unless he is backed up by the Home Government. And latterly the Government appears to have been intent on party squabbles, to the exclusion of any such trifling interests as those which centre in China.

A correspondent writes:—"In the Peking Gazette of the 20th inst. an Imperial edict appears, promulgating the news that the Imperial forces in the province of Chihle had put down the rebels existing in this province for several months past, the Imperial forces becoming masters of the country lately occupied by the rebels, on the 16th inst. Le-hung-chang (known in the south to foreigners as Le Footae) and Ying-han, governor of Anhwuy and in command of forces in this province, memorialise the Throne that the Imperial armies in Chihle had attacked and fought the rebel forces from the 8th inst. to the 16th inst., during which period numbers of the rebel leaders, including Chang-kwie-urh, the son of the head rebel chief Chang-tsung-yu, had been killed, and from 3,000 to 4,000 of their old rebel followers (meaning I suppose 'long-haired men') had been destroyed; that Chang-tsung-yu, the chief of the rebels, had destroyed himself by drowning. His Majesty (meaning the Empress Dowager) has commanded Le-hung-chang to search for the corpse of Chang-tsung-yu and find it, to make sure that he actually has destroyed himself, and that he has not escaped to some other part of the country. His Majesty has commanded Le-hung-chang to again wear the Yellow Jacket, and has also bestowed on him his former honours held before he was lately degraded. His Majesty has also bestowed on several other high commanders the honours they held before being lately degraded; and his Majesty states that when order has been restored to the whole province he will bestow further honours and make promotions as a reward for the gallant services against the rebels."

TIENTSIN.

A correspondent, writing on the 30th August, says:—Last evening the mandarins in the Tientsin yamens received private letters from Peking acquainting them that the Peking Government had issued commands promoting his Excellency Chung-how—the superintendent of the foreign trade of the three Northern ports, Vice-President of the Board of War, and controller of ammunitions of war and stores for the Northern armies, &c.—to be Vice-Guardian of the young Emperor during his minority, elevating him to the first rank of Mandarin, and granting him the privilege of wearing the double-eyed peacock's feather. He will, notwithstanding these honours, still remain at Tientsin in charge of the foreign affairs at the three Northern ports.

Late on the evening of the 28th instant the United States war vessel Maumee, Captain Cushing, anchored off the settlement; and we understand that it is the intention of Captain Cushing to remain at this station for some months. Admiral Rowen, the United States Naval Commander in Chief, is looked for soon on a visit to this port and Peking. We must candidly own that the American navy is now giving its full share of protection to this port. A Russian man-of-war is expected daily, and we understand she will lie here during the winter, as the British gunboat Dove did last winter, to render protection to the residents during the closed season. The southern junks are beginning to collect at the Kokoo anchorage; but up to the present moment they have given no trouble to foreign vessels when coming up or going down this river, as they were in the habit of doing last year. Owing to the excellent regulations made by the Customs authorities this year, I do not fear any interruption to the foreign craft this season.

The millet crops are being gathered in spots where the soil is good, and the yield is deemed very large. All the crops are looking very promising, and everything tends to lead us to expect that we shall see a harvest above the average of the late past years.

CHEFOO.

The following is from a correspondent:—"Your readers will be glad to learn that matters seem progressing very favourably here. The party at work at Kin-Shan-Sze must be making a good thing of it, but they are keeping everything dark. Were they not doing well, they would not be supported by a foreign house here thus long. I hear that by washing for gold dust alone they are making 2 to 3 dols. per man per diem. Since the proclamation which Mr. Consul Markham made the Taoutai issue in lieu of the objectionable one anent foreigners travelling in the interior, there have been no complaints whatever; on the contrary, everybody who goes up country now returns with a firm belief in the kindness of the Chinese peasants, and is full of praises of the way in which assistance is rendered. A strong hand is really all that the Chinese want. If our representatives are only firm with them, they can get the authorities to do a great deal; but they very soon discover who is to be master, and act accordingly. A little more of such plain and simple, but at the same time decided, action as Mr. Consul Markham adopted would soon put down half the 'difficulties' of which we hear so much in China."

The Daily News correspondent states that gold has been found east of "Look-out Mountain," and three Frenchmen and others have gone down to the new place. There are some twenty-three men now at work. The French are mining in earnest, having with them a regular mule train with all the material for work. The mandarins have quite cleared out, and the coast is clear. The Recorder mentions that another stabbing case has occurred at the above port, but this time the culprit is a Chinaman; he stabbed a man belonging to one of H.B.M.'s gunboats. The man has survived the blow, but is in a precarious condition.

HANKOW.

A correspondent, writing from Hankow, under date of 3rd September, says:—

"An auction, which took place here a few days ago, formed a half amusing and half melancholy evidence of the manner in which this place has fallen back. The property of Messrs. Alfred Wilkinson and Co., who are closing their establishment here, was brought under the hammer. At 11 A.M. a concession lot (not Messrs. Wilkinson and Co.), was offered, the first bid being half a tael; the officers lingered thereabout for some time, and the lot was bought in by the British Consul, nobody wanting it. Two lots just outside the concession were then offered, and finally sold for Tls. 26 each; but the crown of the sale was a plot of ground at Hang Yang, 862 square feet, once valued at Tls. 5,000, which was sold for Tls. 5. A strange comment this on the land bubble of the Yangtsze ports. The river is beginning to rise considerably."

KIUKIANG.

An incident, which has attracted some attention, has occurred at this port. The Rev. Mr. Hart, of the American Episcopal Mission, was induced to go into the country, to confer with some Chinese concerning a translation of the New Testament into the dialect of the province, and he left his wife alone in the house. The night after he had gone an attempt was made to enter the house by ten burglars; but on this occasion, being disturbed, they went away. The next night they re-appeared; and but for the courage and presence of mind of Mrs. Hart, who threatened to shoot any one who should enter, would have forced their way into the premises. The correspondent of the Recorder, referring to this matter, says it is the opinion of some shrewd observers of Chinese at that port that the inducement held out to Mr. Hart to leave his place of abode was simply a ruse to get him out of the way, and that those who are familiar with the hostility of the Taoutai at that place to all foreigners can see a close connection between this act and many others, such as the destruction of the Bungalow last year at this time, the insults offered to the Consuls, and the abuse of late heaped upon Mr. Kleinwachter, the Commissioner of Customs.

CHINGKIANG.

A correspondent of N. C. Daily News, writing on the 3rd Sept., says:—"Since last addressing you affairs have taken a rather serious and complicated turn here. The disturbances at Yangchow have been followed by riots in the native city of Chingkiang, and the literati are again assuming the old tone of defiance and intolerance which used to characterise them previous to the war of 1857. Under their direction the mob of Yangchow have been complimented on their recent triumph over the foreign missionaries; congratulatory messages and placards have been freely circulated through the city, and rewards have been promised to the popular leaders. Not content with this, however, they have now further decided that the foreigners shall on no account be permitted to return to the city; if they present themselves at the gates they are not to be allowed to enter, but should they by any chance get inside the city walls they are to be instantly set upon and killed. No mercy is to be shown them; the rights of the people must be maintained at any expense, and if only a few of the missionaries are killed, others will fear to follow them.

"The names of the headmen who took the lead in the Yangchow outrage are well known, but the difficulty is, how to get at them. The Prefect, even if he wished it, dare not arrest them, and to hope to see them punished by the provincial authorities is utterly futile—unless, indeed, a very strong and very determined attitude is taken by H.M.'s representatives. Practically speaking, however, the most effectual way to settle the matter is, to insist upon the Prefect arresting them; and if he declares his inability to do so, to help him, with a file of marines and a gunboat, and take them prisoners to Nanking, and deliver them up to T'seng Kuo Fan. In this way a lesson would be conveyed which these literary gentlemen would probably never forget. It would have more effect in quieting the country, and preventing similar outrages in future, than even the capture of a city. It would teach the Chinese that their literati cannot instigate murderous attacks on foreigners and then laugh in their sleeve at us for our impotence and imbecility. It would prove to them that, if their own Government is unwilling or unable to punish such outrages on the laws of nations, we will not let them pass with impunity.

"As usually happens to this blessed and well governed country, the natives of Chinkiang have now taken it into their heads to ostracise the missionaries. They have been stimulated to this by the success gained at Yangchow; and on the night of the 1st instant a considerable mob, headed by a Tartar mandarin, surrounded the house of the unfortunate man who let his premises to Mr. Taylor, and after taking him prisoner to the quarters of the Tartar, gave him a severe thrashing. Last night the riot was renewed, and the Yamen of the Taoutai, who is said to be favourable to foreigners, was besieged by several thousand people. The gates were shortly broken open and the rioters made their way through the Yamen, smashing doors, furniture, and every thing they could lay hands on. One of the Secretaries of the Taoutai was severely flogged, but the mob abstained from offering personal violence to the Taoutai himself. The Chehsien, who happened to go to the Taoutai's rescue, was pushed about a little; it would not be surprising, however, if he himself had been at the bottom of the whole affair. The gates of the city were shut when the disturbance began, and remained so until late this morning. The chief hostility was against the Taoutai for treasonable friendliness to the missionaries; there was also a determination manifested to keep these latter outside the city, and to prevent them from eating children there, as they had been accused of doing at Yangchow.

"Truly this is a pitiable and deplorable state of things, and, if it is not effectually put a stop to, must lead to very serious results. The people of this place are beginning to forget the lesson we gave them in 1842. They look upon our forbearance as weakness, and they are daily becoming more aggressive. It devolves upon us in the interests of peace to undeceive them.

"Her Majesty's Consul, Mr. Medhurst, arrived here on Monday morning, and is now waiting the arrival of the Rinaldo to proceed to Yangchow. His presence has already been productive of a considerable amount of good in settling some land matters inside the city of Chinkiang connected with Mr. Taylor's mission."

SHANGHAI.

The English and French mails of July 17th arrived out on the 31st August and 1st Sept. respectively. The present homeward mail left on the 12th Sept. The latest London telegrams received in Shanghai were to August 18th via Kiachta.

The following items of news are from the North China Herald:—

Matters connected with the Treaty have been again exciting public attention; the text of a new American Treaty with China concluded by Mr. Burlinghame, and a translation of Tsen-kwo-fan's memorial on the approaching revision, having been both under discussion.

The new American Envoy to Peking, the Hon. J. Ross Browne, arrived on Saturday, by the Costa Rica. We have to acknowledge the courteous gift of that gentleman's "Report on the Mineral Resources of the States and Territories west of the Rocky Mountains." That part of the work which relates to the gold districts of California is specially interesting, now that we are looking forward to the possible opening of goldfields at Chefoo. As we have already remarked, the arrival at the present juncture of a Minister so deeply interested in mining is highly satisfactory. Notwithstanding Article IX. of the new treaty, we hope Mr. Browne will not omit to press forward an innovation to which Tsen-kwo-fan has already given his high assent.

Matters connected with the Yangchow outrage continue to excite much attention. H.B.M.'s Consul went up to that city, in company, we believe, with a delegate from the Viceroy, to inquire into the case. We have since been informed officially that Mr. Medhurst returned to Chinkiang on September 9th, having obtained entirely the object of his mission. He left the next morning with the Prefect of Yangchow to visit Tseng-kwo-fan at Nanking. A disturbance was got up, under the auspices of the Tartar General, at Chinkiang. The Taoutai's Yamen was violated, and an attempt on the foreign settlement threatened; but no actual harm was done in either case. We entertain a strong suspicion that the row at Chinkiang was got up by the mandarins as a sort of moral support to their brethren at Yangchow. Yangchow, however, does not seem to be the only place where an objection to missionaries is manifested. A correspondent, writing lately from one of the Formosan ports, says:—"The people about here cause the missionaries a great deal of trouble, what with pulling down their chapels and persecuting the native converts." The Recorder states that H.I.M. gunboat Scorpion has gone to Takow, to afford foreigners the protection of its presence; for the petty mandarins had excited so much ill-will against the latter that it was becoming dangerous to leave the immediate neighbourhood of the settlement.

Exploration in the gold districts is continued with fair success. Auriferous sand is said to have been found very near Chefoo. A good specimen of auriferous quartz has been brought from Kinsan. Experiments in digging are being made. A correspondent sends us the following, under date of the 5th instant:—"Gold has been found east of Look-out Mountain, and some Frenchmen and others have gone down to the new place. There are twenty-three men now at work. The French are mining in earnest, having with them a regular mule train, with all the material for work. The mandarins have quite ceased from troubling, and the coast is clear."

We have received from a Chinese source the following particulars of the late rebel slaughter in Shantung:—"The waters of the Yellow River having inundated the country to a depth of six feet—the Imperialists being encamped on high land, the Nienfei on low—the former took advantage of their position to hem the latter in; and the gunboats advanced to the attack. Many hundreds of Nienfei were drowned, and others captured, but whether the whole body were annihilated is not known for certain, though the authorities here say they were. Of course, as soon as the rice crops are finished the rebellion will be rampant again."

A suggestion we made some time ago, about the new public garden, has been most kindly acted on. Some amateurs of the Philharmonic Society gave a most pleasant entertainment there a few evenings ago, when all Shanghai, nearly, was present.

It is with great regret we record the death of Mr. J. M. Hockly, R.N., who for several years filled the office of harbour master at this port; and under the recent change in that branch of the service had been appointed Acting Marine Commissioner.

The extension of the Post-office money-order system to China has given much satisfaction; but it is much to be regretted that it has not been also applied to the coast ports. It will be very convenient to remit small sums to England at current rates of exchange, and the banks will be saved a deal of trouble with small bills. But the want for a means of remitting money from one port to another on the coast of China is infinitely greater.

The Recorder supplies the following:—

We recently mentioned that the Council of the North China branch of the Royal Asiatic Society had appointed a committee to arrange the details of the expedition for an examination of the Yellow River, which has for some time been under contemplation. We are glad now to announce that these gentlemen have issued a prospectus and invited subscriptions for the object in question. The amount which will be required is small compared with the importance of the expedition in a commercial and scientific point of view, and especially so when contrasted with the heavy estimates which were made when the matter was first taken into consideration. The whole amount required is about 800 dols., which we have no doubt will be readily subscribed. The plan proposed is to proceed up the grand canal from Chinkiang to the point where it is crossed by the Yellow River, and at this place to commence the survey. The subject has been so fully discussed that it is needless to speak at any great length on the present occasion. We can only express our sincere hope that the scheme may meet with the support of the public, and be as successful, as from the energy devoted to its completion it thoroughly deserves.

Mr. J. Morphew, on behalf of Messrs. D. Sassoon, Sons and Co., recently brought a charge in the Shanghai Court against three Turkish subjects, of molesting the above-named gentlemen. The three defendants were dressed in a most picturesque costume—long flowing variegated robes, held round the waist by large girdles, and on their heads handsome turbans, altogether like pictures in the "Arabian Nights." Two of them were very fair, and had a pleasing and mild cast of countenance. The third was less attractive in appearance, and was a cripple in one of his legs. The circumstances connected with the case are most peculiar. It seems that the three Oriental gentlemen were Jews from Jerusalem, and had found their way out here through a desire to visit and instruct the Jewish colony at Kai-fung-foo; and becoming short of funds had for some days been pestering Messrs. D. Sassoon for assistance. They behaved with much dignity in Court, and one of them stated his story in a few simple words in the German language. The Court decided to provide for them till the next steamer left for Hong Kong, and then to send them to that place.

We have to record another wanton attack upon foreigners in the country. On Saturday night, August 29th, two French gentlemen in the Customs' service went out shooting in a house-boat built in the Chinese style, and on arriving at the Barrier near Sz King Kwu they stopped off the small Custom-house there, where a gunboat is stationed. One of the gentlemen observed a number of men from the gunboat going round the Custom-house and making their way towards the spot where the house-boat was. The coolies in the boat called out to them that the inmates were Frenchmen, and upon this they commenced a shower of stones. One of the gentlemen came out, and by stepping back managed to get clear of a large stone thrown at his head, which, however, hit him below the knee, causing him considerable injury. After some time the boat got away. The matter has been brought to the notice of the Taoutai, who, it is expected, will take some steps with regard to it. We think it would with more propriety have been placed in the hands of the French Consul, and we trust that Vicomte Brenier may, in order to uphold his nation's prestige, feel called upon to take cognisance of the affair.

We hear with regret of the death of Mr. Green, of H.I.M. Customs, on August 25th, at Nagasaki, caused by the accidental capsizing of a boat. It seems that he and Captain Margate were proceeding in a boat from the Osaka to the Taka, but owing to a heavy sea running at the time, the boat was capsized. They were, however, speedily rescued by a boat from the Cormorant, but owing to the severe shock he had sustained, we are sorry to say Mr. Green expired in a few hours.

The Friend of China says:—"We hear that Mr. Inspector-General Hart is expected at Shanghai during the current month, and will proceed thence to inspect the several stations where his Customs Commissioners are stationed."

FORMOSA.

Some trouble has arisen in Formosa, but steps have been taken to put it down, H.I.M. gunboat Scorpion having been despatched by Vcte. Brenier de Montmorand on the 3rd inst. to Takao to guarantee by its presence the safety of the European residents, and, if necessary, to put down any attack that might be made upon them. The Catholic Mission at Formosa is Spanish, and since the Treaty was concluded between Spain and China has been placed under the protection of that Power. In accordance, however, with the wishes and the request of the Spanish Consul, backed by the Consuls of England and Prussia, who at the moment had no gunboat available for this object, Vcte. Brenier thought it right to take this step. Mr. Gibson, H.B.M. Consul for Prussia, Denmark, and Vice-Consul for France, wrote in August complaining that the state of affairs was intolerable; that Europeans cannot go a hundred paces from their houses without danger; and that this resulted not from any ill-will on the part of the people, but from the petty mandarins. This letter was, however, only received at the end of last month, and, notwithstanding that the French have practically no interests in Formosa, the Consul-General very commendably regarded the matter as one of European interest, and influenced by this consideration despatched the Scorpion.

THE CAMPHOR TRADE.

The following official notifications, abolishing the camphor monopoly, have been published:—

The undersigned begs to publish the following despatch, which he has received from the Taoutai of Taiwan, permitting British merchants to trade in camphor throughout the whole island of Formosa. JOHN GIBSON, Acting-Consul.

British Consulate, Taiwan, Takow Office, 5th Sept., 1868.

Liang, by Imperial authority, Taoutai in Taiwan, &c., &c.

Whereas on the 13th day of the 7th month (30th August) a despatch was received from the honourable naval officer (Lord Scott), said despatch inviting a despatch to the Consul (Mr. Gibson), informing him that thereafter, in the matter of trading in camphor, English merchants shall be permitted without hindrance to trade in that article, the Taoutai having examined as to the above matter finds that from the time of his assuming office until now he has never forbidden such trade to English merchants, but has only forbidden unprincipled people to trade in camphor; he therefore begs of the honourable officers specially not thus to reproach his previous action. Hereafter let each (Kingdom) according to the provisions of the treaty of Tientsin, as set forth in the 9th, 12th, 13th, and 14th articles, regulate matters, and so China and the other kingdoms be at peace. If then should arise matters which are not consistent with the treaty, then the Taoutai along with the Consul shall with a mutual understanding discuss and determine them, neither party obstinately pursuing his own purpose. Therefore, this despatch is sent to the Consul that he may examine and act accordingly.

Translated by JOHN GIBSON, Acting Consul.

HONG KONG.

Advices from Hong Kong are to the 18th September. The outward mail of July 31 was delivered September 7. There is absolutely no local news of any importance, the fortnight's intelligence being summed up by the Overland Trade Report in these few lines:—

"Everything is at a standstill in Hong Kong. There have been no movements in trade, which is worse than ever. There has been some correspondence in the papers on the causes of the present great depression in business, and it is possible that the Government may order a commission of inquiry as to the working of the Legislative measures of the past two years. The merchants throw the blame of the ruin of the colony on Sir. R. Macdonnell and his ordinances.

"The Chinese Government having refused to co-operate with the colonial authorities, the rules and regulations published in June last for the disarmament of fishing boats and trading junks have been repealed, to the great joy of the pirates. There is something more to come out with reference to this affair.

"The death of Captain Edye, R.N., commanding H.M.S. Satellite, has thrown a gloom over the community."

THE HONG KONG CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO MR. HART.

The following letter has been addressed by the Hong Kong Chamber to Mr. Hart, in reply to his circular despatch of July 20 :—

HONG KONG, 26th August, 1868.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your despatch No. 86, dated Peking, 20th July, which has been perused with much pleasure by the committee, and beg to convey to you the thanks of the Chamber for the invitation given to the mercantile community of this port to communicate with you on matters connected with the proceedings and rules of the department of which you are the head.

This Chamber entirely agrees with you in the opinion that it is as beneficial to the mercantile communities of China as to the Customs' Department that a mutual good understanding should exist; also, that proper method in the collection of duties and regularity in the administration of revenue matters is just as necessary to the transaction of the merchants' business as to the proper performance of their duties by Customs' officials, and it will gladly avail itself of the invitation now given to address you when an occasion arises; should you, on the other hand, address the Chamber on the subject of new regulations, the modification of existing ones, improvement of harbour approaches, lighting of the coast, &c., or any other points on which you may desire to have its opinion, you may rest assured that the same will be readily given; also any suggestions which may occur to the Chamber regarding the matters which may be submitted to it; and it entirely concurs with you in the opinion that a preliminary ventilation of any intended changes will be beneficial to all who are to be affected by them.

This Chamber freely admits that, in the present condition of China, a foreign inspectorate of Customs confers a benefit on the trading communities at the ports generally, by insuring thoroughly impartial treatment to all engaged in the trade. It admits, also, that a desire has been evinced on the part of yourself and the commissioners acting under you to frame the rules under which the Customs' revenue is collected, so as to cause as little annoyance as possible, at the same time with a due regard to protection of the revenue. Still it has on various occasions taken exception to some of these rules, as having an injurious effect on trade. It has done so more particularly with reference to fines and confiscations. The rules regarding these have been somewhat amended of late, but are still, in the opinion of this Chamber, susceptible of further modification. It therefore views with great pleasure, and derives great hopes from the future, from your assurance that you have ever objected to unnecessarily heavy fines or confiscations. At the same time it is fully aware of the difficulties you have to contend with on these points when endeavouring to instil new ideas into the minds of your Chinese colleagues, and it can well understand how tedious the process is, and how fully it must occupy your time. I conclude by expressing the satisfaction of this Chamber with the contents of your despatch generally, and the friendly tone which pervades it, and am, Sir, your obedient servant,

P. RYRIE, Chairman.

ANOTHER COOLIE TRAGEDY.

A ship has arrived at Hakodadi under circumstances that leave no doubt that another appalling coolie tragedy has been enacted on board of her. The official report is as follows :—

"On the 19th August last, a ship with top-gallant and topmast gone, without any Europeans on board, and with no flags or papers, and with the name taken away, entered the harbour of Hakodadi. The Japanese authorities took charge of her, and then referred the matter to the Consuls. Forty-seven Chinese who were found on board were arrested, and they declared the Europeans had, under stress of weather, deserted the ship in two boats; some contracts were found on their persons, which bore the name of the Italian ship Providenza. On this Mr. Butzow, the Acting Italian Consular Agent, took charge of the vessel, and on closer examination found a bell with the name of 'Bertha, 1836,' engraved upon it, and marks of blood on the saloon and some doors. No boats or guns were to be found."

The Italian ship Providenza, Captain Nattini, cleared from Macao shortly after the ill-fated Theresa. She had 28 Europeans as crew, all told, and 382 Chinese coolies for Callao. The captain, who was at Macao when the Theresa put back, said he would take all necessary precautions to guard himself against a similar tragedy to that enacted on board the Theresa. The Daily Press, describing his plan, says it consisted of "an extra supply of firearms and cutlasses aft in the cabin, and forward in the forecastle, with plenty of ammunition, and the best will to use them. It included a strong palisade of iron bars from side to side of the ship just abaft the mainmast, and rising to the height of five or six feet above the bulwarks; probably a similar grating or palisade forward, to protect the forecastle doors. It included a couple of iron twelve-pounders, loaded to the muzzle, and pointed forward along each gangway from behind the quarter-deck barrier, and a couple of lighter pieces mounted on the top of the poop cabin, to prevent any attempt to clamber over or along the bulwarks. Three or four fierce and powerful dogs, and a crew of truculent-looking scoundrels, one-half of whom were always under arms, probably completed the preparations, and Captain Nattini went to sea with his mind fully made up that at the first movement among his passengers the grape-shot and langride of his twelve-pounders should sweep his decks clear of the mutinous and ungrateful wretches he was taking from poverty and misery to wealth, comfort, and happiness."

All these precautions seem to have been unavailing; the captain and at least some of his officers and crew have doubtless been murdered, and the vessel, by some accident or mistake, or inability of the Chinese to find any other port, has drifted in to Yokohama. A Japan paper gives the following details of the condition she was found in :—"She was an old ship, and in a very dilapidated condition, topgallant masts gone, and all rigging in disorder and disrepair. She had only two boats. No name, ship's papers, nor other means of identification were discoverable. Off the quarter the name had been torn, and from the boats remaining it had also been erased. On one of the bells was the name Bertha, but this, under the circumstances of the evident intention to conceal her identity, can hardly be regarded as the name of the barque, though it may afford a clue to recognition could the sale of such a bell be traced. On board were forty-two Chinamen, common coolies, not sailors, all professing ignorance of the English language. Through a Cantonese interpreter the account of the men on board was made out to be that the vessel was Chinese-owned, that she had left Macao about seventy days previously for Foochow, with a European captain and officers to the number of five, and with fifty Chinese sailors, of whom they were the remainder, eight having died. The Europeans, they said, had abandoned the ship during a gale of wind, taking with them two boats, the davits for which stood empty. Seventeen of the men had coolie contracts, numbered irregularly, the highest number being 299. They were written in Spanish, and were made out for the Italian barque Providenza. Their dates were from May to July, 1867. Many articles of European make were found; a trunk, nearly new, with canvas cover marked 'Lima, Peru,' such as might belong to a supercargo; some children's boots, a carpet stained with blood, and a quantity of European clothing of good quality, shirts, guernseys, trousers, &c. The Chinamen were using European cooking utensils, and knives and forks, while of ordinary Chinese coolies' cooking pots very few were found. In the hold was a quantity of hoop iron, some gunny bags, and a little flour. There was no evidence whatever of the presence on board of any Chinaman above the lowest class—no China fittings in the cabin, such as a Chinese captain, owner, or supercargo would have, nor any Chinese clothes of value. The floor of the cabin had evidently been lately scraped.

"During the examination it was accidentally discovered that among the forty-two men were a couple of interpreters, though when the vessel was first boarded all pretended to be quite ignorant of any language but their own, except one, who spoke a little pidgin English. These two were remarked to be laughing together at some observations made in English in their presence, and on being taxed with the fact that they understood what was said, acknowledged that they were interpreters."

An investigation is going on which will probably result in some light being thrown on this extraordinary case. In the meanwhile we can only guess at the history of the unfortunate ship since her departure from Macao. The Daily Press suggests the two most likely alternatives: — "Chinamen are very dangerous when reduced to desperation. They are at all times fearless of death, indifferent if you will, and when thoroughly roused are utterly reckless of life and heedless of pain. Taking into consideration the absence of the cannon, cabin furniture, and other articles of European manufacture usually found on board ships, two possible suppositions arise. Either the coolies in their revolt were assisted from without, and the piratical craft that took part in the contest plundered the barque of everything of value, and took out of her the greater number of her passengers, leaving, for some cause or other, the miserable remnant behind; or else those who arrived in her at Nagasaki are the sole survivors of the 380, the rest having fallen in the contest with the captain and crew, or in clan fights afterwards; and, in the vain hope of passing off the vessel as Chinese owned and manned, threw overboard the guns, small arms, clothing, furniture, and fittings of unmistakably European origin, and cut the boats adrift, so as to destroy all clue to the ship's identity."

THE BURLINGHAME TREATY.

The following severe, but withal very just, strictures on the tone of the American papers with regard to Mr. Burlinghame's treaty are from the China Mail:—

"As might have been expected, the 'New Chinese Treaty,' as it is magniloquently named, has of late been a favourite topic with the New York papers. We are treated to a discussion of the vast things effected thereby from many points of view, each, if possible, more absurd and betraying a more utter ignorance of Chinese policy than the other. The New York Tribune seems to reach, however, the extreme limit to which deliberate, or at least inexcusable, misstatement of facts, crass ignorance of this country and a general conglomeration of what American journalists gracefully term 'Bosh,' can carry civilised writers. It is not content with praising the provisions of this utterly hollow and ludicrously useless 'Treaty Addendum,' but favours its readers with a slight reference to past American history in China of which any other paper than the Tribune—any other journal not utterly dead to national honour, and national self-respect—would have carefully avoided the mention. The large and intelligent community of Americans in China, whose knowledge of former events enables them to be competent judges of what tends to the honour of their country, will, we are sure, share with us the regret which we thus express at seeing one of the most influential New York journals not only render itself ridiculous in the eyes of thinking men, but provoking criticism from the British press which cannot but result in the discomfiture of the self conceited authors of statements so erroneous—if indeed a New York journalist is amenable to a feeling of shame.

"The precious production to which we allude, and which appeared in the Tribune of the 16th July, sets forth that 'American common sense and fair dealing have brought about a change in the policy of the venerable empire of the East which Great Britain and other European Powers failed to enforce by repeated wars.' We should like to know how this common sense and fair dealing has been displayed. Was it when the United States representative, smuggled into Peking, obtained by false representations a hollow assent to his demands? Was it when the United States, waiting till the guns of Great Britain and France had opened the way, stepped forward to claim equal privileges with the subjects of those countries? Was it when the late representative, by a course of snivelling adhesion to everything dictated by Sir F. Bruce, which excited the hearty contempt of all in the secret, aided the 'co-operative policy' by his valuable adhesion? Was it by the appointment of U.S. Consuls such as those which past years have seen at some ports? Was it by a great American house advancing money to the Chinese during the war to enable them to resist our just demands? Was it by the pretended cordiality to Great Britain of the late Representative, which, in the few short days which elapsed on the voyage between Shanghai and San Francisco, turned to a hearty denunciation of the policy to which the Americans owe even the settlements they now enjoy? Was it by the persistent use of British interpreters, as well as British influence, in every negotiation conducted at Peking—so much so that a trifling remuneration to a scientific man, for services rendered to the Chinese, could not be obtained until the good offices of the British Secretary had been invoked? Is this the 'common sense and fair dealing' of America thus to use foreign aid and to avail itself of every demonstration of force put forth by others to obtain its own objects? The Americans must be proud of their Government if this be the case.

"But more than this, says the Tribune, 'if Great Britain wants to emulate our (American) success she must act as honestly as we do.' The force of impudence could indeed no further go. Why, the very fact of Mr. Burlinghame receiving his appointment at all is owing to the moral (but sadly mistaken) support given to the proposition by the British Minister. We leave American political honesty to stand by itself. No condemnatory words of ours are needed to testify to its status. The bitterest satire ever penned on America by English pen has failed to elicit the amusement with which this declaration has been received by British subjects in China—and we might also venture to say by American citizens also. It is absolutely beyond discussion, and may be dismissed with the peals of laughter which have greeted its appearance. Thus much for the Tribune.

"As regards the actual agreements entered into by Mr. Burlinghame, there is one to which wemight profitably draw attention. The 'Consul' clause in which England and Russia are so particularly noted, is so palpable an attempt to impose upon Hong Kong and Kiachta a 'Chinese Consul' that it should be scarcely overlooked. There are, no doubt, many Yankee 'citizens' in the Customs Service who would particularly enjoy holding such an appointment. But as we hold that all Chinese in Hong Kong are pro tem. British subjects, the introduction of so objectionable an official can well be dispensed with. If Lord Stanley should indeed contemplate signing a similar agreement on behalf of Great Britain, there will, of course, be no means of avoiding the infliction. But there can be no good purpose served by such a step being taken, much as the Tribune would doubtless like to see another citizen in a position so influential for worrying the Britishers. This would be another instance, doubtless, of American 'common sense and fair dealing' It would give a little more patronage to the Inspector-General of Customs, but would not materially advance the good understanding between Great Britain and China, so that we trust the 'fair dealing' in question will be turned to some other object. There is need of it, somewhere."

BORNEO.

LABUAN.

Under date of September 12 a correspondent of the Straits Times writes as follows:—I venture to send you some items of news from this little island, which may, perhaps, be interesting to your readers.

On the 17th ult. Governor Hennesy proceeded in H.M.S. Rifleman, Captain Reed, R.N., to Barram Point, on the coast of Borneo, in order to make observations on the solar eclipse of the 18th ultimo.

In making these observations he was ably assisted by Captain Reed, who supplied all the requisite instruments, including the most accurate chronometers. The eclipse lasted over six minutes at Barram Point, and the observation of the sun's disc having been complete, it was seen to great advantage from that position. His Excellency made the most careful observations, and, I understand, he has transmitted to the authorities at home a most interesting account of the various phenomena by which the great astronomical event was accompanied. . . . . I regret to have to state that the neighbourhood of Labuan has been once more the scene of one of those daring acts of piracy which, it was hoped, the vigorous measures of the late Rajah Sir James Brooke had extirpated for ever from these waters. The outrage was committed a few months ago by pirates from the Island of Oobean, in the Sooloo Sea. A schooner, sailing under British flag, and belonging to a British subject, Lee Cheng Ho, a Chinese trader of Labuan, was attacked near Malludu Bay, by a number of pirates, in fifteen prahus, who captured the schooner, tore down the British flag, and killed three of her crew. When intelligence of this outrage reached Labuan, by means of five of the crew who had escaped, the Governor promptly despatched a boat for H.M.S. Leven, then and still, at Sarawak. Some days after, H.M.S. Dwarf, Commander Walker, arrived in Victoria Harbour late in the afternoon. The Governor put himself instantly in communication with the commander, and, with characteristic energy, his Excellency, as Consul-General in the Island of Borneo, proceeded in the Dwarf early next morning for the scene of the outrage, accompanied by theHon. Mr. de Crespigny, the Harbour Master, and Lee Cheng Ho, the owner of the captured schooner. The Governor has not yet returned from this Consular service; but it is to be hoped that a signal example will be made of the prepetrators of this audacious insult to the British flag.

I understand that the steamer Royalist will not call here again, and that we shall have henceforth to depend on the Vine and Samson for communication with Singapore. We all regret the loss of the Royalist, as she brought the mails more frequently than any other vessel coming here.

The Acting Colonial Surveyor, Mr. J. R. Howard, is giving universal satisfaction by the zeal and energy with which he is working in his department, in which much reform is required. He is unquestionably "the right man in the right place." Should the home authorities confirm Governor Hennessy's judicious provisional appointment, and make it permanent, there can be no doubt that the rising colony of Labuan will largely benefit by the services of a surveyor so thoroughly qualified to fill that post as Mr. Howard.

Mr. Lumsden, the manager of the coal mines, is now employing convict labour in loading the Vine, at Coal Point. For the last week several gangs of convicts have been engaged in that work, which they have performed in a very satisfactory manner. Mr. Lumsden pays so much per head per diem for the men, thus relieving the colony of the cost of their support. When the additional convicts expected from Singapore arrive here Mr. Lumsden will, no doubt, be glad to avail of their labour at the mines, the productiveness of which would thus be rapidly developed with commensurate advantage to the colony, in the prosperity of which the coal-fields form so important an element. They would also give a great impetus to the progress of Labuan, by their valuable labour on various public works.

We were all very much surprised here at the curious mistake made by Mr. Low, in his letter to the Singapore Daily Times of last month, saying that "Labuan is heavily taxed." So far from being "heavily taxed," a comparison of Labuan with other English colonies (and it can be easily made by reference to the Blue-books) clearly demonstrates that it is the most lightly taxed colony, for the amount of its trade and commerce in the British dominions, and much more lightly than Sarawak, taking the commerce of the two as the basis.

I am also happy to be in a position to state that we are steadily progressing in population, commerce, and revenue. In proof of our increase in commerce I shall mention one remarkable fact, viz., that according to the latest returns furnished by the Harbour-master the imports and exports of Labuan for the first six months of this year exceed in value the imports and exports for the entire of last year. This fact speaks for itself, and any comment thereon would be quite superfluous.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

From this port we have news to the 26th Sept. The English mail of Aug. 14, and the French mail of Aug. 18, reached Singapore on the 15th and 19th September respectively. The latest London telegrams by the latter were to Sept. 8. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

H. M.'s gunboat Avon arrived from home on the 9th instant, and H. M. S. Argus from Bombay on the 19th idem. The Perseus, Captain Stevens, the senior naval officer, and the Argus, proceed to Hong Kong about the end of the month, while the two gunboats Avon and Weazel, together with H. M. S. Rifleman, surveying, Commander Reed, remain here to guard this port.

An alarming fire, which might have destroyed the whole town, broke out about eleven o'clock at night on the 17th inst. in the godowns occupied by Messrs. Puttfarcken, Rheiner and Co., in Princes-street, and resulted in the total destruction of the godown in which it originated. By the strenuous exertions of the police under Mr. Dunman, and a body of 150 blue jackets from H.M.S. Perseus, and H.M.S. Rifleman, under the command of the senior naval officer, the fire was prevented from spreading to the adjoining buildings, which, however, were for some time in the most imminent danger. It is almost a miracle, indeed, that the fire did not consume the whole block of buildings. Luckily there was not a breath of air, and the buildings being new and substantially built of brick with tiled roofs, the fire-engines, four in number, proved capable of preventing the fire from extending, and it was fairly mastered about three o'clock in the morning of the 18th. Messrs. Puttfarcken, Rheiner, and Co. were fully insured in several offices, and the value of the property destroyed has been roughly estimated at 150,000 dols.

The Legislative Council have held two sittings during the fortnight, one on the 17th and one on the 21st Sept. At the first the Prison's Ordinance was passed, and the other proceedings were of a routine character calling for no remark. At the second sitting the Pilotage Bill was read a third time and passed, and after other business had been transacted a question from the Hon. Mr. Scott elicited a surprising revelation from H.E. the Governor regarding the military arrangements for the colony, which has created some sensation and more dissatisfaction. It appears that these settlements are to be garrisoned by two batteries of Royal Artillery, a Madras regiment, and the head quarters wing of the 73rd regiment from Hong Kong. This force is not to furnish, as heretofore, guards for the treasuries, jails, &c., nor to perform any other duty which the Madras regiments stationed here have always done, and we suppose they are therefore intended to be entirely ornamental. A new body of constabulary, mounted (Heaven save to mark !) is proposed to be raised at the expense of the colony, to furnish guards for the jails, &c., and do other dirty work, beneath the dignity of our new gentlemen Madrassee friends to undertake. The colony is also to furnish and keep up barracks for the European troops, stationed here solely for Imperial purposes, and liable to be called away at a moment's notice to China or Japan. These new arrangements, it is estimated, will entail upon the colony a further addition of at least £20,000 to the existing military contribution of £59,300. The home authorities, therefore, if they insist upon them, will be perpetrating a gross breach of faith with the colony. It was distinctly understood when the transfer took place that £59,300 per annum was to cover all the cost of military to the colony for five years, and that barracks required for the accommodation of troops stationed here for Imperial purposes should be paid for out of the Imperial Treasury. It is so distinctly stated in the correspondence which took place heretofore between the War-office, the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and the Colonial-office, before the transfer was sanctioned. The "Straits Association" has now some work cut out for them in denouncing and resisting this flagrant piece of treachery. It is intended to call a public meeting to protest against the whole thing.

A meeting of the Executive Council was held on the 15th inst., when a portion of the Order in Council of 16th December, 1867, which directed the levying of a fee of 10 dols. on permits for processions, funerals, marriages, &c., was repealed. Fees on funerals and marriages are abolished, and fees on processions reduced to one rupee. This will allay the discontent of the natives, especially in Penang, on this point.

An abstract of the Revenue and Expenditure of the Colony for the quarter ending 30th June, has been published, showing a surplus revenue of over 20,000 dols. for the quarter, or for the half-year of about 70,000 dols. This will be all required to pay our debts, our Governmevt house, and our new steamer, when it is built.

The quiet of the town has been disturbed on one or two occasions by an attempted revival of Hoey fight, which however were promptly suppressed before they became serious.

PENANG.

The news of the resumption of mail communication has been received here with much satisfaction. Very naturally, however, the inhabitants do not regard it as any favour or concession, but as the restitution of a right that has been unjustly withheld.

Penang is to have a European surveyor from home, an officer said to be much wanted.

Grave apprehensions are entertained of the spread of a disease in the sugar cane which has manifested itself in the north of Province Wellesley. The drainage of the large rice plain in the province between the Mudah and the Juru, 100 square miles in extent, is seriously interfered with by swarms of buffalos and oxen belonging to the natives, let loose in large herds, trampling down embankments as soon as made. Steps are being taken by the Government to abate this nuisance.

The Chinese in Penang are said to be forming themselves into an association for the protection of their rights and interests against the Government. The procession grievance originated this idea, and the discontent arising therefrom has not been abated by a rumour that it is contemplated to forbid the firing of crackers on any occasion or any pretence whatever. This time-honoured custom, so dear to the Chinese heart, is not to be given up without a struggle, and each member of the association is to subscribe 100 dols. to defray all law expenses, for it is intended to have such points submitted to judicial decision.

CHRISTIANITY IN JAPAN.

The Hiogo News gives the following translation of an interesting native account of the progress of Christianity near Nagasaki, and of the measures adopted to suppress it, which, it is said, resulted in the deportation of a number of families from that place :—

Since the opening of the port of Nagasaki, the French, amongst the western barbarians, have mainly preached the Roman Catholic religion, and the English and Americans the Protestant religion. In addition to these, there is the Greek religion, the Mahommedan religion, and others, all of which resemble the former, and are as injurious to the State as they are. In O-Ura, at Nagasaki, Roman Catholic and Protestant churches have been built, and the Japanese are secretly induced to join these religions.

The Roman Catholic religion proselytises from the middle down to the lowest classes of the inhabitants. The Protestant religion chiefly proselytises those in a higher position than the middle classes.

The numbers of the Roman Catholic are as follows: In Uracami, near Nagasaki, about 2,000 people; in the territory of Omura, above 150; in the territory of Fercahora, in Hizen, above 150; in Takagama, Shimabura, in Hizen; Amacoma, in Hiogo; Hirado, in Hizen, proselytising is going on, and it is not known exactly how many thousands there are.

On the evening of the 23rd day of the sixth month of last year (July, 1867) the Governor of Nagasaki sent to seize the evil ones, and threw them into prison. The images in the Church which had been erected at Uracami were seized at the same time, and entrusted to the charge of the Mayor of the village; the officers who were sent to apprehend these men brought them all, seventy odd in number, to the Governor's official residence. Six or seven men were left to guard the Mayor's house, but the remainder of the evil band, to the number of several hundred, attacked the place, and repossessed themselves of the images. They also seized two officials and two of the subordinates as hostages, declaring in violent language that they would not give them up unless the prisoners were set at liberty; in consequence of this hundreds of other offenders were left alone and not apprehended.

The people of the next village were all of a resolute disposition, and always observed the principles of loyalty and filial piety, although built in a continuous line with the village of Uracami. When the evil fellows of Uracami were apprehended the officials were very much afraid, and did not like to force an entrance; but the people of Nichi thought now was the time to do their duty, and forced their way amongst the enemy, and did good service.

In Uracami there is a place subject to Amura; that place contained some of the evil band; the authorities of Amura arrested more than a hundred in the commencement of September, and committed them to prison. The evil ones who had been apprehended by the Governor of Nagasaki and cast into prison were quietly summoned by him and remonstrated with on their evil conduct; but they remained obstinate, and gave no signs of repentance; on the contrary, they actually begged that they might be permitted to openly join the Roman Catholic sect.

As the governors and collectors could do nothing with them, on the 14th day of the 8th month the priests from nine temples, seven being of the Swinshion sect and two of the Teashian sect, were summoned to the governor's official residence, and asked if they could suggest plans for bringing back the evil fellows of Uracami. The priests replied that they would give in their answers after mature consideration, and retired, and the following day they sent in their reply, which was to the effect that they would do their best in exhorting these people to change their hearts.

On the 19th day the collector and judges went to Uracami with the priests of the nine temples, and tried to exhort these people, but they were obstinate, and refused to be convinced in the slightest degree, the fact being that as they had not been severely dealt with up to that time the evil bands only increased in their obstinacy.

In the middle of the sixth month the people imprisoned by the Governor of Nagasaki falsely pretended to have repented, and were released from prison, but they collected together again and increased in numbers from day to day, and the affair ended by the village being made responsible for those who had been released from prison. The evil fellows thought they had found a capital opportunity, they took a quantity of money belonging to their church and went secretly to all places, giving it to the people; consequently in a short space of time large additions were made to their number, ten in one place, a hundred in another. The fourth commandment of the evil religion ordains the observance of a day of ease; the Japanese began gradually to keep this day, by which their having entered the sect became apparent. As the Roman Catholic religion has spread so evidently, it behoved those of the Protestant doctrine to take measures to increase the circle of their sect. A person called Maria, of one Verbeeck, a priest of Jesus, left her child at the breast and went to China in a steamer; she went as far as Shanghai and Hong Kong, for the purpose of inducing the priests residing there to come with her to Japan.

This is a summary of the doings of the evil ones at Nagasaki. I do not know what may be the state of things at Yokohama and Hakodati, but as there are several priests residing at those places, it is pretty certain they will entice the Japanese gradually.

Hiogo became an open port last winter, and there is no doubt the priests will gradually make their entrance there; and I fear they will soon pour their abominable poison into Osaka and Kioto, but as they have not yet commenced working at those places, I hope that a plan for preventing them will be taken while there is yet time.

As the evil ones of Nagasaki are fully convinced, and are not at all likely to be converted again, they ought to be visited with the severest punishment. But the persons who have been merely drawn in by others will probably repent, if they are exhorted in the proper manner.

In the above I have given an account of the rise and progress of the evil doctrine.

Shanghai.—Cottons: There has been rather more doing in Grey Shirtings during the fortnight, the principal business having been transacted by speculators, whose resales had caused a decline in prices. Importers generally had been pretty firm. Sales of 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings were reported at Tls. 2.3 to 2.4, the latter quotation being for arrival, or for delivery a month from date. 7 lbs. and 9 10-12 lbs. Grey Shirtings and White Shirtings were dull of sale. T-Cloths of ordinary and common qualities were in rather better demand, although at lower prices. English and American Drills continued in fair request. Fancy Goods generally showed but little improvement. Woollens: Medium and Habit Cloths were dull of sale. Spanish Stripes: A few have found buyers at low prices. Camlets: Sales reported at last mail's quotations. Long Ells were in no inquiry. Lastings: A few had been sold at previous prices. Figured Lustres: Inquiry limited. Metals: There had been some inquiry for Nail Rod Iron at slightly lower rates. Lead had again declined in value, and only very few transactions had taken place. Tin Plates and Steel remained dull of sale. Quicksilver, Tls. 47.5 to 48.5. Coals: Supplies of all kinds had been received since the last report, but the market had been dull during the fortnight, and there was little change in prices generally. Arrivals: From Great Britain, 3,315 tons; America, 1,231 tons; Australia, 1,960 tons; Japan, 543 tons; Formosa, 1,200 tons; total, 8,231 tons, of which 4,371 tons were to order. The quotations, at date of mail's departure, were as follows:—Cotton piece goods: G.E. Grey Shirtings, 38½ yds. 39 in. 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.0.3; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.8; 9 to 9¾ lbs., Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.3.0; White Shirtings, 40 yds. 36 in. 52 reed, Tls. 1.8.5 to 1.9.0; 56 reed, Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.05; 60 reed, Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.1.5; 64 reed, Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.5; 66 to 72 reed, Tls. 2.4.0 to 2.7.5; English Drills, 40 yds., 30 in., 12 to 15 lbs., Tls. 4.3.5 to 4.4.0; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., 24 yds., 32 in., Tls. 1.6.0 to 2.1.0; 8 to 8.4 lbs., 24 yds., 36 in., Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.4.0; Velvets—Black, 22 in., per yd., Tls. 0.2.0 to 0.2.1½; Blue, 22 in., Tls. 0.2.1. to 0.2.2; Velveteens—Black, 18 in., Tls. 0.1.7 to 0.1.7½; 26 in., Tls. 0.2.6½ to 0.2.7; Woollens and Worsteds: Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.7 to 0.7.5; Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths, Tls. 1.0.0 to 1.2.5.; Camlets, English, S, 56 yds., 31 in., Tls. 13.0.0 to 13.5.0 per piece; S.S., Tls. 12.5.0 to 13.0.0; SSS. 9.0.0 to 10.0.0; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds. 31 in. 12lbs., Tls. 6.5.0 to 6.6.0; Assorted, Tls. 6.8.0 to 7.0.0. Metals.—Iron: Flat and Round, Tls. 2.4.5 to 2.6.0; Nail Rod, Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.5.0; Hoop, Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.4.0; Pig, Tls. 16.0.0 to 17. Lead: Tls. 5.4.5 to 5.8.5; Tin Plates: Tls. 4.5.0 to 4.6.0; Steel: Tls. 3.7.5 to 4.0.0.

Tientsin.—The country was reported quiet and free from rebels. Merchants were arriving at the port, and a fair business was looked forward to during the autumn months.

Hankow.—A quiet but steady business had been transacted in most descriptions of Piece Goods, Grey Shirtings forming the exception, for which scarcely any inquiry had existed. Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.6; White Shirtings, small sales, 56 to 60 reed, Tls. 2.1.0. to 2.2.5; 64 to 66 reed, Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.4.5; T-Cloths, 7 lbs., in fair demand, Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.2.0; 8 lbs. 36 in., Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.4.0; Drills in good request; American, Tls. 4.4.5 to 4.5.5; English, Tls. 4.2.0 to 4.4.5. Fancy Cottons: A retail business was doing in most descriptions. Woollens and Worsteds, Camlets continued to find buyers. SS, good assortments, Tls. 12.5.0 to 13.5.0. Lastings in better inquiry, Tls. 11 to 12.2.0. Long Ells, demand satisfied for the present; HH Scarlet, Tls. 6.7.5 to 6.8.0; good assortments, Tls. 7.2.5 to 7.3.5. Figured Orleans had been inquired for, and prices had advanced to Tls. 3.5.0 to 4.1.0. Metals: Lead no inquiry; nominal quotation, Tls. $6.5.0 per picul.

Foochow.—The only sale reported during the fortnight had been of 1,400 piculs Lead at $8.0 to 9.0.

Canton.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co. report as follows:—"Matting: We do not hear of any considerable contracts having been entered into, nor is it at all likely that an extensive business will be done this season. The manufacturers are fully aware of the state of the New York market, and expecting to do much less business this than in the previous season, in view of which they are buying straw sparingly, and will be very cautious not to make up much stock before they have orders in hand, as they now quite credit the fact that an excessive stock is carried over in New York. Most of the makers have commenced manufacture, but we have not yet been enabled to ascertain what will be their prices. Ginseng: There has been a moderate demand for the root during the past fortnight, though dealers are unwilling to operate, excepting for their immediate requirements, at the prices asked. Extensive sales at Hong Kong continue to interfere with any considerable business in our market. The sales have been 8 barrels Clarified at $235, 5 casks Crude at $162, 1 do. at $190, 6 casks Mixed at $165, and 5 at $172.50, all less 10 per cent."

Hong Kong.—The current quotations were as follows:—Yarn, Nos. 16-24, $122.50 to 130; Nos. 28-32, $142.50 to 150 per bale. Grey Shirti , 7 lbs., $2.53 to 2.55; 8 lbs., $2.70 to 2.75; 8¼ lbs., $2.85 to 2.95 per piece. T-Cloths, 6 to 6.2 lbs., $1.90 to 2.00; 6.5 to 6.8 lbs., $2.10 to 2.15; 7 lbs., $2.25 to 2.65; 7.2 lbs., $2.25 to 2.65; 8 lbs., $2.90 to 3·00; 8.4 lbs., $3.00 to 3.10; 9 to 10 lbs., $3.25 to 3.55; Brocades, White, $2.80 to 2.90; Assorted, $3.90 to 4·00; Spotted Shirtings, White, $2.70 to 2.80; Assorted, $3.70 to 3.80; Turkey Red Shirtings, $2.60 to 2.95. Woollens, Long Ells H Scarlet, $8.70 to 8·80; H Assorted, $8.80 to 9.00; HH Scarlet, $8.80 to 8·90; HH Assorted, $9.00 to 9.20; Spanish Stripes, Scarlet, $0.80 to 0.86 per yard; Assorted, $0.76 to 0.87; Blankets, 10 lb., $5.50 to 6.00 per pair; 7 lbs., $3.80 to 4.00; Iron, Nail Rod, 2.45 to 2.65 per picul; Square, Round, and Flat Bars $2.95 to3.75. The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated 17th September:—Cotton Yarn: Considerable parcels of Singapore and Bombay kinds have been received by Chinchew Hongs, and being offered at low figures, and with liberal credit, have attracted buyers. The cheapness of those goods has depreciated the value of English manufacture coming into competition with them, and the latter are quoted $2.50 per bale lower. Of the sales reported, 50 bales Nos. 28 to 32 only are of direct import. Piece Goods: The above remarks apply to these goods as well as to yarn, values being affected by the receipts from Singapore and Bombay, taken in connection with the continued dulness of the markets and scarcity of money. Grey Shirtings, White Shirtings, T-Cloths, and Turkey Reds are saleable with difficulty at a reduction of 5 cents per piece, and then only in small parcels, northern buyers being almost the sole operators. Drills continue to find favour, but the only sale of American has been a few bales of Lyman Mills at a figure much under market rates. Stocks are almost nil. The market has been cleared of Dutch, and almost cleared of English imitations at an advance on last quotations, and sales of Dutch "to arrive" two months hence are reported at $5.05 per piece. Woollens: A sale of 1,000 pieces H Scarlet Long Ells was made at $8.90 during the early part of the interval, but buyers are now unwilling to purchase except at a decline of 20 cents per piece from last quotations, owing to the large stock of this description. Assorted, on the other hand, have advanced 30 cents. Other kinds continue quiet, and are without material change. Camlets are nominally 25 cents lower. Metals: Nail Rod and Hoop Iron have further declined. Bar Iron is steady, and Wire and Steel in fair demand at fully former values. Large sales of Lead have been made at a marked decline. Malacca Tin is wanted at an advance of about a dollar, but Straits is weak. Tin plates are a trifle dearer. Quicksilver is entirely neglected. Coal: Arrivals have been: 933 tons English, 1,300 do. Welsh (to Consumers) and 2,203 do. Sydney (1,503 to Consumers). The only sale has been 700 tons Sydney at $7, establishing a decline of $1 per ton. For English, $10.50 has been offered and refused.

THE OUTRAGE ON MISSIONARIES AT YANG-CHAU.

The accounts brought by last mail of the wanton ill-usage of the missionaries of the China Inland Mission, at Yang-chau, have been supplemented by the following additional details contained in the letter addressed by Mr. Wm. Thos. Berger to the editor of the Daily News :—

"Sir,—The account of the above outrage, published in your issue of the 19th inst., was, in the main, correct, but for the purpose of allaying the fears of the many friends of the missionaries, and of supplying reliable information, I subjoin extracts from their letters received by last mail. The Rev. J. H. Taylor, writing in a boat on August 24, says: —'The events of the past week baffle all description. We are all on the way to Chin-kiang, and are nearly there. Thanks be to God no life has been lost; and, after the experience of Saturday and Sunday, if the loss of our property does not give rise to feelings of joy, it at least appears a very small matter indeed. . . . The house was surrounded by some thousands of rioters—the natives say 20,000, but this is probably a number magnified by their fears. They dug through the walls, burst open doors, and tried in several places to set fire to the premises ; rifled our boxes, drawers, and rooms ; searched and took what they valued from the persons of three of the ladies, &c. All of us are more or less bruised. Mr. Reid has nearly lost an eye, and several teeth. . . . .' From the letters of the other missionaries I gather that the 18th August was actually placarded about the city as the day upon which the house would be attacked, and endeavours made to set it on fire, irrespective of the natives or foreigners in it at the time. These placards contained the grossest libels against the missionaries, and in one of them the name of Jesus was blasphemed in the vilest terms. From about the above date until the 23rd they had been almost in a state of siege, the climax being on the 22nd and 23rd. Miss B. writes :—'We have had to flee from Yang-chau. I cannot stop now to describe the last few days, if indeed they are describable. The next mail must bring you particulars of events. Meanwhile you will join us in praise to God for saving our lives and limbs, and our most valuable property. The rioters sacked every room but one, in which were all our most important papers and the bulk of our money. . . . . We had to escape for our lives by jumping from the roof over the front of the reception hall. But God graciously sustained and saved us. Very earnestly do I desire and plead that He will yet take us back to that city, for His glory's sake.' "

RANGOON AND WESTERN CHINA.

THE collapse of the much-vaunted Bhamò expedition has been followed by a report that seems almost too good to be true, namely, that measures will at once be taken to complete the survey of Captain SPRYE's long neglected route from Rangoon to the frontiers of South-Western China. It will be in the recollection of many of our readers that we were consistent in supporting Captain SPRYE's scheme from its inception, and that we repeatedly urged on the Government the necessity of having his proposed route properly surveyed. Our view of the case was corroborated not only by all those journals competent to deal with the subject, but by oft repeated representations from all the principal Chambers of Commerce. Year after year the indefatigable exertions of Captain SPRYE and his friends proved unavailing; and at last we laid down our pen, feeling that the passive resistance offered by those in authority was too great to be overcome. For a long time we could only sympathise with the gallant explorer in his never ceasing yet always abortive efforts to procure that recognition which in common fairness should have been accorded him; until, with the advent of the present Government, a ray of light seemed to fall on his path. Just twelve months since we announced—with no little satisfaction—that a partial survey of the route, undertaken during Lord CRANBORNE's administration, had been attended with most satisfactory results, and that at least half the distance to be traversed had been found to be perfectly practicable. Yet, we remarked, the Indian Government still seemed inclined to throw difficulties in the way; and this adverse policy has been most stedfastly persevered with. The Indian authorities having a crotchet about Bhamò, determined to suppress Captain SPRYE's route of only 500 miles, in order to send an expedition to Bhamò, which is between 800 and 900 miles from Rangoon. This expedition started from the latter place in December last, and arrived at Mandalay, the capital of Burmah proper, 675 miles by river from Rangoon, on the 8th of January. Leaving Mandalay in a small steamer on the 13th, they reached Bhamò, about 230 miles north of Mandalay, on the 21st of the same month. Bhamò, when reached, proved to be a miserable, ruinous, poverty-stricken place, overgrown with weeds and surrounded by unhealthy swamps; clearly no place for trade. After being detained here several weeks by all sorts of obstacles, the expedition at last managed to push on to Ponsee, a small Kakyan village only forty miles further up; and here, after a very trying detention of two months, unable to move forward for want of baggage cattle, the chief of the expedition, Captain SLADEN, felt it necessary to break up the party and send back the principal portion of it, he himself and Dr. ANDERSON remaining still at Ponsee, with the collected funds of all, for "political inquiries and objects." However successful these political investigations may be it is very certain that as a trade-route this roundabout way is an utter failure. For a time the Indian authorities have succeeded in shelving Captain SPRYE's route in favour of this abortive project of their own; now, it is to be hoped, after such an egregious failure, they will no longer have the face to ignore a project which, as we have already said, receives the support of all persons who are competent to express an opinion about it. We trust we are not premature in congratulating its author on the prospect of a speedy accomplishment of his desires. The remaining portion of the route might easily be examined during the next dry season, and Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE should lose no time in ordering the completion of the work so well commenced by Lord CRANBORNE.

THE PACIFIC MAIL LINE.

THE route to and from China and Japan by way of San Francisco seems to be in growing favour with travellers, and we hear of several parties of merchants and others having recently returned home that way. There has been of late a very serious drawback to the comfort of passengers in the overcrowding that has existed on that portion of the line between San Francisco and New York. Passengers for Europe, leaving the Pacific Company's steamers at Aspinwall, escaped a portion of this, but only a portion. It seems that Mr. WEBB, an American shipbuilder, started an opposition line between New York and San Francisco, and the competition thus established reduced the first-class passage from $300 to $100; hence the overcrowding and inferior accommodation complained of. The steamer Rising Star, which left New York for Aspinwall on the 1st instant, took somewhere about six hundred passengers for San Francisco, of whom a large number were, as might be expected, of a rather undesirable character to travel with. It seemed to us that if the traffic were sufficient to supply two lines of steamers with such large numbers of passengers, the Pacific Mail Company would have been quite safe in raising their rate to at least double this low figure, and might moreover have done this with increased economy to themselves, as well as greater comfort to their patrons. The better class of travellers would have been glad to pay a higher rate for better accommodation and more select company, and the Pacific Company would have commanded a preference on the part of the wealthy and refined classes, and might have regarded with comparative indifference the struggles of the opposition line to secure, by ruinously low prices, the favour of the great unwashed. The last advices from New York announce, however, that the opposition has been withdrawn—that is run off, we suppose, by the superior power of the Pacific Company—and that the old tariff has consequently been re-established.

We have already expressed surprise at the fact that no mails are made up in this country for transmission to China and Japan by the Pacific route. For Yokohama it is clearly the shortest by several days, while for China, though not superseding the old route, it would be of great use. On representing these facts to the Postal authorities some months since, we were met with an allusion to the irregularity of the Pacific Mail service, which was regarded as an obstacle. At that time, certainly, the monthly departures from San Francisco were not in force; but now that the steamers leave that port regularly on the 2nd or 3rd of each month, and there is a daily mail overland from New York to San Francisco, accomplishing the distance in from twelve to thirteen days, we can really see no reason why a monthly mail should not be made up in London for conveyance that way. We understand the matter is still under the consideration of the Postmaster-General. It may be interesting to note that the rate of postage charged by the overland mail between New York and San Francisco is extremely low—only three cents per half-ounce, and ten cents to China and Japan. Newspapers, however, cannot be sent this way.

A fine new steamer called the America is building in New York for this company, to run between San Francisco and Yokohama, and will be ready to sail about February next. She is built of live oak, hacmetac and yellow pine, with diagonal iron bracings, and is in many respects like the China and Great Republic, though in some way superior to those vessels. Her length will be 380 feet; beam, 48 feet; depth of hold, 31 feet 6 inches. She will have three decks, besides a light "hurricane" deck; thirty state-rooms on the upper deck, capable of comfortably accommodating 90 first-class passengers; a ladies' saloon on the afterpart, and a smoking-room on the forepart of the hurricane deck. Between decks there will be berths for 1,500 steerage passengers. The precautions against fire are worthy of special notice. On the main deck, forward, is a powerful steam-pump, worked independently of the ship's engines by a separate boiler and furnace. From this pump a 4½-inch iron pipe runs the full length of the main and upper decks, having at every 50 feet a discharge-pipe, with 50 feet of hose and a nozzle perma-

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The general tone of the Tea Market since the departure of last mail had been quiet, the business done had been moderate, and confined principally to medium to fine grades, some few parcels only of the commoner sorts having been settled. Arrivals had been large, thereby increasing stocks considerably. Settlements for the fortnight were computed to be about 1,800 piculs, made at last quotations; prices at the close, however, were weaker, and were the supplies to continue on the same scale easier rates must be looked for. The Lanercost, for New York, was the only vessel loading. Quotations:—Common, $22 to 23 per picul; Good Common, $24 to 25; Medium, $25 to 26; Good Medium, $28 to 30; Fine, $30 to 35; Finest, $36 to 40; Choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: The market had remained firm since the departure of the previous mail, and steady and continuous buying had gone on at quite former prices. The bulk of the purchases consisted of common to medium descriptions. Arrivals from the river ports had been important, and notwithstanding the comparatively large purchases of the fortnight, the stock remained unaltered. Consequent on the nature of information received by telegraph from London, the market closed quiet, but natives continued rather firm in their demands. Settlements for the fortnight, 24,500 chests; reshipments on owners' account, 8,500 chests; stock, 97 chops, or 35,000 packages. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 1¾d. per tael, and freight at £2 15s. per ton. Hohow, common to good, 1s. 0¼d. to 1s. 5¼d.; Oonam, common to good, 1s. 1¼d. to 1s. 5¼d.; Ningchow, common to fair, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3¾d.; Oopack, fair to good, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4¼d. Green: Holders had been pretty firm in their demands, and had not readily accepted a decline on former rates. Buyers, however, had not been prepared to purchase finest descriptions at previous extreme prices, and these sorts must be quoted Tls. 1 to 2 lower upon the average. Some irregularity had been shown in purchasing, and some settlements did not show this decline. Medium kinds remained unaltered. The following had been bought:—Teenkai, Tls. 39 to 45; Fychow, Tls. 35 to 38; Pingsuey, Tls. 32 to 39; Shanghai packed, Tls. 28 to 35.5. The market closed steady. Settlements for the fortnight, 22,000 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,500 half-chests; stock, 58 chops, or 35,500 half-chests. Quotations, duty paid, exchange, as above, for Fychow and Teenkai Teas, were as follows:—Gunpowder 1s. 8d. to 3s. 8d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 11d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 3s. 1d.; Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 3s. 6d.; Twankay, 9d. to 1s. 7d.

HANKOW.—At one time the market became very quiet, and a decline of about one tael resulted. News of an active market at Shanghai, however, caused a rally, and latest purchases had fully recovered the decline. The Chinese continued to ship their cargo to Shanghai for sale. Quotations were: Oopacks, common to medium, Tls. 14.5 to 17, equal to 1s. 1⅞d. to 1s. 3½d. per lb.; Oonams, common to fair, Tls. 13.2.5 to 15.5, equal to 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 2¼d. per lb. Exports of Tea from January 1, 1868, to September 4, 1868, 39,214,291 lbs; June 1 to September 4, 1868, 38,919,776 lbs.

KIUKIANG.—At this port settlements had amounted to but four chops of Congou. Arrivals of Blacks had been heavier, but the bulk had been shipped to Shanghai. Only five more chops of Greens had come to hand, and of these none had found buyers.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Rusden, Phipps, and Co. offer the following remarks:—Congou: Just after the date of our last, common flavoury kinds declined about 1 tael, at which reduction a brisk business has been done, chiefly for the States and Australia. Notwithstanding the large increase of export as compared with last year, buyers still seem inclined to operate for the English market. Souchongs are unchanged. The bulk of the settlements are for the States. Oolongs: A small parcel of 200 half-chests and 208 boxes were reported settled yesterday at Tls. 19 to 25, which prices appear no cheaper. Scented Teas: Few desirable parcels now remain in the market. Settlements reported are—Congou, 34,633 chests, at Tls. 8.8 to 25.8 per picul ship off; Souchong, 4,157 chests, Tls. 19.8 to 32.8; Oolong, 4,200 half-chests, Tls. 23.8 to 27.8; Scented Teas, 3,207 boxes, Tls. 9.5 to 26.8; Flowery Pekoe, 478 chests, Tls. 27.8 to 32.3.

AMOY.—Congous had been in fair demand, and though prices had been very irregular, they exhibited, on the whole, an advance of about $1 per picul. Stock was reduced to 500 packages, with but about 3,500 more to come forward to complete the season's supply. In Oolongs the business done had been small, and prices had declined about $1 to $1½ per picul. The market closed quiet, holders being unwilling to make further concessions, and buyers generally evincing no disposition to operate. A string of 2,300 packages contracts had been settled on private terms, supposed to be about $2½ under market rates, the holder being obliged to realise to cover advances made him.

CANTON.—Moderate purchases had been made during the interval at slightly easier rates, but there was not much doing. The stock of Country Congou had been increased by the addition of one more chop, making it four chops, of which one was sold at Tls. 24.8. Scented kinds had been more freely offered, but the stock consisted principally of very common qualities. The following settlements were reported: Country Congou, 1 chop, at Tls. 24 to 30; Scented Orange Pekoe, 5,000 boxes, at Tls. 16 to 34½; Scented Caper, 7,000 boxes, at Tls. 18 to 26; Canton Gunpowder, 500 boxes, at Tls. 26; Canton Imperial, 1,000 boxes, at Tls. 18 to 22.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The market has been freely supplied, and good qualities had met a ready sale at a further advance in prices; $950 had been freely paid for best Hanks, and up to $980 for superfine. Some large parcels of good Coshu had been taken at $825 to 835. For medium sorts quotations show little change. Fresh settlements were fully 1,100 bales, leaving a stock of about 400 bales. Silkworms' Eggs: Daily supplies showed some further diminution—total estimated at 1,500,000 cards, and of these 1,300,000 have been settled. Best sorts were becoming scarce, and consequently were held for full prices, and even some advance had been paid; the inferior part of the stock was off d at low rates. Quotations were: Best Oshu, $3.75 to 4.30; Good, ditto, $3 to 3.25; Best Sinchu, $3 to 3.75; Good, ditto, $2 to $2.75; Common, $0.50 to 1.50. Bivoltins, of which but few have arrived, sell at $0.50 to 1.50. Quotations for Silk were as follows (all charges paid at exchange, 4s. 8d.):—Mybash, Nos. 1 and 2, 38s. 3d. to 39s. 10d.; Sinchu, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, 35s. 1d. to 37s. 1d.; Nos. 2, 3, and 4, 32s. 4d. to 34s. 4d.; Oshu, medium, 30s. to 31s. 11d.; inferior, 26s. to 28s. 4d.; Coshu, Nos. 1 and 2, 33s. 11d. to 35s. 6d.; medium, 29s. 7d. to 31s. 7d.; inferior, 27s. 7d. to 28s. 9d. All other descriptions nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's report, dated September 10, offers the following remarks:—During the past fortnight only a moderate business in Silk has been transacted, and settlements are estimated at about 2,500 bales, the greater proportion of which have been purchased at prices showing but little change on those paid last mail; but to-day the Chinamen evince more willingness to meet the demands of the foreigners for lower prices, and the market closes weak, but the decline is not sufficient to lead to much business, for the general idea is that next mail inward will bring adverse telegraphic advices of the home market, and firms are holding off for still lower prices. The arrivals from the interior not having come forward on the same scale as the settlements, the unsold stock is reduced to 5,000 to 6,000 bales, and consists chiefly of the lower grades of silk; chops and good silk being in small proportion. The inferior quality of the arrivals, which are chiefly second crop silks, suggests the probability of our only receiving 45,000 bales for the total export, and there is every reason to suppose it will not exceed that amount. Quotations (all charges paid at exchange 6s. 2d. per tael) were as follows:—Tsatlee, chop No. 1, none; No. 2, 31s. 6d. to 32s. per lb.; No. 3, 30s. 2d. to 31s. 3d. per lb.; No. 3½, 26s. 11d. to 29s. 10d. per lb.; ordinary No. 3½ and chop No. 4, 25s. 4d. to 26s. 5d. per lb.; ordinary No. 4, 23s. 9d. to 25s. 1d. per lb.; No. 5 and common, 19s. 6d. to 21s. 8d. per lb.; Karshing Taysaam, chop No. 1, 25s. 4d. to 26s. 8d. per lb.; No. 2, 23s. 6d. to 24s. 7d. per lb.; No. 3, 21s. 2d. to 22s. 9d. per lb.; Nos. 4, 5, and common, 19s. 1d. to 20s. 2d. per lb.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 1, none; No. 2, 20s. 2d. to 21s. 1d. per lb.; No. 3, 19s. 1d. to 19s. 6d. per lb.; No. 4 and common, 18s. 8d. to 18s. 7d. per lb.; Yuenfa and Hainings, chop No. 1, 26s. 11d. to 28s. 6d. per lb.; No. 2, 24s. 10d. to 25s. 7d. per lb.; No. 3, 22s. 9d. to 23s. 8d. per lb; No. 4 and common, 20s. 8d. to 21s. 8d. per lb; Hangchow Tsatlee, 21s. 8d. to 23s. 3d. per lb.

CANTON.—The market had been weak, and rates had continued to fall, especially for market to fine qualities, which were very plentiful; finest descriptions, however, continued scarce and were readily bought, when obtainable, at the reduced quotations. Settlements of re-reels amounted to about 100 boxes for the fortnight; the demand for this kind was slack. The following were the quotations:—Tsatlee, $510 to 535; Loongkong, $500 to 530; Kow-Kong, $450; re-reeled Cumchook, $560.

The following is from Messrs. Sharp and Co.'s Circular:—Considerable fluctuation has again taken place in Sterling Exchange since the departure of last mail. Some small sales of credit paper were made at 4s. 8d. six months' sight at the commencement of business for this mail. On the 7th inst. the P. M. S. S. Japan arrived from San Francisco, but, contrary to expectation, with very little treasure for this port. Rates thereupon immediately advanced, and bank bills were offered at 4s. 8d., and 4s. 8¼d., while 4s. 8¾d. was at one time with difficulty obtainable for first class credits. On the 13th inst. a demand for a few thousand pounds of bank bills had the effect of depressing the market, and banks refused to draw at previous rates. On the 16th advices from Shanghai were received announcing lower rates as ruling there, while at the same time treasure was received at that port to the amount of about $300,000, both of which facts were the cause of effecting a further decline in rates here, and bank bills were placed at 4s. 7d., and first class credits at 4s. 7¾d. At close of business a further decline has been established, the closing rates being 4s. 6¾d. for Bank bills, and 4s. 7¼d. for credits. Tenders for H.M. Treasury bills at thirty-six days have been invited within the last few days, but none appear to have been accepted. The estimated amount of business by the present opportunity is about £2d0,000, say £110,000 Bank bills, and £180,000 private paper, and eight lakhs rupees.

Bullion.—The quotations for Bar Silver and Sycee are quite nominal, no transactions being reported in either.

Shares.—The tightness of the money market, and consequent absence of all speculation, has rendered the share market extremely dull during the fortnight. A few parcels of old bank in the early part of the fortnight changed hands at 18 premium, but there is a little better demand at the present moment, and there are buyers in the market at this rate. Several lots of new have been settled at three premium, but a considerable quantity is still offering at this figure. Old Whampoa Docks are quoted 10 discount, and new 15; the only sale of the fortnight was of a parcel of fourteen new at 20 discount, and ten of these were the next day resold at 15 discount. There is no further demand. Small lots of Hotel are offering at 50 to 55 discount, but there are no buyers. There are sellers of Union Dock at quotations given above. China Traders are in strong demand at $275 to 300 premium. Steamboats are a little firmer, and several small parcels are offering at 3 to 4 discount.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At YOKOHAMA.—To London: There is no vessel loading. To New York: £3 13s. to £3 15s. per ton of 40 cubic feet.

At SHANGHAI.—There is less inquiry for tonnage, and rates have declined to £2 10s. per ton of 50 cubic feet; to New York: £3 to £3 10s. per ton of 40 feet.

At FOOCHOW.—To London: £3; to New York, £4 per ton of 40 cubic feet.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—Vessels on the berth are loading at £3 10s. to £3 15s. per ton; to Yokohama there is a good demand for tonnage at 50 c to per picul; to the coasting ports there is little inquiry.

At MANILA.—The following settlements have been made:—The Spanish barque Juliana has been taken up to load sugar at Yloilo, for Liverpool, at £4 10s. per ton. The Palm Tree takes some 1,502 tons sugar at £3 10s., and fills up with measurement at £4 for London. The Champion was relet at £4 for 100 tons sugar, and £4 10s. for coffee and measurement goods, to London. £3 10s. is offered to the Trinidad for sugar to England, but to present refused. At £3 per ton seeking vessels could find employment. For the United States the Bunker Hill gets $12 gold for hemp.

At SINGAPORE.—Tonnage is abundant; vessels on the home berth are loading at £2 15s. per ton; for coasting purposes there is no inquiry.

At PENANG.—Rates remain unchanged.

SHIPPING REPORTS, &c.

HONG KONG.

The British ship John Lidgett, from London, 16th May, reports having had baffling winds and occasionally gales of wind from the westward in the English Channel, and afterwards towards the line had light baffling winds and very poor N. E. trades. Crossed the Equator on the 20th June, in lon. 26 W.; 35 days out. Experienced very moderate S.E. trades and fine weather to the Cape of Good Hope, the meridian of which was passed on the 16th July in lat. 40 S.; 61 days out. In running down the Easting, experienced strong easterly winds, an unusual circumstance] at that particular time of the year. Westerly winds generally prevailing. Sighted Amsterdam Island on the 1st August, at 3 A.M. Towards Java had light S.E. trades, sighting Java Head on the 16th of August, at 6 A.M.; 92 days out. Passed Anjer the same day at 11 P.M., and was clear of the Straits of Sunda the following morning. Cleared Gaspar Straits on the 18th August, and afterwards up the China sea had light S.W. monsoon and latterly N.E. winds to arrival; 112 days out. Spoke on the 18th August in Gaspar Straits, the North German schooner Mary, from Antwerp to Hong Kong, 106 days.

The North German schooner Mary, from Antwerp, 6th May, reports having had fine weather to the line, which was crossed on the 2nd of June. Had moderate S.E. trades, and fine weather to the Cape of Good Hope, the meridian of which was passed on the 19th July, in lat. 40.42 S. In running down the Easting experienced a strong gale from the N W., during which the ship's boats and jib-boom were lost. Made Java Head on the 15th August; 101 days out. Passed Anjer the following day, and up the China Sea had light winds and calms to arrival; 123 days out.

The North German brig Madura, from Hamburg, 28th April, reports having had bad weather on leaving port, and afterwards fine weather throughout the whole passage. Crossed the line on the 2nd June; 35 days out. Passed the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope on the 6th July; 69 days out. Made Java Head on the 14th August; 110 days out, and passed Anjer on the 15th August, having afterwards, up the China Sea, fine monsoon to the Paracelles, and then light winds and calms to arrival; 130 days out. Spoke on the 16th August, in the Straits of Sunda, the British barque William Turner, bound to Shanghai; 102 days out.

The British ship Invincible, from London, May 12th, reports having had fine weather and light winds to the line, which was crossed on the 18th June in lon. 27½ W. Had light S.E. trades and fine weather to the Cape of Good Hope, the meridian of which was passed on the 15th July in lat. 39½ South. In running down the Easting had fine weather, but a strong gale from the southward which lasted some days. Sighted St. Paul's Island on the 1st August, and in running north had moderate winds. Made Java Head 16th August, and passed Anjer the following day, having up the China Sea light winds to arrival; 118 days out. Spoke on May 29th, in lat. 39.50 N., and 13½ W., the British ship Laurel, from London to Shanghai, 18 days out. In two the Pacific Railroads will span the Continent; then there will be several steamship lines across the Pacific Ocean, with telegraphic communication to China and Japan. All this will be only the work of a few years, and when accomplished the vast trade of Eastern Asia will be turned to and across the American Continent. The United States must, in the natural course of events, become the centre of the world, and will control the destiny of China, Japan, and other parts of the Asiatic Continent facing the Pacific Ocean. It will not be, however, by force of arms, but by the power of commerce and ideas. If any conflict should come in the future between any of the great Powers for supremacy or influence over the trade or interests of that part of the world it is more likely to be between Russia and the United States, though the two nations now are so friendly. The destiny of Russia is eastward and ours westward, and we shall meet in time. Russia is continually marching onward in that direction, as we see by her conquests in Bokhara and other parts of Eastern Asia, and by her significant refusal to ratify the treaty made by General von Kaufman with the Emir of Bokhara. But with regard to the jealousy of England relative to our relations and influence with China at the present time or in the immediate future, it will not be wise for her to make a quarrel or to throw herself offensively in our path, for we can seize and hold the Canadas and all the British possessions on this Continent with little difficulty. Then, after doing that and becoming a continental empire, our power and influence would still be as great or greater across the Pacific Ocean and over Eastern Asia.

(NEW YORK TIMES.)

Mr. Burlinghame's Chinese Embassy has not met with the enthusiastic reception from the press and people of England which greeted it in this country. We recognised fully its universal political importance, and were disposed to accept and to welcome it as a favourable sign of great progress in universal civilisation. The English, however, attach little or no importance to the Embassy, condemn as retrogressive the policy which prompted its authorisation, ridicule our "live American" at its head as "a shrewd Yankee with an eye to business and his own emoluments" (forgetting altogether that their own Minister to China urged Mr. Burlinghame and Mr. Brown, an attache of the English Legation, to accept their present positions in the interests of civilisation), and generally betray only bad temper and vexation of spirit instead of enthusiasm and hospitality. We imagine that the same ungracious spirit will be displayed on the appearance of the Embassy in France and Russia, for the press and people and the authorities of each of these countries detect in this movement the development of a new Power and a new policy. They can see, too, into phrophetic vision, if they will carefully study the history of the rise and progress of modern civilisation, that this new Power is to become supreme in Asia.

Hitherto England and Russia have been the dominant foreign Powers in Asia, and their supremacy there has been gained and maintained by force of arms. England with her troops and trade, including the infamous opium traffic, has penetrated into India until she has reached the south-western wall of China. Russia has penetrated from Siberia to Samarcand; Bokhara is virtually a Russian dependency; she is already pressing for admission at the north-western gates of China, and only Affghanistan lies between the Russian southern and the Indian northern frontier. Let either penetrate into Affghanistan and they meet, and meeting in that country means either a contest with each other or an alliance for further conquests in another direction. The fear of such a conflict has long troubled the English Viceroys in India; a powerful faction of the English East India House is familiarly known as the "Anti-Russian section;" and the late triumph of the Russians at Samarcand over the Emir of Bokhara far more seriously agitated England than was generally supposed. The English recognise that the Russians are searching for the wealth of the South—not the frozen regions of the North, or the vast deserts of Central Asia, and that their next forward movement will take them into India, where the British are, or into China, where the British wish to be.

The Chinese have a wholesome fear that it is their country which is next to be invaded. They are perfectly familiar with the aggressive policy of England in over-running India, in bombarding Canton and in plundering the Summer Palace of their Emperor at Peking. British traffic at the Five Treaty Ports has tended to deplete rather than to enrich the Chinese treasury, for the imports of China from Great Britain have been nearly double her exports to the same country. This to an agricultural and producing people like the Chinese has the appearance of an aggressive policy in conducting trade as well as in conquering territory. It is the fear that England and Russia, meeting in Central Asia, instead of crossing lances with each other, may turn their combined forces on the Chinese Empire which has actuated the Celestials to form the alliances she is now seeking.

Greater wisdom than we have usually given the Chinese credit for guided them in the selection of the United States as the first and chiefest of these allies. "They builded better than they knew," or than the world generally suspects in that choice. First of all, commercially, America is China's best customer, for our imports from that country have for years past been twenty times as great as our exports thither, and the Chinese believe that this trade may, with the growing facilities of transportation and other increasing advantages, be augmented in like ratio indefinitely. Secondly, the foreign policy of the United States is most in accord with her own; we are not exactly exclusionists—only so far as the Monroe Doctrine means exclusion—but, like China, we have never had an aggressive foreign policy. We are not without great influence in Japan and in the treaty ports; we are practically the nearest neighbour of the Celestials, and, what is most important, we are peacefully inclined. In forming an alliance with America, China morally strengthened her own position at home, and of all other alliances which she has or may form ours will most tend to protect her in her unity.

The English say in her exclusiveness. They maintain that the ultimate aim of the movement is to reclose the treaty ports and expel the Europeans from the seaboard, and they talk grandiloquently of the retrogression of civilisation in that country. But the real fear is the cessation of their profitable trade, the loss of the immense tea revenue of the British Government, and, worst of all, the stop which this alliance must put to the darling schemes of the East India House for larger trade with the interior of China. Their opposition to the treaty as presented and adopted in this country is on this score alone. Russia, too, will object. France, just repulsed in her attempts to get a foothold off the Chinese coast, may play the virtuous part, cry "sour grapes," and readily recognise the Embassy out of spite to England and Russia. Prussia, Austria, all central Europe in fact, not from any great interest in aiding China, but particularly desirous of weakening England and Russia, will adopt the treaty substantially as we have it here. This once effected, China will be as completely protected as moral force can protect her, and Russia and England will be left to dispute over the little bone of Affghanistan, or the big one of India. In either case it will be likely to prove a political version of the "Kilkenny cats."

It is not difficult to believe that the new policy of peace will prove of superior strength to the old one of arms, and that permanent supremacy in the richest empire of the world will eventually belong to the American thus invited. There is no reason why the policy which thus protects China should not enrich America if the incoming administration of General Grant is conducted in its Foreign Department with the wisdom and statesmanship which has characterised our foreign policy in general, and the administration of Southern affairs since the work of reconstruction was given into the hands of the General-in-Chief. The trade of Great Britain with China is ten times our own: in 1866 it amounted to $113,615,640 exports to China, and $73,846,475 imports from the same. With the advantages of the good will of the Chinese, our near approach to their shores and the extension of our facilities for transportation, there is great probability of our absorption of that profitable trade. We are in a position at this time to obtain a much better footing in China than has any other nation. When the English bombarded and seized Canton, they found the people as accessible, socially and commercially, as those of any city in the world; "exclusiveness" proved to be a public policy of the rulers rather than a domestic principle of the people. That policy has been maintained only from fear of foreign interference; the clauses in the new treaty with us retaining control of all internal improvements, &c., are simply diplomatic barriers to this foreign interference in the dread of which the Madarin class who govern China have been educated for ages. But it is not an irrevocable policy. Mr. Burlinghame represented, while in this country, that the Government of China intends to throw the Empire open to trade and emigration when the foreign Powers, which have hitherto forced their trade regulations and consular courts on them by arms, shall have granted to her the same privilege of regulating her internal affairs that is accorded to France, to England, and all independent Powers. This they seek by their new treaty and alliances. It seems destined that America, having gained, through its sustained reputation for a policy of non-intervention in foreign affairs, and an aversion to entangling alliances, the confidence of the Chinese rulers, is now to be instrumental in opening China and its third of the human race to civilisation, and at the same time to enrich itself beyond calculation. Europe may as well recognise that China is no longer a world to be conquered, peace has won there what will prove one of her most renowned victories, and England and Russia may sit down like a couple of disgusted Alexanders, and weep because that world no longer remains to be conquered. In the meantime, do not let American statesmen and merchants forget that the rich reward of our sudden supremacy in Asia yet remains to be gathered.

TRADE WITH WESTERN CHINA.

Captain Richard Sprye, the original promoter of a direct trade-route from Rangoon to Western China, has addressed the following letter on the subject to the Editor of The Times:—

"Sir,—My attention having been called to the notice in your Money Article of the 20th of the failure of the survey of the route from Bamau to Tali-foo, for British and Indian trade with the west of China, I solicit permission to remark on an error in it of some import to the commercial public. It states that while the direct route from Rangoon to Kianghung, on the Upper Kamboja river, is only 500 miles in length, the one by Bamau is 800 miles. Now, the Bamau route, to explore which, at a considerable cost, the Government of India suddenly stopped the half completed survey of the direct one, is in length as follows:—From Rangoon by the Irrawadi river to Mandalay, the capital of Burmah proper, 675 miles; from Mandalay, by the same stream to Bamau, 230 miles; making together 905 miles of river carriage. The land distances then are—from Bamau to Santa, air-line, N. 68 E., 72 miles; Santa to Tali-foo, air-line, N. 61 E., 125 miles. Add to these the usual one-third for road variations, and it gives 263 miles of land carriage, and makes the total distance 1,168 miles, instead of 800 only, as stated in The Times, and 668 more than the direct route. Some years since I sent to the then Secretary of State for India a full description of this old Bamau caravan route, derived from reliable sources; because, before selecting the direct land route from Rangoon, I necessarily collected and carefully considered all available information, ancient and modern, of every other possible route to the inland western moiety of China from India, even from Simla, on our north-west, to the Isthmus of Kraw, on our south-east frontier; having no individual interest in or preference for any particular one, and seeking only 'the most practicable way' by which for the United Kingdom and India to carry on a regular trade the year through with the extensive, populous, and rich western provinces of China, hitherto shut in from the commercial world.—I have the honour to remain, Sir, your humble servant, "RICHARD SPRYE."

THE AUSTRIAN EXPEDITION TO THE FAR EAST.

On the 26th of September Rear-Admiral Baron von Petz, the commander of the expedition, had a private audience of the Emperor to take leave, and returned to Trieste on the following day to superintend the arrangements for the voyage. According to the programme, the mercantile reporters were to arrive at Trieste on the 4th and embark on the 6th inst.; but the fitting out of the vessels at Pola is not yet completed, and according to the latest advices had not arrived at Trieste. Among the reporters Herr Victor Schonberger is appointed for the department of manufactured goods, raw produce, and exports, for which he has qualified himself by studying the usances of trade at Hamburg, Manchester, and other commercial emporiums; Dr. Syrski (for the breeding of silkworms) is zoologist, botanist, and director of the Museum of Natural History at Trieste, and for the last three years has conducted the breeding of silkworms on the estate of Count Czopski, in Volhynia; Dr. Schmucker, for the chemical department, is a Doctor of Chemistry, district chemist, and has practical and theoretical experience of dyeing, printing, and tanning, as well as the manufacture of glass and silk-piece goods, and has visited many countries; Arthur von Skola, for textile industry, has studied technically at Vienna, and practically, in the spinning and weaving departments, in the principal manufacturing towns of South Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, France, and England, and was the Austrian Commissioner for Manufactured Goods at the Paris Exhibition last year; Hermann Hardt, for metals, has worked in the mines in North and South America, and is, therefore, practically acquainted with the different ores, the processes of extracting the metals, and refining and manufacturing them. During the late American civil war Herr Hardt served in the Unionist army, and was present at many of the great battles. All the reporters speak and write fluently English and French, and many of them Italian, besides their own native German. Among the one hundred and forty-three applicants in the German half of the Austrian monarchy was a female cook, who wished for a situation "among the female servants of the expedition." She professed to know how to cook, wash, sew, knit, and perform other domestic duties, including attendance and care of the sick. "She speaks French, and has a great wish to see foreign countries." But in spite of all these advantages her offers of service were declined.

The "Instructions for the civilians appointed to accompany the expedition to Eastern Asia and to embark on board his Imperial Majesty's corvette Friedrich," which have just been published for their guidance, lay stress upon the fact that the principal object of the mission is to promote the interests of trade and industry. The Ministerial Councillor, Dr. von Scherzer, who is placed at the head of this department, is authorised to command the services of the reporters, and regulate their proceedings in accordance with his own judgment, and they are bound to execute his orders to the best of their abilities. In other respects they are placed under the Ambassador-Admiral, and for the internal discipline of the ship under the commander of the Friedrich. They have each to keep a journal of all events and observations that lie in their departments at all the ports and places where they land, which journals are to be at all times open to the inspection and perusal of their civil chief, and are to be sent to the Minister for Commerce at the expiration of the mission, together with a general report embracing the result of their experiences and proposals for the utilisation of the same for the benefit of Austria.

For the Sovereigns of Siam and Japan several very valuable presents have been prepared and are being shipped, and many industrial establishments, animated with a patriotic desire to make known in those distant regions the various resources of the Empire, have contributed without any charge or expectation of recompense profuse collections of the best and choicest articles they manufacture. Among these disinterested gentlemen may be mentioned Herr Otto von Bauer, at Brunn; Johann and Franz von Liebig, at Reichenberg; Gustav Trenkler, at Prague; and Herr Hartmann at Vienna, who have sent in a brilliant assortment of glassware, manufactures of various descriptions, and meerschaum pipes. Altogether the samples and patterns of Austrian industry fill a hundred and eighty large chests. Hungary sends out her own special reporters, but we just learn that one of them, Herr Julius von Szekats, has at the last moment declined to go out and tendered his resignation.

In order to facilitate the correspondence for the members of the Expedition, notice has been given that letters and bundles of newspapers (the latter not to exceed 3 lbs. each) may be sent in at any time and will be received and forwarded by the first opportunity by the Naval Section of the War-office without any charge for postage. The addresses on the letters must be legibly written in English, or at all events in Roman characters, and contain merely the name of the person and the ship on board which he goes out.

Dr. von Scherzer has arrived at Trieste to superintend the different arrangements connected with the department over which he is appointed to preside; and as soon as the expedition has fairly sailed he himself will proceed by steamer to Egypt, to make himself acquainted by personal observation with the state and prospects of the Suez Canal, in order to take measures for the future utilisation of the undertaking in the interests of Austrian commerce and industry. He will then go on by the overland mail from Suez, and join the expedition either at Point de Galle or Singapore.

BURMAH AND WESTERN CHINA.

(STANDARD.)

A splendid prize seems to be almost within the grasp of our English merchants. The Chambers of Commerce have long been urging the subject on the attention of the Government, and some of our most eminent statesmen—including the present Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—have admitted the great importance of the question. Two hundred millions of people, in the main civilised and prosperous, are practically cut off from British commerce; yet we have only five hundred miles of territory to traverse in order to reach them, half of the line of route being in the British dominions, and the other half subject to princes who are favourable to the project. Political difficulties in reality there are none, and the physical obstacles are so slight as to be readily conquered by a moderate amount of engineering. We simply want a light description of railroad between one point and the other—little more than a tramway, in fact—and the channel will be at once opened for a trade which would be of immense value both to England and to India, while at the same time certain collateral advantages would be secured the importance of which might appear subsequently. The difficulties which lie in the way and obstruct all these desirable results are neither political, physical, nor even financial. The obstacles are of the pure obstructive character, partly made up of official prejudice, and partly composed of petty interests, which place themselves in antagonism to the general good.

By conquest and by treaty England has so curtailed the once extensive area ruled over by the King of Burmah that this sole block between British India and the Empire of China is considerably narrowed. Between Assam and China the interval is exceedingly small, but it so happens that at this point the enormous mountain ranges, the strongholds of numerous savage tribes, interpose an effectual barrier, in addition to which the distance from the Bay of Bengal renders any approach to China from this quarter valueless as affecting British commerce. It is at the same time very natural that the Assam tea planters should desire to see a route to China opened up somewhere near this region, as they would hope to get Chinese coolies to labour in the plantations, where there is at present a great lack of labourers, the hill tribes disdaining the employment, while the coolies of the Indian plains are not only hard to obtain, but still more difficult to keep. So far there is an influence at work in favour of this northern route to Western China, though the nature of the country really forbids the idea of such an enterprise, except at enormous cost and inconvenience. In conjunction with the Assam planters are the Calcutta merchants, who, as might be expected, are anxious that, if trade be opened with Western China at all, it should flow through their warehouses, and enrich the recognised capital of British India. Calcutta, moreover, knows very well that Rangoon is a rising port, and, to some extent, a competitor for commercial honours. For Western China to be approached by a direct route from Rangoon is little better than heresy in the opinion of a Calcutta Crœsus, however beneficial such a plan might prove to the Indian empire at large. The dominant feeling at Calcutta naturally impresses itself upon the official mind, and the traditions of the bureau are either opposed altogether to the idea of trade across the frontier with Western China, or in favour of a route which shall have nothing to do with Rangoon. There have even been parties, high in station, who have disputed whether Western China was worth dealing with at all, although Lord Elgin had long ago declared its immense importance. It is at the same time notorious that we cannot reach that part of the Celestial Empire except by an inland route. Our ships which enter the Chinese ports are merely touching the outskirts of that vast trade which otherwise would be available for British commerce. In the meantime certain neighbours of ours are by no means disposed to imitate our apathy. France has planted her flag in Cochin-China, and by means of annexations and protectorates is working her way up the Cambodia river. A strongly fortified French port now presents itself on the sea route from Singapore to Hong Kong, and from Calcutta to Shanghai. In the event of hostilities between England and France the latter would be in a position to command the China Seas, we having no settlement between Singapore and Hong Kong. Eight years ago a combined French and Spanish naval expedition sacked and burned the city of Saigon, the inhabitants were driven from the surrounding country, and a French colony was forthwith established. Three years later the whole of ancient Cambodia came under French protection, and in the following year the independent States of Laos were similarly favoured, thus carrying French authority to the frontiers of Tonquin. France thus not only holds all the mouths of the Cambodia river, but also commands the stream itself as far up as the three Siamese Shan States, formerly tributary to Burmah, but which now own a sort of allegiance to the King of Siam. It is said that the King of Burmah would not be altogether displeased if these revolted States were snapped up by France. He himself would lose nothing as the case now stands, nently attached and always ready for use. It is intended that water shall be passed through all the pipes and hose once a day, that they may be always in efficient working order, and the crew will be practised at "fire-drill" by sounding a false alarm once in each trip. This last, by the way, is no doubt a very praiseworthy precaution, but the effect on timid passengers will probably be anything but agreeable. Still, so fearful a danger is that of fire at sea, especially among a floating colony such as one of these steamers carries, that it is impossible to be too careful in guarding against it.

Continental Intelligence.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, October 28.

Some interesting Parliamentary papers were issued last week. They include a Bill by which it is proposed to abolish the stamp duty now levied on newspapers. The state of our Treasury, however, is not sufficiently favourable to allow of this duty being annihilated without the imposition of an equivalent, it having produced last year a revenue of 710,000f. The Minister proposes to cover this amount partly by increasing the costs of the licenses to sell tobacco, cigars, or wine and spirits. The Minister estimates that this will give a revenue of 500,000f., while to cover the balance of 21,000 Mr. van Bosse proposes to increase the Customs duty on tea by 15f. per 100 lb., so that this import will be subjected to—provided these Bills are passed—a duty of 40f. from the 1st of May, 1869. The Minister states that the consumption of tea has increased so largely in this country that since 1853 the quantity imported has more than doubled. In 1853 the consumption was 726,410 lbs., giving a revenue of 145,282f., and in 1867 1,553,873 lbs., producing 388,468f. This favourable result has been obtained, notwithstanding that the duty was increased in 1863 by 5f. per 100 lbs. The Minister is of opinion that the consumption will not be decreased by the adoption of this measure, and that the revenues of this duty will be augmented by at least 233,000f. I believe this proposal will meet with strong opposition from the merchants, on the ground of being contrary to the principles of free trade.

Mr. E. de Waal, the Minister of the Colonial Department, has laid before the members the documents respecting the Huet scandal. They prove that the ex-Minister Hasselman gave a free passage to Mr. Huet and his family, he being charged with the mission to examine the press law in India. The ex-Minister was of opinion that the press in India was too violent and passionate, and he saw in Mr. Huet the right man to restrain this press. It is quite clear that this motive is only a blind, and that Mr. Hasselman as well as Mr. Huet are compromised. You will remember that the Conservative papers insinuated that the Liberal Ministers of the Colonial Department had given from time to time free passage to persons, not being functionaries of the State. An inquiry has proved that this insinuation was entirely without foundation. Only on two or three occasions has a free passage been given, and then only to natives of India, who could not return without the assistance of the Government.

The negociations between Holland and the Rhine States for a revision of the shipping treaty on the Rhine have been reopened, and have led to a good result. A new treaty will come into force on the 15th of March next.

Rumours have again been set in circulation that a commercial and military treaty had been concluded between France and the Netherlands. I, however, can assure you on the best authority that these rumours are quite unfounded.

According to official returns our national debt has been decreased since 1850 by an amount of f.275.325,525 36c., by which is spared an interest of f.8,435,096 47c.

In our local papers some correspondence has appeared respecting the Rotterdam Bank. It is stated that one of the managers has resigned his post at the bank, which will result in a total standstill of the business in India, and the necessity is urged that the bank should be liquidated at once to secure what can be saved. The last news from Sourabaya has greatly increased the prevailing uneasiness, by the intelligence that one of the largest houses there had stopped payment. The bank is considerably interested in the firm.

Dr. Blanc, the ex-prisoner of Abyssinia, is giving public readings here to relate his adventures in that country.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The market became very animated upon the report that in the auction of the Trading Company in November only 78,000 b. will be offered, it being thought that the quantity would be 148,000 b. A lively demand followed, but holders declined to operate even at an advance of ½c. to 1½c. All that was offered of good ordinary Java at 32½c. was sold, and holders now demand 32½c. to 33c. White and yellowish white quality from last auctions are bought at an advance of ½c. to 1c. The transactions include 1,497 b. Java, ex Concurrent, at 34½c.; 2,000 b. Padang, ex Padang Packet, at 37½c. to 38½c.; and 6,000 b. Java and Padang, ex several vessels, 500 b. Padang, ex Pieking, at 33c.; 1,504 b. Java, ex Twee Gezusters, Almelo, and Vice-Admiraal May, at 28½c. to 29½c.; 287 b. Java, ex Maria Adolfina, at 31½c.; 1,250 b. Padang, ex Manilla II., and 1,800 b. Padang, ex Padang Packet, at 37½c.

RAW SUGAR.—The market has shown a firm tendency, so that all parcels offered have been taken at firm prices. The transactions include 769 mats Passaroeang, ex Golden Dream, 652 mats do., ex General Birch, No. 10½, at 29½f.; 398 mats Samarang, ex Glencune, No. 12¾, at 32½f.; 1,318 mats Sourabaya, ex Baltimore, No. 13, at 32½f.; 586 mats Pamaroekan, ex General Birch; 301 mats Japara, No. 14, at 32½f.; 468 mats do., ex Baron van Hardenbroek, at 31f. The prices are now from ¼f. to ½f. under September.

TEA.—The market is firm, but inactive. The cargo per Stinchar, which sailed on the 1st of August from Foo-chow-Foo, is 1,307/4 and 4,350/12 ch. Congou, 319/4 and 2,260/12 ch. Souchon, 286/4 and 282/12 ch. Pecco Souchon.

RICE.—The market closes very dull and inactive.

SPICES.—There is a very animated demand, especially for fine qualities, and improved prices are paid. Nutmegs, No. 1, have realised 86c.; No. 2, 76c.; but holders now decline to operate at these prices. Mace meets also with a good demand for export; 128c. were realised for D, and 119c. for E. Amboina Cloves of the last auction realised 27c.

TOBACCO.—Java Leaves: There has been a good demand, which led to some transactions, viz.:—526 bales Blitar, ex Vooruit; 106 b. Kotta, 1866, ex Herald of the Morning; 1,364 b. A. J. Walter, ex cargo Ternate; 243 b. P. D. W. G., ex Joseph Holmes; 201 b. Blitar, ex County of Lanark; 739 b. Blarcum, 850 b. Kebon Aroem, ex Stad Leiden; 712 b. Cuba, 90 b. J T, ex Bato; and 2,060 b. G P. The stock of Java is 17,328 b., and of Japan 75 b. There is a firm demand for Manila at advanced prices.

HIDES.—Without transactions for East India sorts, holders demanding too high prices.

JAVA INDIGO.—About 100 ch. have changed hands since my last report, and firm prices were paid.

RATTANS.—The Trading Company has offered in auction 7,740 pic., which were all sold, Borneo at f.8.30 to f.9.10, Banjermassing at f.8.20 to f.12.80, Padang at f.10.20 to f.15, Koetie at f.4.30 to f.8.30. The result of this auction was not so good as was anticipated. Only two lots of very fine quality were sold at high rates, and those of inferior quality were sold at very low prices. The private transactions include 200 pic. ex Manila II., 25 pic. ex Sjobroken.

BANCA TIN.—Immediately after the departure of last mail prices showed some decline, but the large demand which resulted thereby caused the market to close very firm. Considerable lots were sold at f.56¾ to 57¼, but now f.58 is paid, Billiton f.56 to ¾.

ARRACK.—By inscription were sold 116 and 50 casks Batavia O. G. L., ex Imperator Alexander II.

SILK.—The Trading Company has announced that on the 28th of October will be offered in auction 241 b. raw Japan and 65 b. do. China, of which the valuation is as follows:—24 b. Ida, f 37 to f.46; 42 b. Sodi, f.30 to f.38; 105 b. Oshio, f.28 to f.43; 24 b. Aechezan, f.25 to f.32; 14 b. Tadsima, f.20 to f.22; 18 b. Mastah, f.24 to f.28; 14 b. Doupions, f.8 to f.9; 65 b. Tsatlee, f.29 to f.31.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Curcuma, 1440 b., ex Æolus, were partly sold at f.12. By inscription was sold 143 pic. indiarubber, 66 pic. Cutch, 20 pic. gum damar, ex Karel, August from Padang.

NORTH GERMANY.

HAMBURG, October 26.

The North German steam corvette Medusa is under orders to get ready with the utmost despatch, and sail immediately for China and Japan, to replace the Vineta, lately returned from that station. Next spring another corvette will be sent out, and probably some gunboats, to assist in putting down piracy. The Medusa is fitting out at Kiel, and Admiral Jachmann has just passed through this city on his way to that port to inspect her before her departure.

The German North Pole Expedition has returned safely from her voyage of discovery in the Arctic Sea, and is now at Bremerhaven. Capt. Koldewey appears to be a very zealous officer, but was baffled in his attempt to reach the North Pole. Off the east coast of Greenland he could not get higher than 75 deg. N. lat. on account of the ice, and sighted Pendulum Island and Cape Bruer-ruys (old Hudson's "Hold-with-Hope"), but for the same reason was unable to land. He, therefore, in accordance with his instructions, directed his course to the north-east, and spent some time in surveying Hinlopen Straits, between the mainland of West Spitzbergen and North-east Land, but was here also unable to get through into clear water. From the summit of Cape Torell he saw the unknown land first seen by a Dutch skipper in 1707, and again in 1861 by the Swedish Exploring Expedition, but never yet reached, so that its nature and extent remain as great a geographical mystery as ever. The Greenland (or Germania, as she is called in the German accounts) had some difficulty in getting out of the Hinlopen Straits, and then proceeded to the north, but was again stopped by an impenetrable barrier of ice extending on every side but the south. On the 14th of September Captain Koldewey reached his furthest point in 81 deg. 5 min. north latitude, and 16 deg. east longitude, when he was compelled to return, and entered the Fiord of Bergen on the 30th of September, from which port he sailed the 24th of May. He still believes in the possibility of reaching the Pole, but it must be in a screw steamer, and if another expedition is fitted out in the spring, he and his officers have expressed their readiness to serve in it. With regard to the double name of the vessel, as above mentioned, I may here explain that she was built at Bergen, and called the Greenland, having the right to sail under the Norwegian flag; but when she was purchased by Dr. Petermann, of Gotha, for the exploring voyage, he gave orders to have her rechristened by the name of the Germania, and hoist the North German flag. But, strictly speaking, this was informal, as to obtain a German register a vessel must be surveyed and measured in a German port, and there was no time to do this before the expedition sailed from Bergen, where the vessel was fitted out. She is a well-built and handsome-looking craft of eighty tons, cutter rigged, and was strengthened in the bows and sheathed with a skin of iron for half her length, to enable her to withstand the buffets she received from the ice, and of which she bears abundant marks, though still in excellent condition and quite seaworthy. Captain Koldewey has brought home an interesting collection of objects of natural history and geology; among the latter are more than a hundred specimens of the bottom of the Arctic Basin, brought up by the lead in deep-sea soundings. A singular phenomenon was observed on the east coast of Spitzbergen, where the shore was covered for many miles by driftwood, piled up to a height of more than twenty feet, which is the more remarkable as the difference between high and low water is only three feet. They consist chiefly of pines, firs, larches and other coniferous trees, many of them fifteen or twenty feet long, with their branches and roots complete, all in a good state of preservation, and several with signs of having been quite recently thrown up in their present position.

Accounts have also been received from the Swedish scientific expedition, which has been employed this summer in measuring an arc of the circle on Spitbergen. The greater part of the gentlemen engaged in it have returned home, leaving Professor Nordenskiold and one or two others at Amsterdam Island, whence they were about to proceed in the Government steamer Sofia, under the command of Lieutenant Von Otter, to as high a latitude as it may be possible to reach, though from the state of the ice in the middle of September there is not much chance of their getting up higher than the German Expedition. They have also brought home some valuable collections of the Fauna and Flora of Spitzbergen, among which are some gigantic bones of an unknown description of crocodile belonging to a period between the coal and the miocene formations; also various specimens of fossil wood of the palm-tree, showing that at a former period the climate of Spitzbergen must have been temperate, if not tropical.

COMMERCIAL.

The coffee market has been very lively, and higher prices are willingly given. In rice there is no alteration to report; there is a fair demand at former rates. Cassia lignea is still very scarce and continues to rise; the demands holds on, and none is now to be had under 14 to 14½ sch. bco. per lb. Flores is also in request at 18 sch. bco., which figure has been paid. Pepper commands more attention, but is not higher. In teas the finest sorts of Moning Congou of the new crop are in great demand and high prices paid; the same may be said of ordinary middling to good middling Pecco. Spelter is neglected, and there are no transactions to report; the nominal price is 13 marks 10 sch. bco. in loco. and 13.7 for spring delivery, sellers Two millions of marks banco in silver bars have been withdrawn from the Bank, in consequence of which the money market is not quite so easy as it was. Good paper can however be easily discounted at 2 per cent.

NEW YORK COMMERCIAL ADVICES.

The following is a copy of Messrs. Beebe and Brothers' Tea Circular, dated Oct. 8, 1868:—

"In resuming our reports of the tea market we have now to note continued activity in the demand for Greens during the week following the date of our last, resulting in sales to the extent of 14,000 half-chests, including about 6,000 half-chests ex Annie Braginton, to arrive from Canada. Extreme prices have been realised for the lower grades, without, however, advancing the quotable value of chops, except those including an excess of cargo kinds. At the close there is less animation, owing to the paucity of stock in the hands of importers and the usual reaction of our market after a period of more than ordinary activity. In Japans business has been small, 1,900 half-chests covering the amount of sales from first hands since our last; this description of tea is in moderate stock, and finally held at old quotations. For Oolongs the demand is limited and market weak at current rates. The supply is large for the season, much of it undesirable, and the trade disinclined to buy in advance of actual wants except at lower prices. The sales from first hands since the 25th ult. were 4,300 half-chests, mainly of fair cargo. Amoy kinds at 52c. to 53c. duty paid."

RAW SILK.—The market has been very inactive during the past month, sympathising with the dulness of the London market. Extra fine stock has been most in demand; the high cost of new Silk renders holders firm. We quote jobbing prices:—

THE AMERICAN PRESS ON BRITISH RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

(NEW YORK HERALD.)

Although the Chinese Embassy seems to have a quiet time in London, and though no official action with regard to the object of the mission has been taken, as far as we know, the British Press continues to growl in a piteous and jealous manner. This is shown in a long, carefully studied and laboured article in the London Times.

There are two things relative to this Embassy and the policy it has inaugurated which are particularly obnoxious—namely, the appointment of an American citizen by the Chinese Government as chief Ambassador in this, the most important mission that ever left the Empire, and the supplementary treaty which has first been made with the United States, that reverses the long established and dearly cherished British policy in the East and towards China. The article referred to—and that, it may be said, represents pretty correctly the sentiments of all the old India and China merchants, as well as of a large party in England—takes a review of the treaty relations all through between Great Britain and the Chinese Empire, and shows clearly that the uniform policy of the British has been one of force—a gunpowder policy—and that China has invariably been whipped into submission. Yet, strange to say, after recounting all this history of coercion by brute force, and of treating the Chinese, like all the other Asiatics, as having no national rights which Europeans were bound to respect, we are naïvely told that England has been wonderfully forbearing and kind. More than that, this is urged as a reason why the Chinese Government ought not to have treated England so coldly in preferring an American instead of an Englishman for its envoy, and in making a treaty first with the United States. What ingratitude for the leniency, disinterestedness, and humanity of the British!

But the Chinese did not view the matter in that light. They had a vivid remembrance of British dictation in their own affairs, of British assumption, of British cannon and of the whole conduct of the British in subjugating a large portion of Asia. They have never ceased to fear (and not without reason) that the fate of India might be their fate and that the English policy of aggression step by step upon their soil and national rights was intended to produce ultimately the same result as had been produced in Hindostan. They have fully understood that the caresses of the British lion are dangerous and end in the victim being devoured. Both their own history and that of India taught them to doubt the English and to look elsewhere for friends. Casting their eyes over the Pacific Ocean they saw a mighty nation which did not want to make conquests in Asia, which respected the principles of national independence, of self-government and the integrity of nations. They saw, too, that this country was comparatively a near neighbour, and that in its rapid progress it must soon have the largest commercial relations with themselves. California had already stretched out her hand to China, and a steamship line connected the two continents. The Chinese are a sagacious people, and they could not help seeing that the future relations with America must be of the widest and most important character. What more natural, then, under all these circumstances, than that the Government at Peking should seek the friendship of the United States? What more natural than that it should offer the high position of Ambassador to Mr. Burlinghame, an American citizen who, as Minister from his own country, had shown great ability and the best disposition toward China? Under the circumstances it was necessary to take an American or a European for the mission, there being no Chinaman sufficiently instructed in such matters abroad. Had Sir Frederick Bruce, the former British Minister, been in China at the time he might have been offered the honour; for he, like Mr. Burlinghame, was a friend of China and favoured the new policy respecting the national rights of the Chinese and the integrity of their great Empire. We say, then, it was natural that Mr. Burlinghame should be offered the position of Envoy, and that he should come here first to make a treaty. This jealousy on the part of the British with regard to America is as puerile as it is futile. The destiny of this country with regard to its power and commerce on and across the Pacific cannot be arrested by Great Britain or any other nation. We shall march with giant strides to fulfil that destiny, and though England has at present by far the largest trade with China it will not be long before we shall occupy that position. In a year or and his royal friend at Bangkok would be deprived of the pleasant morsel which dropped into his mouth during troublous times a few years ago.

In these and other ways French influence is extending, until there is danger that the direct route from Rangoon to Western China will be intercepted by French territory, thereby closing to our merchants the golden gate which, for the present, stands so temptingly open. The British possessions in Pegu extend very nearly to 20 degs. north latitude. The north-east corner lies not far from the Chinese caravan route from Esmok, and is about 250 miles from Rangoon. Starting from this north-east angle of Pegu, another 250 miles or thereabouts conducts to the city of Kiang-hung, the capital of that Shan State, situated on the right bank of the Upper Cambodia, where the river is at all times navigable. The whole of the route from Pegu lies through territories of Shan Princes tributary to the King of Burmah, but who, while loyal to their sovereign, have expressed themselves most favourable to the extension of British commerce. As for the King of Burmah, this ruler has given ample proof of his concurrence. At the close of last year, when it was announced that the British Government were about to survey the line from Pegue to Kiang-hung, the King immediately issued a Royal mandate requiring that every facility should be given to the surveying party, in addition to which his Majesty sent a guard of fifty soldiers to meet and escort the expedition. The Burmese bodyguard waited on the frontier for three months, and then returned to the Royal palace at Mandelay. Calcutta influence was at work. The survey which had been commenced under the auspices of Lord Cranborne was abruptly broken off; and instead of the direct route being pursued, orders were given by Sir John Lawrence for the survey of another route, proceeding by the Irawadee through the Burman capital to Bamau. It is true that this route starts from Rangoon; but as a means of opening up to England and India the commerce of Western China, it must for ever remain perfectly useless. There are real political difficulties in the way here, as well as those that are physical. The King of Burmah has no objection to our passing across a remote corner of his empire, like that where the south-eastern Shan States are situated; but, in common with his Ministers of State, he unquestionably views with apprehension—though he may strive to conceal the feeling—the prospect of our commerce being carried through the heart of his empire and under the very walls of his capital. But if his Majesty were ever so willing, there are certain physical obstacles, permanent and decisive. From Rangoon to Bamau is at least 900 miles, while from Rangoon to Kiang-hung (where the Chinese are ready to meet us) is only 500. Neither is Bamau the end of the longer route. Arrived at that point, enormous mountains have to be crossed, where only strings of mules can be expected to go; and, when the passage over the frontier is accomplished, the entry into China is made in a mountainous and unsuitable part. The attempt to survey the ground from Bamau into China has just been made, and has signally failed. If success were to attend it, even in the faintest degree, the chances are that the project would then develop itself into something altogether different from that which now appears. It would be proposed that a line should be carried from Calcutta by way of Dacca, Munnepore, and the north of Burmah proper, to Bamau, and thence into China. Yet to think of constructing a railway, or even making a decent road, across such a mountainous region, infested with barbarous tribes, is pronounced by those who know anything of the country as utterly absurd. Intercourse there might be during the dry season, but certainly not commerce, and above all not British commerce. The Chinese armies, when invading India, have never attempted to cross by this route, and we may be sure that they knew whether or not it was practicable. The engineer of the recent expedition has of course sent in his report to the Government, and it is well known that although the document is as mildly drawn as possible, yet it admits enough of the facts to show that the Bamau route is in every sense ineligible for the great purpose which it ought to serve, if it serves any at all. On the other hand, the route from Pegu to Kiang-hung has hitherto stood the test of every inquiry, and there seems to be no doubt it is the route above all others which will give to British interests that position which is requisite alike to the progress of our commerce and the security of our possessions.

Tables showing the Length in Feet of a Degree, Minute, and Second of Latitude and Longitude, with the corresponding number of Statute Miles in each Degree of Latitude; and the Number of Minutes of Latitude or Nautic Miles contained in a Degree of Longitude under each Parallel of Latitude, for every Ten Minutes of the Quadrant. By R. C. Carrington, F.R.G.S., of the Hydrographic Department of the Admiralty, Whitehall. London: J. D. Potter, 31, Poultry.—The title of these tables (which are an extension of the Ordnance Geodetical Tables) explains their value as well as anything we can write. Nautical surveyors—for the proportionate length of the longitude to any latitude, and for the exact measurement in feet of the minute of latitude—will find them extremely useful. Chart and map projectors will be saved much time and trouble, as for large scale projections the columns showing the lengths in feet of the minutes of latitude and longitude, could be used, while the proportion of nautic miles to the degree of longitude could be adopted for small scales. The tables are carefully executed and well printed in the old type.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST (IN LIQUIDATION).

A meeting of the creditors of this undertaking, convened by the Creditors' Committee, was held on the 20th. inst., at the Guildhall Tavern. The Lord Mayor occupied the chair.

The report of the committee, which was taken as read, states, with regard to the pending litigation, that they have endeavoured to ascertain in what possible way it can benefit either the shareholders of the corporation or the creditors, who are admittedly such, and that the conclusion they have arrived at is, that its only result can be to diminish by legal and other expenses the assets, which, with the amount estimated to be realised from the uncalled capital of £15 per share, are not now sufficient to pay the debts. Hence the effect of continuing the litigation must, so far as the shareholders are concerned, result in calling up the whole £15 per share at once, and, as regards the creditors, in preventing them from receiving a further dividend for an indefinite period. The committee think this is eminently a case for some concession on both sides, and that the shareholders should voluntarily assist the creditors to arrive at some basis upon which it could be settled without further contention. The present debts ranking for dividend are about £2,538,000, and the balance now due thereon is about £1,213,000, while the total assets available for immediate division would be £710,000, which would pay the 10s. in the pound to those creditors who have not yet received the first dividend, and a further dividend of about 5s. 9d. in the pound to all creditors, 4s. of which could be distributed almost immediately, and the balance, allowing time for collecting and completing arrangements, in about six months. After paying the 5s. 9d. there would remain a balance of debt of about £515,000. The remaining assets, carefully managed, would probably yield further dividends of about 2s. to 2s. 3d. in the pound on the original debts, but this latter result would necessarily occupy time.

Mr. Macnair moved, "That this meeting, having duly considered the statement submitted to them by the committee, and being satisfied that the pending litigation between the old and new shareholders will, if continued, keep their affairs open for an indefinite period, while the expenses must come out of the funds of the estate in which the creditors are solely interested (as in no event can the shareholders, even if successful in their litigation, get back anything after payment up of the full liability on their shares), are of opinion that it is to the interest of the creditors to agree to a fair compromise, based upon a speedy payment of a sum of not less than 17s. 6d. in the pound on their debts, without interest; and that it be referred back to the same committee (with power to add to their number) to take all such steps as may be necessary or proper to give effect to this resolution."

Mr. Lawrence seconded the motion.

Mr. Holyland thought that if a committee were appointed it should have power to accept 17s., as that might be obtained out of the old call.

Several creditors expressed an opinion that it was very unusual for creditors to propose a compromise to shareholders.

The resolution was, after some discussion, carried unanimously.

Captain Ingledue moved, "That in the event of no compromise being come to the committee be requested to take all necessary steps to press on the legal proceedings between the old and new shareholders, and otherwise to act in the matter as they may be advised, in order to bring about as speedy a winding-up of the affairs as may be practicable under such circumstances."

The resolution was seconded and carried.

The following resolution was also adopted:—"That the committee be requested to support the application for a call of the full amount of the uncalled liability on the shares, to come on before the Right Hon. the Master of the Rolls on the 30th inst., and to press for the speedy enforcement thereof, unless terms of compromise satisfactory to the committee and liquidators, or other representatives of the shareholders, as suggested by the preceding resolutions, be offered."

A subscription of a farthing in the pound upon the debt having been decided upon to meet the expenses of the committee,

The proceedings were brought to a close with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

INVESTMENTS IN CEYLON.

A Ceylon merchant writes as follows to the Editor of the Money Market Review:—

"Sir,—Permit me to draw the attention of capitalists in England to the very favourable opportunity there is at present for remittances to Ceylon for purposes of investment, by the shipment of British sovereigns overland, which command a premium of seven per cent., and will very probably continue to be readily saleable at that figure for some months to come. The freight and insurance charges do not exceed 2½ per cent., I believe.

"Those who like low interest can obtain 5 per cent. per annum by depositing their money either with the Oriental Bank or the Bank of Madras in Colombo, and 6 per cent. from the Chartered Mercantile; while those who prefer higher rates will be able to command from 7 to 10 per cent. by lending out upon the primary mortgage of house property. For the latter purpose a good agent is necessary; but one can easily be found among the respectable mercantile firms here. The system of registration is all that can be desired, and with ordinary care no loss need be incurred; for the Government Savings Bank and Loan Board, which lend out all their means to the public on the security of house property, have never lost any amount worth mentioning.

"It should not be overlooked, that while exchange is favourable for remittances to Ceylon, it is against remittances from Ceylon. Investors, therefore, must be prepared to wait for a favourable opportunity (by the turn of the exchanges), both for the receipt of interest as well as for the return of their capital when they withdraw it from the colony."

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

The interim or half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China was held at the London Tavern, on the 21st inst., under the presidency of Mr. T. A. MITCHELL, M.P.

The notice calling the meeting having been read,

The CHAIRMAN said on that occasion the board of directors had to confine itself to one resolution. It was simply a half-yearly meeting for the purpose of declaring an interim dividend, and no accounts or report were submitted. The resolution he had to propose would no doubt suggest itself to the shareholders, as it had been foreshadowed in the notices published in the City article of the Morning Post, Times, Daily News, and other daily papers, in accordance with a wish expressed by a shareholder at a former meeting, that so soon as the board decided upon the dividend a notification of the amount proposed should be forwarded to all the papers for publication. The board of directors had gone most carefully into the accounts, and examined the position of the bank very closely, and rose from the inspection with much gratification and renewed confidence in the bank. They were able, after a rigid inspection of the books and accounts, to declare a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax. He considered he might fairly congratulate the shareholders upon those results, and the general position of the bank, after it had passed through three years of the most unexampled panic in the East—having done so with capital intact and credit unimpaired, and that, too, while paying an honestly earned dividend of 5 per cent. The board were now in a position to increase the dividend 1 per cent. They might have proposed a higher rate of dividend, but the board thought that it would be right to begin to rebuild that which had been trenched upon, and that which they had promised to reinstate at the earliest possible moment—namely, the reserve fund. There were two essentials necessary for a bank to continue prosperous—they were credit and the reserve fund. The bank had its capital intact at the close of a crisis which had wrecked many similar institutions, and its credit had never suffered; but to meet contingencies the reserve fund had been drawn upon; and the board, finding they had done a good business, had, whilst increasing the dividend 1 per cent, borne in mind the impaired reserve fund of the bank, and though it was impossible for him to give the exact figures at that time, yet he was at liberty to say that the board had amply provided for everything; and at the close of the year, when the accounts of the twelve months came under consideration, the board would be able to recommend a very handsome addition to the reserve fund out of the profits of the year. The bank was doing a sound business, and he was very happy to say that the directors had nothing of an unpleasant nature to communicate to the shareholders. A certain number of the old bad debts were still outstanding, but he was glad to be in a position to say that they were being gradually diminished both in number and amount. The amount, looked at and compared with the bank's capital and the securities held, was a mere trifle. The board had gone through the bad debts again, and found that their former estimates of loss were correct in the main, there being now only a few hundreds difference, and those few hundreds, he was happy to inform the shareholders, were in favour of the bank; so that if the board of directors had erred at all they had erred on the right side, and could not be accused by business men of being too sanguine and looking at things in too rosy a tint in a time of depression; but, on the contrary, they had been prepared for the very worst. To that general rule there could be, and was only one exception. This bank was a creditor of a large corporation—the Commercial Bank of India and the East—which had gone into liquidation, and was found to be a very complicated affair. The liquidators had already paid 10s. in the pound, and had got something further in hand to distribute; but, unfortunately, there were two classes of shareholders in the corporation—namely, the old and new—and these two bodies had been litigating one with another, to the damage of their mutual interests and the advantage of none but the lawyers. That asset the directors had put down as being worth 20s. in the pound, and if it did not realise that it would be the exception to the rule, but the board still thought their valuation of that asset the correct one. In conclusion, he had only to congratulate the shareholders upon the improved dividend, the improved business, and—he would not say improved credit of the bank, for that had never been impaired, but improved position of the bank generally, and finish by moving the declaration of a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, and announce his readiness to afford any further information which the shareholders might require.

Mr. JONES briefly seconded the motion.

Captain F. GARRATT asked whether there would in future be any objection to stating in the circulars the amount of dividend to be declared

The CHAIRMAN said there would be no objection to give in the circulars the information the hon. shareholder wished prior to the interim meeting.

In reply to further questions,

The CHAIRMAN said the directors, whilst building up the reserve fund, would not, in their anxiety do so, sacrifice the interest of the present for the benefit of posterity.

The motion was unanimously agreed to, and the customary compliments having been paid to the chairman, directors, managers, and staff, the proceedings were brought to a close.

Monetary and Commercial.

—o—

A meeting was held on the 22nd of the Oriental Bank Corporation, when an interim dividend of £1 10s. per share was declared for the half-year ended June last, free of income-tax, being at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The net profits for the period named reached £102,569.

At a special general meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, an interim dividend of 6 per cent. per annum was declared for the half-year ending the 30th of June last. The chairman, Mr. Mitchell, M.P., took occasion to announce that, notwithstanding the long-continued crisis in the East, the capital of the bank remained intact; that there was a prospect of improving dividends; that the reserve fund was to be revived, and that a considerable balance had been carried forward after providing for the 6 per cent. dividend on the half-year.

A meeting was held on the 20th inst. of the creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East, when the committee was instructed to endeavour to effect a compromise with the shareholders. It was also resolved to accept a sum of not less than 17s. 6d. in the pound without interest, to be paid within a certain time, to be hereafter fixed; and in the event of the shareholders declining to accede to this arrangement, it was determined to enforce all claims in full, and to support the application for a call of the whole liability on the shares, to be heard before the Master of the Rolls on the 30th inst. A full report of the proceedings will be found in another column.

A meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Salavy and Co., merchants, of London and Marseilles, chiefly in the silk trade who failed on the 5th inst., was held on the 21st inst., when a statement submitted by Messrs. Lovering and Minton, the accountants, showed liabilities (in addition to £60,274 to secured creditors) amounting to £22,940, besides commitments of £25,344 on bills under discount, of which latter £14,664 are expected to rank on the estate. To meet these the assets, even under the most favourable estimate, amount only to £8,228. After some discussion it was resolved to appoint a committee of three of the principal creditors to institute a close investigation, and to report to a future meeting.

The commission appointed by the Legislative Council of India to inquire into the failure of the Bank of Bombay has arrived in this country, and the inquiry will be resumed forthwith at the India Office. Under an Act passed in the last session of Parliament the commissioners are empowered to examine the witnesses in this country on oath. The general object of the inquiry is to ascertain the liability or otherwise of the Government of Bombay, through the directors officially appointed, to the shareholders for their losses, and it is expected to occupy some time. Several witnesses of high position will be examined, and among others Sir Bartle Frere. The Government and the shareholders will be alike represented by counsel—the former by the Attorney-General, while Mr. Vernon Harcourt, Q.C., has been specially retained to lead for the shareholders.

The Crown Agents for the Colonies lately announced their intention to receive tenders on every succeeding Thursday, commencing with the 22nd inst., until further notice, for bills of exchange on the Government of Ceylon. At the first biddings, which took place on the 22nd, 250,000 rupees were disposed of; the minimum was fixed at 1s. 11d., and the whole amount was taken above that rate.

The biddings for bills on India took place on the 21st, at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs. 18,80,000, and to Madras, Rs. 1,20,000. The minimum price was fixed as before, viz., at 1s. 10⅛d. on both Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11⅛d. will receive about 30 per cent.; those above will be allotted in full. These results indicate that the demand for means of remittance to India continues upon a steady scale.

Silver has improved in value ⅛d., having been sold at 5s. 0⅛d. per ounce for shipment to India, and as there is only a limited amount of the metal on the market, there is an expectation that the price will further advance, although it is too low at present to admit of any importation from the Continent. Mexican dollars are quoted 4s. 11d. per ounce, which is also a rise of ⅛d.

We hear that an offer of $200,000 has been made for Messrs. Dent and Co.'s Hong Kong property.

The firm of Sillar and Bateman, tea and colonial brokers, of 6, Great Tower-street, having been dissolved, Mr. J. C. Sillar has issued a circular announcing that he will continue to carry on the business at the same address.

Messrs. Letts, Son, and Co. have issued their well-known diaries for the year 1869. They are in upwards of 100 different forms and sizes, and are as usual replete with useful information, corrected up to the latest possible date.

At the meeting of the Singapore Gas Company, held on the 27th Oct., the profits for the half-year were stated at £1,060, and dividends of 7½ and 4 per cent. per annum were declared, respectively, on the preference and original shares.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth freights to the Eastern Ports are without material alteration, and tonnage is plentiful. Coal freights from the Northern outports are in one or two instances a little easier, and vessels have, since our last issue, come forward more freely.

Current rates of freight for vessels on the berth:—To Yokohama: 40s weight, 45s. meast. To Nagasaki: 45s. weight, 50s. meast. To Shanghai: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Hong Kong: 40s. weight, 30s. meast. To Singapore: 30s. weight or meast. To Penang: 30s. weight or meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 35s. meast. At New York to China: $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear on Tyne per keel.—For Yokohama, £45. For Shanghai: £45. For Hong Kong: £36. For Singapore: £27. For Galle: £24. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton. — For Yokohama, £2 5s. For Shanghai: £2 8s. For Hong Kong: £1 16s. For Manila: £1 15s. For Singapore: £1 7s. For Galle: £1 2s. 6d.

The Admiralty have invited tenders for the conveyance of the following stores:—250 tons navy provisions, &c., and 2 tons (light) rockets (combustibles), to be shipped from the Thames to Hong Kong.

CASUALTIES.

The Belted Will, Locke, which sailed from London, for Kong Kong, Oct. 10, arrived at Falmouth on the 18th with slight damage, having been in collision with a vessel the previous night off the Start.

A telegram from Shanghai, via Kiatcha, dated Sept. 23, announces "Ajax, steamer, sunk at her anchorage."

The Cattofield, Jane, which sailed from Leith, for Penang, on the 22nd June, has been burnt at sea; crew landed at Algoa Bay, Sept. 12.

The Australian, from Newport to Singapore, has put back on the Westmud Point, entrance of the Usk River, leaky, and with crew refusing to proceed.

The Southland (barq.), Laurens, from Cronstadt to the River Amoor, with flour, arrived at Copenhagen, Oct. 27, with loss of sprit and bowstems, having been run foul of in the Baltic.

The Johanne Auguste, Herksen, from Bangkok, arrived at Bremen, Oct. 25, with loss of both anchors and chains, and slight damage to her head.

The Elcano, Brown, which sailed from London, Oct. 16, for Cardiff and Hong Kong, put back to Gravesend on the 28th with loss of sails.

The Chaturanga, Hardy, which sailed from Cardiff, Oct. 8, for Singapore, arrived at Milford on the 8th leaky, and with loss of topgallantmast, bulwarks, &c.; after undergoing repairs she sailed thence on the 27th, but put back again on the 28th.

The Rosa del Turia, from Liverpool to Manila, put back Oct. 30.

MISCELLANEOUS.

At TENERIFFE.—Copernicus (s.), Maxwell, from China, and left Oct. 10 for London.

At MADEIRA.—Niger (s.s.), from London, and left Oct. 9 for Singapore and China.

At TABLE BAY.—Sept. 10, Bezaleel, Challis, from Cardiff, for China; 14, F. A. Palmer, McCaslin, from New York, for Hong Kong.

At SIMON'S BAY.—Sept. 4, Gnat, Theobald, from London, for Singapore.

At ALGOA BAY.—Sept. 9, Annie, Morrison, from Philadelphia, and sailed 13 for Singapore.

At MAURITIUS.—Aug. 22, Reine des Anges, Brun, from Saigon, Sept. 6; St. Charles, Jaffrain, from Saigon; 8, Norham, Henderson, from Foochow, to land some mutinous seamen, sailed 14 for London; 11, Nestor (s.s.), Dronning, sailed for Singapore, China, &c.

Off ASCENSION.—Sept. 21, Verena, from Colombo, for London; Gossamer, from Shanghai, for London.

At ST. HELENA.—Sept. 17, Eena, Brumell, from Ceylon, and sailed 18 for London; Lochleven Castle, McGowan, from Singapore, and sailed 18 for Liverpool; 24, Aunt Lizzie, Proctor, from Saigon; 10, Lady Alice, from Bangkok and Singapore, and sailed 11 for Falmouth.

At TABLE BAY.—Sept. 18, F. A. Palmer, Caston, sailed for Hong Kong.

At ALGOA BAY.—Sept. 9, Amie, Morrison, from Philadelphia, and sailed 11 for Shanghai, not the Annie, as before reported.

LAUNCHES.

On the 27th ult. there was launched from the building yard of Messrs. Royden Brothers, Baffin-street, Liverpool, a fine iron barque of 800 tons burthen, which has been built for Messrs. Duncan, Fox, and Co., of Liverpool, and is intended for the East India trade. She is clipper-built, with very fine lines. Her extreme length is 181 feet

Digitized by Google

8 inches; breadth of beam, 31 feet 8 inches; and depth of hold, 10 feet 10 inches. The vessel was named Aculeo.

Messrs. Steele and Co., of Greenock, launched on the 29th ult. from their east yard an iron ship of 835 tons register, named by Miss Beeston, of Finnart, the Araby Maid, for Messrs. Willam Thomsen and Co, Leith, to be engaged in the East India trade. Her dimensions are:—Length, 185 feet; beam, 35 feet 9 inches; and depth, 19 feet 6 inches.

Messrs. Scott and Co. have launched on the Clyde a handsome ship for Mr. William Orr, Greenock, which was named Grecian by Miss Aggie Orr, daughter of the owner. The Grecian is a vessel of 1,265 tons register, is 224 feet long, 36¼ feet broad, and 22½ feet depth of hold. She will be commanded by Captain W. Guthrie, late of the Oriana, and will be employed in the East India trade.

CHINA OCEAN RACING.—ANOTHER CLOSE RACE.—Two more of the China tea clippers have arrived in London, viz., the Titania and Forward Ho, but although making comparatively long passages, they have been most remarkably close. They left Shanghai on the same day, June 12, and arrived at Deal, after a passage of 124 days, on the same day, the 16th of October. The Forward Ho is 1,050 tons, a composite vessel, built by Messrs. Stephen and Sons, Glasgow, in 1867, for Messrs. R. Cath and Sons, Aberdeen, and the Titania is 1,200 tons, a composite vessel, built in 1866 by Messrs. R. Steele and Co., for Messrs. Phillips, Shaw, Lowther, and Maxton, London.

NEW STEAMERS FOR THE YANG TSZE RIVER.—We understand that two new steamers, the Walrus and Nautilus, are being fitted out at New York to supplement the fleet of the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company. They are both described as very fine vessels, the dimensions being as follows:—Length, 265 feet; beam, 40 feet; extreme breadth, outside paddle-boxes, 70 feet; depth of hold, 15 feet; measurement tonnage, 1,634. They have beam engines, with 62-inch cylinders and 12 feet stroke. The loaded draft is only 7½ feet.

The steamer Copernicus arrived from Shanghai on the 21st, having made the passage out and home in 134 days' steaming—66 days out and 68 days homeward. This steamer is one of the Liverpool, Brazil, and River Plate line, to which trade she is now returning.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all mater for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use f for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

BISHOP'S

GRANULAR

EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA,

INVENTED, INTRODUCED, AND PREPARED BY

ALFRED BISHOP, Manufacturing Chemist,

17 & 18, SPECK'S FIELDS, MILE END NEW TOWN, LONDON.

THIS perfectly white and delicately clean granulated preparation possesses remarkable effervescent qualities, which far surpasses the ordinary Seidlitz Powder in its cooling, refreshing, and mild aperient properties, as well as in its flavour as a saline draught. It is particularly well adapted for women and young children, on account of its most agreeable flavour and mild effect.

N.B. The genuine has the name BISHOP upon the Bottle, also the Name and Trade Mark upon the Label, and is sold in convenient sizes, and secured in so perfect a manner that it may be shipped with safety to any part of the world.

Manufacturer also of Granulated and Effervescent Carbonate of Iron, Citrate of Iron, Citrate of Quinine, Citrate of Quinine and Iron, Carbonate of Lithia in Tubes, Citrate of Lithia, Vichy Salt, Seidlitz Mixture and all other Granulated Preparations.

IN CHANCERY.—CAUTION.—BISHOP'S GRANULAR EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA.—Mr. Bishop, having discovered that the Label which he has used for the last five years was being imitated recently applied to the COURT OF CHANCERY for an INJUNCTION to restrain such imitation. The injunction was immediately granted, and the defendant was ordered to pay all Mr. Bishop's costs and destroy the Labels complained of.

Mr. Bishop is determined to stop the imitation of his abel, and will, without notice or delay, take proceedings in Chancery against any person who may copy or colourably imitate the same.

THE MAILS, &c.

The present inward mail, bringing a week's later advices from China, &c., has come in somewhat unexpectedly, not having been telegraphed as usual from Suez. In consequence of this circumstance, and also of our budget of news being a very meagre one, we are compelled to depart in some measure from our usual form of publication.

The next homeward mail will be that leaving Hong Kong on the 2nd October, due here on the 16th inst. The telegrams in advance of it were published in our issue of yesterday.

JAPAN.

The present position of affairs in Japan is well described in the following article from the North China Herald:—

A great change has come within the last two months over the aspect of affairs in Japan. Everything seemed then to promise a speedy return of tranquillity. The southern party were victorious at every point. Stotsbashi had abandoned the contest, given up Yedo, and acquiesced in the decree of banishment pronounced against him, only to be recalled after a merely nominal retirement. And this wise act of leniency promised to remove the chief existing obstacle to a restoration of peace. Aidzu alone remained in the field, and, as we pointed out at the time, "his continued opposition rendered it especially desirable to conciliate the powerful clan Tokugawa by gaining the support of its chiefs. Any considerable success by the northern Daimios would have been a likely signal for attack on the Government troops in Yedo, and for a general uprising, by his partisans, in favour of the ex-Shiogoon." With Stotsbashi in Yedo as a friend of the Mikado, this danger would have been averted. But the new Government stopped short in its wise career of leniency. Instead of carrying out the entire programme—not only relieving Stotsbashi from exile, but summoning him to Kioto and conferring on him high office, they repented of their amnesty almost before it was issued. The ex-Shiogoon was only relieved from compulsory retirement at Mito in order to be banished elsewhere. And the result, which a wiser policy might have averted, is now apparent. The Northern party have gained advantages; they are supported by the Tokugawa clan; they have elected a rival Mikado—uncle of the real one—and have pushed nearly to the gates of Yedo, which the Imperialists seem inclined to abandon. Even the Japan Times, which has been throughout the revolution a warm supporter of the Southern cause, admits this. "The Northern rebels," it says, "are reported to be waiting for the winter, to which they trust for starving out the Mikado's troops; and judging from recent appearances, the possibility of the Imperialists abandoning Yedo is not altogether chimerical. The mint and arsenal have been both transported to Osaka, the greater part of the palaces of the Daimios are dismantled, the hinges and heavy bronze ornaments torn off the doors, and in many cases the inner houses pulled down, and their stone and timber sold to builders." A landslip has caused a huge gap in the wall of the castle, which no attempt is being made to repair. "We shall not be surprised," our contemporary adds, "to find the Mikado's troops leaving the place during the coming winter; but if they do they will probably leave it in ashes, and future visitors to Japan will only be shown the spot where Yedo was." In the meantime, we find the Japan Gazette recording the defection of Chosiu—not only from hearsay, but on the authority of an official document announcing that he had resigned office with the object of retiring to his dominions; and a clue to this defection—for defection it must be considered in the present critical position of affairs—is afforded by a memorial addressed to their chief by a number of Chosiu's retainers, advocating the restoration of the Shiogoonate in the clan of Tokugawa.

The same harsh policy which has encouraged disaffection among the immediate followers of Stotsbashi has tended to strengthen his cause among the independent Daimios. It seemed quite possible, after the first overwhelming success of the Southern party, that a general amnesty would have induced the submission of Aidzu, who has been throughout the most dangerous opponent of the new regime. He it was who urged Stotsbashi to action and commanded his troops at Osaka, and he has since been the life and centre of the rebellious (?) party. When called on to surrender personally to the Mikado, at Kioto, he distinctly declined to incur certain death. He had not, he said, opposed the sacred authority of the Mikado, but had supported his lawful suzerain against the encroachments of the Southern party, who had obtained possession of the Mikado's person, and coerced his actions. The answer of the new Government was an order to the Prince of Sendai—who had been thus far quiescent—to oust Aidzu from his territory, and take possession of it in the name of the Mikado. Sendai was no doubt suspected, and the Government, preferring an open enemy to an uncertain friend, applied this test. We remarked at the time that it was a risky policy; that the result was just as likely to be to drive Sendai into the arms of the enemy as to secure his friendship. And so the result proved. Instead of attacking his friend and neighbour he joined the latter in open opposition, preferring, if he were obliged to fight, to fight on the side to which his convictions pointed. Around these two chiefs others appear to have gathered. Many subordinate members of the Tokugawa clan swell their ranks; and the Prince of Mito, a near relative of Stotsbashi, is declared to have given them armed help. They were found powerfully posted, a few weeks ago, at Nee-e-gata; and a Southern force sent against them was declared to have joined their ranks. The balance seems to hang just now very uncertainly between the two parties. A short while ago the Southerners were decidedly in the ascendant, and the Northern cause seemed nearly extinct. The star of their fortunes has, however, again risen, while that of the South has seemed gradually to wane.

YOKOHAMA.

A correspondent writing from this port says :—"There is quite a lull in the political world at present, so doubtless the same cause has affected fighting as money-making. There have lately been strenuous efforts to cut off all communication throughout the country; and legions of native newspapers, pamphlets, &c., have died a violent death by prohibition. Europeans are always able to obtain better information than the native officials like—although when it has to be paid for great care is necessary, or you will be told to the full extent of the value of your money in yarns. However, amongst the 'Favoured Nations' each faction has its partisans, whether official or civil—French or American, or British. The uncle of the Mikado having been coerced into usurping the Imperial authority has issued numerous proclamations to his nephew to lay down his authority, to the several princes holding aloof ordering them to remain neutral, and to the officials of the southern clique, ordering them to return peacefully to Kioto; and he has promoted to high rank all here who have been fighting for the Tokugawa family. How this is all to end is a mystery to all; and the peculiar intricacy of Japanese politics leaves it not possible to any European to disentangle the gordian knot of diplomatic art of liars and assassins. Each prince grows friendly or unfriendly to relatives and aliens alternately, and his allies in one skirmish often prove his opponents in the next. One thing is clearly to be seen, all are fighting for a share of the 'Oyster,' and by-and-by the Mikado and Tokugawa clans will only have a shell a piece to quarrel over. Whether La Belle France will lie quiet much longer is yet to be seen; for it is hard to say which of the two, Russia or France, is most eager to 'colonise' Japan. The race for commercial importance lies between England and America. It is to be regretted that Europeans have partially and only indirectly meddled. It is the half doing the job that is the injury—it should be strict neutrality or else decisive interference in the interests of civilisation, and not of conquest and glory (?) to the party intermeddling."

SHANGHAI.

From this port we have a week's later news than by the mail delivered yesterday—namely, to Sept. 19th. The outward mail of July 31, with London telegrams to Aug. 17, arrived out on the 13th September. London telegrams to Aug. 25 had been received by the Kiachta route. The following items of news are from the Supreme Court and Consular Gazette:—

H.E. the Hon. J. Ross Browne, the new American Minister to Peking, left on the 16th inst., in the Manchu, for Tientsin and the capital.

The Yangchow affair, which according to last accounts was progressing favourably, has come to a very unsatisfactory conclusion. The reception given by Tseng-kwo-fan to Mr. Medhurst was of a very complimentary nature. A line of mandarins, from Red Buttons downward, stood on each side of the pathway to the Yamun, and Tseng-kwo-fan came out to meet the Consul at the entrance. The terms proposed in settlement of the difficulty were that the Literati who instigated the matter should be punished; that the men who burnt the house should be forced to pay an indemnity; the men imprisoned for letting the house released; and that a proclamation should be issued instructing the people at Yangchow that foreigners had a perfect right to live there, and must not be molested in any way. The Chefoo of Yanchow for some time stated his inability to accede to all except the release of the prisoners, but ultimately, it is understood, the whole was likely to be agreed to. When Mr. Medhurst found that he could not settle the matter at Yangchow he arranged that the Chefoo should come up to Nanking with him and his escort; but upon his parole to meet him at Kwachow let him go his own way. He did not turn up till some time after Mr. Medhurst arrived at Nanking, and apologised for having missed him by an accident. The Rinaldo left Nanking without Mr. Medhurst, who was left to finish his negotiations in a house-boat. This circumstance is attributable to Mr. Medhurst's being detained beyond the expected time; and to Captain Bush's being in an extreme state of sickness.

Up to this point the negotiation had proceeded very favourably, but on the departure of the Rinaldo Tseng began to get obstinate, and ultimately refused all the terms proposed. He stated that Literati were a respectable class, and he could not punish any of them; also that the Chefoo had not done anything which called for punishment; he would issue a proclamation that missionaries had the right to reside at Yangchow, but would not have it cut in stone as had been proposed; and in lieu of paying the amount claimed as compensation over Tls. 2,000 he offered to give as a charity to the missionaries the sum of Tls. 1,000; which offer was of course refused by Mr. Medhurst. The matter will now have to be referred to Peking.

In regard to this affair the North China Daily News has a strange story, which, however, we hear is entirely authentic. Upon the principle that smoke does not exist without some fire, the above paper states that there was a foundation, though strangely slight, for the queer accusations by which the outrage was excited, and explains the matter as follows:—Some weeks' ago a man passing through the east gate of Yangchow with a basket on his arm was asked by the guard what he had in it; he replied, salt fish. The questioner remarked that it seemed a strangely heavy load, and asked to see it. The real contents proved to be a dead baby. The man explained that it was one which had died under the care of the Catholic missionaries, and that he was carrying it out thus secrtely rather than in a coffin in order to save the worry of an inquest. Inquiries were of course instituted, but it was found that the body had not been mutilated, that the heart, lungs and liver, which missionaries are supposed peculiarly to affect—were all present, and that the child had been really carefully tended. The attempted secrecy, however, suggested still further enquiry as to the number of children that had died lately under the hands of the Missionaries. It was found that twelve had died within the last year, and their remains were exhumed in order to see whether mutilation had been practised in their case. It was found that their bodies were also intact; so all hope of forming a substantial charge on this ground was lost.

Tseng-kwo fan has been appointed to the Vice-Royalty of Chilhi, and will be superseded by the present acting Viceroy of Fohkien, Mah.

The local papers have been chiefly filled with a controversy concerning the management of the S. S. N. Company, which has been vigorously assailed, chiefly upon the ground of its endeavouring to obtain an undue command over the river traffic.

It has come out that Chun, the sitting magistrate at the mixed Court, has not yet received his appointment of Tungche from the Peking authorities, who make excuses that the land regulations—in which the new scheme of a single magistrate for the whole of the foreign settlement was devised—have not yet come into force.

A serious collision has taken place between the steamer Kiushu and the North German schooner Japan at Woosung. The steamer, in endeavouring to avoid a Chinese junk, came upon the schooner, which was run ashore, and will, it is feared, become a total wreck. An applicaiion has been made to the Mixed Court for an order to detain the junk, which was first struck by the Kiushu, as from her position at anchor, and her not having any lights up at the time, she is alleged to have been the causa causans of the accident.

We also regret to have to record a very serious accident which has happened to the Ocean Steam Company's vessel Ajax, and which has resulted in her becoming half sunk in the river, although hopes are entertained that she will be recovered. We are not in possession of full particulars, but we understand that the accident resulted from the screw and a portion of the main shaft being detached, and the unexpectedly high tide having carried them away and filled the after compartment with water. Divers have already been sent to the vessel, and no exertions are being spared to right the ship. It is not yet known whether it is likely she will have to go into dock.

A gorgeous procession which has been got up by the Ningpomen in this settlement has been the subject of some notice. The North China Daily News describes its progress by day as follows:—"A depot of paper money and paper clothes was formed in Smith's Market, and the procession went forth to collect the spirits who are supposed to throng the streets. Paper images of people of every grade of society are carried round—even foreigners not being forgotten. Money and clothes, which are clutched by the hungry and shivering ghosts, are burned as it goes along; for burning is needed to fit them for spiritual use. Those who fail to get sufficient for their need in this way follow the images—which they appear to regard as an invitation—to the central depot, where they can obtain all they need for the ensuing year. Once every year this process takes place. The ghosts are thereby rendered happy and comfortable, and deprived of all excuse for causing sickness and misfortune, as they would otherwise surely do."

The Recorder describes the night view of the same exhibition:—"An immense crowd of Chinese turned out to see it, and followed it with intense interest. The most prominent object was the steamer called the Ice King, which was a perfect model of an American river boat, and was lighted up very cleverly, the walking beam and wheels moving. We understand this is emblematical of the hopes of the Ningpomen to return to their homes by this kind of conveyance, and that it takes the place formerly occupied by the model of a Ningpo junk. The various allegorical groups were very attractive, especially one where four women beautifully dressed were borne along in a car, one of them high up in the air and apparently supported only by one foot. The dragons, about ten feet long, were made very impressive by lamps inside them."

The Evening Express states that piratical robberies are becoming frequent upon the Tai-Hoo lake, the depredators being chiefly discharged soldiers, and mentions an ingenious ruse whereby some of these rascals secured the cash of a pawnbroker in that neighbourhood. They entered the house under the garb of mandarins, and were of course received with due respect; and afterwards, having tied up the pawnbroker and his assistants, and frightened a youth into confessing where the cash was kept, they made off with the booty.

We are in receipt of advices from Chefoo to the 9th inst. At that time all was going on quietly, and the foreigners pushing their fortunes at the gold diggings seemed to be flourishing, as the storekeepers were supplying their wants, and this they would be little likely to do unless the purchasers of goods could pay. There is a report that a Chinaman working at the Pingtu mines has made 5,000 dols. in a fortnight. Our correspondent cannot vouch for its truth, but on the other hand he has no actual reason to doubt it.

The North China Herald gives the following account of the accident to the Ajax:—"We regret to have to record a serious accident to the steamer Ajax, the consequences of which are still uncertain. Her shaft had been disconnected on Wednesday in the course of some repairs, which were not completed. In the evening accordingly the screw was secured with temporary lashings only, with a view to renewal of work on the morrow. The strength of the tide, however, appears to have moved the screw, which eventually worked out, thus leaving open the hole in the stern, through which the water of course rushed rapidly in. At midnight the vessel was observed to be sinking; but the hole could not be got at, and nothing could be done. At daybreak her stern was resting on the mud, the forepart of the ship to midships being out of the water. The high tide, however, completely covered her, and last evening she had fairly sunk. Divers were engaged first thing in the morning to plug the hole. As soon as this is accomplished pumps will be applied to get out the water, and it is hoped to raise her. The chief danger seems to be of her enormous weight causing her to sink deeply in the mud, which will also rapidly silt round her, and of course tend to hold her down. She had very little cargo on board."

The following items are also from the Herald:—

We have received a copy of the fourth "Annual Report of the Hankow Medical Mission Hospital," which seems less interesting than usual, containing nothing but bare statistics of disease treated; 6,661 patients had been treated during nine months ended 30th June last. The attendance of a larger proportion of women is the most remarkable feature of the year. We regret to learn that the hospital had to be closed for three months, owing to the illness of the medical officer in charge.

A Chefoo correspondent writes that twenty-five diggers are now at a flat about 130 li from Chefoo, and seem pleased with their prospect.

A long account has come to hand of outrageous conduct by an official in Shantung, similar to that which has lately caused so much difficulty at Yangchow. A family of Chinese converts gives a temple to be used as a Christian chapel. The local mandarin flogs and imprisons some, inducing others to recant, and ignores the validity of the gift.

The News Letter gives the following account of a piracy on the Yangtsze:—

On the night of the 4th September a party of disbanded soldiers attacked a Government junk, loaded with treasure, three miles above Hankow on the Yangtsze; the crew fought bravely to save the money, Tls. 30,000, but the thieves carried off Tls. 13,000. A teacher (literary man) has been arrested, and has confessed, under threats of torture, that he is the head-man of a gang the authorities have been long looking after. Tls. 3,300 have been recovered, and it is thought the balance will be forthcoming.—The Yangtsze is rising rapidly, contrary to all predictions, Chinese and others; the indicator on the hulk of the S. S. N. Co. marks 42 feet.

The following is the "Address" of the directors of the Shanghai S.N. Company, commented on above:—

The directors do not propose to present to the shareholders of the company a report for the six months ending 30th June, leaving it for the general meeting at the end of the year, in accordance with the precedent established in the last two years.

The profits of the business warrant the payment of a dividend of 6 per cent. for the six months, which, in accordance with the powers vested in them, the directors have the pleasure to declare, and it will be immediately paid by the agents.

It seems desirable at a period when so much attention has been drawn to the field of the company's operations and so many misapprehensions exist regarding its future policy and prospects, to give some statement of the principles upon which the company is conducted.

From the first this company sought the favour of the public, and published by word and act that upon that it rested its entire dependence for success, and not upon the personal influence of its managers.

That favour it has always had from the Chinese, and though for a time in the days of its adversity it could not claim the decided support of the European public, on the whole, it has received from that also fair consideration.

This principle will govern the future equally with the past. The directors and managers of the company understand that there is a public trust involved, and that lasting prosperity cannot be had if that trust is neglected.

During the last eighteen months the comparatively high rates which have ruled were the just and legitimate consequence of the events of the preceding years. A long period of loss to the carriers resulted in a concentration which alone rendered an advance possible, and the company was justified in availing itself of its dearly bought advantages to secure and consolidate its position.

It is, however, vain for shareholders to look for excessive and unusual interest on their investments in this species of enterprise in this country. Capital, energy, and ability are too abundant in the European communities to render it possible for any branch of trade to be largely remunerative without attracting competition.

With these precautions, and with rates of freight reduced to a point which will not allow of tempting returns to new adventurers, the shareholders will find themselves possessed of a permanent investment, as certan to give a yearly return of about 12 per cent. as any that offer in China.

With regard to increase and extension upon the river, it is not likely there will be a call for outlay for that object for many years. The steamers now running are all sufficient for the requirements of the trade, and, except in the tea or cotton season, seldom go full either up or down.

Even in the extreme hurry of tea freights, at the opening of the Hankow market, lasting, perhaps, three weeks, their capacity proved large enough to bring down the tea without delay, the only overplus being on one occasion at Kiukiang, which was relieved by the service of the spare boat.

The business of the river for steamers has been overrated through many causes, not the least of which is the expectation that they would entirely supersede Chinese carriers.

But even at low rates of freight there is always a large portion of produce which passes to the sea-board through interior channels in small native boats, the Chinese being able to perform water carriage at a cost lower than would be believed by the most economical of Western people.

With regard to the necessity for a reserve, apart from accidents, the shareholders should always be prepared for an opposition, though at present on good terms with the only other company on this route; for in case a new competitor appeared it would not be open for this company to choose between a contest and an agreement, which would allow it to go on at the sacrifice only of a portion of its business.

Such an agreement would be impossible, for at the first promise of an opening, a dozen houses with capital and ability, enough and to spare, stand ready to avail themselves of it. If they should see a third party admitted to an agreement, each would reason that the same timid policy which admitted one would admit another, and there would be a third and a fourth, up to the point where agreements would be impossible, and general and heavy loss the result. There is no room for further competitors in so narrow a field.

The company's agreement with the Union Steam Navigation Company is of a temporary nature, terminating at any time on one month's notice from either side. We have signified our willingness to make it permanent on their entering into an obligation not to extend their line beyond its present capacity. This they have declined, and therefore an opposition from this quarter is not impossible, and should be kept in view.

That company obtained existence and prospered by the fruits of the sacrifices and exertions of the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company.

It would never have been born if the latter had not obtained possession, by friendly negotiations and purchase, of the rights and property of the previous rival occupiers of the route—rights, like its own, created and fairly earned by years of effort, sacrifice, and faithful service to the public.

Believing that a friendly competition is a wholesome check, tending to promote efficiency in one's own service while it satisfies the public mind, this participation, without cost, in the fruits of its enterprise, has not excited the jealousy of this company, and it has sought to cultivate amicable relations.

But though the Union Company may claim what it now stands possessed of, it certainly has no basis of right to require of us an increase in its share of the business of the river, an increase which can only be had at our cost; nor will it be expected that this company, of its own accord, will injure its hard-earned position to increase the power of a possible rival.

With the material now possessed by the company, its incomparable facilities, its organised support among all classes of the mercantile community, it may safely be said that the shareholders need not fear the consequences of any contest likely to offer, beyond the temporary suspension of profits.

The Tientsin route next season is likely to be the object of considerable attention. Freights for a part of the season have been plentiful, and promises have been held out to the public which will naturally attract new comers.

The Company, however, has its own business, which it is likely to keep, and though rates of freight may be reduced to a low point, with its cheap running boats it can probably find a small profit where others lose.

The trade to Tientsin is of a very capricious character, owing chiefly to political troubles, and the seasons are correspondingly uncertain.

The Ningpo route is in the hands of the company altogether, and as it only yields a moderate return on the cost of the boats and premises engaged, it is likely to remain so without opposition. The competition of native boats would prevent any increase in rates of freight or passage, even if it was desirable to make any.

The directors believe that this exposition of the real position of the company in its relation to freights, its rivals, and the public will be acceptable to the shareholders and meet the views of the large majority. It may disappoint the hopes of large dividends entertained by some, but, on the other hand, it should increase their faith and the faith of the public in its permanent prosperity.

THE NEWS FROM CHINA.

THE present mail, as we have stated elsewhere, brings but a meagre budget of news; one item, however, that comes to us from a tolerably authentic source, is worthy of note. It is to the effect that the rumours that have been afloat of late with regard to the opening of several new ports on the China coast are likely to be verified. It is stated that they will be seven in number—three on the Yang-tsze, one on Hainan, one near Saigon, and three others at various parts of the coast, including Wanchow, a most desirable and conveniently situated port between Ningpo and Foochow. This last is certainly likely to prove a boon to commerce, being in close proximity to some important tea districts, besides possessing a large trade in alum, &c., but of some of the others we cannot speak so hopefully. This disposition to open new ports has been confidently spoken of in some quarters as an evidence of a better feeling at Peking, of which Mr. HART gets the credit; and should the information be confirmed, it will, from that point of view, be most satisfactory, as affording hope for a permanent improvement in our relations with the Chinese Government. After all, however, it looks strangely inconsistent in conjunction with the renewed persecution of missionaries, of which each incoming mail brings a dismal catalogue, and the persistent opposition to the construction of roads, railways, and telegraphs. And although the disposition to increase facilities of intercommunication which this opening of new ports would indicate is in one sense gratifying, we cannot banish some serious misgivings as to their effect on the China trade generally. Surely, the career and present condition of Hankow presents little inducement to foreign merchants to colonise any more settlements on that river. Permission to make roads and railways in the interior would be a far more valuable boon than liberty to trade at more points on the coast. As for telegraphs, they seem to be still tabooed, but we hear that they are nevertheless coming into use within the boundaries of the foreign concessions at Shanghai, there being one in operation between Messrs. RUSSELL and Co.'s premises on the English, and the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company's wharf on the French settlement; while another is in course of construction to their dock, a long way down the river on the Hong-que side. This will undoubtedly do good, for it will familiarise the Chinese mind with the utility of the system, and probably prove the "thin end of the wedge," that will ultimately open a way for telegraphic lines into the interior. The value of land in Shanghai is once more on the rise; prospects for a good spring trade are spoken of in a hopeful strain; and altogether the news from this part of China is of a more cheering tone than it has been for a long time.

Messrs. A. Markwald and Co., of Bangkok, have issued a circular announcing the admission of Mr. Wm. Masius as a partner in their firm.

STEAM NAVIGATION IN CHINA.

(NORTH CHINA HERALD.)

We frequently do overlook a change which is taking place gradually under our eyes; but old residents in Shanghai can have hardly failed to notice the rapid growth of steamer traffic from this port, and the number of companies that have been started especially to promote it. Many of us still here remember when lorchas were the fastest means of conveyance between Shanghai and Ningpo; and when a signalman at Chinhai warned these to wait, outside, for a favourable turn in the market. Still more of us have risked our lives in the crazy old Feima, or have luxuriated by contrast in the now extinct Waratah. It seems incredible, but even the William IV. had once a market value; and sundry other extraordinary relics of primeval shipbuilding carried passengers and cargo at irregular intervals, to and from this rising port. The first attempts to improve on this state of things were not financially happy. The Shanghai Steam Navigation Company was long a bye-word for misfortune; and its "China and Japan" sister exploded, after a very brief period of existence. Let us pass over four years and look at the present. We have to count, to arrive at the number of steam lines having head-quarters or stations at this port. Passing by the old Peninsular and Oriental, which is contemporary with even those early days we write of, there are the Messageries Imperiales, the Pacific Mail, and Holt's lines of ocean steamers; the Shanghai Steam Navigation, the Union, and a bantling whose health is yet too delicate for christening, on the Yang-tze; Messrs. Kroes' line to Japan; the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company again, and Messrs. Trautmann's line to the North, besides numerous single steamers which run, comet-like, in eccentric orbits, obeying the influence of the last commercial news. We have become so accustomed to daily communication with Ningpo, that growls both loud and deep were vented, when the S.S.N. withdrew a steamer, after acquiring monopoly of that line; and the northern trade repays, by splendid freight, constant steam communication.

And now we are going to have another company. 'Tis true, it is only an old friend under a new name. Messrs. Trautmann and Co.'s steamers Nanzing and Ying-tze-fei belong henceforward to a "North-China Steamer Company" and are to have three other companions, so soon as these can be procured. The new company is to have a capital of Tls. 300,000 in shares of Tls. 500 each; and is to purchase the two steamers just named, for Tls. 75,000 and Tls. 60,000 respectively; the latter's wharf property, subject to an annual rental of Tls. 1,800, being also bought for Tls. 30,000. That firm is still to manage the business of the company, on much the same terms, apparently, that Messrs. Russell and Co. manage the S.S.N. They are to receive 5 per cent. on increased freight, and 2½ per cent. commission on steamers built or purchased; providing necessary office premises and staff. Calculating from the net profits of the two steamers last year it is hoped to pay a dividend of 34 per cent., besides returning 10 per cent. on freight to contributing shareholders. The predictions of a prospectus are not always realised, and may possibly not be so in this instance. But though the new company may not pay 34 per cent., it has every chance of doing extremely well. It is not starting a new line with the task of creating a new traffic; it buys two well-known steamers running on a well-worn route; it buys the stock and interest of a well-established business, which it intends to enlarge; and, more than all, it works amicably with its giant rival, the S.S.N., so that no internecine competition may be looked for, unless against intruders. There is no intention, we believe, of interfering on the Yang-tze, which will be left to the two companies that now "farm" it. The North-China Steamer Company, as its name implies, will address its energies to the large and increasing trade between Shanghai, Chefoo, Tientsin, and Newchwang. And we have no doubt it will prove a remunerative undertaking. These three companies should be sufficiently strong to keep the trade of North China in their own hands, at any rate for some years to come, and to satisfy the public, while working advantageously for the interests of their shareholders.

The Commissioner of Customs at Chefoo remarked, last year, on the growing appreciation of the Chinese for foreign steamers, and the gradual abandonment of their own junks as a means of transport. He opined that they "had lost all respect for their own native architecture, and that no new generation of sea-going junks is springing up to take the place of that which is dying out." He was writing, however, principally on the text of the grain tribute; and pointing to the future carriage of the grain in foreign built ships, as a likely and proximate event. The gradual adoption by the Chinese of the foreign style of hull was implied as a likely consequence of this event. The tendency, even since Mr. Dick wrote, has been to confirm his view. More and more the junk is losing ground; but more and more the steamer rather than the sailing ship is supplying its place. Chinese merchants are interested in all the local companies; and travel and ship goods by all the coast and river steamers, in preference to their own primitive hulls. Sails must always command a patronage; but everything seems to portend that the leap here will be nearly complete from the earliest to the latest system of transport; that, in abandoning their own junks, the Chinese will at once pass over the intermediate stage, and acquiesce in the tendency, which Holt's ocean line so strongly illustrates, to prefer steam to sails even for heavy and ordinary carriage.

THE CHINA MISSION.

The following, extracted from a Shanghai paper, shows the impression made in Shanghai by Mr. Burlinghame's New York speeches:—

After reading Tseng-kwo-fan's memorial we can have no doubt that the important step of sending an embassy to the Western Powers was taken with the approval of the leading statesmen of the Chinese Empire. To have obtained possession of the documents was a piece of singular good fortune, but of the form in which the question came before the Mandarins, of its secret history, we fear we must remain in ignorance. We can scarcely doubt, however, that the Chinese anticipated from the embassy some special advantage, as without some material inducement they would not have entered upon such a costly undertaking. To the embassy itself, its pretended objects, and the individuals composing it, an amount of goodwill was shown, and a general feeling of consideration and forbearance manifested, such as are rarely extended to new enterprises, and to changes in national policy. The whole foreign community were so tired of Chinese stationariness and indolence that the moment the intention of the Peking Government was made known in the matter, there seemed to be a tacit understanding on all sides to give the new undertaking the most favourable consideration and support, and to offer it every opportunity of showing its value by achieving success. Consequently, if there were in the embassy and its members the elements of success, there was nothing, and promised to be nothing, in the conduct of the public, which would interfere with it, or come into conflict with its objects. But this great enterprise, to characterise which in adequate terms dictionaries have been ransacked for the biggest and highest-sounding words, seems on the high road to ruin from the injudicious advocacy of the head mandarin, Mr. Burlinghame himself. His best friends and those most anxious for the success of the embassy feel that in his speech at New York, before the excited and enthusiastic merchants of that great city, he has unmistakably given way to the exaggerating impulses of an after-dinner brain, and wandered in ecstatic imagination through a long seventh-heaven speech, which has been carefully printed, that calm, unimaginative, and well-informed people may criticise it at leisure. Indeed, it would seem that the China he represents is not large enough for his soaring aspirations, its people not numerous enough nor sufficiently civilised, its Government not free enough nor enterprising enough; and therefore he has with admirable dexterity sketched out a fancy picture of a China of which no one has ever heard, and palmed it off at Delmonico's, on a not too critical audience, with the most complete assurance. We were prepared for some display of grandiloquence and a slight exhibition of pinchbeck oratory on Mr. Burlinghame's part, because he naturally has large views of the importance of his mission. But when he comes forward and seriously speaks of China as a civilised nation, and its people as a great and noble people on a level with the nations of the West; and when he announces that the Chinese are burning to receive merchants and missionaries, and to have the shining cross planted on every hill and in every valley, we feel that he has far exceeded the limits of pardonable exaggeration. The case has been misrepresented; the attitude of the Chinese is in most respects precisely the reverse of what their apologist has endeavoured to make the New York merchants believe, and henceforth the Chinese embassy stands before the world in a false position.

How will the representatives of the oldest, largest, and most homogeneous, most polite, and most sober nation in the world fare in Europe after the embassy has committed itself to all the absurd and erroneous positions which Mr. Burlinghame has laid down? Even if European statesmen are actuated by the most generous intentions towards the representatives of China, it is ridiculous to expect that they will receive the sentiments uttered in New York as sober realities, when the very fact of Mr. Burlinghame's mission to the Western Powers is itself a complete refutation of the accuracy of the condition of affairs which he has described. In San Francisco Mr. Burlinghame kept himself fairly within bounds, and we were in hopes that he would do so to the end. But in this we have been mistaken, and we cannot now look forward with much confidence to his success in Europe. Moreover, the solemn and pompous trifling which has taken the form of a treaty between the United States and China, is one further evidence of the hollowness of the whole mission, when its members attempt to make their powers and objects seem that which they certainly are not. Mr. Burlinghame is not content with being the exponent of Chinese views, and the apologist for their short comings and backwardness, he cannot remain satisfied with being simply their representative in an experimental mission to the West. His ambition soars above his position; and instead of accepting the conditions of the mission as they are, and acting in a perfectly straightforward manner, he resorts to the expedient of having his name to a treaty, and then he imagines this will give importance to the embassy. We have already discussed this remarkable document at some length, and have found it simply to be nine articles of talk, with not one single new stipulation. It shows unmistakably that Mr. Burlinghame has no powers whatever from the Chinese Government to yield a single point which has been demanded; but he seems to have been authorised to repeat a few points of the treaty already existing, if by any means that could serve his purpose. The new treaty is a farce got up with a view to throwing dust in the eyes of ignorant people; but it requires little of the gift of prophecy to predict that European statesmen will not submit to go through the solemn sham of humouring Mr. Burlinghame's injudicious and meaningless whims. We repeat, the embassy has placed itself in a false position by the most astounding exaggeration, and has endeavoured to appear what it is not by concluding an empty and objectless treaty; and we fear that its prospects of success in Europe are thereby seriously impaired. We can only hope that we are mistaken.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for the month and nine months ended the 30th September have been issued. The following shows the total declared value of the exports of British and Irish produce and manufactures exported during September in the last three years:—September, 1866, £16,671,078; September, 1867, £16,145,584; September, 1868, £16,927,240. This statement shows a steady condition of the export trade, and even a slight increase over the corresponding month of the two previous years. The indication of recovery is the more worthy of notice because duringthe earlier months of the year a falling off had been presented, as will be gathered from the annexed export figures relating to the first nine months of the last three years:—Nine months, 1866, £141,936,898; nine months, 1867, £137,202,497; nine months, 1868, £133,704,263. The increase has been chiefly in cotton yarn and cotton manufactures—value as well as quantity—hardwares, linen yarn, machinery, iron, silk manufacture, and woollen manufactures, under each of which items there is a satisfactory though moderate improvement. The falling off has been in beer, coals, haberdashery, linen manufactures, and woollen yarn. The present returns give the "computed real value" of the principal imports for the month of August. The comparison stands thus:—August, 1866, £22,480,009; August, 1867, £20,748,046; August, 1868, £20,278,080. It would thus appear that we are not adding unduly to our imports of foreign and colonial produce. For the first months of the last three years the record stands as follows:—Eight months, 1866, £166,024,768; eight months, 1867, £149,683,946; eight months, 1868, £152,561,886. Among the articles free of duty imported raw cotton shows a falling off to the extent of about 40 per cent., mainly from British India; wool, on the other hand, has increased 150 per cent. over the corresponding month of last year. Of the articles subject to duty, and entered for home consumption, wheat exhibits a decrease; while the totals of coffee, flour, spirits, sugar, tea, tobacco, and wine are larger.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all materials for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore: or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WM. CLOUGHTON, Managing Director.

New Harbour, Singapore, June, 1868.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

BISHOP'S

GRANULAR

EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA,

INVENTED, INTRODUCED, AND PREPARED BY

ALFRED BISHOP, Manufacturing Chemist,

17 & 18, SPECK'S FIELDS, MILE END NEW TOWN, LONDON.

THIS perfectly white and delicately clean granulated preparation possesses remarkable effervescent qualities, which far surpasses the ordinary Seidlitz Powder in its cooling, refreshing, and mild aperient properties, as well as in its flavour as a saline draught. It is particularly well adapted for women and young children, on account of its most agreeable flavour and mild effect.

N.B. The genuine has the name BISHOP upon the Bottle, also the Name and Trade Mark upon the Label, and is sold in convenient sizes, and secured in so perfect a manner that it may be shipped with safety to any part of the world.

Manufacturer also of Granulated and Effervescent Carbonate of Iron, Citrate of Iron, Citrate of Quinine, Citrate of Quinine and Iron, Carbonate of Lithia in Tubes, Citrate of Lithia, Vichy Salt, Seidlitz Mixture and all other Granulated Preparations.

IN CHANCERY.—CAUTION.—BISHOP'S GRANULAR EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF MAGNESIA.—Mr. Bishop, having discovered that the Label which he has used for the last five years was being imitated, recently applied to the COURT OF CHANCERY for an INJUNCTION to restrain such imitation. The injunction was immediately granted, and the defendant was ordered to pay all Mr. Bishop's costs and destroy the Labels complained of.

Mr. Bishop is determined to stop the imitation of his label, and will, without notice or delay, take proceedings in Chancery against any person who may copy or colourably imitate the same.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

The following summary of Japan news to the 2nd of October—twelve days later than that brought by the P. and O. mail—has been received by the Pacific mail steamer Japan, which reached San Francisco on the 20th ult. :—

The Mikado had issued his proclamation, declaring that the city of Yedo, the capital of Japan, shall be hereafter called "Toakei," or the Eastern Capital. The port of Yedo was to have been opened to foreigners on the first day of October. The present Governor of Yokohama had requested that the foreign representatives be transferred to Yedo.

Intelligence from Nagasaki represents that the town of Negati (Negato ?) had been bombarded by steamers from Satsuma and Chosiu, and the place totally destroyed. No other military events of importance had occurred since the previous advices, although considerable fighting was reported, the advantage resting with the Northern army.

Advices of Aug. 22, from Costries (?) Bay, state that the steamer Honan had exploded, killing Geo. C. Herman, first assistant engineer, Mr. Bernard, third assistant engineer, and five Chinamen, and badly scalding the chief engineer, Mr. Harlon, and three Chinamen.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

We have to report a particularly disagreeable occurrence at Kobe. On the night of the 31st August half-a-dozen midshipmen, whose names, we are truly sorry to say, are not in our possession, two from the U. S. Oneida, four from H.I.M. Venus and Belliquese, dined at a French restaurant in Kobe, after which they went to the Yoshiwarra, which we may as well, for the proper understanding of this affair, call for once by its English name of a brothel. After misbehaving themselves there—for even in such a place misbehaviour is possible—they turned out and smashed the lamp of an adjacent guard-house, a lamp, be it remarked, with the Mikado's crest upon it, and to natives as significant a symbol of power as the Eagle in American Consulates or the tricolour in front of a French Legation. The guard turned out, some of the midshipmen gallantly drew their revolvers and blazed away so soon as they saw that the Japanese did not draw their swords, and finally, after several shots had been fired, the party ran away down to the bund. There they again fired at a boatman, who paddled out from the wharf, refusing to take them off, and the quiet of the night was ultimately restored by the arrival of some men-of-war's boats, whose crews took the drunken boys to their respective ships.

The foregoing facts we take from the Hiogo and Osaka Herald of Sept. 5, whose account of the transaction is concluded by the following phrase :—"The commanders of the three vessels in question went to Governor Ito Shunski and apologised for the conduct of their countrymen, promising that the offenders should be punished." This affair occurred on Aug. 31. We (Japan Times) have letters from Kobe to the 11th inst., but are without any record of this promise having been fulfilled. We defer further comment until we learn what action has been taken in the matter.

The Kobe land sale took place on the 10th, when thirty-seven lots out of the seventy-four put up were sold at prices varying from 0.05 to 24 boos per tsubo above the upset price of eight boos. Truly, when a merchant can be found to buy their land at £3,000 per acre, we must retract the blame we lately heaped upon the native Government for greedily asking £750 for it. The land sale at Osaka is fixed for the 25th inst.; beyond this we have no news of any importance from the South.

YOKOHAMA.

The P. and O. mail just delivered brings Yokohama advices to the 19th September. The outward mails of July 17 and 18 were received on the 7th and 8th September respectively, the English and French lines alike performing the distance in fifty-two days. The Japan Herald gives the following summary of news :—

The position of the two parties supposed to be engaged in a contest for supreme power in Japan remains unaltered. The Mikado's officers continue to collect duties at the open ports and to negotiate with the representatives of foreign Powers who have not yet recognised their master ; the rebel daimios of the north wait in their own provinces for a turn in their favour from the action of these diplomatists, who yet hesitate to declare themselves openly as anxious to restore the hated Shiogoonate. Neither party has sufficient confidence in its own strength to attempt anything serious against the other, and commerce languishes in an uneasy and uncertain atmosphere of peace, that may at any moment be convulsed by a thunderstorm of war. We have unconfirmed reports from Nee-e-gata of some days' fighting, the result of which is said to have been the retirement of the Northern troops from the place ; but the native authorities here still protest to the British Minister against foreigners resorting to the port, as they cannot yet open it to foreign trade under the necessary condition of guaranteeing security to foreign life and property. As, some months since, they told the Representatives of Prussia and Italy that there was no objection to Prussians and Italians resorting thither, and as the Albion and other vessels have been there and returned without the occurrence of any disaster, the Foreign Ministers are planted in face of a dilemma, and their contradictory notifications threaten an antagonism, the character and consequences of which are too serious for discussion in this gossiping summary of the fortnight's news.

We have more than one incident of considerable interest to commercial men to mention in the present number of the Overland Mail. The Japanese Government, under the 2nd Article of the Convention of Yedo of 1866, have demanded a revision of the tariff so far as regards silk and tea. The effect of their claim, if conceded, will be to increase the duty on the former staple, our chief article of export, from dols. 24.12 to 37.50 per picul. The British Minister and some of his colleagues have asked the opinion and advice of the Chamber of Commerce, which has appointed a special committee for the consideration of the question.

Out of the uncertain action of the Mikado's Government respecting the opening of Nee-e-gata has arisen a difficulty, fortunately soon settled, concerning produce bought there and at some neighbouring ports and brought hither for sale or shipment to Europe. The Custom-house authorities set up a claim to confiscate it, its importers being unable, of course, to show any permits to ship. This claim was resisted, and on very good grounds. The regulations of trade attached to the treaties forbid smuggling goods into unopened ports, and name the penalty of 1,000 dols. for every such offence. The Order in Council, which affects British subjects only, states (Cap. 92) that trading to unopened ports is a misdemeanour, and that any principal, agent, shipowner, shipmaster, or supercargo who may engage in it is liable, on conviction, to imprisonment up to two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without a fine not exceeding 10,000 dols., at the discretion of the Court. On the other hand, Art. 5 of the Convention of 1866 says :—

"All articles of Japanese production may be conveyed from any place in Japan to any of the ports open to foreign trade, free of any tax or transit duty other than the usual tolls levied equally on all traffic for the maintenance of roads or navigation."

Not a word is said here to indicate that such produce may not be brought from an unopened port to an open port by foreigners in foreign bottoms, and with this clause as leader of his team, it would appear that a merchant may drive the proverbial coach-and six through Treaties and Orders in Council alike, so far as this particular branch of the coasting trade is concerned. But we hope soon to hear that all this paper difficulty has been settled, and the new trade fully and formally legalised, by proclamation of the Mikado's intention to act up to his treaty engagements, and assurance of his power to carry them out.

H.M.S. Rattler left Yokohama for Hakodati, it was said, on the 9th inst., and the Dupleix followed her on the 12th. Various conjectures are hazarded as to their destination. It is said that their errand has some connection with the establishment of lighthouses on the coast, and again that a visit to the Kurile Islands is in contemplation.

Either the Dupleix or Rattler carries an agent of the Italian Legation empowered to arrest at Hakodati M. Giuseppe dell 'Oro, whose brother, M. Isidoro dell 'Oro, has already been imprisoned here. The order for these arrests came from Florence by wire, and the reason for them has not transpired. The recently discovered fraud in silk-egg cards is of course generally supposed to be the proximate cause, but we believe this to be an error.

We mentioned, a month ago, the appointment of Mr. Grinnell, of the U. S. Navy, and General Frank, of the U. S. Consular Service, to posts of considerable importance under the new Government. We have now to announce the resignation of the French and English officers engaged by the late Shiogoon to instruct their army and navy.

The local papers notice the departure of two gentlemen whose loss will be felt by the community—Mr. A. O. Gay, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Davidson, the experienced and popular superintendent of the P. and O. Company's business at Yokohama. The former gentleman is succeeded as chairman of the Chamber of Commerce by Mr. R. V. Grahame. The agent of the P. and O. Company has decided to despatch a supplementary steamer to Suez direct, as an inducement to shippers of silkworms' eggs, which it is well known do not improve by being too much handled or disturbed.

TIENTSIN.

A Tientsin correspondent writes :—

"The Peking Gazette, I believe, says the rebels are all beaten and killed ; but when I was at Taku the other day, several boats, full of people, came in from Ta-tsan, saying a great number of mounted rebels had just arrived there. A boy, formerly servant to one of the missionaries, has come into Tientsin, saying the rebels are in great numbers in that neighbourhood, 'their flags darkening the air.' We had some heavy squalls of wind and rain a few days ago, and a good deal of hail. One piece I picked up was as large as a small hazel nut. We are looking forward to T-seng-kwo-fan's arrival as affording some prospect that we may get the Chaitang coal mines open, or at least a road made to them, as he is reported to be in favour of mining."

CHEFOO.

We hear that gold diggers at Mosan, twenty-six miles from Chefoo, are covering their expenses, and making something over. As no complaints come from the other parties who remain out, it may be assumed that they are doing likewise. H.M.S. Zebra arrived in Chefoo on the 12th inst., from Nagasaki, and was to remain there for a week or so. The object of the visit has reference to the gold fields, but there seems no need of any interference at present. It is said that the Taoutai wished the commander to send some of his blue jackets into the country to arrest the men who are occupied in getting gold ; but the request was very properly declined, with an intimation that H.M.'s ships were not appointed to undertake the internal police arrangements of China. The Taoutai is thus left to his own resources, of which he fully appreciates the weakness ; so as all accounts from the mines show the diggers to be peacefully inclined, it is presumed that the local mandarins have made up their minds that the Feng-shuey are not dangerously affected after all.

SHANGHAI.

From this port our advices are to September 26. The English mail of July 31 arrived on September 13, with telegrams to August 17. Telegrams to August 23 had been received via Galle, and to September 1 via Kiachta.

Further intelligence has been received of Mr. Cooper's progress on his journey overland to Calcutta. The N. C. Daily News says : —"We have received news from Mr. Cooper, who had reached Bathang, on the frontier of Thibet, after a very hard journey of twenty days from Ta-tsien-loo, during which he had suffered greatly. The Chinese authorities had refused to allow him to cross into Thibet. He had been delighted to hear of a pass into Assam only fourteen days journey distant ; but though the officials were willing the native merchants had opposed his going this way, fearing an influx of Assam teas into Thibet. Shortness of funds prevented his waiting and trying to carry his point by persistence ; so he was obliged to accept the proposal of the authorities to pass him down to the frontiers of Yunan, thus falling back on his dernier resort of reaching Calcutta by way of Talee and Bhamo."

The Evening Express states that Ting, the Footai of Soochow, has been down upon a secret visit, having for its object the maturing of some arrangements for the suppression of robberies, which have of late become very prevalent.

The regulation by which small sums of money can be transmitted through the British Post-office to England is to be extended to Yokohama and Hong Kong after the 1st November.

Mr. Ney Elias' expedition, under the auspices of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, for the purpose of examining the Yellow River, left this port in the Fusiyama for Chinkiang, whence they will proceed to the river via the Grand Canal.

A great deal of discussion has been given rise to by the erection of some posts in the Szechuen-road and other parts of the settlement, designed to carry a telegraph from Messrs. Russell and Co.'s house to the S.S.N. Company's godowns at Hongque. It appears that permission was given by the Works Committee of the late Municipal Council to erect them, on the condition that the thoroughfares would not be obstructed ; and that upon the poles being erected the telegraph constructor discovered that they would not answer, and immediately changed the plan without waiting for remonstrance. The delay of a day or two has naturally occurred, and the public, to whom no intimation that the Council had assented to the erection of the poles had been given, became somewhat loud in their complaints, though the chief grounds for discontent do not appear to be more than that the matter was not made public at the proper time.

Peking, left on the 16th Sept., in the Manchu, for Tientsin and the capital.

Tseng-kwo-fan has been appointed to the Vice-Royalty of Chilhi, and will be succeeded by the present acting Viceroy of Fohkien, Mah.

Sept. 25, 1868.

The last English mail left this on the 12th inst.. carrying with it the news of the outrages committed upon the Protestant missionaries at Yangchow, which outrages were not only winked at, but positively encouraged by the local officials and literati. You also heard of the departure of H.M.S. Rinaldo for Chinkiang, having Mr. Medhurst on board, who went up determined to obtain reparation, or at least to discover the reason of the set made upon the English residents. I may here remark, by the way, that these missionaries, whose names are now in everybody's mouth, are, so far as I know, the only Protestants who have adopted the native dress as well for women as for men. The women go about in pantaloons, and adorn their heads teapot fashion, and to-morrow, about the time that the Ganges is carrying this letter down the river, one of the men of the party is to be married in the English Church to one of the "teapot-ed" females. You may easily imagine that the barn which now does duty as a church will be filled to overflowing. All this, however, ought to go in parentheses, and therefore, apologising to you and your readers for the digression, I return to the mission of Mr. Medhurst. Having arrived off the entrance of the Grand Canal, Mr. Medhurst, Captain Bush, R.N., and about thirty marines and blue-jackets paid a visit to the Prefect of Yangchow, who (if you will pardon another digression) was formerly Hsien of Shanghai, and was removed in consequence of urgent representations made by all the foreign Consuls. Fortified by the presence of a military force, Mr. Meadows demanded from the Prefect and the Tartar General the issue of a proclamation forbidding the molestation of British subjects, the degradation of the mandarin who immediately instigated the assault, and full compensation for all injury done. Further, Mr. Meadows insisted upon the punishment of the literati who were concerned in the affair. The last demand the Prefect declared himself unable to accede to, and consequently it was arranged that the Rinaldo, with the Chinese magistrate following in his boat, should go to Nanking, where the affair was to be referred to Tseng Kuofan. As the latter has just been appointed Viceroy of the province of Chili, and as he is to be succeeded in the two kiang by Ma, the Viceroy of Chekiang and Fukien, who is notoriously hostile to foreigners, it was thought that Tseng would be glad of the opportunity of leaving a favourable impression after him in the minds of foreigners, and would, therefore, do speedy justice in the case. An interview was obtained, and everything that was demanded was promised. It must be remembered that the Rinaldo was then lying off Nanking. Now, however, unluckily, Captain Bush fell ill, and perhaps his illness, whatever it was, may have been so severe as to render it unadvisable for him to wait for the arrival of one of the American saloon boats, which, on an average, pass Nanking on the downward trip oftener than every second day. At any rate he did not wait, but brought his ship to Shanghai, as the most obvious way of transporting himself. Meanwhile, Mr. Medhurst was left to his own unsupported devices, and although he pushed the matter to such an extent, and exhibited so much diplomatic ability as well as earnestness, that the English residents in Shanghai are loud in his praises, the whole affair was a failure, the promised proclamation asserting the right of foreigners to rent land and houses at Yangchow was refused, the literati were said to be above punishment for such an offence, and the claim for damages to property was, without even the form of an investigation or report, cut down one-half. There the matter now stands, and "what will Alcock do?" is on every tongue. The Yankeeism "not much" appears to come naturally as the reply.

Of course in Shanghai, where, as you know, the peculiarly English style of opinion is predominant, the return of the Rinaldo elicited a series of groans publicly in the papers, and privately over every dinner-table in the Settlement. So far did this go that Mr. Medhurst felt himself compelled to give Captain Bush a medical certificate, or what amounted to the same thing. Impelled by a chivalrous feeling that does more honour to his heart than to his head he tried to excuse his colleague for bringing his ship away, and stated that he (Captain Bush) was so sick that he did not feel it would be right to press him to stay. The italics are mine, and I think you will agree that there is a sort of ironical bouquet, very subtle, yet still appreciable by an educated palate, in the Consul's apology for Captain Bush. That Captain Bush has immortalised himself in China there cannot be a doubt. I may be allowed to express a hope that the renown he has gained will not be held by the Admiralty to be sufficient reward for his services.

Complaints are crowding into the daily papers from all quarters, written by missionaries, who, according to their own accounts, are, both in their own persons and in those of their converts, subjected to continual persecution. We hear but one side of the story, and I fancy there may be another side. My experience of Protestant missionaries (with a few noble exceptions) and of native converts permits me to feel very confident in my own mind that there is some reason for the hostility which is shown.

From the north of China we have no news except that "the rebels are receiving vast accessions to their numbers in the neighbourhood of Tientsin"—a sentence which no doubt you keep in type. Perhaps 'tis true, but if it be so, and if it has been so for the period of twelve months during which it has been reported most religiously three times a month, it appears to me strange that nothing has come of it, or at least that no one in Tientsin knows anything about the bands which are said to be so close. Trade is not interfered with, and I yesterday met a Catholic missionary who has just completed a tour through the north and west, and who assured me that the roads within districts which are reported to be disaffected are as safe as those in places under Imperial protection, and often safer. I need not tell you the particulars that have reached us of Mr. Cooper's journey. No doubt you have already read them in the Indian papers. The bare fact is that he had reached the borders of Thibet, but was not allowed to cross the frontier. He will, therefore, attempt to reach India after passing through Yunan. It is easy to set in an arm-chair and criticise the labours of a traveller in a strange country; but it appears wonderful that so much difficulty should always be experienced by English explorers in China, although there is not a corner that has not been visited by Jesuit priests. The fact is so, and it may fairly be asked whether some of the difficulty is not of the travellers' own making. Ningpo letters contain nothing but an announcement of the formation of an amateur dramatic company, the members of which promise delectation for the winter to the inhabitants of that flourishing settlement, which some one has irreverently christened "Little Pedlington." The Chefoo diggings are said to be paying the expenses of the miners, including the cost of transit of supplies over the eighty li which separates the diggings from Chefoo. The officials are very anxious to stop the work, and are said to have lately requested the commander of an English gunboat to send up and arrest all British subjects engaged in mining. I can't vouch for this story, but, whether true or false, there were of course no steps of the kind taken.

We are not altogether without news from Japan although we can [as usual] make nothing of it, and we are [as usual] confident that the political portion of it will all be contradicted by next steamer. We are informed that the Mikado has had his power usurped by his uncle, that whichever gets the upper hand will remove to Yedo, and that the name of that city will be changed to Higashi-no-Kioto—whatever that means. So much may be "gammon," but an unfortunate circumstance has occurred at Yokohama, about which there can be no doubt. A party of English and French midshipmen who were dining at a foreign restaurant in the settlement adjourned after dinner to a house of ill-fame, where they made so unbearable a disturbance that they were put out. Opposite the door was a huge lamp on which the Mikado's arms were emblazoned. This proved too great a temptation, and accordingly it was smashed. The native guard then came up, and the "officers and gentlemen," I suppose anticipating an attack, drew their revolvers and let the Japanese have a volley. Fortunately, no mischief was done; the foreigners then ran away firing as they ran, and it was not until a boat's crew was landed that the young gentlemen could be brought to their senses. On the following day the commanders of the vessels to which the offenders belonged called on the governor and made a most ample apology, promising that the youths engaged in the broil should be severely punished. I notice, however, that the Japan papers seem to hint that the latter promise has not been kept.

Returning now to China, the only local items are the departure for Peking of the American Minister on the 17th inst., the wreck of the Ocean Steam Navigation Company's steamer Ajax, and an extraordinary number of fires in the native quarter of the settlement. Doubtless the loss of the Ajax has already been reported by telegraph. It seems that her shaft was disconnected for repair, and that the screw was secured by merely temporary lashings; the force of the tide caused these to give, and through the hole thus left she filled. There was very little cargo on board, but the mere weight of the ship herself is sufficient to make her raising more than doubtful. A local contractor, Mr. Batchelder, is to receive £45,000 if he succeeds in bringing her up, and his expenses are to be paid in case of failure. The first step has been taken. After numerous fruitless attempts on the part of European divers, a Chinaman has succeeded in plugging the hole, and the process of pumping out will commence immediately. A steamer built at the Kiang-nan (native) factory made her trial trip the other day. I did not witness it, but the papers are loud in praise. Even a modest share of success would under the circumstances be very creditable. The new church is rapidly approaching completion, and during the last week the appearance of rafters, which now cover in the transepts and chancel, promises that the middle of next year will see it completed. We have had a fair share of amusement in the shape of theatricals; an American troupe now occupy the pretty little "Lyceum," and on Tuesday evening next the "A.D.C." (Amateur Dramatic Company) open their season with "Plot and Passion." Judging by former seasons, we look forward to more enjoyment from the exertions of the A.D.C. than from any other source of amusement open to us. From gay to grave—reversing the quotation—the health of the settlement during the summer, which has now quite passed by, was most remarkable. Without any extraordinary exodus to Japan, or to the refuges for the sick, the number of deaths has been below the average. The truth of this may best be judged from the ghastly cemetery statistics. The new cemetery was opened on the 27th of June, and since then there have been but nine interments, of which four were infants. None of the deaths arose from climatic causes—for dysentery may occur anywhere. I must not forget to mention a curious circumstance which occurred here on the 16th instant. There was a procession of Ningpo men, which takes place each year, in which hitherto a junk has figured conspicuously to typify the junk which is to carry each individual Ningpo man to his home On this occasion the junk was replaced by a brilliantly illuminated model of an American saloon steamer.

It is generally understood that the land regulations adopted on the 6th of March, 1866, and subsequently approved separately by each of the great Powers, will soon be formally approved by the committee of Ministers—native and foreign— in which case they will become the law of the settlement.

A letter, like a conversation, would be incomplete without some notice of the weather. After a long-continued drought the equinox has ushered in heavy showers, disappointing the members of the cricket club, who had commenced operations.

HONG KONG.

Advices from this port are to the 2nd October. The English mails of the 14th and French mails of the 18th August arrived out on the 21st and 28th September respectively, the latter conveying London telegrams to September 8. The local news is again very meagre, a series of murders supplying almost the only topic of discussion.

The following, on the working of the Gambling Ordinance, is from the China Mail :—"The change which is reported to have been made by his Excellency in the amounts paid by the gambling-house keepers is a curious exemplification of the manner in which Sir R. MacDonnell has set about 'suppression.' We believe that his efforts —on the principle of killing the goose which lays the golden eggs—will be completely successful, as even now the licensees are beginning to declare that it hardly pays to keep the hells open, especially since the European portion of the community are debarred from play at such places, by which all profits are diminished by one-third. But the Governor has shown his acuteness in taking all that can be got prior to the inevitable shutting-up which, in deference to the powerful party whose opinion he has despised, will ere long be definitely directed by the home authorities. It is to be hoped that no unpleasant remarks will be made about this proceeding on his Excellency's part when the whole matter is reviewed in the House, as those most bitterly opposed to licensed gambling can hardly resist a smile at the very unforseen way in which his Excellency has contrived to take 'suppressive' measures."

The Canton steamer was fired on and stopped the other day, because she attempted to pass the Chun-hoi, a Chinese gunboat in the service of the Canton Government, without hoisting her flag. The affair is thus related by the Daily Press :—

"On the steamer leaving for Canton on the 29th Sept., on her regular trip, when in the Cap-sing-moon pass, she was brought to by a shot from the Chun-hoi. The first officer of the latter was sent on board the Kin-shan, and as soon as he was safely on board Captain Benning quietly put his helm hard over and steamed for Hong Kong, with Mr. First Officer on board, where he was landed. After arriving in Hong Kong the agents of the steamer, with the captain, waited on the Governor, and we understand that the whole matter has been referred by him to Commodore Jones, as being one purely concerning the naval authorities. It seems that the captain of the Chun-hoi was not on board at the time, the first officer being in command, and having received orders from his superior to compel the boat, when she passed, to hoist her colours. When the shot was fired she had no colours flying, and the officer was without uniform when he boarded the Kin-shan. The Chun-hoi was still at anchor in her former position when the Poyang passed on the 29th ult., and, although she had no colours flying, nothing was said. The Kin-shan again proceeded on her trip about twelve o'clock on the 29th."

The Disarmament Ordinance has been repealed, as the Canton Government declined to continue their co-operation.

A fire brigade is being organised, and promises well for the future.

No further news had been received from Japan regarding the supposed Providenza, and the identity of the vessel is now doubted. The Providenza would appear to be a ship-rigged craft of 560 tons burthen, with varnished masts, of French build, and to have been painted with a yellow line. The vessel now in the hands of the Japanese is reported to be barque-rigged, of from 300 to 350 tons burthen, with white masts, and to have a white line painted round her. The coolie contracts found in the possession of the Chinese on board are dated May and July, 1867, and must have reference to the last trip of the Providenza to Callao, from which she returned on the 23rd April last, after having landed her cargo in safety. The conclusion to be drawn, therefore, from the finding of these contracts is not that the vessel is the Providenza, but that the coolies found on board are some of those who were shipped in the Providenza at Macao in the course of last year, who were landed by her in Callao about the end of last year or early in this year, and who must have now come from that port or from somewhere along that coast.

The captain of a vessel lately from Peru states that it was rumoured there, just before he sailed, that a vessel in the coasting trade, commanded by a Spanish captain, and with a Chilian crew ,had sailed from Callao some time previously with 15,000 dols. in specie on board, and some sixty or seventy of the coolies lately arrived in the Providenza and Camilla Cavour, and had never arrived at her port of destination, or been heard of along the coast. It is not improbable that the crew of this vessel may have murdered their captain, plundered the treasure, and gone off in the missing boats, leaving the coolies behind, who then, in the hope of recovering their liberty, may have shaped the best course they could towards China, and so blundered on the Japanese coast.

SIAM.

It is with much regret we learn that his Majesty the King of Siam had been seriously ill with fever during the latter part of August and the whole of September, and that although on several occasions he seemed to be recovering, relapses always took place, and when the last steamer left, recovery was deemed hopeless. The fever is supposed to have been caught during the visit to Hua Wan to see the eclipse, and the jungle malaria at that place must be very virulent, for eight of the Siamese visitors of rank, who accompanied the King on that occasion, have died from fever since their return, including H.R.H. Krom Koon Rachasee, a nephew of the King. H.R.H. Somdetch Chowfa Chulalornkorn, the eldest son of the King, had also been ill with the fever, but had apparently quite recovered. His Majesty's favourite medical attendant was said to be H.R.H Krom Hluang Wongsa t'irat, a half-brother, but the King was also said to be fond of himself prescribing for his own case, and to be a good deal his own physician. Dr. Campbell had been called in on the 19th September, and thought favourably of the case, after taking note of the symptoms ; but, finding he could not have access to the Royal bedside in order to administer his medicines in person, he very properly refused to incur any responsibility by interfering second-hand, as it were, with the case, and withdrew altogether. The native Siamese physicians are said to have an unreasoning prejudice against quinine, which European doctors have found so invaluable in cases of fever. There seem to be good grounds for believing that had the King been prevailed upon to see Dr. Campbell, and undergo his treatment with quinine, &c., his recovery would have been insured.

His Majesty's death would be a great loss to the Kingdom of Siam. He has proved himself an able, enlightened, and liberal monarch, whom it will be difficult, if not impossible to replace, and we sincerely hope that our next advices from Bangkok will tell us that he has after all recovered.

A fire had taken place in Bangkok, of which no particulars are given, however, except that the loss was estimated at 20,000 ticals.

We regret to learn that the Siamese Monitor, a weekly paper, which has been in existence for some time, has become defunct. It has been succeeded by the Daily Advertiser, mainly an advertising sheet, but with a note or two of local news.

The last number of the Monitor to hand contains a long account of the expedition to Hua Wan to see the eclipse. The King of Siam evinced the most extraordinary liberality and munificence in feasting many thousands of his princes, officers, and people, together with many Europeans and Americans. A general invitation was issued to all foreigners in Bangkok, offering them a free passage by steamer to Hua Wan (140 miles) and back, comfortable quarters there and a free board. The cuisine, wines, &c., it is said, were both abundant in quantity and unexceptionable in quality. His Majesty, it is estimated, spent on the whole about 2,000 catties of silver, equal to 96,000 dols. Baron Hugon Le Tourneur, Captain of the Sarthe, is said to have contributed 20,000 dols. towards the expenses of the Commission, the French Government 10,000 dols., and the Chief Astronomer, M. Stephans, several thousand dols.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Dates from this port are to the 9th October. The outward mail of Aug. 28 was delivered on Sept. 30. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times of Oct. 9.

On the 26th ultimo. Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co's steamer Glengyle arrived from Calcutta, with telegrams from London to the 15th September. The Reiver, belonging to the same firm, left Calcutta three days before the Glengyle, but has not been heard of since, and it is feared that she has met the fate of the Thunder.

An Italian man-of-war, the Principessa Clotilde, arrived in this port from the Cape on the 27th ultimo, and has since proceeded on to Japan, to which station she has been appointed for three years. Her date from the Cape was 18th August.

The P. & O. Steamer Columbian arrived from Hong Kong yesterday morning and leaves with our home Mails at seven o'clock this morning, thus being here only twenty-four hours, in accordance with the new rule insisted upon by our ignorant, obstinate, postal authorities at home. Here is this steamer in a day before her time. She does not call at Penang. She will be days before her time in Galle. There is not a pretence of a reason for sending her away before Saturday. By despatching her this morning, immense inconvenience is caused to the whole community—most of whom must have sat up all night writing up their correspondence. The twenty-four hours' stay here is simply preposterous, and not to be endured.

A large fire broke out on the evening of the 2nd October in the Gaylang district, half-way to Siglap, which resulted in the total destruction of a couple of sago manufactories and twenty-two attap huts; total loss estimated at 12,000 dols.

A large public meeting was held in the Town-hall on the afternoon of the 5th inst, to protest against the breach of faith on the part of the Home Government with this colony with regard to the military contribution.

The Legislative Council have held three sittings, one on the 28th Sept., one on the 1st Oct., and one on the 6th Oct.

At the first meeting a communication was received from the Indian Government, requesting an addition to the monthly postal subsidy of Rs. 1,000, contributed by the Straits Colony under the contract with the British India Steam Navigation Company. The Indian Government wish to have four weekly instead of monthly mails; hence the reason for the increase asked. The Council voted an addition of Rs. 87 to the monthly subsidy of Rs. 1,000. A discussion took place whether it would be preferable to have a Coinage Bill introduced in this colony, founded upon English law or upon the Indian Penal Code. The latter seemed to be in most favour.

At the meeting on the 1st instant, H. E. the Governor laid before the Council a brief despatch from his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, announcing the Queen's approval and allowance of the Supreme Court Bill. There is not a word said about the petition sent home against the Bill, nor any notice taken of the letter of Mr. Napier, the Chairman of the Straits Association, calling attention to the petition. This implies simply studied discourtesy and disrespect to the residents of this Colony, unworthy of a Minister of the Crown, and calling for satisfactory explanation.

At the third meeting of the Council on the 6th instant two Ordinances were passed—viz., a Bill to Amend Ordinance No. 6 of 1867 and the Chinese Passenger Bill. Neither call for any comment. The Gambier Bill was rejected by the casting vote of the Governor. As a very considerable difference of opinion is known to exist on this question among the mercantile community, his Excellency probably exercised a wise discretion in postponing by his vote any legislation on the subject for the present. Petitions for and against the Bill were presented to the Council, and a considerable amount of correspondence has been published in this paper regarding the Bill of a lively and even acrimonious character.

We have been informed that the Dutch steamers belonging to Messrs. Besier and Jonkheym, of Java, have lately been purchased by the Netherlands India Steam Navigation Company, and will continue running between Batavia and this port.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Cotton Yarn: Considerable sales of 16-24s and 28-32s, prices firm. Grey Shirtings: A fair business had been done, and rates closed firm. White Shirtings had declined in value and were out of demand. T-Cloths: Nothing doing; quotations nominal. Spots and Brocades: Quiet, nominal, and unsaleable. Velvets: Small inquiry for Black at quotations. Taffachelass: A demand had again sprung up, but at unremunerative prices. Other Cotton Goods were not inquired for. Camlets: Little inquiry for anything but Black, which had been rather freely saleable at $17.50 to 18. Cloth: Black had been in large demand, and good business had been done, chiefly in Unions and Medium. Pilots were also in demand. Blankets: Strong inquiry, but no stocks. Metals: Very depressed. The following were the current quotations:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16 to 24, $48 to 49 per picul; 28 to 32, $51 to 52; 38 to 42, $48 to 49. NAGASAKI.—Messrs. Alt and Co.'s Circular is as follows:—"Our market has experienced a somewhat improved demand for some classes of cotton manufactures, and prices rule somewhat higher than in our last quotations. Fancy Prints especially have found a few purchasers at the undermentioned rates. In woollen goods we have little to report. Some sales have been made of Lustre Orleans and Camlet Cords, but stocks being in excess of present demand, no improvement in prices has taken place. Camlets and Figured Orleans meet with small sales, the former having met with some little inquiry lately. Lead: We have no sales to report since our last circular, and prices asked have declined. Of Nail Rod Iron the stocks still continue in excess of demand. Saltpetre is saleable at previous quotations, $8 to 8.50, and supplies small. Quotations:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., $2.25 to 2 30 per piece; do., 8¼ lbs., $2 85 to 2.95; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., $2.10; American Drills, $3 80 to 3.90; White Shirtings, 64 reed, $2.80 to 3.30; White Spots, $2.90 to 3; Dyed do., $2.90; White Brocades, $3.10 to 3.15; Dyed do., $3.10 to 3.15; Damasks, $3.70 to 4.20; Fancy Prints, $2.10; Turkey Red Prints, $3.45 to 3.50; do. Cambrics, $2.90 to 3; Taffachelass, $2 to 2.45; Camlets, S, $13 to 14; do., S S, $12 to 13.50; do. S S S, $11.20 to 12; Long Ells, 12 lbs., $7 to 8.45; Cotton Velvets, $7 to 7.70; Orleans, Lustre, $7 to 8.45; do., Figured, $4 to 4.60; Camlet Cords, $4 to 4.20; Crape Lustres, $8 to 9; Lead, $7 to 7.20; Iron, Nail Rod, $3.15.

SHANGHAI.—There had been a very dull and inactive market for almost all classes of goods since last mail, and there were no signs of improvement. This state of matters had been partly caused by over-speculation by natives and foreigners, and partly by the approach of the quarterly settling day. Grey Shirtings: Only 20,000 to 25,000 bales were reported as placed from first hands, and these sales were effected during the early part of the fortnight. Later on there had been no disposition shown by natives to buy, unless when cheap goods had been offered for cash. The nominal quotations were Tls. 1.95 to 2.03 for 7 lbs., Tls. 2.27 to 2.33 for 8 lbs., and Tls. 2.65 to 3.10 for 9 lbs. to 9.12 lbs. Cash sales had been effected at several candareens under these figures. The stock was estimated at 550,000 bales, and the current rates did not hold out any inducement to shippers from Hong Kong or Japan. T-Cloths: Moderate sales had been effected at reduced rates, but the general demand was very inactive and buyers were far from inclined to operate. 6 lbs. Mexicans had been placed at Tls. 1.70 per piece. White, best 7 lbs., could not be quoted over Tls. 2.05 per piece. 8lbs. Cloth continued heavy in stock, with only a small demand for local consumption. White Shirtings had again declined in value, and a further fall had to be noted. Holders did not press sales, but buyers seemed to have the market very much in their own hands. Drills: English goods had remained in small stock, and the inquiry had been moderately active. Best makes were quoted Tls. 4.40 to 4.45 per piece, and as the consumption was going on steadily at all the outports, there seemed no reason to predict any decline, unless stocks were materially increased. Sales of American goods had transpired at irregular rates, best chops having realised as high as Tls. 4.70 per piece, but the general market was slightly below this figure. Jeans: A small parcel of American had been sold at Tls. 3.65 per piece. Sheetings were dull of sale, the nominal quotation for American 15 lbs., being Tls. 4.20 per piece. Fancy Goods: A small inquiry had existed for Dyed Brocades at Tls. 2.80 to 2.90 per piece, which had been met to a moderate extent by importers. Chintzes had commanded some attention, but at very low rates. Black Velvets had been wanted for shipment to Japan, best goods having found ready buyers. Woollens.—Camlets: The only colours asked for had been Green and Black, while ordinary assortments had been almost impossible to place. Spanish Stripes: Sales of good assortments of C. P. H. were reported at Tls. 61 to 62½, but the general demand was very languid. Long Ells were quiet at last prices. Figured Orleans: Best patterns and assortments were readily saleable, but ordinary makes difficult to move unless at very low rates. Fancy Woollens remained very quiet, with only a retail demand. Metals: Very little change was noticeable in the market for metals. Lead was dull of sale. Tin Plates were inquired for at very low prices. Nail Rod Iron of suitable sizes was saleable. Hoop, Flat, and Round, were in no demand. Coals: Sales of Cardiff had been made at Tls. 10.7.5 from ship in lots, of American Coals at Tls. 11.8.5 for part cargo, and of Australian at Tls. 9 to 9.2.5 per ton for cargo and portions of cargoes. A small parcel of Formosa Coals had also been sold at Tls. 6.7.5. In English and Japan Coals no transactions had taken place, and the market generally was quiet. Arrivals: 2,765 tons from Australia, 300 tons from Japan, 1,340 tons Formosa, and 991 tons from Saghalien; total, 5,396 tons, which 300 tons were to order. The quotations current at the departure of the mail were as follows:—G.E. Grey Shirtings, 38½ yards 39 in. 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.0.6 to 2.0.0; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.5; 9 to 9¾ lbs., Tls. 2.8.0 to 3.1.5; White Shirtings, 40 yds. 36 in. 52 reed, Tls. 1 8.5 to 1.9.0; 56 reed, Tls. 1 9.5 to 2.0.5; 60 reed, Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.1.5: 64 reed, Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3.0; 66 to 72 reed, Tls. 2.3 5 to 2.7.5; American Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.5.0 to 4.7.0; Jeans, 30 yds. 30 in. 10¼ lbs., Tls 3.6.0 to 3.7.0; Sheetings, 40 yds. 40 in. 15 lbs., Tls. 4.2.0 to 4.3.0; English Drills, 40 yds., 30 in., 12 to 15 lbs., Tls. 4.3.0 to 4.4.0 T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., 24 yds., 32 in., Tls. 1.5.0 to 2.0.5; 8 to 8.4 lbs., 24 yds., 36 in., Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3.5; Handkerchiefs, Blue, per doz., Tls, 0.6.2. to 0.6.7; Brown, Tls. 0.5.5 to 0.6.0; Spotted Shirtings, White, 40 yards 36 in., per piece, Tls. 2.2.8 to 2.3.0; Dyed, Assorted, Tls. 2.5.0 to 2.6.5; Brocades, White, 40 yds. 36 in., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.5; Dyed, Assorted, Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.9.5; Damasks, Assorted, 40 yds. 36 in., Tls. 4.0.0 to 4 5.0; Velvets—Black, 22 in., per yd., Tls. 0.2.0 to 0.2.1½; Blue, 22 in., Tls. 0.2.1. to 0.2.2; Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.7 to 0.7 5; Medium and Habit Cloths, Tls. 0.9.2 to 1.2.0.; Camlets, English, S, 56 yds., 31 in., per piece Tls. 13.5.0 to 14.2.0; S.S., Tls. 12.5.0 to 13.0.0: SSS. Tls. 10.0.0 11.0.0 to; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds. 31 in. 12lbs., Tls. 6.5.0 to 6.6.0; Assorted, Tls. 6.8.0 to 7.0.0; Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 11.C.0 to 12.0.0; Crape Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 8 to 9.5.0; Lustres, Tls. 4.4.5. to 4.6.5; Metals.—Iron: Flat and Round, per picul, Tls. 2.4.0 to 2.5.0; Nail Rod, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.5.0; Hoop, Tls. 2.6.0 to 2.8.0.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s report, dated 1st October, contains the following:—Cotton Yarn: English manufactured has further declined $2.50 per bale, having still to compete with Bombay spun and Singapore grades, and holders being more desirous to realise in view of the late advices from home markets. Bombay and Singapore kinds find buyers owing to their comparative cheapness: price, and not quality, being apparently the great desideratum in the eyes of native dealers. Of the sales reported, 105 bales Nos. 16 to 24 are of Bombay make, and 40 bales ditto Singapore grades. Piece Goods: Trifling sales of Manchester goods of direct import have been made at a decline of about 5 cents, and some 6900 pieces spotted 84 lb. Grey Shirtings have been taken at $2.75 and 2.77½ per piece, the balance of the transactions in Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths being made up of parcels received from Singapore by native Hongs. All staples of direct import are fully 5 cents lower, and values still tend downward, late advices and the anticipated receipt of considerable supplies rendering importers weak. English and Dutch Drills are still inquired for, and have further advanced. The one small parcel of American on offer at date of our last has been shipped to Shanghai, and there are now no American Cotton Goods in stock. Woollens: The demand usual at this season of the year has not yet set in, and quotations for Long Ells, Lastings, Crapes, and English Camlets are lower, but no sales of the latter two have taken place. Blankets and Dutch Camlets are unchanged in value, and a few small sales of Spanish Stripes have been made at higher rates, a moderate inquiry existing for the best qualities of favourite makes. Metals: Nail Rod and Bar Iron have further declined 20 to 25 cents per picul, but a fair business has been done at the reduced values. Hoop Iron is 5 to 10 cents lower. Wire and Steel firm. Fair sales of W B Lead were made shortly after despatch of last mail at our last quotations, but all descriptions have since materially declined; a parcel of L B, large pigs, is offered "to arrive" at $6.75 per picul. Tin is very scarce, and under the influence of a demand for shipment North has materially advanced. Tin Plates are again lower. Quicksilver firmer. Coal: Arrivals have been—940 tons English, 300 do. of Patent Fuel, and 700 do. Anthracite—all to consumers, and 1,100 tons Welsh, which are on the market. The only sale has been 462 tons English, at $10.25, showing a further decline. Welsh Coal, too, is again lower, but we make no change in values of Sydney, holders being somewhat firmer. There is no inquiry for Anthracite. The current quotations were as follows:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16-24, per picul, $125 to 121; Nos. 28-32, $140 to 150; Nos. 38-42. $155 to 150. Grey Shirtings, 7 to 7¾ lbs., per piece, $2.50 to 2.52; 8 to 8¾ lbs., $2.72 to 2.90; 9 to 10 lbs., $3.55 to 4.50. White Shirtings, 54-60 reed, per piece, $2.50 to 2 60; 64-66, $3.95 to 3.15; 68-72, $3.10 to 3.20; White Spotted ditto, $3.15 to 3 10; White Brocades, $3.15 to 3.20; American Drills, 30 yards, $3.10 to 2.95; 40 do., $4.47 to 5.30; Grey T-Cloths, 24 yds. and 32 in., $2.70 to 2.75; 24 yds. and 36 in., $2.57 to 2·65; Dyed Spotted Shirtings, $3.95 to 4.05; Dyed Brocade do., $3.95 to 4; Dyed Damask do., $7 to 6.60; Chintz, $2.35 to 1.55; Handkerchiefs, Blue, per doz., $1 to 0.90; Brown, $0.88 to 0.90; Red, $1.05 to 1.40; Velvets, Black, 22 inch, per yard, $0.60 to 0.55; Gentian, 22 do., $0.42 to 0.49; Velveteens, Black, $2.90 to 2.35; Spanish Stripes, per yard, $1.02 to 1; Long Ells, MM Scarlet, per piece, $8.95 to 9; Do. Assorted, $9.15 to 9; HH Scarlet, $8.85 to 8.90; Do. Assorted, $8.90 to 8.80; Camlets, SSS, $15 to 15.75; SS, $17.50 to 17.25; S, $17.75 to 18; D, $18.25 to 18; BBB, $22.75 to 22 50; Lastings, $16.10 to 16.50; Iron, Nail Rod, Nos. 1 to 6, $2.20 to 2.40 per picul; Hoop, $3.10 to 3.20; Bar, $1.80 to 1.85; Small Round Rod, $2.60 to 2.95; Wire, $8.30 to 9; Lead, large, $8.60 to 8.40; Steel, English, $4.30 to 4.50 per tub; Swedish, $6.20 to 8.80; Tin, Malacca, $24.30 to 24.50 per picul; Tin Plates, $7.20 to 7.25 per box; Sheathing Metal, $23.70 to 27 per picul; Quicksilver, $65.50 to 66; Spelter, $5.50 to 5.40; Coals, afloat, English steam, $14.50 to 14 per ton; American Anthracite, $10.20 to 10; Sydney, $8.40 to 8.30; Window Glass, $3.25 to 3.23 per box.

TIENTSIN.—The market was dull and prices lower. Communication with the interior was greatly impeded by the swollen condition of the river and canals.

FOOCHOW.—The only sales during the fortnight had been 1,000 pieces. Grey Shirtings at $3.20 per piece and 500 pieces, 7 lbs. T-Cloths at $2.50 per piece.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been an active demand during the fortnight, and consequently a large business had been done; settlements consisting of all grades were computed to be fully 4500 piculs, almost entirely for the American market. Prices had been fully maintained at last quotations, and no reduction was expected. Stocks were reduced and were small, there being only about 1500 piculs of available leaf on the market. The Lanercost sailed on the 13th Sept. for New York with 342,019 lbs.; the Yokohama was loading for the same port. Quotations:—Common, $22 to 23 per picul; good common, $24 to 25; medium, $25 to 26; good medium, $28 to 30; fine, $30 to 35; finest, $36 to 40; choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There had been a good business done during the fortnight; for some days after the departure of the mail, at about former rates, but later, consequent on unfavourable advices and the rapidly increasing export, at easier rates, some settlements showing a decline of ½ to 1 tael on common to fair, and 1 tael on medium kinds. Arrivals from the river ports had been liberal, and the stock continued of fair magnitude, but with few desirable parcels in it. Settlements for the fortnight, 18,170 chests; reshipments on owners' account, 6014 chests; stock, 94 chops, or 30,344 chests. Quotations (duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 1¾d. per tael, and freights at £2. 15s. per ton):—Hohow, common, 11¾d.; Oonam, common to fair, 1s. 1¾d. to 1s. 2¾d.; Ningchow, common to fair, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3½d.; Oopack, common to good, 1s. 2½d. to 1s. 7d. Green: These also were in demand during the early part of the fortnight, for shipment to New York via San Francisco, and prices were well maintained, especially for better kinds. Since the departure of the steamer there had been less inquiry, and the decline quoted in finest in the last report was well established; medium kinds, too, were on the whole from one to two taels cheaper, but purchasing had been very irregular. The purchases had been: Moyunes at Tls. 41½ to 46¾, Fychow and Tienkais at Tls. 33¼ to 46, Shanghai-packed at Tls. 23 to 35, and Pingsueys at Tls. 31½ to 34½. Settlements for the fortnight, 24,132 half-chests; reshipments on owners' account, 988 half-chests; stock, 57 chops, or 36,496 half-chests. Quotations for Fychow and Teenkai teas (exchange, &c., as above) were as follows:—Gunpowder, 1s. 8d. to 3s. 8d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 11d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 3s. 1d.; Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 3s. 6d.; Twankay, 9d. to 1s. 7d.

HANKOW.—Settlements had been on a most limited scale, there being little demand even at a decline of nearly one tael on last mail's rates, and teamen preferred to take the chance of the Shanghai market to accepting such a decline as would induce operations. Not more than 1650 chests were reported sold, but native shipments reached 10,650 chests. Quotations were:—Oopacks, medium to good, Tls. 15.0 to 16.0, equal to 1s. 2d. to 1s. 2¾d. per lb.; Oonams, no settlements. Export of Tea from January 1, 1868, to September 18, 1868, 41,082,515 lbs.; January 1 to September 18, 1867, 29,321,167 lbs.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Rusden, Phipps, and Co. report as follows:—Congou: At the beginning of the fortnight the market was comparatively quiet, and in some instances parcels were settled slightly in favour of buyers, but latterly, owing to there being more business done for England than for some time, and Australian demand not having at all slackened, rates are very firm. Souchongs: No reduction in price. Scented: The same prices have been paid for parcels worse in quality than those previously settled. Settlements reported are—Congou, 14,059 chests 17,578 half-chests 1996 boxes at Tls. 6 to 30, equal 7d. to 1s. 10½d.; Souchong, fair to good, 430 chests 4318 half-chests 2092 boxes, at Tls. 18 to 28, equal 1s. 2¾d. to 1s. 8¾d.; Pekoe, common to good, 287 chests, at Tls. 25 to 29, equal 1s. 7¼d. to 1s. 9d.; Fine, 22 chests, at Tls. 47, equal 2s. 9¾d.; Scented, fair to good, 3096 boxes, at Tls. 20 to 22¾, equal 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6¼d.

CANTON.—The stock of country Congous was three chops, for which no inquiry existed in the first week of the interval. Scented kinds were moderately dealt in at about previous rates, but the news to hand, advising heavy losses on Overland Teas from this port, and anticipating an equally bad result for the early arrivals per ship, had caused buyers to keep out of the market. The following settlements were reported:—Canton District Congou, 800 boxes, at Tls. 20 to 22; Scented Orange Pekoe, 3500 boxes, at Tls. 24½ to 30; Scented Caper, 6500 boxes, at Tls. 16½ to 26; Canton Gunpowder, 1000 boxes, at Tls. 16 to 19.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—A quiet tone pervaded the market in the early part of the fortnight; but the slight weakness in prices thereby produced had brought buyers forward again, and a large business had been done; prices closed very firm at last quotations. $1000 had been paid for one or two little lots of Hanks, but they were of such extra quality that it can scarcely be denominated an advance. The continued disturbances in the North prevent, it is believed, the arrival of Oshu and other silks from that quarter. Settlements amount to 1000 bales, leaving in stock fully 600 bales. Silkworms' Eggs: A moderate business had again been done in eggs. Arrivals continued on a somewhat diminished scale, and fresh sales were about 150,000 cards. Sorts equal to the best of the early part of the season were very rare, and commanded as high rates as ever, say $3.75 for Sinchu, to $4.60 for Oshu; but the stock was largely composed of inferior and Bivoltini, and these sold at low rates, say 50 cents to $1.25. Good ordinary were worth $1.75 to 2.50. Total arrivals to date 1,700,000, against to date last year 600,000. Total settlements to date 1,450,000, against to date last year 550,000. The current quotations for Silk at date of departure of the mail (laid down in London at exchange 4s. 8d.) were as follows:—Hanks: Mybash, Nos. 1 and 2, 38s. 3d. to 39s. 10d.; Sinchu, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, 35s. 1d. to 37s. 1d.; Nos. 2, 3, and 4, 32s. 4d. to 34s. 4d.; Oshu, medium, 30s. to 31s. 11d.; inferior, 26s. to 28s. 4d.; Coshu, Nos. 1 and 2, 33s. 11d. to 35s. 6d.; medium, 29s. 7d. to 31s. 7d.; inferior, 27s. 7d. to 28s. 9d.

SHANGHAI.—The following report, under date Sept. 24, is by Mr. C. Holdsworth:—The latest advices received from England since the date of my last circular of the 10th inst. are by letters to the 1st August, and by telegrams, via Kiachta, to the 1st Sept., the latter announcing the Silk market "dull and irregular; Chop Thirds Tsatlee 30s., Red Peacock No. 4 Tsatlee 25s. per lb." Business here was resumed immediately after the departure of the last outward English mail, and settlements were made to the extent of about 900 bales, 827 bales of which were exported per M. I. steamer Dupleix on the 19th inst., since which date transactions have continued on a very limited scale, and the purchases for the fortnight are estimated at not over 1800 bales. The demand has again been chiefly for the finer classes, and consequently Re-reels and fine size Silks form the bulk of the settlements. Chop Thirds Tsatlee have been purchased at Tls. 550 to 565, which show a decline of Tls. 10 to 15 per picul on the quotations given in my last circular, but as the parcels settled consisted of No. 4 in far larger proportion to No. 3, the decline is not so great as at first sight it would appear to be; quotations for all other descriptions of Silk show a decline of Tls. 5 to 15 per picul. To-day, however, Tls. 560 are asked for Donky Chop and Tls. 575 for Tso Ping. The arrivals from the interior for the past interval have been very small, and notwithstanding the limited nature of the business transacted, the unsold stock is reduced to 4000 bales. As the high prices ruling in the Silk producing districts (which are higher than those current in Shanghai) prevent the Shanghai Hongs buying for this market except in small quantities, no considerable arrivals from the interior can be looked for at present. The current quotations (all charges paid at exchange 6s. 2d. per tael) were as follows:—Tsatlee, chop No. 1, none; No. 2, 31s. 3d. to 32s. per lb.; No. 3, 29s. 10d. to 30s. 11d. per lb.; No. 3½, 26s. 11d. to 29s. 1d. per lb.; ordinary No. 3½ and chop No. 4, 25s. 1d. to 25s. 10d. per lb.; ordinary No. 4, 23s. 3d. to 24s. 4d. per lb.; No. 5 and common, 24s. 8d. to 22s. 3d. per lb.; Karshing Taysaam, chop No. 1, 25s. 4d. to 26s. 5d. per lb.; No. 2, 23s. 9d. to 24s. 10d. per lb.; No. 3, 20s. 8d. to 22s. 9d. per lb.; Nos. 4, 5, and common, 18s. 1d. to 19s. 6d. per lb.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 1, none; No. 2, 20s. 2d. to 21s. 2d. per lb.; No. 3, 19s. 1d. to 19s. 6d. per lb.; No. 4 and common, 17s. 10d. to 18s. 7d. per lb.; Yuenfa and Hainings, chop No. 1, 25s. 10d. to 27s. 5d. per lb.; No. 2, 24s. 4d. to 25s. 4d. per lb.; No. 3, 22s. 3d. to 23s. 3d. per lb; No. 4 and common, 20s. 2d. to 20s. 8d. per lb.

CANTON.—The fifth crop was in the market, and has proved to be of very fine quality and abundant, being estimated to yield 900 bales. Settlements had been principally of medium and fine kinds, prices immediately after receipt of the home mail having receded so much as to induce buying. Considerable recovery from the lowest point had, however, taken place, although a reduction of fully $15 on last quotations may still be noted on all descriptions. Re-reeled Cumchook was procurable at $510 for No. 1. The settlements of the fortnight were estimated at 100 boxes of the latter, and 380 bales of other kinds. The following were the quotations:—Tsatlee, $495 to 515; Loongkong, $495 to 515; Kow-Kong, $450; re-reeled Cumchook, $540.

THE LOSS OF THE "BENARES."

IN our issue of the 5th ultimo we inserted a letter from a passenger by this steamer, expressing surprise that in the finding of the Naval Court no notice was taken of the "sending off the passengers in the captain's gig, without an officer "or crew—without a compass, an atom of biscuit, or a drop "of water." In explanation of this, Captain M'CULLUM states that the boat had her usual crew, but was not provisioned because she was intended to remain alongside. The passengers were only put into her as a precaution in case the steamer should heel over, and she was never intended to leave unless that emergency arose. The passengers were not "sent off" at all, but took the matter into their own hands. Under these circumstances no blame can be attributed either to the action of the captain, or the working of the boat regulations on board the P. and O. steamers.

WHIG OR TORY?

THE elections that will decide the fate of the present Ministry will be completed in the course of this month, and should the confident expectations of the Liberal party be realised, Mr. GLADSTONE and his supporters will enter upon what is not unlikely to be a long term of office. Under these circumstances it may not be altogether inappropriate to consider for a moment the possible effect of the impending change on the numerous and important interests generally summed up as "The China Trade." Editorially, we are as a rule silent with regard to home politics; considering our sphere of usefulness to lie in supplying our readers with an accurate and well-digested summary of news, in the diffusion of reliable information specially relating to the countries of the Far East, and in the discussion of such topics only as are essential to the well-being of the communities resident, or interested, in those countries. We have never hesitated to censure a Government or an individual, of whatever party, when acting unjustly towards the interests we claim to represent; and we would be the last to withhold commendation, when it is fairly earned, either by Liberal or Conservative. If we adopted a motto, it would be—Measures, not Men. And if we now call attention to certain unfavourable contingencies that may arise out of the accession to power of a Liberal Administration, it is done in no party spirit.

"Retrenchment" is a great election cry with Mr. GLADSTONE'S party, and a very good cry it is. No doubt the pruning-knife should be vigorously applied to the Estimates, and numerous are the unproductive branches of the tree of national expenditure that might be lopped off with benefit to the parent trunk; but then the instrument should be used by a skilful and prudent hand. True economy does not consist in a reckless cutting down of Estimates. A saving effected at the cost of efficiency is no saving at all; and it is this sort of operation which we fear is likely to be practised by Liberal Reformers on some items of expenditure that are really necessary to maintain our position and protect our trade in China. We have from time to time noticed the persistent efforts of Messrs. CHILDERS and STANSFELD to obtain a reduction in the allowance for the Legation at Peking, to shelve the vote for Consular buildings in China and Japan, and to prevent the despatch of gunboats to suppress piracy. On this last point a renewed agitation has lately taken place. In a recent issue we chronicled a speech wherein Mr. STANSFELD stigmatised the new twin-screw gunboats built for this special service as "wretched wooden vessels, unfit either to fight or to run away," and now Mr. CHILDERS, Mr. GOSCHEN, and Mr. GLADSTONE return to the charge, the latter going so far as to declare (in his late speech at Warrington), that the money expended on them by the present Government "might as well have been thrown into the sea." These gentlemen seem to think that the true way to manage naval affairs would be to maintain a channel fleet of powerful ironclads, just to protect the shores of Great Britain, and leave all our foreign commerce and outlying dependencies to take care of themselves. These may be very "Liberal" and very economical views, and are doubtless admirably suited to the intelligence of the Lancashire operatives, to whom they have of late been spouted by the hour; but we doubt very much whether they will meet with the approval of the mercantile and shipping interests, either at home or in the colonies. As for the actual value of the gunboats in question, they were very accurately described in a speech recently made by Lord HENRY LENNOX at Chichester, which was on this and many other points a crushing reply to some of the Radical leaders. "They are "much faster than the class they are intended to supersede, "and they are in every respect most admirable sea boats. "One of them which went out to China, the Dwarf, was "overtaken with several severe gales, and on one occasion, "when the weather was stormy, the 6½-ton gun was cast "adrift, as if they were about to use it in action, and the "vessel was still found to be sufficiently steady to enable "them with safety to serve that gun. Therefore, as wooden "vessels, they are neither slow nor weak."

After all, this frantic opposition to the course pursued by the present Government with regard to China affairs may be nothing but an electioneering dodge, and when they are fairly installed we may find the Liberals inclined to deal fairly in all these matters. But in the meantime it must be owned that China interests have always received their due share of attention at the hands of the Conservatives, until the recent prolonged struggle over the Reform question shut out almost all other subjects. If their opponents and probable successors in office evince an equal amount of consideration, we shall have no reason to be dissatisfied; but when they grudge every shilling voted for the maintenance of our position in China, it is to be feared that such a measure, for instance, as the repeal of the military-tax on Hong Kong—which would be a really Liberal measure—can hardly be expected from the so-called Liberal Government.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, November 4.

The most sad events have occurred here. Last week a noisy and turbulent mob ran every evening through the streets, insulting the police and breaking windows. This mob was headed by a certain J. de Vletter, a so-called champion of the rights of the people. He had succeeded in creating amongst the lower classes indignation against the communal authorities, by speeches and pamphlets especially directed against our system of judicial administration. Some discontent also prevails amongst the wealthier classes, occasioned by a proposal of the Communal Council to borrow six millions of guilders for the construction of public works, the interest of which was to be covered by a sewerage tax. Last Friday evening the mob was more threatening than ever, and when the demonstration was again repeated on Saturday night, it was feared that a serious encounter would take place between the police and the mob. The burgomaster, however, did not take any extraordinary measure, so that a comparatively small number of police stood alone to restrain a furious mob. At eleven o'clock, when the tumult became of an uproarious character, it was decided to send for troops from the Hague, but before the cavalry could arrive serious fights took place between the mob and the police, who were obliged to make use of their swords. The windows of many private houses were broken, the street lanterns were pulled down, the pavements were broken up, the offices of the police were literally besieged, the Town-hall was severely damaged, all the windows being broken, the furniture destroyed, and an endeavour made to set this building as well as the office of the police on fire. The mob would doubtless have succeeded in their plans, but the police received reinforcements from another station, and succeeded in forcing the mob to evacuate the Kaasmarkt. Soon after this the cavalry arrived and cleared the streets. I need not add that there are a great many wounded and some dead. The mob have not dared to repeat the demonstration, the police having now plenty of military force at their disposal. Infantry, cavalry, and even artillery have arrived, and martial law has been proclaimed. The tumult had not the least political character, notwithstanding that the Dagblad asserts the contrary. The mob shouted and cried, "The taxes are too high!" and I do not think that one tax-payer was amongst them.

The political news is very scanty. The members of the Second Chamber of the States General met yesterday, when it was decided to open to-day the discussions upon the India budget of 1869. It is said that the Opposition will not undertake a serious party fight on this occasion, but that it will be adjourned till the members deal with the ordinary budget of the Colonial Department.

In one of the section reports some members asked if there was any chance of a steam line between Java and Australia being subsidised. The Minister replied that, according to the last advices, there was not sufficient traffic, but he has suggested that a communication should be established by a steamer from Batavia to meet the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company running between Point de Galle and Australia. Negotiations have been opened between our Government and the P. and O. Company respecting this matter.

About the Huet scandal I am in a position to inform you that the Chamber refuses to approve the grant of passage-money by the Conservative Minister to the editor of the Liberal paper. You will remember that the Opposition insinuated that Liberal Governments had also granted free passages to private persons, not being functionaries; but it was shown by official papers that this insinuation was without the least foundation. That the only intention of Mr. Huet was to obtain money is proved by the fact that the correspondent of the Java Bode paid him 4,000f. for his passage.

The Amsterdam Canal Company has issued a prospectus of a loan of f.6,500,000, giving interest at 4 per cent. The price will be 87 per cent., and the payment of the interest is guaranteed by the State.

The Prince of Orange has been appointed honorary president of the International Statistical Congress, which will meet next year at the Hague.

Mr. G. A. Yssel de Schepper, ex-member of the Second Chamber of the States-General, died some days ago.

On the 14th of November a detachment of one hundred and fifty soldiers will be shipped by the Electra, bound for Batavia.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The market has remained very firm since the last auction, at which 106,060 b. Java were sold at 2½ to 3½c. above the valuation, and since then an advance has been paid on those prices of 1 to 1½c. Generally holders do not incline to operate, and the large deliveries during October (125,791 bales) have had a very good influence upon the market. The transactions include 500 b. Padang, ex Padang Packet, at 38½c.; 1,467 b. Java, ex County of Lanark, Eva Johanna, and Schoonderloo, at 35 to 40½c.; 1,250 b. Padang, ex Jan van Brakel, at 38½ to 41¾c.; 588 b. ditto, ex Manilla II. (Mocco Mocco), at 35½c.; 1,818 b. Java, ex Vyf Vrienden and Almelo, at 31½ to 31½c.; 20 kr. Padang, ex Padang Packet, at 37½ to 38½c.; 1,250 b. ditto, ex Manilla II., at 37 to 40½c.; 1,447 ditto ditto, at 37 ¾ to 41½c.; 1,013 b. Java, ex Felix Mendelssohn, at 37 to 38½c.; 1,200 b., ex Juanita, at 33 to 34½c.; 345 b. ditto., ex Vesta, at 35½c.; 550 b. ditto, ex County of Elgin, at 31c.; 1,200 b. Padang, ex Jan van Brakel, from 38 to 41c.; 860 b. Java, ex Stad Delft; 2,000 b. ditto, ex Juanita; 2,603 b. Padang, ex Manilla II., at 37¼ to 38¾c.; and 2,000 b. Padang, ex ditto, at 37½ to 47c. The total stock of coffee was, on the 31st Oct., 472,500 b., against 477,600 b. in 1867.

RAW SUGAR.—The Trading Company announced its auction for the 21st instant, when 30,300 mats will be offered, against 28,180 mats in the autumn auction of last year. The market has remained in a very favourable position, and there is a good speculative demand for floating parcels. The transactions are, however, of small importance, importers declining to operate at current quotations, which are ¾f. above the September value. The transactions include 427 mats Sourabaya, No. 10¾ at 30½f.; 1,183 mats Java, ex Louis de Geer; 245 mats Sourabaya, ex Cornelis Smit, No. 13½, at 32½f.; 1,632 ditto, ex Queensland, No. 13 11-100 to 65-100, at 32½ to 33f.; 314 ditto Batavia, ex Maarten van Rossem; 1,220 ditto Sourabaya, ex Boanerges, No. 10¾; 340 b. ditto, ex Anthony van Hoboken, No. 10½, at 30½f.; 285 b. Panaroeken, ex Cornelis Smit, No. 10, at ½f. above September. 888 mats Sourabaya, floating, per St. Aubin, No. 11½, at 31f. According to official returns the stock of raw sugar in bond is 42,737,455 kilo.

RICE.—The market is dull; 3,184 bales Java, ex Cosmopolite, sold at 8⅜f.; 878 b. do., ex Bato; 2,350 b. Java, ex Emilie, at 8f.

SPICES.—There is still a good demand for fine qualities. The closing quotations are:—Nutmegs, No. 1, 90c.; No. 2, 80 to 81c. Mace: The very trifling quantities offered were sold at 132 to 134c. for D; 128 to 130c. for E; Amboina Cloves, No. 2, 28½ to 29c. The stock on warrants was, on the 1st November, Nutmegs, 4,506 casks; mace, 541 casks; cloves, 2,883 casks; cinnamon, 396 casks; pepper, 183 bales.

TOBACCO.—The market is very animated for Java leaves, and the transactions are of much importance, very high prices being paid. The following parcels were sold by inscription or in public sale:—363 b. Mahamet; 1,099 b. Kotta; 390 b. EB; 392 b. Banteng; 985 b. LC; 291 b. KT; 165 b. TMN; 701 b. KGVW, at 43½c.; W, 18½c.; Blitar seed, 24c.; 1,345 b. Bd/z, 39c.; KN, 23c.; 692 b. W Malang, 37c.; JHW, 44½c.; BA, 29½c.; 623 b. Tikong, 27c.; 231 b. AZ, at 34c.; 390 b. Gending, 22c.; 205 b. Kidol, ex Joseph Holmes, at 80c.; 106 b. Kotta, 1866, ex Herald of the Morning; 192 b. Birit; 243 b. PDWGJ, ex Joseph Holmes, at 40 to 45c.; 739 b. Blarcum, ex Stad Leyden, at 75c.; 850 b. Kebon Aroom, ex do., at 57½c.; 1,232 b. H and A Blitar, ex Jane Kilgour; 2,095 b. GP, ex Bato, at 43c. The Trading Company sold by inscription at prices which did not transpire, 75 b. Japan tobacco, ex Lady Love.

DRUGS.—The Trading Company announce the offering in public auction on the 17th inst. of 4,047 chests Japan wax, 120 chests Japan camphor, 33,000 ko. gutta percha, 167 collis gummi elasticum, 88 chests gummi damar. The market is inactive. Japan camphor is offered in vain at 78c. Cubebs may be bought at 24c. to 25c. Long pepper nominal at 17c. Cassia Lignea somewhat higher in price, and nothing can be bought under 82c. Cassia Vera some demand at 45c. to 47c. Vanilla very low in price. Sago very firm at 13f. Gutta Percha 54 pic., ex County of Lanark, were sold. Gum Damar, the important imports (1,574 piculs) were sold at firm prices for export. In loco 51c. was paid.

BANCA TIN.—The demand is rather slack, and only a few transactions have taken place. 2,800 slabs were sold at 59f.; 1,000 do., at 59½f.; 600 do., at 59f.; 1,600 do., at 59¼f.; 500 do., at 59f.; 1,700 slabs Billiton, floating, were sold at 58f. The unsold stock of Banca of the Trading Company was, on Oct. 31st, 40,210 slabs, and the stocks on warrants 58,672 slabs. The unsold stock of Billiton was 288 slabs.

HIDES.—2325 Sourabaya Rinder, ca. 3½ ko., ex County of Ayr, and 469 p. do., ex Bato, were sold by inscription, at prices which did not transpire.

INDIGO (Java).—The market is firm but dull, and only 48 chests have changed hands. There is, however, a good demand for the soft qualities.

RATTANS.—The following parcels were sold at secret prices:—125 pic., ex Concurrent; 174 pic., ex Ternate; 180 pic., ex Vooruit; 473 pic., ex Emilie; 149 pic., ex County of Lanark; and 32 pic., ex Cosmopolite.

SILK.—The Trading Company offered in auction on the 28th Oct. 241 b. Japan and 65 b. China raw silk, which were realised at the following prices:—Japan: 42 b. Sodai (Bricks), from f.29.25 to f.36.75; 105 b. Oshio (redevidee), from f.28.50 to f.43.75; 24 b. Aechazan (slips), from 29f. to f.33.50; 24 b. Ida (Longguindre), from 35f. to 43f.; 18 b. Mastah (Slips), from 27f. to f.31.75; 14 b. Tadsima (Bourrelets), from f.24.40 to f.27.50; 14 b. Doupions, from 7f. China: 65 Tsatlee, from f.30.25 to f.32.25. In general, a fraction was paid above the valuation.

ARRACK.—The market is inactive, holders declining to operate at the actual quotations.

HAMBURG, November 3.

A paragraph appeared lately in a local paper of this city, stating that a Pastor Maurach, of Oberpahlen, near Dorpat in Liefland, had inserted an advertisement in the Courland Government Gazette requesting the readers to send him spoiled stamps for a charitable purpose. It added that the Chinese have taken a sudden fancy for ornamenting umbrellas, lanterns, fans, and even the walls of their rooms with such postage stamps, which they cut out and paste on in various combinations and devices, and that they buy them in any quantity—in thousands and even millions, paying for them at the rate of a dollar per hundred. It was further stated that the Rhenish Missionary Society, which has its representatives in various parts of China, would be glad to receive contributions of spoiled stamps, and that it devotes the money derived from their sale to the education of children that have been abandoned or sold by their parents. Having ascertained from some juvenile friends of mine that they were quite willing to devote their collections of stamps for such a philanthropical purpose, I wrote to the above-named clergyman to ask if the statement made was correct, and if so, suggested his giving me an address in Germany to whom they might be sent, rather than the more distant Russian province. He replied that it is all true as stated in the paragraph, and begs me to send any quantity I may obtain to Herr Edmund Mangelsdorf, at Leipzig, who will receive and forward them to their destination; in consequence of which I have sent him about four thousand such stamps of various countries, made up neatly into small packets of a hundred each. I relate this narrative in the cause of humanity, and appeal through your columns and those of the London and China Express to the sympathies of the juvenile members of the families of many of your readers, who may have made such collections of spoiled stamps, and do not know what to do with them. They will be doing a good work by forwarding them to the above address at Leipzig.

The Journal de St. Petersbourg gives a full and very favourable account of a concert given on the 20th May at Peking by a Hungarian pianoforte virtuoso named Franz Jachimek, a native of Oedenburg, in Hungary, remarking that it was the first public concert ever given in the Chinese metropolis. It was attended by the whole of the corps diplomatique, and several native mandarins of rank. Russians, English, French, Prussians, Spaniards, Americans, and Chinese were assembled under one roof to listen to some good music performed in the most effective manner, and the concert was a great success. A Hungarian journal, the Foro Lapok of Pesth, publishes some personal account of this enterprising musician, from which it appears that he has been travelling about in the Far East ever since 1864, and has visited Persia, Siberia, and a great part of Japan.

The Austrian expedition sailed from Trieste on the 18th ult., and was expected to arrive at Gibraltar by the end of the month, with the intention of coaling there as well as to make inquiries about the state of the public health in Morocco. If the accounts are favourable the vessels will go to Tangiers for a couple of days; if not, they will proceed direct to the Cape of Good Hope, where they would arrive about the middle of December and remain there a fortnight. From the Cape they will sail to Singapore, where they will be joined by Herr von Scherzer and Baron von Herbert, who have embarked at Trieste for Alexandria, and, after visiting the Suez Canal works, will proceed by one of the P. and O. mail steamers from Suez to Singapore. Thus all the difficulties have at length been successfully overcome, and the Austrian Expedition to the Far East is an accomplished fact.

COMMERCIAL.

The rice market is quiet, and there is no alteration in values. Cassia lignea is scarce and in demand at 16 sch. bco. Pepper is also more inquired for. A public sale has been held of 1,000 chests of candied ginger; the quality was very irregular, which accounts for the sale prices ranging from 8 to 10¾ sch. bco. per lb. The demand for teas is slack, and but few sales are reported at former rates. Spelter is firmer. and 11,000 centners have been sold as follows:—1,000 for spring delivery at 13 mks. 8 sch. bco., 3,000 loco at 13.10, 1,000 per November at 13.10, 1,000 per ditto at 13.10½, 1,000 loco, favourite marks, at 13.11, 2,000 ditto at 13.12., and 2,000 for spring delivery at 13.8. More silver has been withdrawn from the Bank, and the rate of discount has advanced, though but to a trifling degree.

NEW YORK COMMERCIAL ADVICES.

TEA.—Messrs. Beebe's report on the New York market, dated 23rd ult., is as follows:—"Since our market report of the 8th Oct. the transactions in tea have been on a limited scale, at prices which show no material change in value. The stock of Greens in importers' hands is reduced to a few hundred packages, and from this date to the period when the new crop will come to hand our supply must reach us wholly from indirect sources. The sales reported from first hands since our last are 5,600 half-chests, including 2,000 half-chests received from London. The upward tendency to prices is checked by the general dulness of trade peculiar to seasons of political excitement, as well as by the fact that considerable purchases are being made in Canada by the large Western jobbers. Of Japans 2,000 half-chests have found buyers since the 8th instant at rather lower rates, and the market closes with but little inquiry for this class of goods. Oolongs continue in limited demand, and prices are weak for old crop teas. Sales reported from first hands during the fortnight are 4,400 half-chests, including 1,300 half-chests new crop goods recently to hand, via San Francisco. The outturn of the latter, although realising extreme prices, is far from encouraging to importers who are interested in the incoming crop.

SILK.—According to Messrs. Haywood and Co.'s Circular, the depressed state of business generally, combined with the heavy importations, have affected the raw silk market very materially, and prices close weak at quotations. Imports since the 1st October, 628 packages.

AMONG the numerous useful publications issued at this season by Messrs. Letts, Son, and Co., is a "Clerical and Mercantile Tablet Diary," very suitable for office use. Each leaf contains a week, and it is intended to lie on the desk, or be suspended in the office, presenting to view the current week, which when completed may be filed, or turned over at the back.

Monetary and Commercial.

A decree of the Spanish Minister for the Colonies declares that all the materials of foreign origin used for public works, as in railways, roads, and canals, may enter Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands free of duty.

The eleventh and final call of 100 florins per share, with interest, is to be paid on the shares of the Netherlands India Railway by the 20th instant.

The biddings for £200,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £171,100, and to Madras £28,900. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 10½d., as before, and tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 72 per cent. These results show a further increase in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

The Pacific mail steamer Japan, from China and Japan, reached San Francisco on the 20th October. Her date from Hong Kong is September 15, Yokohama October 2. She brings over five hundred passengers from China and fifteen hundred tons of merchandise. She experienced heavy weather during most of the passage.

The "United Service Bank (Limited)" has stopped payment. The liabilities are not very considerable, but they may prove sufficient to cause some individual embarrassment. The company started about three years ago as "agents and bankers to the army, navy, and civil service in England, India, and the Colonies," with a board of direction upon which were—Major-General G. Balfour, Sir W. M. Coghlan, Sir Claude de Crespigny, Bart., Major-General Richard Hall, Colonel Hobday, and Mr. E. Maltby, late member of Council at Madras. The prospectus stated that Mr. W. V. Morgan, of the firm of Saunders, Otley, and Morgan, would join the board on the completion of pending arrangements. These gentlemen, however, after a time withdrew, and the business was carried on by the manager, Mr. G. E. Hudson. The original designation of the undertaking was "The United Service Company.

Bills of exchange on the Government of Ceylon for Rs. 250,000 were disposed of on the 12th instant by tender, at the offices of the Crown Agents for the Colonies. The minimum was fixed at 1s. 11½d. per rupee, at and above which the whole amount was taken.

The following circular has been addressed to the shareholders of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company by the London agents, Messrs. Mactaggart, Tidman and Co:—"Dear Sirs,—We are glad to be able to inform you that we are in possession of a telegram from the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company (Limited), Singapore, announcing the successful opening of the new Graving Dock on the 17th of October—two steamers being already under repairs. The success of this most important department of the company's undertaking is now secured, and a large increase of very remunerative business may be with confidence expected."

Grant's Kiachta line closes on the 24th November, after which date no further telegrams for China and Japan can be despatched by that route.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Pera, from Southampton on the 14th inst., was in gold to Alexandria, £5,000; to Galle, £10,660; to Bombay, £55,700; to Madras, £11,704; to Calcutta, £20,000; in silver to Bombay, £280; to Singapore, £14,500; to Hong Kong, £12,529; total in gold, £103,064; in silver, £27,309.

BULLION AND SPECIE.

The following is from the Circular of Messrs. Moccatta and Goldsmid:—

The demand for Bar Silver for India, which at the beginning of the month appeared to be impending, has not developed itself, and the last purchases which have been effected were for transmission to the Continent. There is, however, but a very limited quantity now here. Mexican Dollars are extremely scarce, and though the inquiry for China is far from general, there are so few here that we may fairly anticipate a slight advance upon the last rate (59d.).

The amounts of gold lately received have not been important; but the French Exchange has become rather firmer, and there is no longer a Continental demand. It is quite possible, however, that the inquiry may be resumed from one day to another, while the requirements for Brazil, India, and other destinations, do not amount to a total of any magnitude.

THE ROTTERDAM BANK.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—We have noticed in the late editions of your paper various reports about this bank, as written by your "Own Correspondent in Holland." Their incorrectness is calculated to cast great discredit upon the bank, and we would therefore state that the position of the bank has been examined both by the President of the Netherlands Bank, and by the late President of the Java Bank, and pronounced by them to be perfectly satisfactory; and, further, that the business is being carried on as usual, and is not at a complete standstill, as asserted in your paper of the 6th inst.—We are, Sir, your obedient servants,

KUP,
D. BAUDUIN,
Bank of Rotterdam.

Rotterdam, Nov. 10, 1868.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

In common with most articles of produce, tea has suffered from the unsettled state of the country, consequent upon the near approach of the elections, and the transactions have been below the average of the season. The continued large deliveries, however, give tone to the market, and as stocks in the hands of both wholesale and retail dealers are extremely light, there is a constant but steady demand going on, although not sufficient to keep pace with the large quantity of tea now being poured into this market. There is no falling off in the demand for common tea, which has been taken largely both for export and home use; there are now very few parcels of old import in first hands, and no great quantity is held by speculators, as a large proportion of this class of tea which has recently been sold belonged to the latter, having been bought in the spring of the year at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4d.; this scarcity has caused a slight advance in common Congou, but it has not exceeded ½d. per lb. The last telegram from China, dated Hong Kong, October 19th, gives the export to date, 106,000,000 lbs., or an increase of only about 4,500,000 lbs. for the fortnight. This would seem to indicate that the advices from here have at last produced some good effect, and that a more rational course of proceedings would naturally follow, but as a telegram from Shanghai, dated October 14th, refers to the tea market as "firm, with an active demand," we confess we are unable to understand such an anomalous state of things, especially as we are assured, upon positive testimony, that merchants are now losing upon nearly every contract made, and as the state of the market here must have been well known in China before the 14th of October. We are glad to notice that the later arrivals from Foochow bring a better class of Kaisows than we had by the earlier ships, as although there have been but very few parcels of fine tea, the medium kinds are better in leaf, and much more free from dust; these kinds have lately sold extremely cheap. A small sale of Indian tea has been held, and as a large proportion consisted of tea of really desirable character, there was fair competition, and nearly the whole sold at full prices. There is a sensible increase in the demand for fine Assams, in consequence of the general inferiority of the China crop. In Greens there has not been much doing, although prices are much lower than they were last year. In scented teas and Oolongs there is no change. Common Congou is slightly dearer, but Broken Leaf, being rather more plentiful, has slightly declined.

SILK.

Since the 6th instant] business in silk has not been large, but all that has been done serves to show the firmness of prices, the indisposition of holders to submit to reductions, and the scarcity of stock in the hands of consumers, as they are compelled to pay full rates for what they want. A parcel of very good Kahing Tae ho's chop has realised 26s., which is a full price. Some "pheasant chop" Tsatlee have realised 27s. and 26s., some ordinary Tsatlee about 23s. 6d. to 24s. Japans have been quiet, prices about the same.

COTTON.—A feeling of depression has come over the Liverpool market, and a material falling off in the amount of business going forward has to be noted. The demand from the trade has been much restricted, and the spirit of speculation which existed a short time ago has entirely disappeared, and many who purchased somewhat freely are now quite as anxious to sell. In this condition of affairs prices show great irregularity and a general downward tendency. Quotations have been officially reduced ⅛d. per lb., and now rule as follows:—American, 10¼d. to 11½d.; Pernam., &c., 10¾d. to 11d.; Egyptian, 7d. to 22d.; Surat, 6¾d. to 9¾d.; Madras, — to —; Bengal Scinde, &c., 6¾d. to 7¼d. Arrival cotton excites very little notice, and the only sales have been of Oomrawuttee, fair new merchants, July and August sailing, at 8¼d.; basis [of middling, ship named, from New Orleans, 10⅜d.; and Savannah, 10¼d. The London market has been gradually declining throughout the interval, and rates are ¼d. per lb. lower on the spot, and ⅛d. for floating parcels.

COFFEE.—An improving statistical position of the market continues to give a healthy tone to prices. The deliveries for export show an increase for the first forty-five weeks of this year, on those of the corresponding period of the previous year, of 10,000 tons, whilst the deliveries for home consumption for the same period show an increase of 1,700 tons; on the other hand the large excess of stock is now decreasing, being only 3,000 tons heavier than in the corresponding week last year, whereas, at the end of August last, the excess amounted to about 8,000 tons. It must be borne in mind, however, that the improvement in the statistical position is only relative, for the increase in the deliveries may not be maintained, and there is still an excess of 3,000 tons to be worked off. There has been a better supply of Ceylon kinds, and about 1,500 casks Plantation sold at unaltered prices, except some fine home trade marks, which were in good demand, and obtained an advance. The business in Native Ceylon has been chiefly limited to what has been offered at public sale, as importers, having realised in the late rise a good proportion of the heavy stocks which they have held throughout the year, are not disposed to sell, except at higher prices. We hear, however, of one or two private transactions, in which Native realised 48s. 6d. to 49s. for good ordinary, and 50s. to 58s. for fine ordinary and fine bold qualities. The sales of Ceylon at public auction have comprised 1,117 casks, 288 barrels and bags Plantation; good to fine fine ordinary, at 57s. to 67s.; low middling to middling, 68s. to 77s.; good middling to bold, 78s. to 86s. 6d.; and 240 casks, 942 bags Native, common to fully good ordinary, 46s. 6d. to 49s. 6d.; fine ordinary to fine bold, 50s. to 57s. 6d.; 809 bags garblings, part good brown, at 36s. 6d. to 37s. The stock of coffee in the United Kingdom on the 1st instant was 23,900 tons, against 19,950 tons last year, and 15,500 tons at the same period of 1866. The amount on hand in the five leading ports of the Continent was 63,270 tons, against 56,050 tons in 1867, and 49,880 tons in the preceding year.

COIR GOODS.—Only the following small quantities have been offered and sold: 2 tons Cochin yarn at £29 10s. to £30 15s., 131 bales Cochin fibre at £32 10s. to £33 15s., 27 coils Ceylon rope, 3 inch at £20, and 580 coils damaged Bombay at £20 for first class.

CUTCH.—A further reduction has been submitted to, at which the demand is moderate; in auction of 500 boxes fine Pegue elephant mark 200 boxes sold at 30s., 98 boxes fine from Calcutta sold at 28s., and at the close business is reported at 29s.

CAMPHOR.—There is a slight improvement in the demand for both China and Japan, the current quotation being £7 (re-weights), at which price about 100 packages have been sold since our last report.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—There is still a steady although not active demand for Ceylon at £50 per ton.

GALLS.—Since the date of our last report there has been a slight revival in the inquiry, and twenty cases China have been sold at 51s. 6d. to 52s. 6d. Of Japan 83 cases of rather ordinary quality were offered at the auctions and partly sold at 48s. per cwt.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Of 51 cases Siam, 2 cases small to rather bold almond mixed in block sold at £20 15s. to £21, and 8 cases dark block at £9 to £9 5s.; ditto siftings, £7 10s.; of 228 cases Sumatra, 9 cases sold, rather dark to fair country split seconds at £7 15s. to £8 15s., the remainder bought in, rather dark to good at £8 to £11 10s.; brown thirds, £4 17s. 6d. to £5 10s. Copal: 100 cases common soft Manila sold rather higher, at 30s. to 30s. 6d.; 38 bags Benguela bought in at 84s. Damar: 4 cases small pale dusty Batavian bought in at 92s. 6d.

GAMBIER.—The market still remains dull, and no sales of common are reported, but in auction 620 baskets cubes bought in at 24s. 3d. to 26s.; privately 150 baskets have been sold at 23s.

ISINGLASS.—At the recent auctions 41 cases 10 bags Penang sold at rather easier prices, middling tongue 3s. 5d. to 3s. 6d., ordinary 2s. 10d. to 3s. 2d., middling leaf 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d., ordinary to low middling 2s. 10d. to 3s. 5d; also 10 cases 41 bags Bombay, thin pipe 3s. 7d., ordinary 3s., long bladder kind 2s. 9d., Manila sort 2s. to 2s. 3d.

INDIA-RUBBER.—Small business only has been done in Singapore at 1s. 8d. per lb.

JAPAN WAX.—By private contract 161 cases middling quality saucers, which were recently bought in at the auctions, sold at £4 15s. per cwt. In public sale 20 cases yellowish saucers have been offered, of which 5 cases sold at £4 16s. 6d.

MANILA HEMP.—The demand is still only moderate, but the prices current at the date of our last are firmly supported and remain without change. At auction 381 bales sold, sound at £47 10s., ordinary £43 5s. to £44, chiefly sea damaged at £46 to £47 5s. for first class.

PLUMBAGO.—The inquiry for Ceylon, which for some time past has been extremely slack, has improved; and, although a large supply has been offered, amounting to 957 barrels, the demand was active, and the whole was taken off, lump at a further advance of 3s., good dust about 1s. higher, inferior steady; fine bright lump sold at 40s. 6d. to 41s. 6d.; middling, 35s. 6d. to 36s. 6d.; good dust, 20s. 6d. to 21s.; middling to good middling, 17s. to 20s.; ordinary to low middling, 14s. 6d. to 16s.

PEPPER.—Black: The market generally has a slight upward tendency; 1,594 bags Singapore at public sale were held for an advance, and nearly all withdrawn; 1,617 bags Penang went freely, good at 3⅞d., fair 3¼d. to 3⅞d., and 547 bags dull to fair heavy Malabar at 4⅛d. to 4⅜d. Privately about 2,300 bags have been sold, mostly Penang, at 3¼d. to 3⅜d.; a few Singapore at 3½d. cash. White: 216 bags fair to good fair Singapore realised 5 1-16d. to 5⅛d., being again better prices; 64 bags Penang were bought in.

RICE.—A dull tone pervades the market, and sales have been more difficult to effect at barely previous value. The chief business reported consists of 13,000 bags heated Saigon at 9s. At auction 2,313 bags Bengal were mostly taken at and afterwards, broken white at 10s., siftings at 9s.; 578 bags Madras were withdrawn, but subsequently placed at 9s. 7½d.; of 1,328 bags Moulmein part has been sold at 11s. 6d., and 594 bags soft grain of indirect import at 10s. 6d. to 11s. Since our last report the landings have been compared with same date 1867—577 tons, against 782 tons; the deliveries, 720 tons, against 419 tons; and the stock is 32,467 tons, against 13,233 tons at the same time last year.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: At the public sales 110 bales, 9 boxes Ceylon met a brisk demand, and sold at a further advance of 1d. to 2d. per lb.; first quality, 3s. 1d. to 3s. 3d.; second, 2s. 10d. to 3s. 2d.; third, 2s. 7d. to 2s. 10d.; fourth, 1s. 6d. to 2s. Cloves: We have no business to report in East India descriptions. Mace: 26 cases Penang, of fresh import, sold at firmer prices, low middling red, 1s. 10d. to 2s.; middling, 2s. 1d. to 2s. 4d.; and 2 cases ordinary Java, at 1s. 9d. Nutmegs: A rather large supply has been offered, which met a good demand, and the greater part sold at firm prices to an occasional advance. Of 145 cases Penang 85 cases sold, 69 and 68 nuts to the lb., at 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; 76's, at 2s. 5d.; 80's, at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 2d.; 86 to 82's, at 1s. 10d. to 2s.; 98 to 92's, at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8d.; 104's, at 1s. 5d. to 1s. 6d.; 120's, at 1s. 4d.; 19 boxes Singapore were bought in, 96's at 1s. 4d., 125's at 1s. 3d.; 10 casks, 9 cases Java, sold, 74's, at 2s. 6d.; 78's, at 2s.; 85's, at 1s. 10d.; 102 to 106's, at 1s. 5d.; 135's, at 1s. 2d.

SUGAR.—Only a small business has been transacted; however, this is the second week in which decidedly less raw sugar has been bought by refiners than the average of their consumption necessitates; consequently there will doubtless be more doing again immediately. Holders of West India have continued rather firm, and have only sold at about steady prices. Business of small amount has been done in common East India at a decline of 6d. per cwt., but even at the reduction little disposition to buy is manifested. The English markets at the moment appear to be more dull than others, of which we have constant intelligence. The value has been rather advancing in America, France and Holland, while Germany is steady. At the public sales 7,064 bags Muscovado Manila were withdrawn. By private contract 4,500 bags Manila (Taal) have realised 26s. 6d. to 27s. 3d. which constitutes the only business done in East India descriptions since our last report.

SAPANWOOD.—At the recent auctions 40 tons sugar-damaged Manila sold, slightly at £10 15s. to £11 2s. 6d., badly £9 5s. to £9 10s.; 6½ tons Singapore bought in at £11 to £12; 33 tons Ceylon sold at £10 15s. to £12 5s.; one lot £11 10s.

STICKLAC.—Of 190 cases Siam offered at auction about 40 cases sold at 67s. for good free unsifted, and 43s. for small.

SKINS.—At the sales of the 13th inst. 2591 Singapore Buffalo hides were offered, of which the greater part sold, first heavy 20⅜ to 35¾ lb. at 6⅜d. to 6½d., seconds 20⅜ to 26¾ lb. at 6d., light 10½ to 13½ lb. at 6⅜d. to 6⅝d.; 1137 Penang nearly all sold, first heavy 30⅜ to 35¾ lb. at 5½d. to 5⅝d., second 35⅜ to 37¼ at 4⅞d. to 5d., light 6¼d.; 1363 Java bought in at 6d.

TIN.—Since our last report prices for Straits have become a shade lower, business having been done to a fair extent at £100 10s. to £101 10s. cash (principally at £101), and at £102 for arrival. At the close the market appears to be assuming a quieter tone, as regards the extent of the transactions, but the prices given above are firmly maintained.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Up to the 10th inst. there was little change, but since that date the market for shipping yarns has been very quiet, and to make sales spinners would have had to accept lower prices. Prices are down fully ¼d. per lb., and even at this decline there is not much disposition to purchase. In yarns for the home trade only a very trifling business has been transacted, and prices are ¼d. per lb. lower. The cloth market is almost quieter, and more depressed than that for yarns, and prices are lower, some say 3d. per piece. But the fact is, that owing to the general stagnation, and the absence of offers at any price, there has not been the means afforded of testing the extent of the depression. Many people attribute this a good deal to the absorbing interest felt in the elections—and no doubt these are exercising a certain amount of influence—but the main cause is the want of confidence in the maintenance of any price that could be named just at present. Buyers as well as sellers have their attention fixed on the fluctuations in the American cotton markets.

LAUNCHES.

On the 2nd inst. there was launched from the building yard of Messrs. William Denny and Brothers, Dumbarton, a large and handsome iron screw-steamer, forming one of the splendid fleet of vessels already possessed by the Austrian Lloyd's Steam Navigation Company, and the eighth constructed for them by the same builders. Her first and second class passenger accommodation is very extensive, and the general arrangements are most complete. The dimensions are:—Length, 274½ by 34 by 26 feet, and she measures 1,760 tons N M. Machinery of 300-horse power nominal will be fitted up by Messrs. Denny and Co. on their direct action principle. Mrs. Steyskal, wife of Captain Robert Steyskal, superintendent, very gracefully named the ship as she left the ways, Venus. For the same owners Messrs. Denny have two sister vessels to the Venus drawing near completion.

Messrs. Robertson and Co. launched on the Clyde, on the 4th inst., a fine new iron sailing ship for John Kerr, Esq., for the East India trade, built to class A A 1 at Lloyd's, and 20 years in red in the Liverpool Underwriters' Registry. The following are her principal dimensions:—Extreme length, 241 feet; length of keel and fore rake, 220 feet; breadth (moulded), 36 feet; depth of hold, 22½ feet; tonnage, net register, 1,200 tons. Her lower masts, bowsprit, lower yards, and lower topsailyards are of iron. She is fitted with all the latest improvements as regards construction, &c. She was named the Malabar by Miss Isabella Kerr, daughter of the owner, and will be commanded by Captain Galloway, late of the ship Isabella Kerr.

Messrs. Barclay, Curle, and Co., launched on the 29th Oct. from their yard, Whitenich, an iron ship of about 1,370 tons register. The vessel, which was named the Strathblane by Miss Christie Dalton, London, is in length 225 feet, in breadth 37 feet, in depth 22½ feet, and will be fitted up for sea in a thoroughly efficient manner. She is intended for the East India trade by the owners, Messrs. Jas. and Alex. Allan, of Glasgow.

CHINA OCEAN RACING.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Under the above head you have a paragraph in your last publication of the voyage of two ships, viz., the Titania and Forward Ho, which is not quite complete. There were three competitors in this race, all of which left Shanghai on the 13th June, but, as will be seen, did not make the same passages. Their names are as follows:—Forward Ho, of Aberdeen, 945 tons; Titania, of London, 879 tons; and the Leander, of London, 883 tons.

The Leander, Captain Petherick, arrived at Deal on the 29th Sept., after a fine passage of 108 days, and was the winner by no less than seventeen days, the Forward Ho and Titania not arriving until the 16th Oct, both being 125 days.

The winning ship, the Leander, is a new composite vessel, built last year for the Merchant Shipping Company, London, by Mr. J. G. Lawrie, of Glasgow, and was only 102 days on the outward voyage to Shanghai.

By inserting the above you will do justice to the Leander, and oblige,—Yours truly,

J. B. B.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use f for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE BORNEO COMPANY (LIMITED).

Singapore, April 6, 1868.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—SAVED FROM DESTRUCTION.—It should be deeply impressed on every one who has a proper regard for health that the most serious diseases which can affect mankind first manifest themselves by trifling signs, and that it is the highest wisdom to meet and subjugate the first disordered action, wherever and whenever it displays itself in the system. Holloway's Pills will effect this without risk, pain, or other drawback. These well-known and universally appreciated Pills relieve the constitution from all difficulties, expel all impediments to the natural action of any organ, and prevent undue "wear and tear" to the system. By their purifying power over the blood the whole body is refreshed, and each individual function properly stimulated.

THE MAILS, &c.

The present homeward mail left each port eastward of Penang one day before the date indicated by the P. and O. Company's time-table, to allow for the extra time consumed by recommencing the Penang service.

The next homeward mail will be the French, which is expected about the 7th December (this day week).

The change in the French mail service, which was to have commenced this month, is again postponed, and the outward steamer, instead of leaving Marseilles on the 12th, as we understood was arranged, will sail as heretofore on the 19th. Perhaps the new system will be adopted from the commencement of 1869.

Telegrams from Hong Kong via Galle extend to the 2nd November, received here on the 26th Nov. By the Kiachta route (now closed for outward messages) Shanghai telegrams to Nov. 3 were received on the 24th inst.

By way of San Francisco and New York telegrams have reached us (through the Atlantic cable) as late as Oct. 28 from Japan, but they bring no later reliable news than that received by the present mail.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The Hiogo and Osaka Herald announces that the public sale of land on the foreign concession at Kobé took place on the 10th September. Thirty-seven lots found purchasers at rates varying from a quarter of a boo to twenty-four boos and a quarter above the upset price—the highest prices paid being 24¼, 11, and 7¾ boos per tsubo.

We are indebted to the Hiogo and Osaka Herald for the following particulars. Out of the seventy-three lots offered for public competition there were thirty-seven sold; the total of the day's sale amounts in full to 54,000 dols. Paper money was tendered by some of the purchasers and refused by the auctioneers; under instructions from the Consuls, however, it was afterwards accepted.

We also learn from the Hiogo and Osaka Herald of the 12th Sept. that a meeting of the mercantile community had been held to discuss the expediency of measures being adopted for resisting an order issued by the Custom-house authorities at Osaka, to the effect that duty shall be paid at that port for native produce shipped thence to Kobe. It was resolved accordingly that a committee should be appointed to communicate with Governor Ito on the subject, and further, that the result of such interview should be laid before the Treaty Consuls. The formation of a Chamber of Commerce also occupied the attention of the meeting, and it was decided that rules should be drawn up to that end, such rules, however, to be considered as subject to subsequent revision.

Mr. Watts, the young man who proceeded to Kioto a short time ago, and was brought back as prisoner, has recovered all the goods he took to that place for sale, and has since been sentenced to a fine of 100 dols. by his Consul, who gave him a severe reprimanding for his unwarrantable act, making him understand that the next case of that kind would be punished by deportation.

"Being now established in my reign and in the Government over all people of Japan, I have taken into consideration that Yedo is well adapted for the seat of Government, inasmuch as it is the greatest, the most populous, and the wealthiest city in the Eastern empire. I therefore decree that Yedo shall be the seat of my Government, and the city shall henceforth be called Toukéi, or the eastern capital. This I do because I consider my whole empire as but one body, and therefore I am anxious to show no partiality to either the Eastern or Western provinces.

"Let all my subjects be informed that such is my decree, given in this 7th month of the year Tatsu."

The following items of news are taken from the Hiogo and Osaka Herald:—

A heavy earthquake was experienced here on the morning of September 11th at half-past one o'clock. Judging from the manner we were rocked about, and the duration of its shock, we think that we are justified in saying that it is the severest we ever experienced in Japan. We have heard it surmised before that earthquakes were unknown in these parts.

The name of the city of Yedo has been changed by the Court at Kioto to Ton Kio (East city or Eastern miyaco). The cause of this is, we believe, attributable to it being the intention of his Imperial Majesty the Mikado to have the Court represented at that city by some person bearing a very high title.

Five pieces of granite are now being carved for the purpose of raising a monument in the cemetery to the memory of the men of the Duplelx, who fell at Sakai in the late outrage. We believe the workmanship is to be of the best available, and the stone to be of the best procurable in these parts.

YOKOHAMA.

From this port we have a fortnight's later news, the present mail having left on the 7th October. The outward mail of July 31 was received on the 23rd September, and that of August 14 on the 1st of October, the latter being brought some days before its due date by the extra steamer Sunda. The latest London news, however, was that brought by the Pacific steamer China, in the shape of cable telegrams to September 1.

Digitized by Google

The news by this mail is partially corroborative of the accounts received via San Francisco and published in our last issue. The Japan Times' summary is as follows:—

The Sunda has been sent up specially for the silk-egg freight, and we hear with great satisfaction that the enterprise of the P. and O. Company and the exertions of its agents here have been rewarded by a very valuable cargo.

The agents of the Pacific Mail Company continue to give deep offence to shippers, European passengers, and all but the crowds of Japanese Yaconins whom they transport hence to various places on the coast, diverging from their routes in a way which, however profitable for the moment, is extremely risky and quite out of all rule and precedent for mail steamers. From every quarter we hear complaints, and if the directors of the company in America have any serious intention of competing for what trade there is between Japan and China, or for our own coast trade, the sooner they make a change in their Yokohama staff the better for the shareholders. Private enterprise has hitherto refrained from competition with a powerful company, but the temper of the public at present cordially invites it, and if one of the Shanghai Steam Navigation Associations would extend its operations, or if a small company would start to carry mails, cargo, and passengers regularly on a line between Yokohama and Shanghai, touching at Nagasaki and Hiogo, the whole business would be placed at once in their hands, and the Pacific mail steamers would not get a package. Then it would be found, perhaps too late, that years of care and attention to the public wants would be required to recover the ground lost during the last few months of insolence and incapacity.

We are sorry to have to record, while on the subject of this company, a fatal accident on board the Hermann, which occurred during her late trip north. A plate blew out of one of her boilers, and five Chinamen were killed on the spot. Two of the engineers, Messrs. Herman and Barney, were badly scalded, and died subsequently.

Nee-e-gata has undoubtedly been taken by the Mikado's troops, but the accounts which have reached us thence as to the details of the capture are contradictory. In our leading columns will be found an article discussing the issue lately raised between the English Minister on the one hand, and the Representatives of Prussia and Italy on the other, apparently by contradictory statements made to each by the Mikado's officers here. To this matter we referred slightly in our last. We may take the occasion to mention that the whole behaviour of the officials of the Mikado is such as seriously impedes the efforts of the foreign friends of the new Government. Complaints are daily made by merchants of every nationality, of the Custom House people, who are more insolent, greedy, and corrupt than the men they have succeeded, without the one redeeming quality of knowing their work. The superior officers are even less intelligent and more arrogant than their predecessors, and the transaction of all business is more difficult and less pleasant than at any time since 1863. We lately had to report an insult to the Prussian Minister; now we have to mention a difficulty with the Dutch. We alluded in the summary of our last Overland Mail to an attempt by the Custom House to confiscate certain produce brought hither on Dutch account from Nee-e-gata. The Ministers resisted this, and the native authorities were so stupidly audacious as to issue orders that no boats should be let to hire to Dutch shippers or importers, and refused permits to land or ship Dutch cargo. Of course they had to give way and to apologise, but the mere fact of the attempt having been made shows how completely unfit for their position are the present representatives of the Mikado's government at this port.

It is not a matter of wonder, with such advantage given to them by their enemy, that the Northern party should attempt to influence the Ministers in their own direction. In another column will be found a document addressed to the representatives of foreign powers by the chiefs of the rebel army, a manifesto maintaining the justice of their cause. Now, just at the close of the mail, we hear of a more important move. The Tokugawa clan has, through the admiral of the late Shiogoon, formally proclaimed war in a circular letter addressed to the foreign Ministers, and the Kai-yo-mar, a powerful frigate bought last year from the Dutch, has left her anchorage at Yedo. This step has been taken by the clan, probably without the knowledge, and certainly without the consent of its chief, the ex-Shiogoon Yoshihisa, who remains at Tsurunga, in quiet obedience to the orders of the Mikado. That the foreign Ministers will accept this declaration as giving the rebels belligerent rights we cannot think likely, but it must not be forgotten that the sovereignty of the Mikado has as yet been formally acknowledged only by the Court of St. James's. Everything appears to us to point towards a compromise as the proper solution of the existing trouble; this, our readers will remember, we have repeatedly urged on both parties during the current year; our views are stated, somewhat more distinctly than usual, in our present issue.

We have little of moment to record of our social life. The weather has been desperately bad, and, in the total absence of any municipal care of the settlement, we have almost nightly robberies reported, constant complaints of the want of drainage and the inefficiency of the scavenger system, and streets almost impassable. The correspondence columns of the local papers have of course been more than usually full.

In direct opposition to the action taken by his colleagues, Sir Harry Parkes has issued a notification warning British subjects against trading at Ne-e-gata, declaring it not open to foreign trade, although Prussian and Italian subjects are allowed to go there under the protection of their respective Governments. The notifictaion concludes thus:—

"The undersigned accordingly notifies this information (that the Japanese Government has protested) to all subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, and hereby warns them that, as Niigata* has not yet been opened to foreign trade, any British subject proceeding to that port does so at his own risk, and cannot claim, while thus engaged, the protection of Her Majesty's Government."

The following is a translation of the circular letter of justification addressed by the "rebel" chiefs to the foreign Ministers:—

"Notice to every Foreign Minister from Oshu, Dewa, and Echigo. 1868.

"Sir,—We, the generals of armies of Dewa, Oshu, and Echigo, have the honour to inform you that since the American Minister first came here in Japan, and made the treaty of amity and trade, the foreigners and Japanese are coming and going between the mutual countries, and passing over the waves on a hundred thousand miles so as going on a flat road. As your Government is continuing the trade here with all the heart, we have the great reason to hope that every foreign study and European accomplishment will be opened in this country in a few years; really, this is the most happy for the Japanese people.

"Well then, there is something we wish to communicate you about. Since the Tokugawa family had returned his authority of Taikun to Kiyotoa the Japanese Emperor is still youth, and the villains keep the authorities of the government in themselves, and there is no good government, but a very cruel and violent behaviour showing their powers; and Daimios being afraid, are serving them at any order, but most of the said Daimios are not of the sincere obedience. This is the thing which the God and the people look at, and the time will come soon, in which the worst is killed, the right becomes to be seen, the brothers are friendly, and the master and servants are on good terms; to be sure this time will come, for the Heaven is also on this country!"

"As our masters and we saw the above reason through, an agreement has been made between us after an upright consultation, having to show our right to the world. If an enemy comes to us we shall resist him, and if he retires we shall not pursue him; we only are keeping our places, and are for a light time in the world!

"We suppose that every foreign Minister looking at this domestic trouble had found such a reason as we mentioned, and seen our heart through already; but in order to let you know more clearly of this we have presumed to send you this letter, and we hope that you will not make any mistake between the right and wrong, while they will perform anything in the name of the Emperor.

"We hope you will excuse us this freedom, and beg leave to remain, Sir, your obedient servants,

"Ashina Yukiye, under the Prince Sendai.
"Shikibe Nagato, " " Yonezawa.
"Kajiwara Heima, " " Aidz.
"Ishiwara Kurayemon, " Shonai.
"Kawai Keinoszke, " " Naga-oka.

"There is said that this letter has been received by the Ministers of ten countries, and at the same time their receipts have been given out."

The arrest of Mr. Dell'Oro, announced by last mail, is understood to be in consequence of a suspicion, on the part of the Minister of Commerce in Florence, that he has detected among the cards seized in Italy cards sent by M. Dell'Oro in 1865, a forgery of the French Consulate seal. The general impression in Yokohama is that the charge will not be sustained.

The well-known gunboat Snap, formerly commanded on this station by Lieutenant Gurdon, R.N., has been sold at public auction by Messrs. Cope and Co., and bought by Messrs. Siber and Brenwald for 7,250 dols.

SHANGHAI.

Dates hence are to the 14th October. The English mail of the 14th August arrived on the 27th September, and that of the 28th August on 13th October, with telegrams to the 15th September. The American mail, with dates from New York to the 1st September, arrived on the 7th October.

The following items are from the North China Herald:—We hear upon authority, which we believe to be reliable, that the Chinese officials have despatched 700 Imperial troops from Tientsin in a sailing vessel to Chefoo, to proceed thence to the gold diggings and "drive away the foreigners." We understand that these troops first desired to take passage in one of Messrs. Russell and Co.'s steamers, but the price asked for conveyance—namely, Tls. 3,000—was considered too high, and they therefore resolved to take a sailing ship. The consequences of this step are likely to be serious, as it is not by any means improbable that the diggers may offer resistance; or if they do not, that the Chinese may go farther than the necessities of the case may require, and not content themselves, as they should, with merely bringing the men to their Consul, provided they do not offer resistance.

* We have elsewhere commented on the inconvenience caused by this absurdly affected manner of spelling Ne-e-gata.

We have already mentioned that it is purposed to get up a company for the erection of cotton-spinning machinery in Shanghai. The news is creating great excitement among the peasantry. A petition has, we are told, been presented to the Taoutai, begging his influence to prevent such a calamity. There are thousands of women in the neighbourhood, said the petitioners, who gain a livelihood by hand spinning, and who will be reduced to starvation if their occupation be superseded by machinery.

A report was current yesterday (Oct. 7th) to the effect that the steamer Mona had struck on a rock in the Inland Sea, during a violent gale, while engaged in transporting Japanese troops.

SHANGHAI, October 13.

When I wrote you last public opinion was busy about the Yangchow affair, and adverse criticisms upon Commander Bush's conduct were freely uttered. Since then no steps have been taken by the British authorities beyond sending one of the Consular assistants to Nanking, with what object is uncertain. This, however, is certain, that he did nothing. Tseng-kwo-fan holds to his intention of not giving satisfaction; and although Sir Harry Keppel arrived here with the Salamis, Satellite and Rodney, no steps have been taken to bring the Viceroy to his senses. We have still to learn that striking while the iron is hot is the secret of success in politics as well as in smithcraft. So far, we have borne the insults offered us without retaliation. We have indeed set an example of the most orthodox patience and resignation to our fiery and volatile French neighbours. On the 28th ult. a proclamation, dictated by Tsing-kuo-fan was posted at Chinkiang by the Chihsien. This acknowledged the right of bodies corporate, such as missions, to rent land and houses, but imposed certain restrictions, as to reporting to the magistrates, &c., not contemplated by the treaty. The people, however, probably instigated by rumours from the yamens, put up on the following day a counter-proclamation, a translation of which I send you :—

"Important Notice!

"We, the people of Chinkiang and vicinity, are determined that no houses or land within the city shall be let to, or held by foreigners; and hereby give notice that, in case any houses are so let or sold, the houses shall be burned and the person letting them cast into the flames. And if any of the assistants in the Yamun point out public vacant lands and desire the officers to let such to foreigners, their houses shall also be burned and they themselves treated as above noticed. First Shih Chou and Chun Wun Ho'ng shall be burned, together with their houses; furthermore, we will not pay the customary taxes. Notice by the people of Chinkiang and vicinity."

It is not hard for any one at all acquainted with Chinese official wire-pulling to divine the inspiration which prompted this notice. But the animus of the magistrates was clearly shown by the fate which befell a luckless innkeeper who was rash enough to take in the Rev. Mr. Taylor and his party. In the face of the English protest, he could not very well have been actually tried for his offence. But his ruin was effected quite as surely by the ingenious plan of sending a mob of Yamen followers to live upon him—to eat, drink and smoke at his expense until he was rendered utterly bankrupt. We are all waiting to learn what will be the final result, but as yet there is no sign. Meanwhile, not to be behindhand, the Shanghai people pasted a notice on one of the gates of the city, defaming the Christian religion and the missionaries. This the French Consul took up, and compelled the Taoutai to issue the following proclamation :—

"An anonymous proclamation is in itself a grave violation of the laws of the Empire. In addition, the construction of churches and the propagation of the Christian religion, as done by Europeans in the Empire of China, is authorised by the treaty; and, further, it is optional with every individual to follow or not to follow this religion as he likes. Why, then, should such proclamations be fixed up contrary to all law? It is evidently a violation of the laws. I have given orders to the Che-Hsien to find out the authors of this proclamation, and to punish them severely. I also publish this proclamation to inform the inhabitants of this part of the country, and those from other provinces residing at Shanghai, that anonymous placards are prohibited, and that the right to propagate religion is contained in the treaty. In future, therefore, all must preserve peace and harmony, and each be allowed to follow his own belief and his liberty of conscience. Those who have the audacity to disobey will be arrested, judged, and punished without remission, and with all the severity of the law. Tremble!"

These signs are not without their import. They are indeed the best and most practical comment upon Sir Rutherford Alcock's policy.

While I am writing of purely native matters I may as well tell you that the well-known Li Hung-Chang has been promoted to the Vice-Royalty of the Two Hu, Tseng Kwo-fan being ordered to assume the government of Chihli, while Ma, Futai of Fukien, takes his place at Nanking. Ma is a Mahomedan, and is said to be bitterly hostile to Christianity. The north of China is still disturbed, and the neighbourhood of Newchwang has lately been ravaged by banditti. Of the latter, however, a large number, including three chiefs, have been captured and executed, and for the time being tranquillity has been restored.

The reports from Chefoo are favourable to miners. About forty diggers are now busily engaged on the gold-fields, and are said to be making far more than is sufficient to pay their expenses. The last advices from Tienstin brought the news that an expedition was being fitted out there to guard the Cheefo mines, and prevent foreigners from working. If this be true, and it is well authenticated, we may expect to hear soon of pitched battles between the miners and the native troops. The proximity of the gold-fields does not create much excitement at Chefoo itself. The store-keepers are making money by the increased demand for supplies, but the general community pursue the even tenor of their way. The autumn race meeting was held on the 25th and 26th ult., and was very well attended by the natives and foreigners. The Taoutai presented a cup, and addressed a complimentary speech to the winner, thus making this race the most attractive of the eight events set down in the programme. From Hankow there is no news of importance. H.B.M. gunboat Dove while on a pleasure excursion up the river went ashore about five miles above the settlement, but was towed off by Messrs. Russell and Co.'s steamer Moyune, which was immediately sent by the S. S. N. Co.'s agent to her assistance.

By last mail Mr. Davidson, an old and highly respected resident at Ningpo, returned to England. His departure was signalised in a most unusual and gratifying manner by the native guilds. They presented him with a pair of umbrellas as a mark of their esteem; and, indeed, when you remember that one dissentient voice is sufficient to prevent a testimonial of this kind, you will admit that Mr. Davidson's career must have been one upon which the breath of suspicion never rested. The foreign residents have started the plan of bi-monthly lectures on Chinese subjects. Two have already been delivered, one by the Rev. A. E. Monk on "Chinese Beggars," the other by Mr. Gardner, of the British Consulate, on a Chinese novel. The attendance upon both occasions was very large, and the plan seems to meet general approval.

Turning now to matters purely local, your readers have perhaps already heard by telegraph that the Ajax has been successfully raised—a great triumph for Mr. Batchelder, the engineer who took the contract. With this exception the settlement has during the last fortnight been singularly barren of incident. Dr. Alford, Bishop of Victoria, has paid us a flying visit on his way to Peking, but promises a longer stay on his return, when he purposes to consecrate the new cemetery, leave having been obtained from the Municipal Council. Our local Parliament has not been idle. A plan adopted by the last land-renters' meeting for supplying the settlements with water, by means of a large reservoir on the bank of the Defence Ditch, has been shelved by the Public Works Committee, on the grounds that if carried out according to the original scheme it would prove useless, and if made really of advantage it would involve an appalling outlay. Perhaps, after the raising of the Ajax the most noteworthy event of the fortnight has been the establishment of a new evening paper—the Shanghai Courier. Its editorial department is presided over by a committee, whose members have as yet kept their identity in the dark, although suspicion points to three gentlemen well known as occasional contributors to the local press. Mr. Jones, of Consular notoriety, who is a partner in the management of a paper similar in plan to the Courier, considers himself aggrieved by the existence of a rival, and some acrimonious articles, have in consequence varied the dull monotony of the papers, to the amusement of the reading public. The advent of autumn with a much diminished temperature has given an impetus to amusement, and the cricketers have opened the ball by three highly successful matches. The Rowing Club have also commenced operations, and a regatta is announced for the 30th and 31st instants. Of the thirteen events promised that which excited most interest was a grand "International Race," English v. American eight oars; but it was officially announced yesterday that, in consequence of the illness of one of the American eight, the race is "off." Both the "Amateur Dramatic Company" and the "Concordia Liedertafel und Theater Verein" have opened the theatrical season most successfully. We have likewise a professional company at present in the settlement, and therefore we may fairly look forward to a plentiful harvest of amusement during the winter months. The Asiatic Society has received a new instalment of vitality in consequence of the gift by the English Government of a strip of land, upon which it proposed to build a suitable meeting-hall, library, and museum. The "Debating Society" also is recruiting its forces for the winter campaign, and there is a proposal still sub judice to establish lectures similar to those lately inaugurated at Ningpo. Preparations are on foot for the race meeting, and the bi-annual sale of griffins has taken place. The days of competition for ponies have, however, passed by, and Tls. 140 was the highest figure obtained. It must be confessed, indeed, that the mob was not very promising. As an additional means of enjoyment in prospect, I may mention that there is a chance of a good road being at last constructed between Shanghai and Wusung. The Customs' have offered to contribute one-third of the requisite cost (Tls. 1,500) if the community will subscribe the remainder (Tls. 1,000). Were a road fit for carriages once made, and kept under efficient supervision so as to prevent the destruction of the bridges by seekers for fuel, and the tearing up of the road by cross drains from the paddy fields, bungalows would quickly spring up at Wusung, and few but those absolutely obliged to stay would spend a summer's night in the settlement.

You have no doubt already heard of the death by drowning of Mr. Harris, paymaster of the Rodney. It occurred on the very evening of the ship's arrival at Wusung, and was caused by the oversetting of his boat by a fishing stake. He was at the time on his way to Shanghai. Mr. Harris was most popular with his messmates, and although not personally known to many in Shanghai, his death happening under circumstances so peculiar cast an unwonted gloom over the community.

The Mixed Court has signally failed to give satisfaction to foreigners. The presiding mandarin has no power to act in cases of any importance, and hence the abuse still exists which the establishment of the court was designed to rectify. A glaring piece of injustice was lately perpetrated which has laid the institution open to the sneers of the local press. A compradore, employed by a person named Mayne, sought the protection of the court against a number of workmen who had put up some buildings for his master. It appears that Mr. Mayne had agreed to give 100 dols. for the work in question, but it was executed so badly that he had it valued, and refused to pay more than 60 dols. The compradore had nothing to do with the transaction, either in making the contract, refusing to pay, or obtaining the valuation. Nevertheless, he had been frequently set upon, beaten, and otherwise ill-used. These facts were well established by evidence; nevertheless, the mandarin "recommended" him to pay his assailants 20 dols., and thus settle the matter. This is but a specimen of the justice administered; yet the strange part of the story is that an English assessor—one of the consular assistants—is supposed to aid the Chinese magistrate in coming to his decisions. A curious instance of "trade-unionism" was brought to light here the other day. The carpenters struck for higher wages, and stopped work at the docks. One of the dock superintendents, not to be bullied, immediately procured a gang of seventy-five workmen from Hong Kong, and these the unionists endeavoured to intimidate. The ringleader was arrested and sentenced to sixty blows, while the other offenders were admonished and dismissed.

The English mail of the 14th August arrived here on the 26th ult., and that of the 28th August was due, and arrived to-day. The arrangement whereby the incoming and outgoing mails fall on the same day, is, as you may imagine, most unfortunate.

HONG KONG.

Our advices from this port extend to the 20th October. The outward mail of Aug. 28 was delivered on the 6th October, with telegrams to the 15th of September. By other vessels from Calcutta later London telegrams, to the 24th September, had been received.

The chief interest of the news centres in the fact that the colony is once more in a solvent state. At a meeting of the Hong Kong Legislative Council on the 3rd October the estimates for 1869 were laid on the table. The Governor stated that on the 31st December, 1869, there would be a surplus of revenue of about 170,000 dols.

Apart from this, the local news is meagre, and is thus summed up by the China Overland Trade Report:—

"The event of the fortnight in Hong Kong has been the meetings of the Legislative Council and the discussions on the estimates. These exhibit a considerable increase in the annual expenditure, and in so far are open to censure. The colony has not been progressing during these last three years, and its prospects are not very brilliant in the future. The decrease in the amount of business done here is something astounding; the value of all kinds of property has fallen, yet the expenditure increases year by year, and the taxation in the same ratio. It is hard to say where, in the estimates, the reduction is to be made, but there is a strong feeling that we have too many officials for the work to be done, and that one half of those in the higher grades could safely be done without, if those to be left behind were men able and willing to work, as, for example, his Excellency the Governor himself works. The detailed estimates appear further on this report, so that it is needless here to introduce the figures. An Ordinance introduced for the purpose of providing Captain Quin, Superintendent of the Hong Kong police force, with a decent excuse in the way of a pension for retiring from a service for which he is totally unfit, was passed without comment in Council, although out of doors it was much questioned, and strongly objected to. Perhaps the councillors were wise to say nothing against it, for nothing they could have said would have prevented it passing. Another Ordinance of some importance was introduced, but referred to a special committee for amendment; in deference to the very well grounded opposition of the public press. It is a draft ordinance, framed for the purpose of regulating buildings in Hong Kong, and is supposed to have been modelled on the Metropolitan Buildings' Acts, London. Had it passed as first read it would be a most hurtful piece of legislation, and must have been repealed or largely amended in a short time. It copies from the English Act the strict rules and minutes, and apparently impertinent legislation, for which that Act is distinguished, but omits all those provisions which render those rules so elastic and accommodating in practice, and which deprive the Act of the least semblance of harsh or unnecessary interference with the rights of property."

"His Excellency's financial statement speaks for itself, and he may well be proud of the reformation he has effected in that respect. The colony is now out of debt, having paid up all arrears of military contribution, and has in hand a sum of money available for purposes of improvement. A new line of road was proposed, but negatived, as not required. The Civil Hospital is to benefit by the change, and the funds proposed for the road will go far to rebuild the hospital on its present site. A vote was passed for a new steam gunboat and for a steam launch for the colony, both of doubtful necessity, and a sum was placed on the estimates to the credit of the City Hall, to cover the salary of a librarian and curator.

"The deaths of Mrs. Smale, the wife of his honour the Chief Justice, and of Mr. Clark, Acting Assistant Surveyor-General, have thrown a gloom over the colony."

The present mail brings a reply from the Colonial Secretary of Hong Kong to the "Memorial" addressed by the committee of the Social Science Association to the Governor, on the subject of the gambling license. We hope to be able to reproduce it entire in our next issue.

SIAM.

Advices from Bangkok bring the news that his Majesty Prabat Somdetch Pra Chom Klau died at a little past nine P.M. on the 1st of October, in the sixty-fourth year of his age and the eighteenth of his reign. Thus Siam has lost, perhaps, the most enlightened and accomplished prince that ever ruled the country. At ten P.M., the royal council of Senabawdees, consisting of princes, nobles and Bhuddhist priests, met in the Royal audience hall under the presidency of H.E. Chow Phya Kalahome, and unanimously elected for king Prabat Somdetch Pra Paramindr Maha Chulalongkorn Kate Klou Chou-Yu-Hua, the eldest son of the deceased King. As the new King is young, H.R.H. Prince Chowfa Maha Mala was appointed as his Majesty's assistant adviser in matters of state and Government. H.R.H. Prince Mun Pawarwijajan, commonly called Prince George Washington, and well known, too, and highly popular with foreign residents, was elected as Second King. H.R.H. has been in command of one of the Siamese war steamers, and is a practical sailor. At Hua Wan, during the late eclipse, his ship was inspected by the late Captain Edye, of H.M.S. Satellite, who spoke in high terms of her condition and the discipline and efficiency of her crew. H.R.H. will be known as second king, under the title of Krom Pra Racha Wang Bowwawn Bowara Sahtan Mongkon. The obsequies of the late king, or the royal cremation, will not take place till April next. The new regime was installed peaceably and quietly, nor were any apprehensions entertained of disturbances. H.E. the Prime Minister, Chow Phya Kalahome, had gone into the country for a few days' recreation, and this does not look as if there was any probability of any emeute taking place.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present mail brings advices to Singapore to the 27th Oct. Owing to the resumption of the Penang service the interval has been longer than usual, and the following summary (from the Straits Times) presents some interesting items of news:—

The Emeu arrived from Galle via Penang on the evening of the 15th October with the home mails of 11th September, and brought London telegrams down to the 3rd. She brought news also of the wreck of the steamer Reiver, on the 18th September, on the Preparis Islands, near Rangoon, with 1,600 chests of opium on board, valued at 30 lacs, or £300,000. No further particulars have yet been received.

There has been some more correspondence about the Gambier question, but as the Bill has been lost in the Council, the interest in it has died out, and further discussion has become unnecessary for the present.

The Legislative Council held a sitting on the 16th October, when a discussion took place as to the propriety of enacting a Bill for compulsory vaccination. The vote of the Council was in favour of such a measure, the Hon. T. Scott being alone against it. A memorandum from the Commissioner of Police and the Colonial Surgeon in favour of the Bill was laid before the Council, as also a memorandum from the Attorney-General against it, but nevertheless the latter hon. gentleman voted for it. It was also agreed that a Bill for the Registration of Births and Deaths was required. It is very odd that nothing was said about marriages. Do our councillors imagine that the natives never marry?

The Governor laid before the Council the estimates for 1869, accompanied by an explanatory letter from the Auditor-General. The revenue is put at 1,390,476 dols., and the expenditure at 1,318,217 dols., showing a balance of 72,258 dols. in favour of the revenue. The memorandum of the Auditor-General is worth perusing. The hon. gentleman states that on the 1st April, 1867, the colony started free of debt. From 1st April, 1867, to 31st December, 1868, the total revenue, exclusive of loans, will be 2,136,214 dols., and the total expenditure, including Government House, new steam vessels, and everything else, will be 2,016,480 dols., leaving a surplus of revenue over expenditure of 120,764 dols. Add to this the estimated surplus for 1869, viz., 72,258 dols., and on the 31st December, 1869, the colony will have on hand the very handsome sum of 193,022 dols., and will thus beat proud and haughty Hong Kong by 23,022 dols.! Let us hope that the figures will turn out to be correct to a cent; but it may be as well not to be too sanguine. The statement is almost too good—too couleur de rose—to be true, and we hardly think it is lucky for the Straits and Hong Kong to be in such good case. We shall further only remark, that it is to be noted that the estimated expenditure for 1869 is 4,000 dols. in excess of that for 1868, and this, notwithstanding a saving on steamers, convict and local jails, of 35,000 dols. This shows that expenditure is increasing as well as revenue.

The Tanjong Pagar Dock was opened on the 17th Oct., by his Excellency the Governor, with great eclat and sucess. The day was observed as a general holiday by all classes. Lady Ord, Sir Benson and Lady Maxwell, and all the beauty and fashion of the place graced the occasion by their presence.

On the same day the steamer Vine arrived from Bangkok, bringing news of the death of the King of Siam; his Majesty, Prabat Somdetch Pra Chom Klau, died a little past nine o'clock on the night of the 1st Oct. His eldest son, H.R.H. Prince Chulalongkorn, succeeds him by election under the title of Prabat Somdetch Pra Paramindr Maha Chulalongkorn Kale Klou Chou-Hu-Hua. A second King has also been elected, viz., H.R.H. Prince Krom Mun Pawarwijayian, commonly called Prince George Washington, under the title of Krom Pra Racha Wang Bowwawu Bouwara Sahtau Mongkou. Some apprehensions of a revolution were entertained, which have turned out to be without any foundation. From the China papers also we learn that a serious difference had arisen between his late Majesty and Mr. Alabaster, H.B.M.'s Consul, which made the latter go so far as to haul down his flag, but no reliable particulars are given.

The Cavanagh Bridge has arrived at last from Glasgow, and is being landed at the Tanjong Pagar Wharf. This public work, which will be such a convenience to the European portion of the community, is making exceedingly slow progress.

The powder storage question has been settled so far by permission being granted to a Chinese Kongsi to build a shore magazine at Tanah Merah Kechil, seven miles away from town, and capable of holding 20,000 piculs. It is a moot question whether a shore magazine, even at this distance, is as safe to the town as a floating hulk only two miles away.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—During the earlier portion of the interval business considerably improved, and prices for all leading staples advanced. Subsequently, however, a fall in the value of native coin, combined with the setting in of heavy rains, caused a relapse, and at the departure of the mail business was almost suspended, and rates had gone back to the former level, except for Yarn, prices for which were maintained. Cotton Yarn: Business had been limited to a few sales of 16-24s and 28-32s, dealers having been occupied in taking delivery of former purchases. Grey Shirtings: Less business had been done, and rates were only just maintained. White Shirtings had declined in value and were out of demand. T-Cloths: Nothing doing; quotations nominal. Spots and Brocades: Quiet, nominal, and unsaleable. Velvets: Less inquiry for Black; quotations easier. Taffachelass: There was some enquiry, but at unremunerative prices. Other Cotton Goods not inquired for. Camlets: Little inquiry for anything but Black, which had been rather freely saleable at $18.50 to 18. Scarlet and Assorted difficult of sale. Cloth is in less demand. Blankets: Still wanted, but no stocks; prices firm. Metals: Very depressed. The current quotations were as follows:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16 to 24, $48 to 49 per picul; 28 to 32, $52 to 53; 38 to 42, $48 to 49. Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.30 to 2.38 per piece; 8.4 to 8.8 lbs., $2.93 to 3.03. White Shirtings, 56 to 60 reed, $2.80 to 3; 64 to 66, $3 to 3.20; 68 to 72, $3.30 to 3.60; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.90 to 2; 6.8 to 7 lbs., $2.10 to 2.30.; Turkey Red Cloth, 24 yards 32 inches, $2.80 to 3.10; Spotted Shirtings: White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Brocades, White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Velvets, Black, $8.75 to 9.75; Assorted, $8 to 9; Taffachelass (single warp), $2.60 to 2.80; (double warp), $3.20 to 3.50; Chintzes, $2.20 to 2.60; Victoria Lawn, $1 to 1.25; Handkerchiefs, $0.75 to 1 per dozen; Camlets, S., $16 to 17 per piece; S.S., $15 to 15.50; S.S.S., $13 to 14; B.B., $16 to 17; B.B.B., $16 to 17; Camlet Cords, $3.75 to 5.25; Orleans Plain, $3.75 to 5; Figured, $4 to 4.25; Mousselines de Laine, 30 yards 30 inches, $6 to 8; Long Ells, $8 to 9.50; Lastings, $13 to 16; Crape Lastings, $6 to 11; Lustres, $4 to 5.50; Cloth, Broad, $1.50 to 2 per yard; Medium, $1 to 1.75; Union (54 inches), $0.80 to 1; Pilot and Army, $0.80 to 1.25; Blankets, $0.70 to $0.80 per lb.; Alpacas (30 yards), $5.50 to 7 per piece; ditto (42 yards), $10 to 11. Iron, Nail Rod, $3 to 3.50 per picul; Hoop, $4.25 to 4.50; Bars, $2.75 to 3.50; Pig, $1.30 to 1.50; Wire, $6.50 to 7; Lead, $7 to 7.75; Tin, $17 to 18; Tin Plates, $8 to 8.50; Window Glass, $2.50 to 4 per box.

TIENTSIN.—There had been a slight improvement in the demand, and sales 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings had been effected at Tls. 2.2.6 to 2.2.7.

HANKOW.—The market had continued very dull, and prices were again weaker for most descriptions of goods. Grey Shirtings: A few sales only had been effected, and quotations were merely nominal, 8¼ lbs., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.1; 7 lbs., Tls. 2.0 to 2.0.3 T-Cloths and White Shirtings showed a decline of about 5 candareens per piece. Drills continued in good demand at previous rates. Woollens and Worsteds: Camlets continued in request, without change in price. Only a small business had been done in Lastings. Long Ells showed no improvement. Figured Lustres were less inquired for at a decline.

SHANGHAI.—The interval had not been characterised by much activity in the import market, and the tendency of prices had generally been downward. Sales of Grey Shirtings from first hands were estimated at 100,000 to 110,000 pieces, inclusive of several contracts to arrive, while the unsold stock was much above requirements. Some forced re-sales of Eagles had been effected at Tls. 2.28 per piece, and a fair quantity of first hand goods were simultaneously placed at this figure. These transactions had supplied the market for the time, and it was not certain if a rise in prices would be obtained. 7 lbs. cloth had been in good demand, and prices had ruled from Tls. 1.95 to 2.03 per piece. Closing rates were Tls. 2.25 to 2.28 for 8¼ lbs., and Tls. 1.96 to 2.00 for 7 lbs. Many holders preferred to wait for a more active demand, or until the speculators' goods were off the market. Stocks had been materially increased by arrivals from England, and the re-exports had been on a moderate scale. T-Cloths were reported to the extent of 80,000 to 85,000 pieces of all weights, at gradually declining rates. Stocks were heavy, and the demand languid. 6 lbs. were quoted Tls. 1.55 to 1.75, and 7 lbs. Tls. 1.65 to 2.00. The supply of 8 to 8¼ lbs. 36-inch was much in excess of requirements, and prices had receded to Tls. 2.1.5 per piece for fair to good makes. Best kinds were only saleable in small lots for local wants. White Shirtings: Only a few transactions were reported at low rates, and these goods were very difficult to move. Buyers seemed very cautious, and, though holders did not press sales, there was no sign of an improvement in value. Drills: There had been large auction sales of damaged American goods, which had temporarily supplied the market, but the sound stock was firmly held for better prices. English goods were asked for, and 15 lbs. had changed hands at Tls. 4.40 per piece. Dutch Drills had been sold at irregular rates, the best price realised being Tls. 4.35 per piece. Jeans: One sale of English was reported at Tls. 3.70 per piece, showing an advance of two mace per piece, and there was a good inquiry for small lots on the spot. Sheetings: Dull of sale and lower in value. It was difficult to place American cloth 15 lbs. at Tls. 4.1.5 per piece. Fancy Goods: Generally had been in very limited inquiry, and sales had been difficult to effect. The demand for Black Velvets had continued, but had been readily met by arrivals from England. Woollens: Black Camlets had been much sought for, owing to better value in Japan, and several sales were quoted at much higher rates—assorted were dull of sale. Long Ells, Figured Orleans, and Fancy Woollens there was no material change to note. Metals.—Iron: Arrivals of Nail Rods had been very large; but, as the demand had been good, quotations remained unaltered. Bar, Hoop and Flat Iron had been less inquired for, and prices for these kinds had slightly given way. Lead: Sales of L. B. at Tls. 5.60, inferior brands Tls. 5.40; 2,170 piculs exported, chiefly to Japan. The Tamerlane, Dilpussund, and Laurel had added 4,082 piculs to stocks. Coal: The supplies had continued on a liberal scale, the market was in a depressed state, and prices were unchanged. In Cardiff there had been nothing done, and in English no arrivals. Arrivals of all kinds for September 10,817 tons, against last year same month 13,566 tons. The current quotations at departure of the mail were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.9.5 to 2.0.0; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.2.9; 9 to 9¾ lbs., Tls. 2.7.0 to 3.0.0; White Shirtings (nominal), 56 reed, Tls. 1.9.5 to 2.0.0; 60 reed, Tls. 2.0.5 to 2.1.5: 64 reed, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.2.5; 66 reed, Tls. 2.3.5 to 2.4.0; 72 reed, Tls. 2.6.0 to 2.7.0; 80 to 84 reed, Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.9.0; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., Tls. 1.5.5 to 1.7.0; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.6.5 to 2.0.0; 8 to 8½ lbs., Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.4.0; American Drills, 40 yds., Tls. 4.4.5 to 4.6.5; Jeans, 30 yds., Tls. 3.6.5 to 3.7.0; Sheetings, 40 yds., Tls. 4.1.0 to 4.1.5; English Drills, 40 yds., Tls. 4.2.0 to 4.4.0; Dutch Drills, 30 to 40 yds., Tls. 4.0.0 to 4.3.5; Handkerchiefs, Blue, per doz., Tls. 0.5.8. to 0.6.0; Brown, Tls. 0.5.2 to 0.5.8; White Figured Shirtings, per piece, Tls. 2.2.0 to 2.4.0; Dyed, Tls. 2.5.0 to 2.6.0; Brocades, White, 40 yds., Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.5; Dyed, Tls. 2.8.0 to 2.9.5 Damasks, Dyed, 40 yds., Tls. 4.5.0 to 4.9.0; Turkey Reds, 24 yds., Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.5.0; Velvets—Black, 22 in., per yd., Tls. 0.2.0 to 0.2.2; Blue, 22 in., Tls. 0.2.1. to 0.2.2½; Velveteens—Black, 18 in., Tls. 0.1.6¾ to 0.1.7½; 26 in., Tls. 0.2.6 to 0.2.7½; Dimities, 12 yds. 37 in., per piece, Tls. 1.6.0; Camlets, SS., per piece, Tls. 12.2.5 to 13.2.5; Spanish Stripes, per yd., Tls. 0.5.5 to 0.7.0; Medium Broad and Habit Cloth, Tls. 1.0.0 to 1.2.5.; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds. FOOCHOW.—There had been no business during the interval.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular contains the following report of the trade since the departure of the last mail:—Cotton Yarn: The anxiety of holders to realise noted in our last has continued, and some demand arising for Nos. 16 to 24 for shipment to Japan and the coast ports, concessions on the part of importers have induced a larger business than we have been able to advise for some time past. The higher numbers are in limited supply, and though not in much demand, are held for former figures. The sales noted include 255 bales Bombay 16 to 24. Piece Goods: Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths show a further decline of 5 cents per piece. The former have been little dealt in, but a fairish business has been done in T-Cloths, for local consumption, at the reduced values, holders being willing sellers. White Shirtings are in small supply, and without material change. Stocks of Turkey Reds are much reduced, and sales have been made at an advance of 10 cents per piece. Spotted Shirtings and Brocades are again lower. 40 yard Dutch and English Drills are wanted, and have fetched 20 and 10 cents per piece, respectively, over last quotations. 30 yard English Drills have sold at a decline, considerable parcels having been received from Singapore. Quotations for American Cottons are entirely nominal. Woollens: Considerable transactions have taken place, but at lower figures for almost all descriptions. Scarlet Long Ells show a further decline of 5 to 10, and Assorted a decline of 20 cents per piece, and at these figures some 2,800 pieces HH. have found buyers. Scarlet Spanish Stripes are not wanted, but bes

Assorted are in moderate enquiry at a slight advance. Blankets have been in good demand for Japan, and the market has been cleared, as well as contracts made for delivery of all parcels to arrive for two months to come. One parcel of 600 pairs 7 to 12 lbs. originally sold at $6.10 per pair, has twice been resold, on the last occasion at $7.50, but this is an exceptional transaction. Lastings and Camlets were selling quietly at former figures, when the market was completely upset by a sale, by one house, of 800 pieces of the former, and 1,600 pieces of the latter, at $14.25 and $16.00 per piece respectively—the purchaser being allowed five months in which to clear the goods. Other buyers are now unwilling to pay anything over these figures, but holders generally are demanding an advance on them of 50 cents per piece. It will require some time for the market to recover. Metals: Nail-rod and Hoop Iron are weak, and the latter in no demand. Bar is unchanged. Wire and Steel steady. Lead has further declined. Common has found buyers to some extent, but WB is out of stock. Tin is again dearer, the demand continuing, while supplies are almost exhausted. Tin Plates are a shade lower. Quicksilver firm. Coal: The arrivals have been—2,040 tons English (to consumers), 1,885 Welsh (350 to consumers), and 1,000 tons Sydney (600 to consumers). There is hardly any demand, the only sale having been 200 tons Welsh, ex godown, at $12.00. The following were the current quotations:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16-24, per picul, $100 to 125; Nos. 28-32, $142 to 145; Nos. 38-42, $155 to 165. Grey Shirtings, 7 to 7¾ lbs., per piece, $2.55 to 2.50; 8 to 8¼ lbs., $2.75 to 2.85; 9 to 10 lbs., $2.77 to 2.80. White Shirtings, 54-60 reed, per piece, $2.10 to 2.05; 64-66, $3.95 to 3.15; 68-72, $3.10 to 3.20; White Spotted ditto, $3.10 to 3.05; White Brocades, $3.25 to 3.20; American Drills, 30 yards, $3.10 to 3.05; 40 ditto, $4.90 to 5.60; Grey T-Cloths, 24 yds. and 32 in., $2.70 to 2.75; 24 yds. and 36 in., $2.57 to 2·65; Dyed Spotted Shirtings, $3.95 to 4.05; Dyed Brocade do., $3.95 to 4; Dyed Damask do., $7 to 6.60; Chintz, $2.35 to 2.55; Handkerchiefs, Blue, per doz., $1 to 0.90; Brown, $0.90 to 0.87; Red, $1.05 to 1.40; Velvets, Black, 22 inch, per yard, $0.60 to 0.55; Gentian, 22 do., $0.42 to 0.49; Velveteens, Black, $2.90 to 2.35; Spanish Stripes, per yard, $1.02 to 1; Long Ells, MM Scarlet, per piece, $9 to 9.10; Do. Assorted, $9.15 to 9; HH Scarlet, $8.90 to 9.00; Do. Assorted, $8.90 to 8.80; Camlets, SSS, $15.10 to 14.50; SS, $17 to 17.50; S, $17. 30 to 17.40; D, $18.60 to 18.30; BBB, $22.75 to 22.50; Lastings, $16.10 to 16.50; Iron, Nail Rod, Nos. 1 to 6, $2.20 to 2.40 per picul; Hoop, $3.60 to 3.45; Bar, $1.80 to 1.85; Small Round Rod, $2.60 to 2.95; Wire, $8.30 to 9; Lead, large, $8.60 to 8.40; Steel, English, $4.40 to 4.60 per tub; Swedish, $6.20 to 8.80; Sheathing Metal, $23.70 to 27 per picul; Quicksilver, $65.50 to 66; Spelter, $5.50 to 5.40; Coals, afloat, English steam, $14.50 to 14 per ton; American Anthracite, $10.20 to 10; Sydney, $8.40 to 8.30; Window Glass, $3.25 to 3.23 per box.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The active demand noted in our last report had somewhat subsided, and the business done had consequently been on a moderate scale, not more than 2,300 piculs having been settled since the departure of the last P. and O. mail. Owing to the fall in the value of native coin dealers had shown more readiness to do business, resulting in slightly easier rates being taken for the lower grades; for good medium to choice, however, prices had been fully maintained. Supplies had been fair, and stocks remained with little change. The Queen of the Age, Grenadier, and Havilah were loading for New York. The total export of tea from 1st July to 6th October was computed at 2,436,775 lbs., against 2,501,352 lbs. during the corresponding period last year. The current quotations were:—Common, $22 to 23 per picul; good common, $24 to 25; medium, $25 to 26; good medium, $28 to 30; fine, $30 to 35; finest, $36 to 40; choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: For a few days after the departure of last mail rather large transactions took place at fair market rates. This gave confidence to holders, who became firm in their demands, and later purchases were generally at a slight advance. Telegraphic advices, however, had checked buying, and the market closed quiet and drooping. Settlements for the fortnight, 23,200 chests; reshipments on owners' account, 3,750 chests; stock, 70 chops, or 23,709 chests. Quotations (duty paid, exchange for credits, at 6s. 0¾d. per tael, and freights at £2. 10s. per ton):—Hohow, common to good, 1s. to 1s. 3¾d.; Oonam, common to fair, 11½d. to 1s. 2d.; Ningchow, common, 1s. 0¾d. to 1s. 2½d.; Oopack, common to fair, 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 2¾d. per lb. Green: These had been in rather better inquiry for America, the demand running chiefly on fine to finest kinds, and a good business had been done in Pingsueys for England. Prices showed little change, fine Moyunes were at one time a little easier, but had again recovered their former level, and all descriptions close at about last mail's rates; it is, however, difficult to arrive at true quotations, on account of the great irregularity of the settlements. Heavy arrivals were expected from the river, and with accumulating stocks we should see a lower range of prices. Settlements for the fortnight, 30,350 half-chests; reshipments on owners' account, 3,300 half-chests; stock, 78 chops, or 45,480 half-chests. Quotations, duty paid (exchange, &c., as above), were as follows for Fychow and Moyune teas:—Gunpowder, 1s. 7d. to 3s. 7d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 10d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 1½d. to 3s.; Hyson, 1s. 1½d. to 3s. 5d.; Twankay, 9d. to 1s. 6d. per lb.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Odell and Co. report as follows:—Our last advices were dated 25th September, since when a moderate amount of business has been transacted. Congous: On the arrival of the English mail of 14th August our market assumed a quieter aspect, and for a few days settlements were on a very limited scale; latterly, however, buyers have shown more confidence, and some large purchases have been made on both English and Australian accounts, the market closing very firm at previous quotations. Souchongs continue in fair inquiry, and prices are unchanged. Oolongs: There have not been any transactions during the fortnight. Scented Teas have been in but limited request. Flowery Pekoes: A few small parcels, common kinds, have been taken for shipment to India. Settlements for the fortnight have been:—Congou, 19,116 chests at Tls. 9.3 to 23.3 per picul ship off; Souchong, 2,327 chests at Tls. 19.8 to 31.3 per picul ship off; Oolong, nil.; Scented Teas, 1,113 boxes at Tls. 8.05 to 23.8 per picul ship off; Flowery Pekoe, 260 chests at Tls. 26.8 to 31.3 per picul ship off. The above settlements of Congou were made at the following rates:—Dust to broken leafs, Tls. 9.3 to 12.8 per picul ship off; low ordinary to common kinds, Tls. 14.8 to 18.8 per picul ship off; common to medium flavoury kinds, Tls. 19.8 to 23.3 per picul ship off.

AMOY.—The market had been cleared of Congous at a decline of about one dollar per picul, and supplies were virtually exhausted. Some 2,000 packages Oolongs were settled during the early part of the interval, at a slight reduction from former rates, but latterly no purchases had been made, teamen refusing to make any further concessions. The stock was about £88,000 packages and a marked decline in prices was expected unless buyers came forward.

CANTON.—The settlements had consisted of a limited amount of Scented kinds and Canton Greens at a decline of about a tael from last quotations, but no other transactions had been reported, buyers showing no disposition to purchase in the face of the discouraging advices from England. Holders did not appear at all anxious to realise. No additions had been made to the stock of Congou, for which there was no inquiry.

HANKOW.—Settlements since our last had again been small, and almost entirely on account of Russian buyers, for shipment via Kiachta. Prices were reported without change. Shipments to Shanghai continued on the same liberal scale as before, and unless prices declined further heavy supplies would be sent forward. Settlements since the 18th September:—4,685 chests; contracts, 2,144 chests; reshipments, 10,661 chests. Quotations were:—Oopacks, common to fair, Tls. 14.0 to 16.5. Oonams, no settlements. Export of Tea from the 1st January, 1868, to the 7th October, 1868, 42,895,780 lbs.; 1st June to the 7th October, 1868, 42,601,265 lbs. Stock, 700 chests.

KIUKIANG.—Black Teas: Arrivals had continued on a fair scale, but, as before, the greater part of them had been sent forward to Shanghai. Prices were reported higher, owing to news of large transactions in Shanghai during the early part of the fortnight. Settlements, 783 chests. Quotations were:—Ningchows, Tls. 14 to 15½; Hohows, nominal. Export from 1st Jan. to 9th Oct. 1868, 144,880 chests; 1st June to 9th Oct., 1868, 141,780 chests; stock, 1,255 chests. Green Teas: Large arrivals had taken place, and a small business had been done at Tls. 30½ to 37½. The quality of the new Moyunes was reported inferior. Settlements were about 5,150 half-chests. Export from 1st Jan. to 9th Oct., 1868, 49,672 half-chests; 1st June to 9th Oct., 1868, 32,181 half-chests; stock, 16,517 packages.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The market for this staple continued active, settlements to the extent of 700 bales having been made. At the close, although dealers evinced some anxiety to realise, prices remained nominally the same as last mail's quotations. $1,000 had again been paid for extra good parcels of Hanks. The unseasonable weather had somewhat retarded arrivals from the interior, and the continued disturbances in the Northern Districts still prevented Oshus and other sorts made in that quarter, from reaching the market. The unsold stock was estimated at 600 bales. Silkworms' eggs: The season was almost closed; best cards continued to be bought at $3 to 3½, the transactions that had taken place, however, had been almost entirely in Bivoltini, and inferior annuals at 25 to 75 cents. Total settlements for this season were 1,650,000 cards, leaving a stock of about 175,000 nearly all inferior quality. The current quotations for Silk (laid down in London at exchange 4s. 8d.) were as follows:—Mybash, Nos. 1 and 2, 38s. 3d. to 39s. 10d.; Sinchu, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, 35s. 1d. to 37s. 1d.; Nos. 2, 3, and 4, 32s. 4d. to 34s. 4d.; Oshu, best, nominal; medium, 30s. to 31s. 11d.; inferior, 26s. to 28s. 4d.; Coshu, Nos. 1 and 2, 33s. 11d. to 35s. 6d.; medium, 29s. 7d. to 31s. 7d.; inferior, 27s. 7d. to 28s. 9d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's report, dated the 12th of October, is as follows:—The latest dates received from England since my last silk circular, are by letters to the 13th of August, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 15th of September. Notwithstanding adverse advices from London, a large business has been transacted in this market during the past interval, and Settlements to the extent of 2,000 bales have been made, to these must be added 500 bales, purchased after my circular was issued last mail, giving a total of 33,500 bales settled since the 1st of June. Prices, owing to the unlimited stock of silk on offer have advanced fully Tls. 5 to 10 per picul for Chop and Tls. 10 to 15 for Market Tsatlees, Tls. 10 to 20 on all other descriptions and have ruled very irregular. As the mail closes the market remains firm at the quotations below. The arrivals from the country and Ningpo for the past two weeks do not exceed 800 bales, making total receipts from the interior 34,459 bales; from Ningpo, 1,536 bales; from Hankow, 460 bales; from Tientsin, &c., 256 bales; total, 36,711 bales; of which have been exported 33,878 bales, leaving 2,833 bales in stock. These statistics are according to the Customs' daily returns. It is to be hoped the high prices paid this mail on this market will induce larger arrivals, as we cannot expect any material concession in quotations, as long as the natives continue to feed the demand in the limited manner they are now doing. Quotations (all charges paid to England at exchange 6s. 1d. per tael) were as follows:—Tsatlee, chop No. 1, none; No. 2, 31s. 2d. to 32s. per lb.; No 3, 30s. 1d. to 30s. 11d. per lb.; No. 3½, 28s. 2d. to 29s. per lb.; ordinary No. 3½ and chop No. 4, 25s. 6d. to 27s. 1d. per lb.; ordinary No. 4, 24s. to 25s. per lb.; No. 5 and common, 21s. 5d. to 22s. 11d. per lb.; Karshing Taysaam, chop No. 1, 26s. to 27s. 1d. per lb.; No. 2, 24s. to 25s. 3d. per lb.; No. 3, 20s. 11d. to 22s. 5d. per lb.; Nos. 4, 5, and common, 18s. 4d. to 19s. 10d. per lb.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 1, none; No. 2, 20s. 5d. to 20s. 11d. per lb.; No. 3, 19s. 4d. to 19s. 10d. per lb.; No. 4 and common, none; Yuenfs and Hainings, chop No. 1, 26s. to 27s. 8d. per lb.; No. 2, 24s. 6d. to 25s. 6d. per lb.; No. 3, 22s. 5d. to 23s. 6d. per lb; No. 4 and common, 20s. 11d. to 21s. 11d. per lb.

Hong Kong and Macao Steamboat Company, 8 per cent. discount.

The following is from Messrs. Sharp and Co.'s Circular:—

Exchange.—After the departure of last mail sterling rates opened with Bank bills at 4s. 6d., and credits at 4s. 6⅛d. to 4s. 6⅛d. for six months' sight, but at these figures no activity was developed. On the 11th instant advices were received from Shanghai reporting lower rates as ruling there at that date, and the market still declining, whereupon the market for sterling here receded to 4s. 5d., and 4s. 5⅛d. for Bank bills, 4s. 5⅛d. for credits at six months' sight. A slight reaction has since been manifest, and the market closes to-day firm at quotations. Tenders again were invited for H.M.'s Treasury Bills at 30 days' sight, and allotments were made to the extent of about £60,000 at 4s. 4⅞d. The demand for Bank sterling and rupee paper has been small during the period under review, owing to the reduced import of opium caused by the loss of the steamer Reiver with a large quantity of the 9th sale's drug on board. The estimated amount of business by the present opportunity amounts to £420,000, say £100,000 Bank bills, £230,000 private paper, and five lakhs rupees.

Bullion.—There is no bar silver in the market, and the quotation of 8 per cent. premium is therefore entirely nominal. No business has been done in Sycee, and the quotation remains therefore nominally 6 per cent. premium.

Shares.—There is not much to report in the share market during the period under review. Money has been somewhat easier, and there has accordingly been more desire manifested for both speculation and investment. Banks have steadily improved, and are to-day very firm, with few sellers of either old or new at quotations. Large parcels of both old and new might be obtained at 25, and 4 premium, but sellers at these rates are scarce, and the market is exceedingly buoyant. There are sellers of old Whampoa Dock at 4 discount and of New at 10, but these rates are more or less nominal. Some small business has been done within a few days, but on reserved terms. There are buyers of Steamboat at 8 discount and of Hotel at 55 discount. A small parcel of the latter were placed at 50 discount, two days since. There are sellers of Union Dock at 20 discount, but this quotation is entirely nominal, as there is no demand. A small parcel of Gas Shares have been placed at $42. There are no China Traders' to be had, although there are many anxious buyers in the market, offering $325 premium

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At YOKOHAMA.—To London: £5. To New York, £3 10s. to £3 17s. 6d. per ton.

At SHANGHAI.—In coast charters there has been a brisk demand for tonnage leaving, but few unemployed vessels in port. To London: the rate is £2 10s., and to New York, £3 to £3 10s. per ton.

At FOOCHOW.—To London: £2 10s. per ton.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—For the coast there is scarcely any inquiry for tonnage. The following are the home charters since our last:—Ophir, 410, hence to United Kingdom or Continent, £8 per ton; Randers, 264, ditto, £3 5s.; Batavia, 355, hence to Callao, £1,700 in full; from Chincha Islands to United Kingdom or Continent, £3 15s. per ton; Veritas, 632, hence to Surinam with emigrants, £11 per head; Omba, 836, ditto, £11 per head; Queensland, 738, Bangkok to United Kingdom, £3 15s., or Continent, £3 18s. per ton; Arica, 397, ditto, or Continent, £3 17s. 6d. per ton, if back to Hong Kong, 50 to 55 cents per picul; Hope, 453, ditto, £3 15s. per ton.

At MANILA.—The Dudbrook, 572 tons, has been fixed for London with dry sugar at £3 2s. 6d., and hemp at £4 per ton of 20 cwt. The Spanish barque San Fernando, 465 tons, takes wet sugar from Iloilo to the Channel for orders, to discharge in the United Kingdom, at £4 5s. per ton.

At SINGAPORE.—A moderate inquiry exists for suitable vessels for home, but no coasting charters are offering. The Sree Singapura has engaged a full cargo, and the Ensign is loading for London at £2 15s. per ton; the Khimjee Oodowjee has taken the Liverpool berth at £2 12s. 6d.; the Jane Blyth will also load for Liverpool.

At PENANG.—Rates to the United Kingdom have somewhat improved, the British barque Alvington (laid on for London) having secured a full cargo at £3 for dead weight and light freight, and £3 10s. for measurement goods. There still remains a sufficiency of cargo to load a couple of moderately sized vessels, but the harbour is bare of any available craft.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

TEA.—The following is from the Produce Markets Review:—Although business is by no means active, and purchases, with few exceptions, continue to be made from hand to mouth, there is a better feeling with regard to the market, and it is believed by many that the most depressed period has already passed away, and that a general improvement in prices is not far distant. This view is, of course, entitled to some consideration, especially as we hear from reliable sources that medium teas have in many cases been sold at better prices than could have been obtained some two or three weeks since; but as we are now receiving extremely heavy additions to our stock, the time for an upward movement in any description has certainly not yet arrived, especially as the generality of grocers are too much occupied with other matters at this season to give much attention to Tea. Common Congou is still extremely firm at the late advance, and there is now little to be had, even of low and dusty sorts, under 1s. 1d., but as new tea can be purchased at a trifle more money, we think the highest point has been reached for the present; at the same time the heavy and continued drain on this class of tea will prevent its falling so low as it otherwise would have done. In consequence of the small increase on the shipments last reported, the next telegram from China is awaited with more than usual interest, as, should there be a further comparative falling off in the export, merchants will receive encouragement, and a better tone will be imparted to the market. At the Indian sale held this week a large proportion consisted of new crop teas of superior quality, although generally rather deficient in strength. A considerable number of the breaks advertised were disposed of prior to the sale, at slightly better prices than were obtained for similar teas which passed the hammer. The lower grades being in full supply sold rather cheaper, but the superior pungent sorts, being wanted, brought full prices. In Green teas there is little doing; a good assortment, from late arrivals, will, however, shortly be on the market. Canton Capers, ex Carmarthenshire and Dunmail, have been readily sold at full prices. In Scented Orange Pekoes there is no change. The quotation for Common Congou is 1s. 1d., with a firm market; Broken Leaf is scarce at 9d. to 9½d. A telegram from Hong Kong, dated 19th October, gives the exports of tea from China up to that time as 106,000,000 lbs.; this is an increase of 29,000,000 lbs. on the exports to about the same date last year, which amounted to 79,500,000 lbs., against 65,000,000 lbs. in 1866.

SILK.—The silk market has been quiet but firm since our last issue. The public sales which have just taken place at Lyons attracted most of the buyers from this market, who went over, it is thought, more from curiosity than from any idea of business. According to the accounts that have arrived, the silk which was put up to be sold met with a good demand at full rates, but all that was marked with a reserved price, with but three or four exceptions, was bought in. But little has been done with the last arrivals, holders being very firm. Some extra good Mibash has been sold at a price equivalent to about 36s. here, the parcel not being sold in this market. The general impression seems that we may look for some revival in business early next year, as it appears that there is no chance of importers reducing their prices, and as soon as accounts for the year are closed consumers will come in to buy at ruling rates.

MORE ALPINE RAILWAYS.

The Florence correspondent of The Times writes:—

Among the other important projects to which the success of the Fell system has given rise is one for a railway to start from Pinerolo eastwards, crossing the Alps at a pass south of the Mont Cenis, and of about the same elevation as that mountain, and proceeding by way of Embrun and Gap southwards to Aix in Provence. This line would complete the direct communication between Venice and Marseilles, and would be a decided advantage to the latter port, shortening and facilitating its intercourse with Northern Italy and Switzerland, and offering it handsome compensation for the loss it must before long suffer from the transfer to the Brindisi line of much of the traffic with Egypt and India. The French Government has declared its willingness to grant the concession, only reserving, for form's sake, the rights of the Paris, Lyons, and Mediterranean Company, to which the promise of a concession for part of the proposed line was formerly made. That company, however, as I am assured, is quite content to see the line made by others, and will readily abandon its claim. The Fell system is now fairly upon its trial, and, judging from what it has already weathered, there can be no reasonable doubt of its coming out triumphant. It could hardly have had a worse time of it; two inundations in the course of a few weeks, and heavy snow early in November. The winter once well past, we may expect to see various new mountain lines decided upon and commenced. Those eminently practical people, the Swiss, will hardly rest content till they have the locomotives running over two or three of their principal passes. It has been calculated by a very competent authority (M. Eugène Flachat, in the Revue Moderne), that the Fell Railway may be established across the Simplon, from Brieg to Isella at an expense of ten millions of francs; across the St. Gothard, from Amsteg to Faido for thirteen millions; and over the Lukmanier, from Dissentis to Olivone (where no road at present exists) for fifteen to eighteen millions. Thus for forty-one millions, or £1,640,000 sterling, Switzerland would obtain those lines of rapid communication with Italy. The thing will have to be done, or the Swiss will soon find themselves suffering grievous prejudice from the existence of the railroads over the Brenner and the Cenis. They cannot afford to wait ten years or more to make tunnels through their mountains, always an enormously expensive operation, of which the success can never be guaranteed completely secure, even though the happy completion of the one from Modane to Bardonnêche should encourage to other experiments of the same kind. It is believed that the necessary capital for the three roads would easily be obtained if the Swiss Government were disposed to guarantee a moderate rate of interest on the capital employed, and its reimbursement within a period of twenty years. This would be no great effort for that flourishing little community, and would be richly repaid by the increase of traffic. The apprehensions felt by no inconsiderable part of the public when first the Mont Cenis line was opened were quickly dissipated. Numbers of persons who declared that nothing should induce them to risk their lives by running along the edges of precipices behind a doomed locomotive have by this time very comfortably crossed the Mont Cenis, and would now be very unwilling to adopt any other mode of transit between France and Italy. The idea that winter would stop the running of the trains, encouraged by the delays on three successive days of the present month, is likely soon to be equally dispelled; and it seems highly probable that within three years we may see the French, Swiss, and Italian networks of railways in intimate connexion by means of four or five lines running over different Alpine passes.

THE INTER-OCEANIC RAILWAYS.

The progress of the Pacific Railways across the American Continent is of interest on both sides the Atlantic. Between the new town of Omaha, Nebraska, on the Missouri River, the western limit of the network of American railways, and the city of Sacramento, in California, on the tide-waters of the Pacific, there is a stretch of territory, 1,721 miles across, in a few places sparsely settled by frontiersmen and other hardy pioneers of civilisation, in others occupied by gold and silver miners, but for the most part uninhabited by any but roving bands of Indians. The travelled route through this country crosses formidable ranges of mountains and broad plains of barren land. Four years ago the only way of traversing these 1,721 miles betweeen the Missouri and the Pacific was by mail coaches, or by mule or ox trains, the only railway on the route being a section of thirty-one miles near Sacramento. In January, 1866, less than three years ago, forty miles of railway were laid at the Missouri end of the route, making seventy-one miles in all. Since that time there has been a progress made which is one of the most marked developments of American energy. The gap of 1,721 miles, upon which, in January, 1866, there were but seventy-one miles of railway, had been reduced in October, 1868, to 714 miles, and at that time more than one thousand miles of the Pacific railways were in operation, carrying mails, passengers, and goods. Of the actual number of miles then in operation, 1,007, there had been constructed by the "Union Pacific Railroad Company" 820 miles, stretching from Omaha, on the Missouri, westward across the Rocky Mountains' summit, to Green River, and the remaining 187 miles had been built by the "Central Pacific Railroad Company" eastward from Sacramento, in California, across the Sierra Nevada range to a place called Wadsworth. As the railways now stand, the overland journey from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast may be made in about thirteen days, while the journey by steamer by way of the Isthmus of Panama requires at least twenty days. While 1,007 miles of these railways are in actual operation, much more of the work has been accomplished. At the California end, while 187 miles are working, the line has been graded and the rails laid for 197 miles further eastward to Reese River, making 384 miles in all, that are expected to be in operation by December, while the line is graded for sixty miles further, and there is an expectation that the rails will be laid on this before winter compels the work to stop. Ten thousand men are labouring there, and the engineers are pushing them vigorously. On the 20th of August they laid six miles of the line in that one day. The same state of affairs exists at the Missouri end of the route. The rails are laid a long distance beyond the 820 miles on which trains are now running, while the roadway is graded for 995 miles west of Omaha, nearly to Great Salt Lake in Utah, and it is expected by the time winter stops the work to have the rails laid to Bear River, one of the affluents to Salt Lake, 119 miles beyond the present terminus. We may, therefore, put down 939 miles at the eastern end of the route, and 384 miles at the western end, as practically completed for traffic, thus closing up 1,323 out of the 1,721 miles between Omaha and Sacramento. This leaves 400 miles to complete in 1869, and the engineers say they will do it. About 200 miles of this incomplete section, running around Salt Lake, will pass through a much more favourable country than many portions of the completed road. The gradients are gentle, none exceeding 15 feet to the mile. The Californian end of the road, on crossing the Sierra Nevada, has to climb to a height of 7,042 feet, within the first 100 miles from tidewater, and this involved the most difficult and expensive kind of railway construction, rivalling the famous Semmering Pass. The Government subsidies to the various Pacific railways amounted on the 1st of November, 1868, to $42,194,000 in bonds, while large amounts of the public lands lying along the lines have also been given to them. By the close of next year it is confidently expected that the work will be complete, and an unbroken line of rail extend from New York to San Francisco.

THE CHINESE MISSION.

(STANDARD.)

The London Gazette of Tuesday announced that the Hon. Anson Burlinghame, Chih-Kang, and Sun-Chia-Ku, high ministers extraordinary and plenipotentiary from the Emperor of China, were introduced to the Queen of England, at Windsor Castle, by the Foreign Secretary, in order to deliver their credentials. There are three aspects of this circumstance which confer upon it an unparallelled interest. It is the first occasion upon which the Chinese Government, strictly speaking, has deputed an envoy to the West. The principal envoy thus deputed is by birth an American, and he holds a sort of roving commission, with the object of bringing China into more intelligent and friendly communications with the countries of Europe and of the American continent. We cannot help anticipating an immense advantage to the commerce of Great Britain from every step thus taken for diminishing the natural differences between the two nations. It was originally hinted, altogether unjustifiably, that some jealousy existed in high quarters, arising out of the fact that an Englishman had not been selected to represent the mightiest empire of Asia in the courts of the Western world. But Lord Stanley, with the clear judgment that belongs to him, immediately acknowledged the Chinese mission, and if some delay has taken place in its presentation to Her Majesty, it was only upon grounds of official etiquette. We know not who conceived the idea of such an embassy. But Mr. Burlinghame was chosen to conduct it, and from his antecedents, and especially his friendly relations and co-operation with Sir Frederic Bruce, he seems to have been an excellent selection. There is, at any rate, fair presumption that he will carry out this great duty in a spirit perfectly impartial, and not endeavour to divert whatever influence his remarkable functions give him to the promotion of merely selfish objects.

The whole plan of the mission is so peculiar that we fear the public as yet have not comprehended its importance. It signifies a most wonderful revolution in the Chinese mind. The Chinese for centuries have been in the habit of styling us barbarians. We insisted upon obliterating the offensive word from our conventions with them ; and now they complain that in our narratives of travel, and in our journals, it is applied to them by us. This is singulary characteristic of the great movement and change taking place. Again, their policy was to exclude the foreigner—now they seek the foreigner; they come among us and plead for a better understanding of their history and their civilisation, of their rank among nations, and of their rights as a Power. Well, we find some difficulty in interpreting the purposes of Mr. Burlinghame's mission in certain respects. It is easy to recognise a marvellous advance in the people who translate into their own language Wheaton's "International Law" and Longfellow's "Psalm of Life;" but some time must elapse, probably, before we know what is meant by respecting the neutrality of the Chinese waters and the integrity of the Chinese frontiers. Say what we will we cannot keep our steamers off the Yellow River, and we cannot help our countrymen from entering the Chinese civil service, which they have done by hundreds. Why, Mr. Burlinghame is an American, and yet he is ambassador from China to four-fifths of the civilised world—to the United Kingdom, to the United States, to Russia, to North Germany, to France, to Holland, Denmark, Sweeden, Belgium, Italy, and Spain. Therefore, it cannot be with any desire to dissociate herself from personal relations with the white nations of the West that China states her cause in presence of America and Europe. On the contrary, she is endeavouring to join the great league of civilisation, and to do away with the disparaging contrast hitherto existing between her immutability and their advancement.

It might be too much to suppose that this single effort will bridge the gulf; but, as Mr. Burlinghame justly says, the passing to and fro of the members of the mission, creating a good understanding, resolving questions of right, and infusing a spirit of conciliation into national arguments, may pave the way for a more complete agreement in the future. China is no longer isolated as she was for hundreds of years. Her border deserts are not barriers; they are threatened with railways; her seas are not as the moat around a fortress; they are covered with clouds of canvass ; her rivers are not locked ; we steam up them freely ; her priests do not forbid our propagandism ; it is allowed full scope, except among the most bigoted populations. This, perhaps, is rather an optimist view to take, but at all events, we shall gain nothing by turning our backs upon the Chinese, or when superior opportunities, offer in abiding by the unbending text of treaties, concluded on the one side in the flush of triumph, and on the other in the bitterness of defeat. We may learn, before long, with what special object Mr. Burlinghame and his two colleagues from the Vermillion Empire intend to commence action after the formal salutations between the two races have ceased. Already China enjoys the advantage, long denied her, of being recognised upon an equality with every other Power of the world within the circle and protection of international law. Possibly the policy of Europe has been misrepresented to a pernicious degree by the Europeans who have settled on the Chinese coast. This almost invariably happens. In the track of honourable trade and open-handed speculation follow always a crowd of unscrupulous adventurers, who are continually trying to overreach the natives, and who thus disgust them ; who are perpetually engaged in quarrels with their own consuls and the local authorities, and who give their countries a bad name. Nor can we deny that, in many instances, there has been too great a tendency to enforce a kind of compulsory patronage upon the Eastern Governments, which are not really ignorant, which are not easily persuaded, especially that they are wrong, and which claim to know best when their legitimate opportunities of reform and progress arise. Our interest in particular is to keep on good terms with them and increase our trade. There is not a workshop in Great Britain which, if our commerce with China were developed up to its full capacity, might not be engaged more or less in supplying its materials. Already we carry an immense proportion of the trade that exists, because, with all their curious mechanical ingenuity, that enormous people have not yet mastered the construction of ocean-going vessels. But the whole of these improvements may be expected in the course of time. The Chinese see our great clippers starting for their homeward flight; they see our steam craft on their rivers, and presently they will want themselves to possess both; they will begin by employing our architects, and then learn the art for themselves. If the mission now among us should succeed in accelerating these results by promoting habits of friendly communication, and diminishing the feelings of jealousy and distrust which have so long existed, as well as by improving the kind of intercourse that takes place between Europeans settled in the country and its natives, there will be much to be grateful for. Undoubtedly, in the near future a great, although a peaceful, rivalry will take place, for the largest share in the commerce of China. A mighty press of modern civilisation is approaching her from every side. The frontiers of Russia have reached her own, and the caravans that toil across the border wildernesses will, before many years have elapsed, be superseded by the rush of the locomotive and of trains laden with tea. From another direction British enterprise is intently scanning the maze of mountains and rivers separating Hindostan from China, in order to strike a railway, if not through the heart of them, at least around their bases and across their shallows. From the West come the huge fleets of European commerce ; from the East the intrepid traders of America. If then, Mr. Burlinghame, with his two citizens of the world, constituting the Chinese Embassy now in England, succeed in their objects, working towards them in good faith as they are professed, and which we do not doubt, great may be their influence for good, both upon the nations of the West and the countless millions of the Chinese Empire.

LOSS OF THE SHIP "BOGOTA."

The Board of Trade have received information of the total destruction by fire of the ship Bogota, of Liverpool, bound for Penang, from Greenock, with a cargo of 1,500 kegs of gunpowder, 195 tons of coals, and a large assortment of cases and bale goods, wines, bar iron, &c. The captain, in his report of the disaster, gives the following particulars:—"Nothing occurred worth mentioning until the 1st of September, when in lat. 30.53, long. 25.50 W., it blew a terrific gale from the S.E., when sail was reduced to close-reefed topsails and maintrysail. On September 7th we had squally weather with much rain, and chain and forked lightning playing round the ship's masts and deck. This weather lasted until the 9th of September. I examined the hold morning and evening to see that the cargo was all right. On the 10th and 11th of September we had a strong breeze from S.W. All plain sail set. On the 11th of September, at 4.30, Pell, the chief officer, reported to me that there was smoke coming up the chain locker hatch. I immediately went into the hold and discovered that the ship was on fire. We took the main hatch off at once and commenced throwing the powder overboard, several of the hands employed throwing water on the coals. The smoke was coming up by the mainmast and stanchions in clouds. The fire was increasing fast, and the men could not stop in the hold any longer. I therefore battened the hatches down and stopped all ventilation. The ship was in lat. 36 S., long. 12 W., the island of Tristan d'Acunha bearing south, distant about sixty miles, the wind W.S.W. I therefore hauled the ship to the wind on the starboard tack to try and fetch the island. During the night it blew a terrific gale, and I had to reduce sail to close reefed topsails and reefed foresail. The sea was running like a mountain, and we could not get into the cabin forecastle for heat and smoke. September 12th, at 5.30 A.M., the island of Tristan d'Acunha was in sight ahead. I carried all the sail the ship would bear to try and fetch the island, but I saw that we were going to leeward fast, so I got the long boat and pinnace all ready for getting out. At noon the hatches began to lift, and the deck getting hot I expected to see the ship blown up every moment. I therefore got the boats in the tackles over the sides. The longboat got her stern post knocked away in getting her out. We got some biscuit and water in the boats. The wind was now moderating, but the sea was running so high that I did not expect the boats would live. At 1.30 P.M. the after hatch burst up. We now rushed into the boats, the chief officer, Mr. Robinson, took charge of the longboat ; I took the pinnace. We had great trouble in getting clear of the ship, she rolled so heavily. On September 13, at 4 A.M., the pinnace, which I was in, reached the shore. I got two of my ribs broken on landing. At 1.30 P.M. the longboat got to the shore; she got knocked to pieces with the surf on landing, but all hands were saved. We were now about six miles from the settlement, where we had to remain for four days. The surf came in so heavily that I expected we should be washed off the beach. However, on the 16th of September the surf went down, and I took the pinnace and four men, and pulled to the settlement, where we were received with the greatest kindness by the oldest inhabitant of the island, Mr. Green, who immediately sent his boat for the remainder of the crew. On the 24th of September a vessel hove in sight. I went on board and found she was the whaling brig called the Highland Mary, Captain French, and hailing from Sag-harbour. At my request Captain French consented to take us to Capetown, although he was bound for New Zealand. We left the Island on the 25th of September. On the 26th, at 5 P.M., when 120 miles to the east of Tristan d'Acunha, we fell in with the shell of the Bogota. Captain French lowered one of his boats and went on board. The vessel was literally blown to pieces. Her between-deck beams were blown out ; two or three of the deck beams still remained. There was not a particle of anything left; the chain cables and bar iron were melted into a solid lump, and a few cinders were still burning. We stopped by the Bogota all that night, and next day scuttled her. We were treated with the greatest kindness during the time we were on board the Highland Mary. On the morning of the 8th of October, when off the Cape of Good Hope, we fell in with the City of Dublin steamer from Capetown, bound for London. I went on board and stated my case to Captain Eynon, who very kindly took us off the brig and gave us a passage to London."

DIRECT TRADE WITH CHINA, BY RAILWAY FROM RANGOON.

The commercial route proposed by Captain Sprye has always received the warm support of the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce, and formed the principal topic of discussion at a recent meeting, of the Chamber, at which were present:—Alderman WRIGHT MELLOR, J.P., its president, M. Liebmann, W. Mallinson, E. Huth, J. Wrigley, jun., J. Lowenthal, R. Skilbeck, J. Day, J. F. Brigg, W. R. Haigh, R. Jackson, Joseph Crosland, Esqs., members of the Council, Mr. C. Mills, secretary, &c.:—

Mr. W. R. HAIGH, in introducing the subject, said it was an old story—a thrice-told tale; still he considered it one of the most important subjects of the day. Since 1860 up to the present time they, with many other Chambers, had unceasingly addressed the Government officials of India on this important subject; and he thought the new phase on which it had now entered justified them in not only following it up, but with even greater zeal and pertinacity than they had done before. For ten years the question had continued to be agitated, and facts had been advanced concerning it which had never been controverted. Still no progress had been made towards the simple preliminary of surveying a certain line of route between the port of Rangoon and the South-western frontier of China. It was not for him to say what had prevented the survey being made; but he believed official ignorance and obstructiveness had something to do with it, while the views of certain parties, more interested in Indian affairs than in the spread of our national commerce, appeared to be consulted. The Indian Government had put forward various reasons why the survey of the route in question had not been made, none of which, however, were valid. To blind the home public, various other routes had been suggested by it as being better than the one proposed by Captain Sprye; but they had all failed, and the most egregious failure was the recent attempt to survey the mountain route by Bhamo, which was found to be far too long and utterly impracticable for a commercial way between England and Western China. By that route goods would have to be carried at least 900 miles by river navigation, through the centre of the Burmese territory, and then some 300 miles over an unsafe wild hill tribe country; and, as a highway for commerce on a small scale, it had been found to be dangerous even to those who knew the passes very well. Captain Sladen had been sent with an expedition to conduct a survey of the route; but the investigation had utterly and hopelessly broken down; so much so that Captain Sladen, when he got forty miles from Bhamo, the point from which he started, was actually left in a deplorable condition—his funds so exhausted that he had to send back a portion of the exploring and surveying party. A partial report of that route had been laid before the authorities, shewing its commercial worthlessness. He did not say that it might not be available in time for a certain part of India; but, as a commercial route, such as was wanted to bring England into contact with an enormous trading population, it was impracticable. It seemed to him—and he felt sure it must occur to those present—that where there were only five hundred miles of road on solid terra firma to be constructed, in order to bring us into contact with a population of 100,000,000 of consumers, whom we might supply, and from whom we might receive various commercial products in return, wholly impossible to comprehend why so grave a subject had required so much agitation in this great commercial country. The fact of the case was that India was governed by bodies who had no sympathy with our national commerce. The old East India Company, which was broken up, was a huge monopoly, maintained mainly for the benefit of a select interested few; and when it was made clear that that system did not work well, it was replaced by another mode of governing India very far from perfect—partly by a council, composed of military, civil, and judicial men from India, which placed the whole government of that country in the hands of some fifteen retired and pensioned members of its different services, with little or no Parliamentary control over that immense and important portion of the British dominions. Of course, that, in passing, raised the question whether, in future legislation, it will not be imperative to introduce a larger amount of English commercial element, with greater Parliamentary control. India wanted men in the Home Council who thoroughly comprehended the importance of commerce, and who were not specially trained to be selfish and obstructive to national and colonial interests in matters of this kind. But they had so far progressed with the Government that they had been driven to make experimental surveys of adverse routes, which had broken down; and he felt sure that a little more influence brought to bear upon Her Majesty's Ministers, must cause them to respond to the commercial demands of this country, and open that route from Rangoon which was truly the front door to China; for by it they had a clear run of 500 miles only to reach the people with whom they wished to come in contact. Lord Cranborne, in 1866, while Secretary of State for India, ordered the survey of the 500 miles route to be made. Arrangements were made, and the survey was carried to the terminus of British territory, which brought them to the Shan States of the King of Burmah. No difficulties had presented themselves, and he did not see why the survey should not have been continued. So far from there being any political difficulty, the King of Burmah had actually placed at the service of the surveying party a military escort, in order, if necessity arose, to protect the party in their surveying operations. But the Governor-General of India communicated with the new Secretary of State for India, advancing certain erroneous reasons why the survey should not be continued; and one reason actually was "the expense which would be incurred"—a mere trifle compared with the importance of the object sought. It was most satisfactory that the last Memorial—a very interesting document—sent to Government on this important question had been sent by a neighbouring town—Wakefield, whose Chamber, although much less interested in the expansion of the trade in manufactured goods than Huddersfield, had men who so thoroughly grasped the subject from its inception, that they had recently sent up an unanswerable remonstrance to H.M.'s Government. Their Memorial urged the necessity of Government continuing the survey of the route proposed by Captain Sprye, and was also a remarkable historical document. It recorded chronologically every Memorial that had been sent to Government on the subject; and he was glad to find that, long before he lived here, Huddersfield had put her mark of approval to a project, which, he felt satisfied, would in future days be looked upon as one of those which had peacefully revolutionised the world. Lord Cranborne, notwithstanding the rebuffs he met with from the Governor-General of India, wisely persevered in commanding the survey. He had no hesitation in saying if this great question was settled, if it should be found practicable to construct a railroad along the 500 miles route, Rangoon, instead of being a port of entry only to the two millions and a half of people of British Burmah, would be the most important port in the China and Indian Seas. After referring to the decline of the American trade in Yorkshire, Mr. Haigh continued,—When we saw we were so likely to be affected by the action of foreign Governments impeding our commercial enterprise, was it not incredible, in a commercial country like England, that doors to new markets should be kept shut by our authorities when doors to old markets were being closed? Mr. Haigh then gave some figures respecting the number of miles of railroad opened in Indian territory, and the expenditure thereon, and stated that, up to the present time, in consequence of the opposition given by the Indian Government, not a single railroad had been made in British Burmah. There was an injustice on the face of it, and arose from an intense desire on the part of the officials at Calcutta to prevent Rangoon from becoming a port of commercial importance. This too clearly showed there was something "rotten in the state of Denmark." Lord Cranborne, however, did not succumb to the overruling of the Indian officials, and the survey was carried out to the extreme of our frontier, and then stopped by the hasty deference of his successor to that overruling. Lord Cranborne, however, still expressed the opinion that the project was not only possible, but ought to be carried out. After quoting an extract from a recent speech delivered by his lordship in Manchester, Mr. Haigh said. All they wanted was to give the people of Western China those facilities which improved civilisation had given to other nations nearer home, and to bring us into commercial communication with their vast population to which would more than make up for the deficiencies caused by the withdrawal of the American trade. He was not at present prepared to submit a Memorial; but he felt that they ought to take action as early as possible. The form of action he would suggest was that a Committee, consisting of the president, vice-president, and any other gentlemen who would co-operate in it, should be formed; and, before the meeting of Parliament, draw up such a fresh Memorial as would meet the now exact position of the case. He moved, therefore, that a Committee be appointed to draw up such a Memorial, and that a copy be sent to the other Chambers of Commerce, in order that they might, by a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together, as was said on the hustings, carry out the project which, consequent on official obstructiveness, they had so long advocated in vain.

Mr. LOWENTHAL: How far has the survey gone?

Mr. HAIGH, in reply, said 245 miles have been surveyed, and not only surveyed, but reported upon most favourably.

Mr. LOWENTHAL said he believed that was by direction of the Marquis of Salisbury.

Mr. HAIGH said that was the fact; and the report of the partial survey was unusually favourable. It had extended over 247 miles, of which it reported 169 easy of construction, 35 moderately easy, and 40 only difficult. In the whole distance there was only one tunnel, which would not be more than a mile in length. He had been given to understand that the 250 miles remaining to be surveyed would offer still fewer engineering difficulties than had been encountered in the part already surveyed.

The PRESIDENT remarked that it was very provoking that official obstructions should be placed in the way of the commercial community. He thought it was very important that a Committee should be appointed to draw up such a Memorial; since, having prosecuted the thing for so many years, they ought not to falter. But he thought that, at present, it was hardly probable that much attention would be given to it this year, inasmuch as more pressing subjects would lay hold of the Government, and of the Opposition likewise; and there would, no doubt, have to be a good party battle fought; but the Memorial ought to be ready for presentation to whichever party assumed the reins of office.

Mr. HAIGH thought there would be an advantage in having the Memorial before the present Government. A new Governor-General was going out, and if they sent up a suitable Memorial, and the present Government acceeded to its prayer, the incoming Government, whoever might be at the head of it, would no less feel the weight of public commercial opinion, and would give all merited support to the route proposed by Captain Sprye.

Mr. LOWENTHAL said he agreed with Mr. Haigh that a change of Government had not very much to do with the question. Whoever might be at the head of the Government, he would have to look at these national commercial questions. The Government of India had too much power; and unless the projectors of such projects were well supported by public opinion, and particularly by Chambers of Commerce, it would be a very hard task to sustain our foreign trade against present competition. He believed the sooner something was done the better, and he had great pleasure in seconding the resolution.

Mr. HAIGH said there required a large infusion of commercial men into the home Indian Council. There were already a large number of men who understood this question; and these documents, when called for in the House of Commons, with the immense amount of information they conveyed, and the great reflection they contained upon the delay and obstructions thrown in the way by the Indian Governments, would form a basis for discussion in the House of Commons, and make the subject one of the earliest the Government would have to take up after the Irish Church question had been dealt with.

The resolution was carried, and a Committee formed, consisting of the President, Mr. W. R. Haigh Mr. J. Lowenthal, Mr. Liebmann, and Mr. Josh. Wrigley, jun.

LONDON, MONDAY, NOV. 30, 1868.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

AN official notification in the Gazette informs us that on the 20th November had audience of HER MAJESTY at Windsor —ANSON BURLINGHAME, Esq., CHIH-KANG, and SUN-CHIA-KU, High Ministers Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary from the Emperor of CHINA, to deliver their credentials; to which audience they were introduced by the Right Hon. Lord STANLEY, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. And this is all we have to report at present as to the doings of the Mission. Probably the Envoy has been waiting until the turmoil of the elections was over before opening negotiations, and in this he was doubtless right; nevertheless, it is a significant fact that, during the long interval that has already elapsed since he arrived in London, no attempt has been made to conciliate either the mercantile or political world—there have been no banquets or speeches such as were brought into play in New York to further the objects of the Mission. If, however, anything is to be settled between Mr. BURLINGHAME and the present Government before their final struggle for existence commences, there is no time to be lost, and we may expect some information very speedily as to the nature of his propositions. We understand, too, that the Mission is due at Paris about the end of December (Messrs. BROWN and DESCHAMPS having already been over there to make arrangements for their reception), and that an hotel has been secured for them in the Avenue des Champs-Elysées.

WE observe that the P. and O. Company intend despatching an extra steamer from Yokohama to Suez direct, as an inducement to shippers of silkworms' eggs. With reference to this traffic, it is stated that new arrangements are pending between the French West India Steam-packet Company, the Pacific Company, and the Panama Railway Company, by which the voyage from Japan to France will be accomplished in about fifty-four days, and this route is strongly recommended to shippers of silkworms' eggs, as so small a portion of the way is through an extreme tropical heat. This is certainly a desideratum; but then on the other hand there are virtually three transshipments—operations always prejudicial to cargo of a delicate nature—and which are reduced to a minimum by the direct carriage in one steamer as far as Suez. And when the Suez Canal is complete, which we are repeatedly assured will now take place very shortly, importers of silkworms' eggs and other delicate commodities will be able occasionally to get cargoes direct from Japan without any transshipment at all, by the employment of vessels of such light draught as will enable them to pass through the canal.

WE notice with pleasure that it is proposed by the Legislative Council of Hong Kong to appropriate a sum for the reception of the Duke of EDINBURGH on his arrival there. Of course such magnificent entertainments as were offered to his Royal Highness in the wealthy and prosperous Australian colonies, and as will undoubtedly greet him at the Indian Presidencies, cannot possibly be provided out of the already overburdened treasury of this much-abused little island; but what is undertaken we may be sure will be done well and gracefully. The latest news we have of the Galatea is that he had safely reached Madeira on the 14th of November.

INDIAN advices inform us that from the present month there will henceforth be a monthly mail made up from India for the United States, which is to be forwarded by the P. and O. or other convenient steamer to Hong Kong, and thence by the Pacific Mail Company's vessels via Yokohama to San Francisco. The postage, it is added, will be considerably less by this route than by way of Great Britain. It must be remembered, however, that it will only be available for newspapers as far as San Francisco, as they cannot be forwarded to the Atlantic States by the overland route.

RANGOON AND WESTERN CHINA.

THE failure of the Bhamo expedition and the renewed advocacy in many influential quarters of Captain SPRYE's proposed route from Rangoon to Kianghung, are now attracting a good deal of attention, one evidence of which will be found in a discussion that recently took place in the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce, which we reprint at full length in another column. There is a general feeling that the Indian Government has disgraced itself by unscrupulous partisanship in suppressing this, the most reasonable plan yet brought forward, in order to favour the Bhamo route; but this feeling is tempered by a confident hope that under the administration of Lord MAYO, who, whatever may be his shortcomings, goes out unprejudiced, the advocates of the first named project will at least have fair play. The prejudice that has always existed against it at Calcutta is most unaccountable, and we can only look for an explanation of it in the fact that the Indian Council is far too Indian in its composition, Imperial interests—which are surely worthy of some consideration—being entirely unrepresented. The officers of the Indian Military, Judicial, or Civil Services that compose the Council have, of course, no knowledge of the requirements of commerce, and care little for its interests. Of the many things in which Reform is urgently needed this is by no means the least. Recent opportunities have been sadly neglected; three successive vacancies, that might well have been given to men who would have fairly represented the interests of the mother-country, having been respectively filled up by Sir FREDERICK HALLIDAY, Sir R. MONTGOMERY, and Sir H. RAWLINSON. The last-named appointment was, it must be owned, a disinterested one, Sir HENRY RAWLINSON'S politics being opposed to those of the present Cabinet; still, like the two previous ones, it tended to make the Government of India more exclusive, and more independent of home influence and commercial interests—a tendency much to be deplored, for the Council is already far too much disposed to make itself independent of Imperial authority altogether.

This, however, is a digression, and these remarks are applicable to many topics besides the one under our immediate notice. With regard to the Rangoon-Kianghung project, we are glad to find some of the more influential home journals are at last raising their voices in its favour. The Saturday Review, a journal which, with all its eccentricities, never takes up such a question as this without having well studied it, recently devoted a well-written article to this subject, in the course of which it justly states that "after "the progress that has been made it would be the worst "possible policy to put aside Captain SPRYE'S project without completing the survey, which, as far as it has gone, "has pointed to the practicability of his scheme, and not "to its impracticability, as the Calcutta organs are pleased to "represent." The writer might have included the Calcutta correspondent of The Times, who never wearies of writing verbose eulogiums on Captain SLADEN and his achievements. It is full time that the other side had a fair hearing, and we believe that it will now be accorded.

OUR Rotterdam correspondent lately alluded to a report that the Dutch Colonial Minister had opened negotiations with the P. and O. Company for the establishment of a regular line of steamers between Batavia and Galle. The rumour was apparently premature, for up to the present time we learn that no such proposal has been received by the P. and O. Company. It was not, however, altogether without foundation, for the subject was certainly alluded to in the Second Chamber, and in reply to a question the Colonial Minister distinctly advocated the step. In the meanwhile communication is very well maintained by the steamers running between Batavia and Singapore, but the want of communication between Java and the Australian colonies is complained of, and a junction with the P. and O. steamers at Galle would be the nearest approach to this, failing a sufficient trade to support a direct line.

IT is announced that Mr. CAMPBELL, Secretary to the Inspector-General of Customs, who has just returned to this country, has brought with him one hundred and fifty gold medals, which have been struck at Peking by order of the Chinese Government, for distribution to the officers of the Ever-Victorious Army. The medals are to be given through Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon, late commander of the force, and it is understood that official application will be made to the British Government for leave to accept and wear the decoration.

LABUAN.

In a letter from Labuan, published in a recent issue of this journal, there was announced a new feature of hope for the successful development of the valuable coal fields of the island, in the shape of the employment of convict labour for the working of the mines; and this statement was put forth in a manner calculated to convey the impression that the idea of procuring labourers from the various neighbouring convict stations was a new one, originating with the present management, and that the representatives of the old company had entirely neglected this obvious means of overcoming one of their most serious difficulties.

This, however, was far from being the case. "Honour to whom honour is due." Mr. Spencer Price, the managing director of the late company—or rather, since to the sorrow of the shareholders it is not yet wound up, we must say the company that lately owned the property—was the first to report on the expediency of procuring convict labour. His report, which was published in London in August, 1867, pointed to the working of the mines by Chinese contractors, and to the use of convicts also, if procurable, as being, in his opinion, the sole means of solving that old standing difficulty of the company, the labour question. Mr. Price not only published his views, but took prompt action upon them, by placing himself at once in communication with the Governors of Hong Kong and the Straits Settlements, representing the advantages to be derived from utilising the convict labour at Labuan instead of exporting it, as had previously been done, to India, Ceylon, or the Andaman Islands. He was fortunate in finding his scheme approved by the present Governor of Labuan, on his arrival at Singapore en route for Labuan, and also by Sir Harry Ord, who evinced a warm interest in the plan proposed, and promised his co-operation. There can be little doubt that the plan thus initiated by Mr. Price would have resulted in an era of renewed prosperity to the 'China Steamship and Labuan Coal Company;" but, unhappily, before they could be carried into execution, the factious proceedings of a section of the shareholders at home precipitated the company into Chancery—that slough of despond in which the property of thousands of suffering investors is swallowed up and lost—lost to them, but gained by hungry lawyers and liquidators. Chancery procedure is understood to have undergone many reforms of late; but as regards the winding up of companies it is still used as an instrument of ruin and oppression to an extent that demands the serious consideration of the legislature.

It is merely in justice to the manager of the old company that we recall these facts. The new owners of the property are fortunate in being in a position to carry into execution the measures thus commenced, and they are moreover to be congratulated on the additional advantage of commencing their operations under a more beneficent regime than their predecessors. The intelligent and energetic administration of Mr. Pope Hennessy presents a marked contrast to the apathetic indifference—to use no stronger term—that preceded it. Labuan is now beginning to be an important colony, and will ere long, we trust, not only be prosperous and flourishing in itself, but furnish, from its almost boundless store of coal, an element of prosperity to those other Eastern possessions of Great Britain that lie in its neighbourhood.

Having been given to understand that our market information—already ample and carefully compiled—would be more acceptable to subscribers if its scope were still further extended, we are now able to add to it a table showing the current prices for a large number of articles of commerce, which the limits of our space do not admit of being treated in separate paragraphs. This will be so arranged as to form, in conjunction with the information already given, a most complete commercial record, suitable to the wants of merchants at every place where the London and China Telegraph circulates.

It is announced that a Chinese College—which, it seems, formerly existed at Naples, but had by some means fallen into desuetude—has been resuscitated by the Italian Government, in connection with a general school of Oriental languages, with the view of "facilitating relations between Italy and the East."

A notification in the Gazette, dated August 11, announces the appointment of George Caswell, Esq., to be Her Majesty's Consul at the port of Saigon.

TELEGRAPHIC ECCENTRICITIES.

The eccentricities of telegram-mongers pass belief. They are, however, only a shade more extraordinary than the blind faith with which editors reproduce—apparently without taking any precautions to test its accuracy—the balderdash they are supplied with for the column headed "Latest In- "telligence." A few days since telegrams were published in advance of the mails delivered this morning, and these, though dated Yokohama, October 8, and Shanghai, October 14, are in reality forwarded only from Suez by way of Brindisi, so that there is not even that excuse for errors, furnished by the necessity of travelling over the Persian Gulf lines. In one of these we find that the Japanese Government has notified "that merchant vessels accepting charters for the port "of 'Nugau' do so at their own risk"—a phrase entirely destitute of meaning to home readers. Of course Ne-e-gata is the port alluded to, and the mistake,—though at first sight it seems an unaccountable one, is not difficult to understand. The name of this oddly-designated port is sometimes spelt with two i's instead of two e's, and although from a purely linguistic point of view the former method may be the more correct one, it is both ugly and inconvenient, especially when the hyphen is omitted. In the present case the two i's have evidently passed for a u, and the curtailment of the last syllable is by no means an unusual freak of the wires—or those who handle them. The Shanghai telegram gravely informs us that a lighthouse is being erected on "Gubleaf" Island; and this same absurdity was absolutely repeated in some of the daily papers, under the heading of "Notice to "Mariners." Most mariners will probably conjecture that Gutzlaff is the island meant, but to the majority of readers this statement, like the former one, conveys no meaning at all. Of course Mr. Reuter cannot be expected to be acquainted with all the ports and islands of the Far East, but telegrams such as these might at least be submitted, before publication, to some person conversant with the nomenclature of the China Seas; or, failing this, even a hasty reference to a chart or directory might serve to obviate such very glaring errors.

In a recent article we noted the fact that China interests had received their full share of attention at the hands of what we suppose must now be termed the moribund Conservative Government. It must be owned, however, that the Straits Settlements have been less fortunate. The withdrawal of the Penang mail service has been the principal grievance, and one that justly excited much indignation; but in many things of minor importance the Straits colonists have received but scant courtesy from the present Ministry. We now hear that the influential petition sent home as a protest against the Supreme Court Bill, and so well supported here by Mr. Napier, the Chairman of the Straits Settlements Association, has been completely ignored, the Colonial Secretary having notified the Queen's approval of the measure without even a passing allusion to the energetic protest lodged against it. Such treatment as this is not likely to inspire our fellow-subjects at Singapore and Penang with any great degree of affection for the Cabinet of which the Duke of Buckingham is a member. But it yet remains to be seen whether they will be any better off with a Liberal Colonial Secretary.

The Dutch merchants in Japan, who have long been agitating for a recognition of certain claims they have put forward on the Japanese Government, are doomed to disappointment. They seek compensation for losses arising out of the last hostilities in which the Allied Powers were engaged with Japan, and have demanded payment of these either out of the indemnity already recovered from Japan by the Dutch Government, or by further sums to be procured in a similar manner. The question had already been decided adversely, but having been again pressed, the claims have formed the subject of a second investigation by the Finance Minister, who has once more decided against them. Finding that neither the English, French nor American traders had put forward claims of a similar nature, he naturally concluded that there could be no solid foundation for those of his own countrymen, and accordingly advised the King to reject them. This puts an end to an agitation that, if continued, might in time have given rise to some new embroilment:

Through Burmah to Western China. By CLEMENT WILLIAMS. London: William Blackwood and Sons.—This work consists of three parts: a discussion of the various propositions that have been from time to time put forward for trade and telegraph routes between Burmah and Western China; extracts from the journal kept by Dr. Williams during his explorations; and a vindication of his own proposal for a "simple trade-route via Bamò." Hearing of the old caravan journeys between Upper Burmah and Western China, Dr. Williams resolved to test personally the practicability of a route by the Irrawaddi as far as navigable, and thence to Yunnan, or the nearest available point on the Chinese frontier. Being on duty at the Burmese capital, he had an opportunity of securing the friendship of the King, and started, in 1863, with a "Royal Commission" to facilitate his object, for the upper waters of the Irrawaddi. While at Bamò he made various excursions for the purpose of obtaining information, the general results of which were of a nature to convince him of the practicability of the route; but circumstances conspired to prevent his penetrating any further on that occasion, and when he subsequently desired to follow up his object, official jealousy prevailed against him, and he was recalled from his post. This is the author's grievance; and the sense of injustice arising from it seems to have been the chief incentive to the publication of the present volume. Since the Indian Government awoke to the necessity of taking some steps in the matter, there has been much talk of it, and a large sum was voted for an expedition under Captain Sladen, to test still further the capability of the Bamò route, without even a reference to Dr. Williams's name, and ignoring entirely his early and unaided efforts, by which such advantages as the route possesses were first demonstrated. In fact, it is not too much to say that had the Bamò route proved a success the first and foremost place among its advocates and explorers would have belonged to Dr. Williams, and, as it is, he undoubtedly deserves very great praise for his disinterested efforts to promote its adoption. But the utter failure of Captain Sladen's expedition, carried forward under far more favourable auspices, and with ampler means, dooms the Bamò project to extinction, at any rate for the present. Captain Sprye's endeavours, during at least a dozen years, to obtain a recognition of his counter project of a direct route from Rangoon met with precisely the same opposition from official jealousy, but seems now destined to triumph over all its rivals. Perhaps some day Dr. Williams will find that his toil and perseverance have not been altogether thrown away; in the meanwhile the notes from his journal give us many pages of pleasant reading, conveying a store of useful information concerning the little-known people of the remote districts in which he so long sojourned Souvenirs of Ceylon; with a Descriptive Introduction. By A. M. FERGUSON. Colombo: A. M. Ferguson. London: J. Haddon and Co.—The "Souvenirs" comprised in this work consist of about a hundred and twenty pictures of the varied coast, river, and mountain scenery of the "Eden of the Eastern Wave," as Mr. Ferguson fondly calls the beautiful island that his book is intended to illustrate. They include views of the modern towns and their principal buildings, the ancient cities and ruins, various portions of the Ceylon Railway, scenes illustrative of the natural productions of the island, amusing sketches of life and character—all of which are interesting and valuable. But the so-called "introduction"—which follows instead of preceding the pictorial part of the work—is by far the more important. The long experience of the author, derived from an almost continuous residence of some thirty years' duration, is more than sufficient to qualify him for the task he has undertaken, and the results of his observation and study are placed before us in such a pleasantly colloquial style, and with such an entire absence of dogmatism or pedantry, that we read from the first page to the last with unflagging enjoyment. Out of the materials before us a much more pretentious work might have been produced, but we doubt whether it would have been appreciated as these "Souvenirs" cannot fail to be. Ceylon is a country that must be lived in for years, explored and travelled through and through, before any just idea can be formed of its many striking characteristics. The homeward-bound traveller from Calcutta or China, who wanders for a couple of days about the shabby, desolate-looking town of Galle, generally experiences a sense of disappointment, succeeded by a feeling of relief when he finds himself once more on board the P. and O. boat steaming away towards Aden. But let him arrange to stay behind for a fortnight, or better still, a month, and devote that time to a series of excursions to the places recommended by our author—whose volume, by the way, would serve as an admirable guide book—and he will bring away a very different impression. Mr. Ferguson's descriptions of the scenery of the interior are most enticing, and, verified as they are in many cases by the illustrations taken from photographs, we have no reason to think them in any degree exaggerated. Then the details of native life; of the extraordinary superstitions existing among the Singhalese; of the demon-worship, now slowly but surely disappearing as Christianity gains ground; the gossip about coffee, cinnamon, and cocoa-nut culture; the descriptions of the ruins of ancient tanks, and other colossal works of a past age, that almost impress one with the belief that they were wrought by a race of Titans, before whom even the builders of the Pyramids of Gizeh would have seemed dwarfs—all these are full of interest. There is a lengthy appendix, devoted chiefly to the Ceylon Railway, with additional chapters on coffee and cocoa-nut planting, &c.

A Japanese Grammar. By J. J. HOFFMANN, Phil. Doc., &c., &c. Leyden: A. W. Sythoff. 1868.—The empire of Japan, so long shut out from any European intercourse, excepting the Dutch, has now entered into political and commercial relations with well-nigh every European State, and this has stimulated to a very great extent philological inquiry. The author of the grammar before us has a decided right to instruct us in this subject especially, having been for many years Professor of Japanese at the University of Leyden, and often also collaborateur with the late Dr. von Siebold, in works illustrative of Japan. About ten years ago Dr. Hoffmann published his views on Japanese grammar in Dutch, and since that time he seems to have had many opportunities for confirming them, and of entirely re-forming the scattered fragments on the subject which were then existing. The present work is quite original, and is the most complete book we have seen on Japanese grammar. It deals not only with the written but also with the spoken language; not only with the plain Katakana form of expressing Japanese, but also with the numerous forms of the Hiragana, or cursive hand, which presents so many difficulties to the foreign student. What renders this book of peculiar value is that every word which should be expressed by a Chinese character is so printed, with very elegant type. Very full lists of words and phrases of an idiomatic nature have been given, which will enable the student to judge for himself of the genius of the language. Every page is replete with information. The verb, which is the most difficult part of Japanese grammar, is analytically dealt with, and being illustrated throughout with the Chinese characters used, the Chinese scholar will easily comprehend the forms which to others may appear confused. The absolute necessity of a knowledge of the Chinese characters to the proper prosecution of Japanese is strongly insisted upon by Dr. Hoffmann, and in this we perfectly agree with him. The book has been published by command of the Dutch Minister for Colonial Affairs, and is got up in superior style.

Overland Route through British North America; or, the Shortest and Speediest Route to the East. By ALFRED WADDINGTON.—We have already noticed the papers read by Mr. Waddington before the Royal Geographical Society and the British Association meeting at Norwich, and the present pamphlet is an embodiment of the views already expressed in this way as to the necessity for establishing a direct line of railway through the breadth of our territory in North America, to counteract the effects of the "Central Pacific Railway," now in course of completion in the United States. Mr. Waddington takes for his motto, "Once lost, never regained," and says, "Wrapped up in her own prosperity, she (England) is apparently ignorant that a trans-continental railroad is rapidly progressing through the United States, for the professed purpose of transferring the trade of the Old World into the New World. . . . And yet England has in her hands the means of rivalling that high road, as we shall presently show, by one still more direct through British North America. . . . And if England neglect this opportunity she will awake, when too late, to regret the loss of her trade with the East and her commercial supremacy." In these few lines the gist of the entire argument is summed up; the writer, however, goes on to show, with some elaboration, how entirely imaginary are many of the difficulties urged against his scheme, and how easily the rest may be overcome. Although, as we have already explained, we see no reason to fear that entire extinction of our Eastern commerce that Mr. Waddington expects to follow the completion of the American line, we should be glad to see his scheme receive more attention than it has at present attracted. It is impossible to deny that immense advantage would accrue, both to our own North American interests and to our Eastern trade, from the establishment of an inter-oceanic railway through British provinces. A well executed map shows both the line now in course of construction and that proposed by the author.

Journal of the East Indian Association.—The present issue contains a lengthy and exhaustive paper, by Mr. Robert Knight, on "England's Financial Relations with India." Mr. Knight sets out by observing that the immense revenue of our Indian possessions is entirely out of the control of the Indian Government. "The revenue, now nearly fifty millions sterling a-year, which we draw from our Indian fellow-subjects, is practically administered by the House of Commons, and so deep an interest does that august body take in the work, that it is with great difficulty forty of its members can be got together for a couple of hours, once in every year, simply to listen to, and approve, as a matter of course, whatever has been done with those revenues by the Secretary of State for India in Council and the First Lord of the Treasury. In one word, the tax-payers of this country, by their representatives, vote, in about a couple of hours, and without effective criticism of any kind, the appropriation of every sixpence of the fifty millions of revenue raised in India. The people of India have no voice whatever in the matter. The tax-payers of this country administer, I say, as they please the taxes raised in that country, and have done so ever since there was an English Government in India at all. It is easy to see what a telling sermon may be preached on this text, and it is but justice to Mr. Knight to say that he does full justice to his subject. We may expect some fresh legislation from the new House of Commons on the government of India, and Mr. Knight's ably-written essay cannot fail to do good service in promoting the needful reform.

Photographic Album to accompany "The Ever-Victorious Army." Edinburgh: John Taylor.—A short time ago we reviewed in these columns the admirable work of Mr. Andrew Wilson on the suppression of the Taiping Rebellion; we have now to notice a series of photographic portraits and views issued as a companion to it. When Colonel Gordon was investing Soochow a number of photographs were taken of that city and its surroundings; and, under the impression that these would be acceptable to persons taking any special interest in the campaign, they have been collected and published in the form of a handsomely got-up "Album," together with portraits of the principal persons connected with the operations. These include Colonel Gordon, Major-Generals Stavely and Brown, Admiral Hope, Capt. Roderick Dew, "Generals" Ward and Burgevine, &c., together with a few of the Chinese officials who took a leading part, such as General Ching and Li Hung-chang. Many of the pictures, as specimens of photography, are faulty, and some indeed very defective; but this was inseparable from the circumstances under which they were taken. There is a preface descriptive of the photographs and their relation to Mr. Wilson's book. Those whose interest in Colonel Gordon's campaign has led them to purchase "The Ever-Victorious Army" will do well to procure the companion Album as well.

Ferguson's Ceylon Directory and Handbook of Useful Information. Printed at the Observer Press, Colombo.—The issue of this valuable work of reference for 1866-68, is now before us, and must be pronounced in all respects a great improvement on previous editions. It is a bulky volume, illustrated with a railway map of India; a map of the Ceylon Railway; views in Ceylon, &c., and containing a vast amount of information on subjects both of local and general interest. Judicial, commercial, agricultural, immigration, and other statistics are ably dealt with, and there are interesting sections devoted to the revenue and expenditure of the island, coffee planting, tea cultivation, &c. A very copious index adds to its utility as a book of reference.

The A B C Sewage Process; being a Report of the Experiments made at Leicester, Tottenham, and Leamington.—A few months ago we noticed in these columns an invention patented by Messrs. Sillar and Wigner, for the deodorisation and utilisation of sewage; and subsequently we recorded some highly satisfactory experiments made with the process at Tottenham and Leicester. These have lately been followed by others at Leamington, the results of which conclusively prove the almost incalculable value of the process, whereby sewage containing 264 grains of solid matter to the gallon was converted into water almost pure—containing, in fact, only about seven grains of solid matter to the gallon, which is much less than many samples of drinking water contain; while the "residuum" consists of a sediment perfectly inodorous, possessing all the properties of most valuable manure, and worth from £3 to £4 per ton, the cost of producing it being only about ten shillings. The present pamphlet is produced with the object of presenting in a collected form a detailed account of all these experiments, together with a long series of analyses showing their actual results in comparison with those accomplished by other processes. The town of Leamington has, we understand, entered into an arrangement with the patentees for the permanent adoption of their system, an example which will doubtless be speedily followed by most other large towns.

He Knew He was Right.—By ANTHONY TROLLOPE. London: Virtue and Co.—Mr. Trollope's latest complete work—the "Last Chronicle of Barset"—was, happily for lovers of good fiction, not the last work destined to come from his facile pen. The experiment of publishing a novel in weekly numbers must have had an encouraging result, for this oddly-named tale, like its predecessor, appears in this form. Its success was assured from the commencement, for—although one cannot help regretting the absence of those old friends whose fortunes were finally disposed of in the "Last Chronicle"—we are here introduced to new characters fully as life-like as any of the author's previous creations, and if the interest is equally well sustained to the end, it will add another to the already long list of Mr. Trollope's successes.

Our Mutual Friend. By CHARLES DICKENS.—This is the last published of the "Charles Dickens' Edition" of that author's works now being brought out by Messrs. Chapman and Hall. Of the merits of this, or of any other works by the same writer, it is needless to speak here, but a word may be said in praise of the extreme convenience, elegance, and cheapness of the form in which they are produced. The now familiar Charles Dickens edition of Mr. Dickens's works—the cheapest yet issued—is now complete. They comprise eight volumes at 3s. 6d., and ten volumes at 3s. each. The complete set may be had in eighteen volumes, Roxburgh binding, for £3 10s., or for £2 18s. in bevelled cloth. The announcement that Mr. Dickens's present series of readings will be his last has given universal cause for regret, and serves also to enhance, if possible, the deep interest always felt in his works. By the way, it is worthy of note that the "conductor" of All the Year Round has announced that, with the new series to be forthwith commenced, there will no longer be a "Christmas number." This is owing to the extensive manner in which it has been imitated.

NORTH GERMANY.

HAMBURG, November 21.

An important discovery of treasure trove was made a few weeks ago near Hildesheim by a party of soldiers in making some excavations for the formation of a rifle-butts, for the military in garrison at that town. At the foot of a hill known as the Galgenberg, on which malefactors were formerly hanged, some pieces of ornamented silver plate were dug up, which led to further explorations, and these to the discovery of the whole treasure. At first it was supposed to have been the private property of some nobleman in the vicinity constrained to bury it for better security in troublesome times, probably during the Thirty Years' War, as the ornamentation of the articles appeared to agree with the style and pattern of the Renaissance age, and the workmanship was ascribed to Ghiberte, Michael Angelo, Benvenuto, Cellini, and other Italian artists of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. But it now appears that the articles found date much further back, for a commission of archæologists and others has been appointed, who have examined the treasure and sent in their report. Professor Unger, of the University of Gottingen, is of opinion that it was made at the best period of Roman art, temp. Augustus Cæsar, and conjectures that it was a part of the table equipage of some Roman general, probably some of the spoils taken from Varus after the defeat of the Roman Legions by the Teutonic General, Arminius, at the great battle near Lippspringe, which is not more than twenty or thirty miles from the place of discovery.

The treasure consists of a number of plates, dishes, vases, drinking-cups, and candelabra, all of pure silver, of elaborate workmanship and unique design. The largest piece is the cover of a large vase, much oxydised and imperfect, with chasings in high relief of stags, dogs, and other animals. Another work of great artistical value is a silver drinking-cup with two handles, covered with vine leaves intermixed with theatrical masks, so perfect in conception and delicacy of execution as to form a chef d'œuvre altogether unsurpassable. Another valuable piece is a large flat vase or fruit dish, containing a beautiful figure in high relief of Minerva, the helmet, ægis, and attributes richly gilt. Two other vases are ornamented with busts also in high relief—one of the goddess Rhea, the other the Phrygian Moon-god Deus Lunus, as is recognisable by the Phrygian cap and the half moon, with the horns projecting over the shoulder of the figure. Another vase bears a medallion representing the Infant Hercules crushing the serpent. Dr. Bendorf, an antiquarian of note at Gottingen, has succeeded in deciphering twenty-four inscriptions of quite antique names, engraved in the ancient Roman characters. An interesting part of the discovery is that on nearly every piece is inscribed the weight of the piece, which will go far to set at rest the vexed question of what the Roman weights really were, and how far they correspond with those now in use. At first it was supposed that this treasure was buried in a hurry on the approach of an enemy, but subsequent explorations prove this to be an unfounded conclusion; for there is no sign of hurry, but rather that the concealment was made with the greatest precision and method that must have been a work of labour and time. The large cave having been excavated, the articles were placed in it with great care and regularity, the larger pieces at the bottom, the smaller articles on them, and the whole then covered by the large vases turned upside down, evidently for the protection of the underlying pieces.

During the heavy storms that have been raging on this coast for more than a week past the American ship James R. Patten, Captain Purcey, from Akyab to Bremen, with a cargo of 17,800 bags of rice, was unable to make the Weser, and put into the Elbe, anchoring at a little distance outside the furthest fireship. As soon as the weather moderated a little the captain engaged a steam-tug to tow him round to the Weser, but at the entrance of that river the hawser broke and got entangled in the screw of the tug, putting her immediately hors de combat, in consequence of which accident the James R. Patten went ashore before they were able to set sail. Part of the crew were enabled to escape to the tugboat, whilst the officers and the rest of the hands remained on board in a most unenviable and helpless situation, till they were finally rescued by a passing vessel, which landed them at Carolinensiel. The ship cannot be got off, and is a total wreck, but part of the cargo has been saved and sent up to Bremen for sale for account of the underwriters, though much damaged by sea water.

COMMERCIAL.

In rice there has been no transactions. A cargo of cassia lignea has come to hand and been rapidly sold at highly remunerative prices; there is now no more in importers' hands, and buyers must apply to the dealers, who demand 14¼ sch. bco. Flores in demand; cardamoms and pepper are rising. The tea market is calm, but prices remain firm. Very little inquiry for spelter, the only sale reported being 1,000 centmers for delivery at the end of this month at 13.10. The price asked for loco is 13.10 to 13.11, and for spring delivery 13.8. Money is again more plentiful, and discount 2¾ per cent.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVED.—Apenrade, from Hong Kong (3,630 chests cassia lignea); Elizabeth, from Batavia (sugar and rice); Nornen, from Rangoon (4,250 bags rice).

SAILED.—Ernst, to Bombay; Undine, to Rangoon.

SHIPPING AT BREMERHAVEN.

ARRIVED.—Adeline, from Saigon (30,965 bags rice); Fontenoy, from Saigon (26,805 bags rice); Hertha, from Singapore and Bangkok (3,000 bundles rattans, 16,454 bags rice); Union, from Rangoon (8,811 bags rice); St. Magnus, from Saigon (13,900 bags rice); Hougnemont, from Rangoon (13,200 bags rice); Otago, from Rangoon (16,000 bags rice); Louise, from Rangoon (11,711 bags rice); Lorenz, from Rangoon (6,592 bags rice, 1,120 chests cutch); Alarm, from Bassein (13,250 bags rice).

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, November 18.

Since the India Budget was approved of the proceedings in Parliament offer no interest, except to prove how very embittered the opposing parties are at the present time. The health of the Minister of the Colonial Department, Mr. E. de Waal, seems to be much improved, and nothing further has been heard of the rumour that he would resign in favour of Mr. Mirandalle or Mr. O. van Rees. The Royal decree appointing Mr. J. Loudon Governor-General of the East Indies, in place of Mr. Myer, which is so anxiously looked for in India, has not yet been published, and nothing has transpired as to the period of its issue.

The very unfavourable news about the Bali expedition brought by the last mail has created a most mournful impression here.

Mr. R. F. Baron Van Raders, ex-governor of Surinam, died yesterday at the Hague.

In my last letter I told you that the Cabinet had declined to grant the Dutch traders an indemnification for losses incurred by the last war in Japan. This decision was contrary to the opinion of the State Commission, which was appointed to examine these claims, and which recommended a grant of f.39.485.68.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The Trading Company has announced its last auction for this year for the 25th inst., when 77,800 b. Java will be offered. The market has again improved since my last report. Good ordinary Java cannot now be bought under 36c. The transactions, however, are limited, only 660 b. Java, ex Bato, and 690 b. Java, ex Louis de Geer, having changed hands.

SUGAR.—Raw, meets with a good demand. The following parcels have been sold:—1,585 mats Tagal, ex Glorioso, No. 11, at 30¼f.; 220 do. Batavia, ex Anna, No. 8¾, 29¼f.; 219 do., No. 13, at 33¼f.; 956 do. No 13¼, at 33¼f.; 535 do. Bezoeki, No. 12½, at 33f.; 817 do. Sourabaya, No. 14, at 32¼f.; 791 do. Passaroean, No. 19½, at 35f.; 369 do. No. 14, ex City of Perth, at 33¼f. The valuation of the 30,300 mats Java, which will be offered by the Trading Company on the 24th inst. is 0¾f. above September prices.

RICE.—The only transaction to report is 10,600 b. Java, ex Argo, at 8¼f.

TEA.—1,150/4 ch. Java will be offered for private account on the 20th inst. The valuation is 98 to 100c. for Souchong, 82 to 88c. for Congo, and 325 to 350c. for Pekoe.

TOBACCO (Java leaves).—The market is inanimate, and the transactions only include 268 b. Java, ex Ternate and County of Ayr; 409 b. do. Babat, ex Stad Leyden; 97 b. Kotta, ex Herald of the Morning.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

DEPARTURES.—Nov. 13, from Hellevoet, for Samarang, Vyf Vrienden; 14, from Texel, for Batavia, Aletta Augusta; for Rangoon, Isabella; 15, from Brouwershaven, for Nagasaki, Julia; from Texel, for Batavia, Electra; for Japan, Vondel; 17, from Texel, for Sourabaya, Christina Maria.

PASSENGERS OUTWARD.—Per Christina Maria: Messrs. E. H. and T. H. Linnenschmidt, van Loffelt, J. Epke, H. van Sprang, Miss C. P. Kreyta, A. E. Epke; per Electra: Mr. Ten Sythoff, Mr. G. P. van Vliet, Mr. Lucht, Messrs. J. Neuman and family, C. von Ende and family, D. Burlage, E. Wolff, and 150 soldiers.

Monetary and Commercial.

At the half-yearly meeting of the proprietors of the Chartered Mercantile bank of India, London and China, held on the 19th, Mr. George G. Nicol in the chair, the directors' report and statement of accounts were adopted; and in addition the chairman gave a very satisfactory statement of the progress of the bank. The general business had considerably increased since the last meeting, and there had been a large increase in the deposits. The greatest economy was exercised in the management, but he believed the expenses had now been brought down to the minimum amount. He hoped the whole of the bad debts of 1865-66 would be finally extinguished by the end of the present year.

A general meeting of shareholders in the Bank of Rotterdam has been held, at which, after some discussion chiefly relating to the reorganisation of the bank, it was resolved to accept the resignation tendered by the board of directors. At the request of the commissioners, Messrs. Bauduin, Kup and Hubrecht have however consented to remain in office until the 1st of April next, in order to aid them in the necessary reorganisation of the bank.

A general meeting of the proprietors of the London Joint-Stock Bank is called for the 21st of January.

An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Chartered Bank of Australia is convened for the 11th of December, for the declaration of a dividend.

The inquiry into the circumstances which produced the scandalous failure of the Bank of Bombay has already brought to light many circumstances calculated to startle the public when the time comes for publishing the whole story. One piece of evidence given by Mr. Donald Robertson, formerly deputy secretary and afterwards manager of the bank, described a series of loans granted by him in 1864. "To three members of one firm he advanced twenty-five lacs (£250,000) without security, and without consulting with the directors." Mr. Robertson "also spoke to several other transactions of a similar character, on all of which losses had been incurred." Yet people in England were very much amazed when the news came that the bank had failed. Their surprise was not shared by the manager or directors.

A memorandum from the French Atlantic Telegraph Company (Limited) states that up to Monday afternoon, the 23rd instant, 350 nautical miles of the French Atlantic deep sea cable had been completed and certified by the engineers.

Manchester advices announce the failure of Mr. Swain Rhodes, spinner and manufacturer, of Hyndham Mill, Accrington. The liabilities, it is believed, will be small, and the suspension is ascribed to the unprofitable nature of the cotton trade for some time past.

Messrs. Alexander Collie and Co. send the following telegram from Manchester:—"Market unchanged since Tuesday. Producers are very firm at their quotations, and in some cases an advance on Tuesday's rates is obtainable."

The biddings for £200,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held on the 18th inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £83,000, and to Madras £117,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 85 per cent. These results show a slight diminution in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

The few Mexican dollars brought by the West India packet have been sold for China at 59½d. per ounce, showing an advance of ⅛d. upon the price realised for the last arrivals. In the interim sales had been effected at 59¼d. Bar silver remains at 60⅛d., with very little supply, and no inquiry for India. All arrivals of gold are taken for shipment to the continent.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Massilia, from Southampton on the 28th inst., was in gold to Bombay, £2,600; to Galle, £30,191; to Madras, £2,270; to Calcutta, £5,000; in bar silver to Bombay, £11,000; in dollars to Hong Kong, £24,688; total in gold, £40,061; in silver, £35,688.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.

The ordinary half-yearly general meeting of the proprietors in this bank was held at the office of the bank, 65, Old Broad-street, on the 17th October, Mr. GEORGE G. NICOL, chairman of the board of directors, presiding, to receive the directors' report and statement of accounts for the half-year ending the 30th of June last, and to declare an interim dividend.

The MANAGER (Mr. D. T. Robertson) read the advertisement convening the meeting, and the minutes of the last meeting were also read and confirmed.

The report of the directors and statement of accounts were taken as read. It stated that there was a net profit of £80,631 7s. 3d. for the half-year, or at the rate of upwards of 20 per cent. per annum on the capital of the bank. An interim dividend of 3 per cent. for the half-year ended 30th June last, had been paid, and a balance of £58,131 7s. 6d. was carried forward to this half-year's account. The directors had pleasure in stating that the business of the bank continued steadily to improve, without any fresh losses being incurred. It was with much regret they had to announce the retirement of Sir Frederick James Halliday, K.C.B., from the direction, in consequence of his having been appointed a member of the Council of India. It was proposed to fill up the vacancy thus occasioned at the annual meeting in May next, and the directors desired to recommend one of the auditors, Mr. James Joseph Mackenzie, for the office, as a gentleman eminently well qualified for the appointment, from his long and extensive acquaintance with the East.

The CHAIRMAN, in addressing the meeting, said: Gentlemen, this is the second interim meeting which the bank has held, and as we state to you, we have no special proposition to submit to you. You are called together simply to receive the statement of accounts, and to hear the few remarks I shall have to offer upon them. These accounts have been in your possession some days, and, with your permission, I suppose, to save the time of the meeting, we may consider that you have all perused them. (Expression of assent.) On the whole, I think you will consider these accounts as satisfactory. There is not much to add to them. You will observe that there has been a considerable increase in the business of the bank since the last half-yearly meeting, and there has also been a satisfactory increase in the deposits, which is always a matter of some moment. (Hear, hear.) The cash, coin, and bullion, is much as it was before; we always keep this item, as you are aware, at a very safe amount, and so it may, therefore, be considered satisfactory. (Cheers.) The next remark I have to make is with regard to profit and loss account. This, gentlemen, is the first time that we have separated the charge from the gross profits. We have done this in obedience to the wish of the shareholders, expressed at the last half-yearly meeting, that we should do so. (Hear, hear.) You will now see that the gross profits for the half-year have been £133,144; while we have debited the sum of £52,513 for expenses, and as this is the first time that we have separated these two items, and as I believe we are the only Indian bank that publish the information; a few remarks on the matter may not, perhaps, be altogether out of place. It may appear to some of you that these charges are high, but I think those who understand what India is, and who know what the expenses of carrying on banking operations there are, will agree with us that they are exceedingly moderate. (Hear, hear.) We have, as you see stated in the accounts, to keep open the head office, ten branches, and five sub-agencies. The working expenses in England are not necessarily high, but in India the expenses are very high—exceptionally high, because there, as you know, we are subjected to various additional charges which go very much to swell the aggregate amount of our expenses. India is not like England, where you have European talent always at command at a certain price; we have to keep up an efficient and expensive staff; the climate of the country is against them, and we have to provide for furloughs, &c., and there are various other expenses attaching to banking operations in India, so that, comparing the expense of management of an Indian bank with an English bank, is scarcely fair. (Hear, hear.) It is scarcely fair either to compare the expenses of an Indian bank with those of an Australian bank, because, as compared with Australia, the working expenses of an Indian bank are much greater. (Hear, hear.) Still a comparison with an Australian bank will show you that we have kept our expenses within a very moderate limit, and that we have not failed to make reductions wherever we have seen that it is practicable to do so. (Hear, hear.) One shareholder has written to us on this subject, and has brought forward the Union Bank of Australia as an illustration. As I have said, the working expenses of a bank in India are necessarily much greater than those of an Australian bank; but even with the Union Bank of Australia, as that has been mentioned, the Chartered Mercantile Bank does not bear an unfavourable comparison. Looking to the Union Bank of Australia, I find that the capital is £1,250,000; their gross profits last half-year were £311,000; and their charges £109,000. Our capital is £750,000; our gross profits, £133,000; and our charges £52,500. The percentage of the charges upon the profits, which I think is the fair way to take the estimate or to make a comparison, shows that the Union Bank is 35 per cent., and ours 39 per cent. Now, I think if you consider the great additional charges that attach to an Indian banking business, you will consider that that is very moderate. (Hear, hear.) I contend that, judging by the capital alone, is scarcely a fair way of comparison; I think the way is to take the percentage of working expenses on the profits—to take the working expenses as against the gross profits. (Hear.) I need not make any comparison of expenses with English banks, because you know that to compare the expenses of an English bank with those of an Indian bank is scarcely fair—not so fair as to compare with an Australian bank; but if we take one, the London and Westminster Bank, their expenses are considerably more than ours with all our branches. (Hear, hear.) The working expenses are greater than ours.

A PROPRIETOR: Not in comparison to the capital.

The CHAIRMAN: As you are aware, none of the Indian banks publish their accounts in this way, but the Agra and Masterman's Bank did, in days gone by, give their shareholders the amount of charges as against profits; and in 1865 I find that their charges amounted to £119,000. They exceeded ours. (Hear, hear.) Under these circumstances, I think you will agree with us that our charges are very reasonable indeed. For a long time past we have been endeavouring in every possible way to curtail our expenses, not merely at our head office, but at all our branches; we have appointed committees on the other side to revise the expenditure; and we have curtailed them in every possible way. (Hear, hear.) And we have to a certain extent succeeded but I think we have arrived at that stage when it would be both unwise and a dangerous policy to carry economy too far with regard to a bank like this. (Hear, hear.) I am free to confess that we have now reached the minimum amount of our expenditure; we have now reached the minimum of what is our proper legitimate expenses, and I do not think we can, with a due regard to the interests of the bank, make any further reduction. We still continue to rigidly scrutinise the expenses, but to carry reduction beyond the amount at which we have now brought our expenses, would be unsafe and prejudicial to the interests of the bank. (Hear, hear.) It has been objected by one shareholder that the profit and loss account is not given in a more detailed form. I do not know whether it is your wish, but if it is, I have here an analysis of our expenditure at the head office and at our branches, and if it is your wish I will read it. In fact, I do not think it would be any advantage to you to hear this, as I have said we have brought our charges down to the lowest point. I can give you our assurance that we shall keep them as low as possible, but as I have said before, I cannot hold out any expectation that they will be materially reduced below the present amount. The other point in the report to which I would refer, and which, no doubt, you have observed, like ourselves, with deep regret, in the loss we have sustained by the retirement of Sir Frederick James Halliday from our board. I can tell you this is a loss we most sincerely regret. During our intercourse with Sir Frederick, which has not been a long one, it has been most pleasant, and his services have been of the greatest value and advantage to the bank. (Hear.) Fortunately, we have been able to recommend a successor, in every way well qualified. Mr. Mackenzie, who has been connected with India and China for the last thirty or thirty-five years, who is intimately acquainted with the trade of these countries, and I do not believe you could possibly have a better man. (Hear, hear.) His election will not come on till the meeting in May next. I think, gentlemen, that is all the remarks I need trouble you with, but I shall be very glad to hear any remarks or to answer any questions that any shareholder may have to put. (Hear, hear.)

A SHAREHOLDER referred to the item of £220,000 odd, standing in the assets, as "landed and house property at head office and branches;" and asked whether, in the £52,500 representing the charges of the half-year, anything was charged for interest on these premises.

Mr. BROWN said he was the shareholder who had been alluded to by the chairman as having desired that some more detailed account should be given of the £52,000. They would recollect that at the last meeting he made some remarks on this subject. He did not wish the directors to give a minutely-detailed account of the items making up this £52,000; he merely wished that they should do what was done in the Union Bank of Australia—that was, divide this sum into five distinct items, which would enable them to see more clearly what proportion of these charges referred to this country, and what proportion to India, &c. He did not ask for any information that the directors could not, in their capacity as guardians of the shareholders' interests, give; he only asked for this information, so that these accounts might be rendered a little more explicit, and that they might easily learn what this large amount of expenses really consisted of, and in what way it was incurred. The Union Bank of Australia gave this item in five amounts; and if the directors of this bank would do the same, he thought the proprietors would be much better pleased, and that the information would not tend in any way to affect the interests of the bank. (Hear, hear.) The first item ran thus:—"Profits of the past half-year, after making provision for all bad and doubtful debts, less remuneration to the directors, salaries, and agents abroad"—so much. That would tell them where some of the expenses went. If the chairman should decide that it was not for the interest of the bank that the information should be given, he, for one, would not ask for it; but he was sure the chairman would not object to the shareholders putting any questions bearing upon this expenditure. (Hear, hear.) He did not dispute one word of what the chairman had said. He was willing to accept his statement that the greatest economy was exercised in the management of the bank—that the expenses would be brought down to the minimum amount. He was also aware that there were many expenses connected with a banking business in India and China which rendered the conduct of such business very expensive. He did not doubt anything the chairman said; but he only asked that they should know a little about the manner in which their money was expended. (Hear, hear.) The second item of the balance-sheet of the Union Bank of Australia was:—"General expenses in the colony, including rates, taxes, and stationery." The third item was:—"Remuneration to the board of directors, salaries of London office staff, rates, taxes, and general expenses." Then came the income-tax; then these were added together, and were deducted from the larger sum of profit. He did not think they should be content with having the large sum of £105,000—the amount of their annual charges—simply stated to them in one item. If the item was divided, as he had suggested, it would be easy to ascertain whether or not their expenses were too large. They might be large, and they might not be large; at all events, there could be no objection in so dividing the item that the shareholders might see where and in what way those expenses had been incurred. (Hear, hear.) All he asked was that the directors would divide this sum of £105,000 in the way he had suggested. (Hear, hear.) If there was any objection to it on the score of expediency, if the chairman said so, then he would willingly withdraw his request; but he could not see any objection. And as regarded the expenses of the bank, he had compared it with the Union Bank, by the capital of the two banks. The working expenses of the Union Bank were something over 8 per cent. on the capital, and in this bank it was 14 or 15 per cent. He did not say that there were not different circumstances connected with the two banks which would satisfactorily explain this. No doubt the chairman was quite right when he said that, considering the exceptional expenses attending a bank of this nature, their expenses were very moderate; but he asked that they should know what these expenses really consisted of. If the item was divided in the way he had suggested, the shareholders would, he was sure, be perfectly satisfied. (Cheers.) Before he sat down, there was one other question he should like to ask. He did not wish to ask any question that could not be properly and fairly answered, with a due regard to the interests of the bank, but in their report there was the paragraph—"The directors have pleasure in stating that the business of the bank continues steadily to improve, without any fresh losses being incurred." This was very satisfactory, but he thought it would be even more satisfactory if they were informed whether or no the losses of 1865-1867 had been fully provided for, and when they would be finally extinguished. At the last half-yearly meeting a sum of £61,000 was carried forward against the bad debts of the previous year of 1865-66, and the chairman then stated that the directors believed the profits of the year would be sufficient to finally extinguish these debts, besides paying the dividends. (Hear.) He would repeat that he did not wish to ask any questions that could not be properly answered; but he thought it was only reasonable that they should know whether the chairman still adhered to what he stated then—that the year's profits would more than pay those bad debts, besides the dividends. While these debts were outstanding an incubus attached to their shares. (Hear, hear.) Once let them extinguish those debts, and their shares would rise in value in the market, and the public confidence in their bank would be greatly increased. (Hear, hear.)

Sir FREDERICK JAMES HALLIDAY asked to be allowed to say a few words in reply to the remarks that had fallen from the last speaker. The hon. shareholder accepted the statement of the chairman that the accounts was a perfectly truthful one, and that these charges were moderate, and yet he asked that the amount should be divided into four items. He supposed that the object of the hon. shareholder to have these charges given more in detail, but he would ask how much nearer he would be to his object in dividing these charges into the four items, as he had suggested. They came there on business matters, and as such, desired to transact the business in the smallest space of time. They did not propose to go into detail of these accounts, and unless they went into detail, what conceivable object was to be gained in dividing those charges into four items. They would not have those charges presented more in detail than they had now. He was in a position that day to speak in a way that he had hitherto not been in a position to do, and he could tell them that if there was one thing for which their bank was remarkable, it was the stern and unflinching honesty with which its affairs were conducted. (Hear, hear.) There was never a shilling of expenditure that was not most carefully investigated —there was never anything that might seem to be concealment or dishonesty—everthing was above-board, honourable, straightforward, and in their interest alone. (Hear, hear.) Under these circumstances the directors came before them with a balance-sheet showing a large amount of expenses, but at the same time they had their assurance that they had done their best, and that they would continue to do their best, economising wherever it was practicable; for, as the chairman had said, as a bank of its kind, it was an unwise policy to carry economy beyond a certain limit. (Hear, hear.) The chairman had truly stated that there were circumstances attending the operation of an India bank, which rendered it very different from an English bank; and accepting, as the hon. shareholder did, all these statements, he could not see what object he had to gain in desiring that these charges should be divided into four items in the way he had suggested. (Hear, hear.) He would remind them that the position of director of a bank of this nature was a very responsible position. He recollected a conversation he had with a gentleman, whose name he could mention, and who was asked whether he would care to go into the proprietorship, or perhaps, on to the directorate of a bank like this. He replied, "Well, after the large experience I have had, and what I have seen behind the scenes in these matters, I tell you I would not; because I am sure that, no matter how cautious and prudent those may be who head your management, who are at the head of your affairs"—and he (Sir Frederick) had no doubt that the proprietors would agree with him that those gentlemen who were at the head of their affairs were prudent and cautious men—(hear, hear)—"yet in the working of a bank of this kind you cannot help being at the mercy of your agents at your different agencies abroad. You may lay down good rules at headquarters, but what security have you that these rules will always be carried out by your agents?" True, what was their security? They had but one. They must choose its very best men by the very best test they could apply; and above all they must repose confidence in those who had the management. He believed that their directors were gentlemen, all of the first standing. They had every reason to trust them. As far as his experience went he believed they had nearly, if not quite, brought the charges down to the lowest point. (Hear, hear.) These expenses were naturally created at a time when the bank's business was largely increased. Now, every man knew that, although they might sometimes curtail their business, they could not so easily curtail their expenses. (Hear, hear.) He believed the directors had gone as far as they wisely could do in the reduction of the expenses of the bank. (Hear, hear.) Now, if that were so, would the meeting allow it to be said that they were not satisfied with the present statement, and that they required that these charges should be divided into four items? The chairman had also said that it was quite open to any shareholder who required any more detailed information to go to the office of the bank, and he would receive all the information he asked. In the face of this, what possible object could the hon. shareholder have in persisting in this motion? Again, there were certain times and seasons for doing certain things. Now, the bank had gone through many difficulties, and the directors had had to strive hard to maintain the credit of the bank. (Hear.) No one knew what the directors had had to go through during the last three years but those gentlemen themselves, and he called upon the proprietors who knew this still to repose confidence in those gentlemen, and they might rest assured that their interest would not suffer in their hands. Such frivolous questions and carping, of which they had an instance in the hon. shareholder, only tended to damage the credit of the bank. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Brown rose, and disclaimed that he had any such intention.

Sir Frederick James Halliday said he did not suppose that the hon. shareholder intended to ruin his property; the hon. shareholder did not seem to know what he was really doing. (Hear, hear.) Whatever the object of the hon. shareholder, people outdoors were so apt to misconstrue motives, that when they read the remarks of that gentleman they might be inclined to say that "Mr. Brown seemed a shrewd man, and he evidently thinks there is something very wrong in the expenses." Remarks made in such a spirit, he would repeat, did tend sometimes to affect the credit of an institution of this character.

Mr. Brown said he distinctly protested against any intention on his part to injure the credit of the bank. He had put the question merely as a business man, but if it was the wish of the shareholders that the information he had asked for should not be given, he did not desire to press the point.

Mr. Larnack said, as a director, he desired to say a few words. He quite concurred in the remarks that had fallen from Sir Frederick Halliday. The directors had had enormous difficulties to contend with in the last three years, and they had surmounted them to a large extent. He and his colleagues were perfectly independent of the Chartered Bank. They held a large interest in the bank, and they worked here for themselves as well as for them. (Hear, hear.) He himself would not consent to sit upon the board of any company unless he held himself an overwhelming interest in that company. It was not agreeable to the feelings of the directors to have shareholders coming there half-year after half-year carping over what the directors had done, and asking such frivolous questions as those that had been asked that day; and if this continued, he would not sit at the board; for, as he had said, he was perfectly independent of the Chartered Bank. (Hear.) They might depend upon it that their affairs were thoroughly well managed. They had certainly made losses, and what Indian bank had not? They had, however, done their best to bring these round, and they would bring them round, if they were encouraged and supported by their proprietary. (Hear, hear.) He hoped the shareholders would continue to repose confidence in the board, as they had hitherto done. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Ries thought the remarks of the hon. director were quite uncalled for. He thought the remarks of Mr. Brown were very sensible and well made. He, for one, desired to have a more detailed account of this annual expenditure of £104,000, and he thought the hon. shareholder was quite justified in asking for this. He thought the remarks of the hon. director were uncalled for—and if some more satisfactory explanation is not given he should feel it to be his duty to move a resolution on the subject.

Mr. Hennery thought it would be satisfactory to the shareholders to know what sum was required finally to extinguish the debts of the year 1865-66. He did not think it was satisfactory that half-year after half-year allusion should be made to these debts. He would also recommend the directors to raise the reserve fund to its former amount, before largely increasing their dividend. He was quite satisfied that to raise the reserve fund to its former amount would conduce very much to the increased prosperity of the bank. (Hear, hear.)

The Chairman, in reply to the several questions, said that no account was taken in the £52,000 for interest in respect of the company's premises. With respect to the remarks of Mr. Brown, followed up by what had fallen from Mr. Larnack, he must say that after the difficulties they had had to contend with during the last three years, and after all they had done to surmount those difficulties, and to maintain the credit and position of the bank, it was unpleasant to the directors to come there and hear such remarks from shareholders. (Hear, hear.) The shareholders had hitherto been pleasd to place confidence in himself and his colleagues, and he could assure them that the confidence so placed would never be abused. (Hear, hear.) After what had been said he hoped that Mr. Brown would be satisfied that the affairs of the bank were economically conducted. He had the information asked for by Mr. Brown, and if it was the wish of the meeting he would read it. (Loud cries of "No, no.")

The Chairman, to settle the matter, put the question to a show of hands, when an overwhelming majority was opposed to the document being read. In reply to the chairman,

Mr. Brown said he was perfectly satisfied with the decision of the meeting.

The Chairman, in continuation, said this was not the time to write off anything for bad and doubtful debts; but in reply to the question that had been asked, he would say that the directors believed they would be in a position, at the end of the year, to make a final estimate of the debts of 1865-66. More than that he could not say; but he believed they would be able to do this. The accounts now open were few in number, but large in amount. They could not, at the present moment, exactly estimate the amount; but he hoped to be able to do so at the end of the year. In reply to another question, the directors were very anxious to restore the reserve fund to its former amount—£250,000—before largely increasing the dividend; but if they did increase the dividend next half-year, the shareholders might depend upon it that they would not do so without great deliberation, and without they were fully justified in doing it. (Hear, hear.)

This concluded the business, and a cordial vote of thanks having been passed to the chairman and directors, the proceedings terminated.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST.

On Friday, the 27th November, in consequence of the official liquidator of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India having stated in his report that a call of £15 per share would be necessary in order to release this bank from its present difficulties, a very large number of solicitors, representing shareholders and creditors, attended at Chancery-chambers, before Mr. Church, the Chief Clerk of the Master of the Rolls. In the course of the discussion it appeared that the deficiency was £367,900, and interest on claims £200,000, making a total deficiency of upwards of half a million. Several of the solicitors for the creditors having expressed themselves content with a £5 call, Mr. Harrison, who represented three of the shareholders, moved as an amendment that the call be not imposed, upon the ground that it was wholly unnecessary. The Chief Clerk assented to an application to make a call of £5 per share, payable in England on the 1st of February, and in Bombay on the 1st of March.

(MONEY MARKET REVIEW.)

Many examples of the benefit of mutual concession in averting and modifying what has seemed almost inevitable disaster and ruin have cheered, and at the same time surprised, the business community since the panic in May, 1866. The Agra and the Consolidated Banks have discharged their liabilities in full, with interest, and are again going, and, we trust, thriving concerns—monuments of reconstructive genius. Then come what may be termed the mitigated liquidations of the Bank of London, the Imperial Mercantile Credit, and other companies, in which, although only a minor degree of success has been attained, still much distress has certainly been avoided. It is true that many once flourishing institutions, with their unfortunate shareholders and the innocently suffering creditors, still lie crushed under their misfortunes, bound hard and fast by legal debts that can never be fully discharged; but we believe that many of these would well repay strenuous efforts on the part of those interested in them, and we rejoice that endeavours of the kind still continue to be made. To a measure of this nature we would now call attention.

On the 30th September last, at a meeting of some of the creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East—a concern which suspended payment in May, 1866, with liabilities exceeding £6,000,000—a committee was appointed to investigate and report to a future meeting. The second meeting of the creditors took place on Tuesday, the 20th Oct., at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor presiding, when the report of the committee was presented. From this it appears that the liabilities of the bank have been reduced by realisation of securities held, sets off, and a first dividend of 10s. in the pound paid in February, 1867, to about £1,250,000. The assets are also estimated to be sufficient to pay in all 17s. 9d. to 18s. in the pound on the debts, without interest; but this, the report states, would necessarily occupy time, as a large portion of the assets consist of land and house property in China, the value of which is at present greatly depressed. The valuation in question also includes a sum of £90,000, which the creditors' committee suggest should be further contributed by the bank's shareholders, in addition to the £10 call already made; but this, in the discussion upon the report which then took place, Mr. Holyland, the official liquidator, intimated, is not to be expected, as the shareholders are advised that not only would they avoid further calls, but also succeed in their contention that the £10 call recently collected be refunded. After much discussion, the same committee was reappointed, with power to accept of an early payment of 17s. 6d. in the pound, Mr. Holyland suggesting 17s. as a minimum. Provision was also made for the expenses of the committee, and for the prosecution of the litigation in the event of the proposed compromise not being accepted by the shareholders.

We trust that the shareholders of the bank, encouraged by the consideration shown at this meeting, will meet the friendly proposal in the spirit it deserves, and make a united effort to benefit both themselves and those who have entrusted them with such a considerable amount, without further recourse to the disagreeable processes of the Court of Chancery. We cannot conclude better than by adding to our remarks the following extract from the report of the creditors' committee, viz.:—

"We think this is eminently a case for some concession on both sides, and the shareholders should voluntarily assist the creditors to arrive at some basis upon which the present pending litigation may be ended, and the assests distributed amongst those who are justly entitled thereto."

EXPORT OF COTTON GOODS TO THE FAR EAST.

The following is a summary of Mr. Sam Mendel's tables for the present month, which contain details of the quantities of cotton manufactures and yarn shipped from the ports of London, Liverpool, Southampton, and the Clyde, to Hong Kong, Shanghai, Japan, Singapore, Batavia, Manila, and Ceylon during the month ended 12th November. The shipments during the eleven months ended 16th November compared with those for the corresponding periods of 1867 and 1866, are also given.

HONG KONG AND WHAMPOA.

Plain Cottons.—Export for the month ended 12th November, 1868, 4,392,509 yards; for the eleven months 1868, 52,812,465 yards; for the eleven months, 1867, 45,298,711 yards; for the eleven months 1866, 36,057,484 yards. Increase for 1868 against 1867, 7,513,754 yards.

Coloured Cottons.—Export for the month ended 12th November, 1868, 26,856 yards; for the eleven months 1868, 1,256,851 yards; for the eleven months, 1867, 2,205,061 yards; for the eleven months, 1866, 3,671,009 yards. Decrease for 1868 against 1867, 948,210 yards.

Printed Cottons.—Export for the month ended 12th November 1868, 29,136 yards; for the eleven months 1868, 2,054,454 yards; for the eleven months 1867, 713,065 yards; for the eleven months, 1866, 796,640 yards. Increase for 1868 against 1867, 1,341,389 yards.

Cotton Yarn.—Export for the month ended 12th November, 1868, 1,090,662 lbs.; for the eleven months 1868, 6,316,200 lbs.; for the eleven months 1867, 6,261,914 lbs.; for the eleven months 1866, 4,405,988 lbs. Increase for 1868 against 1867, 54,286 lbs.

Value.—For the month ended 12th November, 1868, £148,098; for the eleven months 1868, £1,402,731; for the eleven months 1867, £1,487,219; for the eleven months 1866, £1,368,873. Decrease for 1868 against 1867, £84,488.

meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 35s. meast. At New York to China: $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear or Tyne per keel.—For Yokohama, £45. For Shanghai: £45. For Hong Kong: £36. For Singapore: £27. For Galle: £24. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton.—For Yokohama, £2 5s. For Shanghai: £2 8s. For Hong Kong: £1 17s. 6d. For Manila: £1 15s. For Singapore: £1 7s. For Galle: £1 2s. 6d.

CASUALTIES.

Advices from Rotterdam, dated Nov. 13, state that the Zeelandia, Botesz, from Middelburg to Batavia, with coals, was burnt at sea, Sept. 19.

The Bogota (barque), of Liverpool, Jones, from the Clyde to Penang with a general cargo, was found to be on fire Sept. 11, and was abandoned the next day (the vessel then burning fast), when in sight of Tristan d'Acunha, at which place the crew landed.

The Continental, Hall, which sailed from Cardiff, Nov. 14, for Singapore, has arrived off Queenstown, reported leaky.

The Light of the Age, from Colombo to London, grounded whilst coming up the Thames, Nov. 24, but was got off and taken into dock without apparent damage.

The Australian, Sprague, from Newport to Singapore, put into Lisbon Nov 24, very leaky.

Advices from Rotterdam, dated Nov. 25, states that the Stad Assen, De Boer, from Swatow, which arrived at St. Helena, Sept. 27, had experienced continued bad weather during her voyage, lost sails and damaged rigging.

A telegram from Calcutta, dated Nov. 24, states as follows:—the Sovereign of India, Burrows, from Shanghai to London, ashore on Haitan Island; towed to Foochow; little damage.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. FEAR NOT!—Though surrounded by circumstances disadvantageous to health, these remedies, if properly applied, will cut short fevers, influenza, inflammation, diphtheria, and a host of other complaints always lurking about to seize on the weak, forlorn, and unwary. The superiority of Holloway's medicines for subduing disease has been so fully and widely proved that it is only necessary to ask the afflicted to give them a trial, and if the instructions folded around them be followed, no disappointment will ever ensue, or dangerous consequences result. In hoarseness and ulcerated sore throat the Ointment should frequently be rubbed upon the neck and top of the chest. It will arrest the increasing inflammation, allay disquietude, and gradually cure.

Last Shipping Day December 5.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

The French mail delivered this morning brings no later advices from Japan; we reproduce, however, from New York papers, the summary of news brought via San Francisco by the last Pacific mail steamer, whose latest date from Yokohama is Oct. 28. As usual, it includes a good deal of "stale news," and some that, although new, is not to be implicitly relied on :—

Yokohama advices state that the Mikado, having attained his majority, has been crowned Emperor of Japan at Kiota, and, the regency having ended, it was expected that he would leave Kiota for Yedo.

On the 21st of October a difficulty occurred in Yokohama between the Dutch officers and the Japanese authorities. The latter were forbidden to transact any business at the Custom-house for Dutch subjects. The matter was finally amicably settled.

Yedo still remains closed to foreigners. It was expected that the opening of the city would not be postponed beyond the 1st of November. The event depended upon the result of the conference pending between the foreign Ministers and the representative of the Mikado. The Custom-house, bonded warehouses, police-offices, and other buildings have been furnished and occupied, awaiting the business that the foreigners are expected to create.

The Japanese Government has effected a loan of over 500,000 dols. from the Oriental Bank Corporation. The security is a lien on the Custom-house receipts.

The Shiogoon has notified the foreign representative that his house has surrendered the government to the Imperial Court. The Emperor will undertake for the future the maintenance of friendly relations with foreign Powers. The Emperor has conferred the title of Daimio upon the Shiogoon, whose yearly income will be 700,000 keo-kus.

Nagati was bombarded on September 15, and taken possession of by the Southern troops. The foreigners in the place succeeded in reaching the steamer Osaka, which carried them to Shanghai. The Southern troops have also taken possession of Hakodadi, and forced Namlee, who held the place as a neutral, to retire. A number of persons seized the American steamer Augusta, and compelled her to take them to a port in their own territory. The ship Mikado, employed in the bombardment of Nagati, had been wrecked, materially weakening the Southern fleet. The Imperial forces had invaded Ridgus' dominions from two directions, and were strongly intrenched before his castle. The reduction of this stronghold would probably result in the general pacification of the North.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

Dates hence are to the 22nd October ; no later advices had been received from home. Our correspondent's letter for this mail appears to have miscarried, but we gather some items of news from the local papers.

The Evening Courier, a new and excellent evening paper, gives the following :—

We cannot restrain an expression of surprise at the manner in which Sir Rutherford Alcock permitted himself to be hood-winked by the Chinese in the matter of the despatch from the Tsung-li Yamen to Tseng-kwo-fan relative to the Yangchow difficulty. It was only to be expected that the Government would not do more than recommend the Viceroy to consider the case and settle it in the best manner he could. The forwarding of the despatch through the English Legation was meant to act as a blind, and make it appear that the foreign board was attending to Sir Rutherford Alcock's recommendations. We fail to see why the English Minister should have undertaken to forward a despatch concerning his own affairs without knowing whether or not it was calculated to bring the question at issue to a settlement. By making his subordinates the bearers of such a despatch he only gave the Chinese another opportunity of snubbing them.

We would draw attention to the very excellent and practical notification regarding British subjects of Chinese descent, recently promulgated by Sir Rutherford Alcock. In common with our readers, we have often reflected on the unfairness of allowing men, whom the mere accident of having been born in Hong Kong or Singapore has transformed into British subjects, to compromise our position in China by claiming British protection, after having laid themselves open to punishment for violation of Chinese laws or regulations. They are really Chinese ; it is by a mere quibble that they are British subjects. In thoughts, opinions, principles, customs, and habits, they are Chinese, while, by a lucky chance, over which they have had no control, they are technically on an equality with us. Such persons are now, however, ordered to discard the Chinese costume so long as they shall be resident within Chinese territory, and adopt some other dress whereby they may readily be distinguished from the native population.

The Evening Express says that the N.G. brig Frederick Wilhelmina has been wrecked about ten miles from Chefoo, while proceeding thither with two hundred of the riflemen on board, who, it is reported, were intended to disperse the miners. All hands were saved, but the vessel is a total wreck.

The same paper also contains some further particulars of the loss of H.M.S. Rattler. It says :—"H.M.S. Rattler struck on a sunken rock, not laid down on the chart, which is close to Hakodadi. The account of the wreck was brought to Yokohama by the American steamer Powtuxet, and H.M.S. Ocean was immediately despatched to the scene of the wreck. H.I.M.S. Dupleix was going into Yokohama with the crew of the unfortunate vessel as the mail steamer was coming out. We are glad to say that no lives were lost, and shall look forward for the next steamer from Yokohama for further particulars."

The Recorder says : Our attention has been called to a fact which is peculiarly interesting at the present time, and may have escaped the memory of many of our readers. Some eighteen months or two years ago, the Taoutai wrote in to Vcte. Brenier de Montmorond, Consul General for France, suggesting that gentlemen going out shooting should wear a badge. It is needless almost to say how emphatically the impudent proposal was rejected, the despatch, we believe, being respectfully returned. The regulation issued by Sir Rutherford Alcock is scarcely more absurd and infinitely more pernicious than the one proposed by the Taoutai, and so effectually quashed by Vcte. Brenier.

The steamer Miaca came into collision with a junk whic h lying in the middle of the channel, just off Pootung Point, carrying away her own chain plates and staving in starboard bulwarks, the junk escaping with scarcely any damage. A great many complaints have been made of late respecting the junks anchoring in the fair way both here and at Woosung ; at the latter place at times there is hardly sufficient room for a vessel to pass through them without touching. Perhaps after some serious accident has occurred the authorities will take steps to remove the nuisance.

The powers of the Shanghai opium guild appear to be increasing to a very noticeable extent, if we may judge from a letter, which, we hear, was recently addressed by the Taoutai to H.B.M.'s Consul, concerning a case which was seized in the house of a foreign gentleman who claims the right to sell opium to whom he likes. It seems that a case was seized, we believe, by the runners of the guild, and that an application for its return was made through H.B.M.'s Consul. The Taoutai in reply coolly says that he will let the gentleman in question have the case back if he will state what has become of nine other cases which have been landed without paying the opium guild squeeze ; the object of this being to fasten upon the buyers, and let the guilds do unto them as seemeth to them right. This letter was received by H.B.M.'s Acting Consul, Mr. Forrest, and a copy transmitted to the gentleman interested, without any comment. Things are coming to a pretty pass when the Taoutai writes, and a British official accepts, a despatch such as this. What earthly right the Chinese authorities can have to ask where foreigners send their own goods to it is difficult to conceive.

From the North China Daily News we gather the following :—The prospects of the Cheefoo gold-fields are brightening ; a party has lately visited Pingtu and brought back glowing accounts of the wealth of that region. We are informed that Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co. have on a view a nugget, weighing nearly an ounce, which they have received from Cheefoo.

It has been arranged for the first prize meeting of the Rifle Club for the season to come off on the 29th October. A novelty will be introduced in the shape of pool firing at an iron man ; hits on the heart will take three shares of pool ; hits on any other part of the body or head will take one share—except hits on the arms or legs, which will be fined ; this will create some fun. Arrangements are also being made for a triangular match with the Hong Kong and Yokohama Clubs, on the same terms as that which took place last year between Hong Kong and Shanghai.

We hear that the body of Captain Dunn, of the Chillingham, who was drowned a few days ago by the upsetting of a sampan, has been recovered. The ship's sampan-man brought the body back, declaring that he found it in the possession of villagers, who declined to give it up unless he paid them ten dollars. The financial statement may possibly be true, but it is rather questionable.

A European constable was set upon on Monday night last, while on his beat close to Dent's godowns, on the Soochow-creek, by three European ruffians, who came up from behind and knocked him down. He was severely handled, and his watch was stolen from him. The culprits are not yet in custody. The constable, we hear, was in undress, looking after particulars of a similar attack committed on a mate of a ship a night or two previous.

If the statements which have been lately made as to the existence of disease among the cattle in this neighbourhood are true, they furnish an additional reason for the establishment of slaughter-houses. The suppression of a nuisance is not the only motive for such an institution. It is also very desirable to subject to inspection the animals slaughtered. Chinese butchers might, perhaps, at first object to use them ; but a remedy would lie in the hands of foreigners. The police would know whence the several shops drew supplies, and it would be in the interest of everyone to "taboo" those which did not patronise the slaughter-house.

The following, on Mr. Burlinghame's Mission, is also from the Courier :—The public must be almost tired with the Burlinghame Mission, but yet we cannot help thinking that the tide of opposition has of late set in with undue violence, and at the risk of the charge of serving our readers on the toujours perdrix principle we venture to offer a few suggestions. Mr. Burlinghame has made certain speeches in the States that have displeased his Chinese acquaintances and his English critics. The Saturday Review, newly freed from the predominant influence of a strong will and a reliable judgment, has assailed the American Envoy with extraordinary energy of invective. But are not the critics a little premature ? Is Mr. Burlinghame convicted of being merely a member for the Borough of Verbosity ? For our own part we are disposed to suggest two modifying considerations—first, he has lately been addressing audiences whose temper and tastes he knows far better than his Chinese or English critics know them. He is an American, and he speaks to Americans. We may affect to ridicule his style as exaggerated, and to object to the boldness of his figures of speech ; but the reason of this is simply that American taste in oratory differs from ours. It is based on models we have practically discarded, but, nevertheless, models that we still theoretically profess to regard with admiration. Burke and Grattan and Sheridan, addressing a House of Commons used to Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Bright, would unquestionably be accused of bombast. In the British Senate it is no longer the custom to storm with indignation, or to gild with panegyric ; but in the States, even in Congress, a rather inflated tone of speech prevails, and the orations delivered at public dinners and monster meetings are certainly not less gaudy than the orations in Congress. In England, however, we have a standard of taste altogether different from that which prevails in the great republic, to quote Goldthumb in Jerrold's play :—

"Once a parliament speech used to be like a beautiful Court suit : with flowers at the skirts, flowers at the cuffs, and flowers at the pockes holes : now it's a bit of Quaker's drab."

This latter sombre tinge no doubt affects English taste. We dislike showy speeches. We suspect brilliancy of shallowness, and unduly credit dulness with depth. Mr. Burlinghame appeals to a different audience, and suits his arguments and his metaphors to a palate naturally inclined to relish full flavoured dishes.

"Who peppers the highest is surest to please."

These things being so, we must not be too rigorous in our censure of the Chinese Ambassador.

Besides there are other grounds on which his recent action may be defended. He after all only "magnifies his office." He is in the pay of the Chinese Government, and he tries, according to his lights, to earn his money. An impression seems to prevail at home and at the Treaty ports that it was the duty of the Chinese Envoy to abase China in the eyes of foreign nations, and to talk and act as if he were still the representative of a Western Power. We conceive that Mr. Burlinghame's anxiety to be true to his new masters has really entailed on him all this load of censure. He has, we are willing to admit, looking at the question from a European point of view, overacted his part, but he has at least tried to make the best of his client's case, and for this we cannot help regarding him with a certain respect. He has, perhaps, exceeded the bounds of good taste, but this, up to the present time, appears to us to be the head and front of his offending.

With regard to the mail service, the Evening Courier says :—We are not unreasonable enough to expect that such arrangements could be made by the P. and O. Company and Postmaster-General as would bring the mails to every port on the P. and O. route exactly on the day which would suit the merchants. But it seems strange that at the Eastern terminus the mail should be due on the very day that the outgoing mail is appointed to leave. Of course nothing could be more inconvenient for all classes of the community, and we therefore have a personal interestin suggesting some change. It seems obvious, too, that if the company were to press their steamers a little, so as to anticipate the contract time of arrival at Shanghai by say two days, there would be no need to keep a steamer lying idle in the river for nearly a fortnight. The boat which brought the mail two days before it was due could be discharged and re-loaded in time to leave on the day whereon its arrival was compulsory. Comparing the contract time with the space to be gone over, it will be seen that the company are not required to push their boats beyond nine and a-half knots, while at the same time they have boats to which fourteen knots is a small thing. The advantage to passengers would also be very great. Instead of being reduced to the alternative of living on shore at Point de Galle, Singapore, and Hong Kong, or staying on board to be devoured at night by mosquitoes, and to be looked on as "screws" by fellow passengers, officers, and stewards—a consideration which, we are happy to say, is not so weighty as it was a few years ago—there need be no more delay at each port than is necessary to discharge and take in cargo and mails and to take in coal. This would be a very great boon to the China passengers, who are generally tired of their journey long before they reach their destination. Perhaps, in process of time, when the fact that a passenger to Shanghai pays nearly as much again as a passenger to Bombay penetrates the understanding of the board of directors we shall find that some attention will be bestowed upon the comfort and convenience of those bound China-ward. At present China plays second fiddle to India, so far as the passengers are concerned, and also in the matter of mail arrangements.

We are informed that Captain Bush, of the Rinaldo, who was invalided home, grew rapidly better as he approached Hong Kong. There, however, the gallant officer had a relapse, which rendered it necessary for him to carry out his original intention of proceeding to England.

We learn that the Prince of Toza is the purchaser of the British steamer Undine, belonging to Messrs. Douglas, Lapraik, and Co., of Hong Kong; the price is somewhere in the neighbourhood of 105,000 dols., or a little over her original cost six years ago.

THE NORTH CHINA INSURANCE COMPANY.

The fifth half-yearly meeting of the North China Insurance Company, 1866-68, was held at the offices of the company on the 16th October. Present—Messrs. Bell (Chairman), Michie, Lavers, Porter, and Smith, directors, and a fair number of shareholders, representing 127 votes.

The Secretary read the minutes of the last shareholders' meeting, held in April, which were very long and somewhat prolix.

The Chairman said he regretted his place was not filled by an abler man, but as the duties were light and pleasant he was glad to occupy his present position. Since last meeting the directors had lost the able and zealous services of their late chairman, Mr. W. J. Bryans. They had also despatched Mr. J. S. Mackintosh, their late secretary, to open the new London Agency on 1st Jan. next, and he (the chairman) thought the company's interest in London would be well cared for.

The report and accounts were taken as read; and it was proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Porter, and carried unanimously, that the report and accounts be passed.

The election of Mr. E. C. Smith to the vacant seat at the board was then confirmed.

The principal resolution of the meeting was then put by Mr. Lavers, with a few words of explanation :—

"That in consideration of the large accumulation of funds in the hands of the company, and in view of the formation of the new company, the directors be empowered to declare a dividend of Tls. 1,000 per share, to be paid to the shareholders as soon as practicable."

This, on being seconded by Mr. Hargreaves, was put from the chair and declared carried.

Mr. Carter wished to inquire whether this resolution was not contrary to the deed of settlement, and the Chairman explained that it was not so, a majority of shareholders having assented.

This concluded the business actually before the meeting.

Mr. Trautmann wished to make some observations respecting the conduct of the new company which was being formed. He had occasion to know that certain rival companies had drawn away a large amount of business from the North China by making larger returns to premium payers. To meet this competition he would suggest for consideration the propriety of distributing the one-third profits, heretofore reserved for shareholders only, among all contributors, whether shareholders or not. This, however, did not find favour with the meeting, and the general impression seemed to be that if any company wished to attract business by offering better terms than others they could always find means of doing so.

HONG KONG.

From this port we have advices to the 27th October. The English mail of September 11 arrived out on the 23rd, and the French mail of September 18 on the 27th of October, the latter bringing London telegrams to October 7.

There is little local news, the Governor's financial statement and the depressed condition of the trade of the colony being the chief topics of conversation. The statement we publish below.

The fact of the English journals having at last exhibited some interest in China affairs is commented on with satisfaction by the local press. The following article is from the Hong Kong Daily Press :—

If the Burlinghame folly has nothing else to recommend it, it has so far done us, in China, a favour; it has called the attention of the press and of the public generally to the position and prospects of the British trading communities in China, and to the many important questions that must be discussed and settled at an early date between Great Britain and the Middle Kingdom. It has recalled to the minds of the people at home that there was a war not so very many years ago with China of sufficient importance to produce a Ministerial crisis, and to cause a dissolution of Parliament; a war that cost much money, and was thought at the time to have been rather creditable to the country than otherwise, ending, as it did, with the capture of the Imperial city of Peking, and with a treaty from which great things were expected. It has just been discovered that the time has come for a revision of that treaty, according to the terms of, perhaps, the most important stipulation in it, and that there are a great many things in and out of the treaty that stand in need of being looked into, and adjusted or readjusted as the case may be. Writers for the public press and statesmen have been provoked into looking up the official literature lately published relating to China, and have actually made the discovery that nearly every section of the foreign community in China, has memorialised the Government, complaining of infractions of the treaty rights, supposed in England to have been amply secured long ago, and demanding further privileges where it was hoped there was nothing more to be desired. The China question has again started into prominence, and The Times and the Pall Mall Gazette have taken up the matter vigorously; it is just possible, because, during the recess of Parliament and the absence of all the world from town, there was nothing else to take up; but, nevertheless, the fact remains, Chinese questions are again attracting some little attention at home, and the leading journals have discussed them. The China Express notices the fact, and gives us a reprint of an article from The Times on the additional articles negotiated by Burlinghame at Washington, and a summary of a leader in the Pall Mall Gazette on the revision of the Treaty of Tientsin generally. The Times ridicules the additional articles as anything but an improvement or addition to the treaties negotiated by the Treaty Powers in 1858 and 1860 with the Chinese Government, and seems impressed with the conviction that there is something more in this new treaty than appears on the surface—something hidden beneath the apparently simple wording of its clauses, and that its purpose is to embarrass in the first place, and in the second, to lead up to something not now very clearly perceptible.

"The leading journal takes the articles seriatim, and examines them, comparing them with the corresponding clauses in the existing treaties between China and foreign Powers. Nothing is added to the provisions of these treaties save a little ambiguity—nothing that they were not better without. On one point there has been a manifest retrogression, a taking away from the clearest simplicity and force of the original treaty provision, by a limitation, as foolish as it is impertinent. The eighth article of the new treaty is an impertinence and a folly. On only one point do we differ from The Times; it mistakes the nature of the first article and the object had in view when it was framed. It is the only one of the articles that seems to us to be capable of defence. It is declaratory of the rights and powers of the Emperor of China on a point on which there had been some difference of opinion and disputes. By the treaties of 1858 and 1860 the Emperor gave up his rightful jurisdiction over foreigners guilty of offences within his dominions, and surrendered his title to enforce against foreigners any portion of the Chinese code. By another article it was agreed that certain portions of land should be set aside at each open port for foreign residents, where they might live apart from the Chinese, and subject to their own laws and under their own officials. The lands so set apart have been called concessions, and questions have arisen, especially with regard to the French concessions, as to the nature and extent of the jurisdiction still retained by the Emperor of China in and over the lands so conceded. He claimed to be the territorial sovereign, with all the rights and powers of a supreme ruler, except those specially ceded by treaty. He held the French to be simply lessees of the land, entitled there, as elsewhere in China, to be governed by their own laws, and judged by their own courts, but entitled to no such further privileges as would bar him of his authority over Chinese subjects within the concession. It was maintained, at one time, in effect, if not in words, that the French concession at Shanghai was as much and as exclusively French as Hong Kong is English. The territorial sovereignty claimed by the Emperor of China included many things not ceded by treaty to the respective Powers. The first of the additional articles is declaratory on the part of America that she holds the Emperor the territorial Sovereign of Hong-kong, with all the rights and powers of a sovereign over Chinese territory. The proviso at the end excepts from that plenary Power the right to try and punish American subjects in China, a right specifically yielded up when the first treaties were made. On the part of China there is a stipulation which binds her to preserve, in case of war, territory in fact hers, although out of her possession, from being made a battle-ground for the contending parties. There was a necessity of some sort for some such declaration as that contained in Article 1 of the additional articles, and it is not so very self-contradictory and nugatory as The Times pronounces it to be. As to the other articles, the leading journal makes too much of them. They conceal nothing; they can lead to nothing, except, perhaps, a little confusion; they are simply bunkum, and originated in the necessity Burlinghame lay under of appearing to do something for his employers. If they make the Chinese think that something has been effected, will have served their purpose, and may be quietly forgotten and laid by."

His Excellency the Hoppo has posted a proclamation stating that the Commissioner of Customs has conveyed to him the intelligence of the newly-built lighthouse below Whampoa having been pirated by a strong party of ladrones, who, after pillaging a village, made their way to the lighthouse, and carried away with their booty one of the watchmen. His Excellency therefore offers a reward of 100 dols. to any person who may communicate such information as may lead to the discovery of the whereabouts of the pirates. It is further stated in the proclamation that, on its being apprised of the robbery, the Chetoi has directed the military department to render all possible assistance for the apprehension of the pirates.

Signs of improvements at Canton continue to present themselver—one half of the open space of ground at the back of the American Consulate (erst Dent and Co.'s hong) at Honam has been purchased by the well-known carpenter Alin, who is erecting a couple of shops there. A rickety but large tea-store situated at Kum-fa-men has been pulled down by its owner, and four stores of moderate size have been rebuilt instead. The building of the contracted-for rows of shops at the back of Fakee hong on the old factory side will be commenced forthwith, whilst such parts of the city and suburbs as have been laid waste by the fire of 1856 and bombardment of 1857 are being gradually rebuilt in a much better manner than before. Commercially, a reference to the tradal statistics cannot fail to convince those of the most sceptical turn of mind of the hopeful condition of the "sick man."

The following despatch from his Excellency Vice-Admiral the Honourable Sir Henry Keppel, K.C.B., Naval Commander-in-Chief, describing the ensign to be carried by war vessels of China, is published for general information by the Colonial Secretary:—

Princess Charlotte, at Hong Kong, Oct. 17, 1868.

Sir,—In reply to your Excellency's letter, Number 473, of the 16th October, I have the honour to submit the following extract from the order book on this station, establishing, in pursuance of Admiralty instructions, the ensign to be recognised as indicating a Chinese Government vessel:—

"The Chinese Government having determined that all war vessels of China shall in future carry a dragon ensign in addition to the distinguishing flags already worn by such vessels, the officers in command of Her Majesty's ships on this station are to respect this ensign accordingly, as the Government flag of China, in the same manner as the national flag of other nations.

"The flag will be three-cornered, yellow ground, upon which a dragon will be designed, with the head towards the upper part of the flag, and will vary in dimensions according to the size of the vessel by which it is worn."

I am of opinion that this national flag should be displayed in all Chinese vessels carrying pendants, and in addition a flag to denote the viceroyalty or fleet to which the vessel belongs may be hoisted at the masthead.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient servant, Henry Keppel,

Vice-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

HONG KONG FINANCE.

The following is the financial statement of the Colony for the year 1868, prepared by his Excellency Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell:—

1. Last August, when explaining the Estimates for 1868, which I then laid before you, I was obliged to draw your attention to the many temporary and uncertain elements then involved in the calculations affecting the revenue side of the account. In that respect I have the satisfaction of thinking that the revenue estimated for 1869 is one unlikely to be deranged by similar disturbing influences, and that, as ought always to be the case in framing estimates, there is a greater probability of an excess than a deficiency in the amount of revenue estimated.

2. At page 3 of the Detailed Estimates, which I now lay before you, the excess of the colony's assets over its liabilities on the first day of the present year is put down as 25,851 dols., and having gone into the calculations, I think there is little apparent room for error in that item. I may also remark that the surplus intended is such as would have remained on the 1st of last January after payment of all known liabilities, including arrears due for the military contribution. The latter, however, can no longer be counted as part of the colony's liabilities, because all sums due on that account, even to the 30th September of this year, have been already discharged.

3. On the other hand, amongst your assets are necessarily included sums which are practically unavailable, such as a large portion of the subsidiary coins, which cannot be refused at the Treasury, and which, therefore, keep steadily increasing, as the accompanying return explains. From that return you will perceive that on the first day of this month the colony possessed no less than 43,482 dols. in copper and bronze coinage, the greater part of which may be regarded as being at present entirely useless and as an amount which increases almost every week. Occasionally it is decreased by arrangements with contractors for public works, to take a portion of their money in copper, or by a rise in the value of the latter coinage which was lately at par, but it is sure to find its way back to the Treasury whenever it falls below par in the markets of Canton or Hong Kong.

4. It is essential also to bear in mind, that the bronze, or mil coinage, amounts to 17,000 dols., of which there is apparently no prospect of getting rid on any terms. This result is the more unfortunate because those coins have cost a considerable extra outlay from having been coined in England instead of at the Mint of the Colony, whilst the heavy expense attending their manufacture abroad and freight, &c., from a distant country has been proportionately augmented.

5. The available assets of the colony must therefore be diminished by those sums, whilst it must also be remembered that out of what might remain if a creditor and debtor account were to be now balanced, a considerable portion would consist of arrears of rents and taxes, which require time to collect, and part of which it is certain could not be recovered.

6. Thus, although in my Financial Statement of August last year the colony's assets, on the 1st January, 1867, were stated to amount to about 24,000, dols., yet small as that sum was, it would have been a delusion to expect to realise it in any shape.

7. At present the colony, independent of any subsidiary coinage, an item which exceeds 60,000 dols., holds here in cash 190,135 dols., and has also a respectable balance of about 40,000 dols. in the hands of the Crown agents to meet its frequent liabilities in England, a result which, in a mere financial point of view, is highly satisfactory.

8. Perhaps some, who remember the difficulties of the local Treasury in 1866, may hence infer that it is easy by a touch of the helm to turn the vessel of the State, like other vessels, from the breakers on which a slight mistake might so easily place her; yet the effort may be more arduous than appears, there are so many currents which tend to drive her in the direction where she has once been steered. I can vouch that the production of our present financial safety and prosperity required much rigid economy and the strictest supervision, exercised even with severity, over all the departments for the purpose of getting the colony clear of the reef of bankruptcy to which I found her drifting, and which she may be said to have touched. It is, nevertheless, evident that the large balance now in hand is mainly attributable to no economy possible for any Governor, but is principally the result of two new sources of revenue, viz., the Stamp Ordinance and fees from the licensed gaming houses, which this Government established last year in default of any better means of controlling certain dangerous classes of the community.

9. All these causes have so changed the financial position of the Government from that in which I found it on my arrival, that although the liabilities of those days have been discharged, and although in 1869 it is contemplated to raise by rates for police, water, and lighting 34,000 dols. less than the sum estimated for the current year, I am now enabled to lay before you an estimated expenditure exceeding one million of dollars, with every prospect that nevertheless there will remain a surplus of 230,000 dols. on the 31st December, 1869, reduced by unavailable coinage to 170,000 dols., and liable practically to some further diminution if the Supplementary Estimates should obtain a greater development than has been allowed for in the calculations now submitted. That is a contingency always possible, as, for example, it is not improbable that, owing to original defective construction and the sinking of the earth in its neighbourhood, the necessity may arise for rebuilding the Harbour-master's office, which is already in a dangerous state.

10. I last year stated that the possibility of such contingencies occurring proves that this colony, like any other large firm or business, should always retain an easily available surplus, over and above assets in the form of rent and taxes due. Such surplus should not be less than from 100,000 dols. to 130,000 dols., and I must again impress on you that although the Estimates now before you show a surplus probably exceeding the above sum at the end of 1869, even allowing liberally for the demands of the supplementary Estimates, I can regard such result as merely amounting to a return to a sound financial status, such as should never be departed from, especially as amongst the items forming the revenue for 1869, is one which cannot recur, namely, 60,000 for the plant and machinery of the Mint.

11. Hence, although the finances of the colony are at last in a satisfactory state, it cannot now be said that they will not require constant care and vigilance to preserve them in that condition.

12. Before concluding the subject of revenue I call attention to the fact that the fees from the licensed gaming houses are now withdrawn from the heading of unavailable deposits. I lay before you the despatch of the Secretary of State authorising application of that revenue to certain Colonial purposes—and till some means of obtaining equal control over the classes addicted to illegal gaming with all its evil consequences to the community can be devised, it certainly seems wise to use it for the improvement of a force which in a great measure is required to repress irregularities and crime, originating in or fostered by gambling. It is at least wiser to devote it to that or other useful public objects than to throw it into the sea or get rid of it in some more objectionable manner on the plea that no revenue should accrue from such a source.

13. My creed on such matters is a very simple one. I hold that a Government is bound to do as much good and suppress as much evil as it can. I have, therefore, not hesitated to advance straightforward towards that object. I have never been deterred by the secondary consideration that a revenue was unavoidably created thereby, whether

I liked or disliked that result, nor have I been persuaded by the reasoning, if I may use such a term, of some estimable persons who appear comparatively indifferent to the existence of a public evil, provided their own theory that we should leave sin and vice alone prevails.

14. Such persons, if they pursue their argument to its legitimate conclusion, must be prepared to see our navy and army decimated by a disease which legislation can mitigate, sooner than meddle officially with what they call sin in the one case, or vice in the other, and thus they would leave both to mature and fructify; the pestilence to spread and this city to be infested by illegal gaming haunts frequented by the criminal classes with the usual results to society of such assemblages. Moreover, they seem to apply their theories to all parts of the world and to all populations alike. They would govern the Saxon race of Kent and the Chinese on the same principles, and would think it wrong to meet the exigencies of each separate community with legislation adapted to its local requirements.

15. I need scarcely say that no such policy has been countenanced by this Government. On the contrary, I and my Executive Council have from the first felt it a positive duty to admit the existence of the two evils alluded to, and to frankly acknowledge that we cannot suppress them. We feel, consequently, more especially bound to exert ourselves to obtain a practical control over evils which we have not the power to eradicate, and thereby at least try to alleviate the mischiefs inseparable from each. I am therefore gratified to report that not merely has the new system been successful in closing the old dens of iniquity and substituting for them houses regulated by strict Government surveillance, but also that there is strong reason to infer, contrary to the prophecies not unnaturally indulged in at first, that the system has reacted beneficially on the parties more immediately reached by it.

16. Thus, contrary to general expectation, and far exceeding any hope of my own, you will find from the return which I now lay before you, that the crime which seemed most likely to have increased is that which has most diminished, namely, larceny amongst servants. During the first quarter following the opening of the licensed houses the number of those cases brought before the police magistrates averaged the same as in the preceding three years, viz., about eighty, whereas during the first quarter of this year they had diminished 50 per cent., and during the second quarter 75 per cent.

17. Recently all foreigners have been excluded from the licensed houses, because the argument that licensing a few houses had been found essential to obtain control for police purposes over a vice amongst the Chinese—which after the most vigorous efforts the Executive could not suppress—is not applicable to foreigners, and therefore affords no justification for permitting them to use the licensed houses, because it is not foreigners who constitute the criminal classes of the colony. There is no risk, therefore, of their gambling tendencies leading to the establishment of illegal haunts where burglaries and robberies may be planned by those who meet in such places in defiance of the law.

18. I must add that, although it is true the houses were originally licensed without any intention of encouraging foreigners to go there, I am nevertheless now surprised that it did not sooner occur to me to rid the licensing system of this, its least defensible feature, and it appears strange that no one else, so far as I am aware, made the suggestion earlier.

19. When I had once become convinced of the propriety and saw the possibility of excluding foreigners, I was quite prepared to make the most liberal abatement to the licensees of the fees which they were then paying, viz., 13,000 dols. per month. I would willingly have reduced them to 10,000 or 8,000 dols., or to any other amount which might be proved necessary to compensate them for the loss entailed by the exclusion of foreigners. Just then, however, the close of the first year of the operations of the licensees was approaching, and some disputes unexpectedly arose between them and their agents when settling accounts, which led to the discovery that, so far from losing, as they had endeavoured to prove, they had, through the many reductions which I had made in their fees, been gainers during the past year to an extent beyond the legitimate amount which the exigencies of the system justified. At the same time, offers were made to Government to take up the business by men of equal capital, and one offer based on most excellent security and with the understanding that foreigners were to be excluded, amounted to 240,000 dols. per annum.

20. Nevertheless, the experience acquired by the old licensees, their readiness to expend money in detecting returned convicts and the effective assistance which they had given the police generally, made me unwilling to change them for parties less experienced. The old licensees, therefore, continue the business, but instead of a reduced fee of 10,000 dols. per month they pay a fee of 18,000 dols.

21. Thus one more is added to the numerous list of unexpected and improbable results which the working of the experiment has developed. In fact, my own despatches on the subject are throughout filled with similar reversals of previous calculations, and perhaps I am now about to add one more to the series, when I express the opinion that, if foreigners be excluded, as under any circumstances must be the case, the fee of 18,000 dols. per month will not leave the licensees a sufficient profit to make them as careful as is requisite to retain it by attention to the Government regulations.

22. These explanations, which, moreover, have a special interest of their own, have become necessary, because the Council should know why the license fees for the estimates of the ensuing year are not computed on the basis of so high a figure as they now reach monthly. On the contrary, the estimate for the receipts of 1869 has been left by me at 156,000 dols. per annum, being the amount computed when the calculations were entered into several weeks back. At present the probability is that the amount named will be exceeded; but the uncertainty attending the subject is too great to justify an alteration of the original estimate.

23. Whether I myself, or the Council, or a portion of the community approve or object to the receipt of any income from such a source, the fact that it has, nevertheless, irrepressibly thrust itself into, and may for some time constitute part of your annual revenue till a better system be devised to accomplish equally useful results, entitles the Council to the fullest details connected with it.

24. Such a revenue, therefore, is a necessary item in your financial calculations simply because it exists, and therefore must be dealt with in some way; but it does not follow because you must deal with it, or because it exists, that your object has been to create such a revenue. That is a common misrepresentation of the purpose of myself and my Council, but it can have no logical force until it be shown that our object could be equally well accomplished in some other way unproductive of revenue with which we are acquainted, and which nevertheless we refuse to adopt.

25. It probably answers, however, the purpose of those who use the argument, and who know very well that most people take no trouble to master the tedious details of a complicated question, but as a general rule accept the popular theory that all who adopt a policy which creates a revenue, do so for the sake of that revenue. Such an inference holds good in most cases, because money is the most general object of men's pursuits, but in what way such a theory can be applicable to myself or my Council is not shown. To make the argument conclusive we should be proved interested in drawing a revenue from gambling licences, whereas none of us can have the slightest possible interest in the matter beyond our desire in discharge of a duty to the public to choose the least objectionable evil, whilst personally I prefer to raise by increased taxation whatever additional revenue may be wanted for purposes that cannot be dispensed with.

26. I have only to add, before quitting this subject, that current ideas as to the abstraction of large sums from regular commerce by either losses or gains at the new play houses have little or no real foundation. The probability is that in former times there was quite as much play as at present, whilst whatever be the profits now they are acquired by men of substance engaged in general trade, and are only so much added to their commercial capital. The fees paid at the colony are also destined to aid rather than impede progress, unless they be unwisely expended.

27. The other new branch of revenue, viz., that derived from stamps, has been estimated at 100,000 dols, but I apprehend that the receipts from this source may fall short of even that limited amount. The return which I lay on the table shows that the alteration effected by the recent Ordinance, No. 7, of this year, has hitherto not materially affected receipts from stamps, but the general stagnation of trade has obviously an unfavourable effect on revenue derived from the number and amount of business transactions. As, however, the ordinance appears to work at present with as little inconvenience to the commercial community as can be expected from a law imposing a new tax, I am unwilling to expand its operation so long as the finances of the colony do not require such aid more imperatively than at present.

28. I shall not detain you longer with details affecting the revenue side of the proposed estimates, except by calling attention to a slight diminution in the receipts expected from the harbour department. This arises from the lower scale of fees exacted now under the harbour ordinance of 1866, and not from any expected decrease in the number of vessels frequenting the port. It never has been the desire of Government to make a surplus revenue from that source, and the success of the ordinance in removing from the colony the most dangerous characters, and pirates, permits now some relaxation of the restrictions hitherto maintained over the movements of native craft in the waters of the colony.

29. Turning now to the expenditure side you will find that notwithstanding the efficiency of every department is provided for more effectually in the estimates before you than had ever before been contemplated, there would appear to be a decrease on your estimated expenditure, 828,000 dols. for 1869, as compared with that originally proposed for this year, viz., 894,000 dols.

30. On public works and buildings it is proposed to expend no less than 155,500 dols. as compared with the 65,500 dols. which Her Majesty's Government finally sanctioned for the current year, which latter amount however will probably be exceeded.

31. The expenditure on roads, streets, and bridges, however, is diminished from 105,000 dols. to 69,000 dols., but includes once more 23,000 dols. for the road to the gap, which has already appeared more than once on your Estimates, but never been carried through, owing to want of funds available at the time. A similar observation applies to the proposed reclamation of ground near Bowrington, for which the same vote is proposed as in former years, viz., 10,000 dols.

32. It would, however, be most inconvenient if I were to attempt to explain now every item of expenditure. It is very desirable you should have the fullest explanations on each, but the details could not be compressed within the reasonable limits of an address such as this.

33. I invite attention, however, to some entirely new items, such as that of 15,000 dols. for good conduct pay and special services of the police. Till my efforts to obtain a superior class of European police shall be more successful than hitherto, I object to an indiscriminate raising of the salaries of the different classes, though, as you will perceive, a considerable addition has been made in that way also. I prefer holding out special inducements for learning Chinese and rewards for such services as may exhibit unusual intelligence and activity.

34. The Government has at least learned by the experiment recently instituted that the magnitude of the sums at the disposal of the gamblers would render a contest with them hopeless on the part of the Government for prevention of police corruption by the mere raising of salaries. It would probably only lead with men of that class to the acceptance of bribes in addition to increased salaries. Therefore, the present system, which entirely removes the possibility of such corruption as once prevailed, seems preferable.

35. The item of 7,000 dols. for the Fire Brigade is also new, but will not nearly cover the outlay for that body, because much of the heaviest and most necessary expenditure, such as that for fire engines, will have to be defrayed this year, and must therefore be provided for in the Supplementary Estimates.

36. There is also an item of 40,000 dols. for the expense of construction and maintenance during 1869, of a colonial steamer and a steam launch. As you are aware, the duty of visiting the various outstations of the Harbour-master round the island has been hitherto discharged by means of a junk fitted for the purpose. Her want of speed and seaworthiness greatly impaired the effective character of her services, and has been a serious drawback to the working of the coast and harbour ordinances.

37. Above all, there is no doubt that a vessed of that class was very unsuitable to the position of the colony. Her retention, therefore, so long in the service was only justified by the consideration that the duty could not be deferred, but had to be carried out in some way, and as the colony at the time was unable to afford a more suitable vessel, there was no option in the matter. At present this Government can provide a suitable vessel without being guilty of any undue extravagance, whilst the recent movements of foreign cruisers about the island, and the erection of a cordon of Customs' stations round the colony, are additional reasons why a less discreditable vessel should be procured without delay.

38. The expediency of doing so was considered by myself and the Executive Council, and appeared to us sufficiently obvious and urgent to justify me in ordering an appropriate vessel to be constructed. So far there was no probability of there being any difference of opinion; but when at a second meeting of the Executive Council it was urged on me that unless such vessel was fitted with steam engines she would not be suitable to the wants of the colony, I felt that the additional annual cost entailed by the pay and maintenance of an engineer, expenditure of coals, &c., could only be justified by the previous sanction of this Council.

39. Therefore if you agree with the members of the Executive Council, you will pass the vote, whilst, if you differ from them, you can reduce it to such an amount as will leave you with a very desirable but less effective substitute for the vessel which you now possess, and which doubtless none of you wish to retain.

40. Provision has also been made for an assistant superintendent of the gaol, as I cannot but look forward with much anxiety to the consequences of the resignation, or even absence on leave, of the present very efficient superintendent, whilst I am also of opinion, an opinion strengthened by recent occurrences, that, independent of such contingencies, one man cannot suffice for the maintenance and control of the discipline and economy of so extensive and troublesome an establishment. It is scarcely fair to expect it, and probably you will think with me that the public interests require an assistant from Europe of such experience and position as may qualify him hereafter for the duties which, on the whole, are now so ably discharged by Mr. Douglas.

41. An additional master is also needed for the central school, an Institution now fulfilling all the purposes which could reasonably have been expected from it; whilst the daily attendance there is such as renders it altogether hopeless that two European masters can adequately discharge all the duties which they are obliged to undertake.

42. With these observations I leave the Estimates for 1869 in your hands. I am quite aware that the form in which they are drawn up in conformity with instructions of Her Majesty's Treasury is not of a very simple or intelligible nature. On the contrary, I have always observed that the present form leads to very erroneous comments and conclusions; I need not however remind you that it is your privilege, I might almost say your duty, to obtain the fullest explanation on every matter connected with the disposal of the public funds.

BORNEO.

LABUAN.

By the Royalist, which arrived here two days ago, we have advices from Labuan to the 18th October, from which it would appear that the little colony is steadily progressing in the course of prosperity inaugurated by the energetic policy of his Excellency Governor Hennessy. The Legislative Session for 1868 was closed by an able speech delivered by the Governor, which we subjoin below, and in which will be found a review of the session, an exposition of the present situation of the affairs of the colony, its resources, revenue, and expenditure, and a confident prediction of its future growth and importance.

The 20th July last was observed, by proclamation of the Governor, as a day of general mourning throughout the colony as a mark of respect to the memory of H.H. the late Sir James Brooke, K.C.B., Rajah of Sarawak, the chief founder and first Governor of Labuan. The Government offices were closed; the flags were half-mast high at the Government flagstaff and on the ships in harbour. At noon twenty-one minute guns were fired, and from twelve to one o'clock all the traders closed their godowns.

In the way of Legislation, five ordinances have been passed during this year which have received the approval of Her Majesty. No. 1 constitutes a Tobacco-tax, No. 2 amends Ordinance No. 3 of 1851, No. 3 establishes a Pawnbrokers'-tax, No. 4 has reference to the Spirit Farm, and amends No. 4 of 1850, and No. 5 institutes a salt-tax

We understand that Mr. Wells, of the Singapore Gas Company, is forwarding a consignment from Rochore to Labuan by the barque Samson, which we are sure will be welcomed in that colony. This consignment consists of a quantity of glazed street lamps in iron frames, fitted for either oil or gas, and intended for the town of Victoria and the road leading to Government House. We understand Governor Hennessy has arranged for lighting the town on the principle that his Government will defray the cost of the lamps and lamp-posts, the shopkeepers agreeing to contribute the oil. The local traders have cheerfully accepted these terms; and we also understand that Mr. A. Lumsden contemplates utilising the small coal from Tanjong Kubong by establishing gas-works before long, close to the southern harbour. This intelligence is another illustration in proof of the old adage "that many a true word is spoken in jest;" for it is not three months ago since a facetious correspondent to his paper attempted to make "light" of Governor Hennessy's "squib," implying that the lightning of Labuan was a task which even he could not accomplish. The truth is, Labuan only wanted a man of industry, patience, and determination to enable the colony to participate in the progressive spirit of the age. Even our own town, as our readers may remember, was not lit with gas until May, 1864, when Governor Cavenagh turned the first valve.

We see by the London papers that a fierce controversy has been raging between the Opposition and the Government financiers. Public economy is the order of the day, and the two great parties accuse each other of never practising it. The Liberals say the Tories are wasting the public money, and the Tories retaliate by pointing to the lavish expenditure at the Admiralty under the Duke of Somerset, as exposed by Mr. Seeley. The intelligence from Labuan may perhaps furnish another and a very sound argument on the Government side; for it is now placed beyond all doubt or dispute that Governor Pope Hennessy, a thorough-going Tory, has brought the finances of that hitherto unfortunate colony into something like order. His administration has put a stop to the perpetual drain on the pockets of John Bull, which has been going on in Labuan for the last twenty years, at an average of £4,800 a-year. It is not every man who can save the English Exchequer a heavy annual outlay, and the Tories have every reason to boast that this has now been accomplished by an active member of their party. Whatever Governor Hennessy has done to develop the coal mines and to increase the commerce of his little island, it is this last achievement of his which will associate his name most intimately with the history of Labuan and with colonial policy generally.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

THE OPENING OF THE TANJONG PAGAR DOCK.

(From the Straits Times.)

We have seen holidays in Singapore, but never before witnessed a day kept in such gala fashion by all and sundry—Europeans, Chinese, Malays, rich and poor, in fact by the whole of the community—as on the occasion of the opening of the new dock at Tanjong Pagar. We have to congratulate the directors upon the completeness of their arrangements and the very great success and order which characterised their being carried out. Not a hitch occurred—not an unpleasantness took place to mar the gay and festive scene, in which the whole community, from Legislative Councillors downwards, combined to take part. We do not think that such a large assemblage of Europeans and Asiatics ever met before on the island, and, indeed, of the former, accustomed as we are to think of them as forming a very small portion of the community, the turn-out was somewhat amazing as to number, and a convincing proof of how, in spite of depression of trade and dulness of business, the place is increasing in size.

The ceremony itself was a very simple one, and may be very shortly described. At a quarter to eleven o'clock the Governor, Lady Ord, and suite, accompanied by the chairman of the Tanjong Pagar Company, left the harbour on board the Peiho, which was closely followed by the other Government steamer, the Rainbow. At five minutes past eleven the Peiho steamed slowly up to the dock gate, from which the caisson had been removed, and was immediately taken charge of by the dock officials, who placed her safely in her berth at the head of the dock. The Rainbow followed, and was moored lower down, and then the caisson was replaced. The size of the dock was clearly brought out by these two steamers being placed in it, and still ample room being visibly left for another vessel at least.

On the west side of the dock a large attap structure had been erected, some 250 feet long by 30 feet broad; seats were provided all along this pavilion, and in the middle a dais or raised platform, covered with red cloth, was placed for the reception of his Excellency and party. The Peiho was moored opposite this gorgeous pavilion. At the porch were stationed the directors of the company, Messrs. Adamson, Padday, Joaquim, Whampoa, Kustermann, and Caldbeck. As soon as the Peiho was anchored, a bridge, covered with red cloth, was placed, and his Excellency, Lady Ord, and suite landed, and were received with cheers by the assembled company.

His Excellency having landed was conducted, with Lady Ord, to his chair on the dais by the directors. Sir Benson and Lady Maxwell were also provided with seats on the dais.

After the lapse of a short time, to allow the Rainbow to come in and the caisson to be replaced, shutting up the dock, his Excellency rose and said:—

He had great pleasure in accepting the invitation of the chairman and directors of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company to be present at the opening of their new dock. It was an enterprise of which everyone interested in the progress of the settlement and its trade must cordially approve. "Free trade" was much talked of at the present time; it was a question whether "Freedom of trade" would not better express what was meant, but this did not mean to imply that trade was to be left to itself

Trade was a coy maiden, and required coaxing and encouragement to induce her to settle anywhere and confer her benefits on a people. She would not come for the mere asking or wishing, she required to be made to feel that it was her interest to take such a step. It was with her as with young ladies, who, although their affections might be most deeply engaged, were not insensible to the advantages of a good establishment, a comfortable home, horses and carriages, and frequent trips to England. So trade would never be insensible to those advantages which she considered necessary. Let it, then, be made evident to her that we can offer her greater encouragement, greater facilities than our neighbours, and we shall soon gain her affections and retain them, if we go the right way to work.

To-day a great step has been taken in this direction; the directors of this company have offered and are offering every encouragement to trade to come among us, and are deserving of every acknowledgment for their efforts. He considered the works to be well executed and very creditable. The engineer who designed them and the engineer who built them, the directors who had carried them out, and the shareholders who have found the means, all deserve the greatest praise for the benefits they have conferred upon the colony. It was true that the result of their labours would be to their own interest, but no one supposed for a moment that such works as these were undertaken merely and solely for the public good; such instances of disinterestedness were uncommon; but what they had done was this—they had embarked their capital in the enterprise, and whether it repaid them, which he sincerely hoped it would, or whether it did not, it must serve to benefit the trade of the colony and so indirectly everyone concerned in it.

The new dock, lined throughout with granite, was 450 feet long, by 65 broad, and 20 deep, and was capable of containing merchant vessels of the largest class trading out here, and would take two in at a time. The machine shop was well supplied with tools and steam machinery for the repair of iron vessels. The wharves, already constructed, would allow of some eight or nine vessels being unloaded at a time, the godowns were capable of storing some 8,000 tons of merchandise, whilst the coal-sheds held some 20,000 tons of coal.

These advantages it was plain had been appreciated, as it appeared that during the last year some 230 vessels, one-third of which were steamers, had made use of them.

Such were the main features of this undertaking, and his Excellency was confident they would ensure universal approbation. The Governor concluded by saying:—"I have been requested to state that the directors are desirous that this new dock should be named after our most gracious Queen, and I accordingly declare the 'Victoria Dock' to be now opened, and in the name of the Singapore community I thank those gentlemen whose enterprise has added one more work of such value to the prosperity of the settlement, and I am sure all of you will join me in wishing that every success may attend their efforts, and that they may soon find it necessary to continue their exertions in the same field."

The Hon. T. Scott, chairman of the Tanjong Pagar Company, replied nearly as follows:—

Your Excellency,—

I would beg, on behalf of my co-directors and myself, to return to you our best thanks for your kind and ready courtesy in doing us the honour of presiding, as you have just done, at the ceremony of the opening of our dock.

I would also desire to tender to Lady Ord, to Lady Maxwell, and to those other ladies and friends who have been good enough to come, our thanks for the countenance they have afforded us by their presence here to-day.

The opening of the dock has been looked forward to by us with much longing and eagerness, for it cannot be concealed that the undertaking has been carried on under very considerable difficulties, and has entailed on the directors much anxiety.

Thanks, however, to kind and timely assistance, we have been able to struggle on and to bring the work to the state in which you now see it, and it is with much pleasure that we have found ourselves enabled to ask you to witness the opening of the dock.

Your Excellency has been pleased to speak of the undertaking in flattering terms, and to wish it success. I sincerely trust that our hopes of success may soon be realised, that the directors may be enabled to make some return to the shareholders who have borne the want of dividends with much patience.

I may be permitted to say that the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company is not the offspring of a grasping spirit of monopoly, but was originated to meet what was felt to be a growing want in this settlement, greater accommodation for docking vessels and facilities for landing and shipping cargo.

What your Excellency has just stated as to the number of vessels that have made use of the wharves will, I think, at once show that greater facilities were urgently required, and have been appreciated. I may also mention that we have had stored here at one time as much as (16,000) sixteen thousand tons of coal. The necessity for more docking accommodation is evidenced by the fact that Mr. Buyers' Dock, begun some time after the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company (Limited) was formed, but which has been opened for two years, has, during that time, received about 100 vessels, and that quite recently vessels have had to wait for some time before being able to get into a dock.

The principles on which the Tanjong Pagar Company will be conducted will, I trust, always be good work, fair and honest charges—competition, straightforward, but as keen and energetic as is possible. Let us not be possessed with an envious desire to monopolise everything, but let us endeavour to be on friendly terms with our neighbours; let us not think it a personal injury if we see a vessel going to another dock, or wharf, but let our motto be, "Live and let live."

Again I beg to thank your Excellency, Lady Ord, Lady Maxwell, and all those who have assembled here this day to witness the opening of our enterprise.

After Mr. Scott had finished, Mr. Dana, of Messrs. Hutchinson and Co., proposed three cheers for the Governor, which were heartily given, as were also three cheers for Lady Ord, and this concluded the formal part of the ceremony which inaugurated Victoria Dock. Refreshments, provided on a most liberal scale under the able superintendence of Mr. Emmerson, were then offered and partaken of by the assemblage. Nothing, indeed, seems to have been forgotten for the comfort of the visitors; even the road to the dock had, through the courtesy of the Municipal Commissioners, been well watered from the entrance to Tanjong Pagar-road, in order to lay the dust.

The vessels at the w arves of the company, as well as at those of the Borneo Company, were all gaily decorated with flags, and at the head of the dock there was a tall flagstaff, from the top of which there floated in the breeze the white flag of the company, with its red cross.

Shortly after twelve his Excellency and Lady Ord were escorted to their carriage, and by one o'clock nearly all the ladies had taken their departure. As a natural consequence, the champagne began to flow more freely, and the tongues of some of the guests got loosened. Several speeches, not in the programme, were made, and the healths of the manager and engineer of the dock were proposed and enthusiastically received. By two o'clock nearly everybody had left, and the day was over so far as the public were concerned.

The Peiho and Rainbow were left in dock, as they require some slight repairs, such as painting, &c. They are the first vessels to enter the dock, and the company do not make any charge for their repairs, in honour of the occasion.

Such is a short sketch of the opening of the Tanjong Pagar Dock. Begun, as the undertaking was, at the time of general delirium and reckless speculation, it speaks volumes for the tenacity of purpose with which it has been persevered with and carried to a successful conclusion in the face of all difficulties, while other similar enterprises collapsed like a pack of cards.

MANILA.—Mr. Ricketts, H.B.M. Consul, writes to the Governor of the Straits Settlements, under date Manila, Sept. 9.:—"Sir,—With reference to my despatch of the 28th August last, relative to the equalisation of the British to the Spanish flag in this colony in the matter of port and navigation dues, it appears that British vessels will not be considered as enjoying the same privilege as Spanish vessels until an official notice of the same has been duly published by order of H.C.M. in the Madrid Gazette. As soon as any further information has been received I will not fail to convey the same to your Excellency."

Commercial Report.

The following market information is derived from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated 27th October:—

IMPORTS.

SHANGHAI.—Imported goods generally had been exceedingly dull of sale, and in nearly every instance showed a decline from previous quotations. Nothing whatever had been done in American Drills, Jeans, or Sheetings, and prices were nominally even lower for the former than when last quoted; say for Drills, Tls. 4.40 to 4.60, nominal; Jeans, Tls. 3.60 to 3.70, nominal; Sheetings, Tls. 4.20 to 4.30, nominal. British Cottons had also declined; 6½ catty Grey Shirtings being quoted Tls. 2.22 to 2.25 per piece; White Shirtings and T-Cloths nominally unchanged, but rates tending downwards. Very few transactions had occurred in Woollens, although former figures were fairly well maintained. Metals were quiet and unaltered, except Lead, which was more firmly held, as there was a prospect that importations would be again short of requirements for the coming season; we quote L.B., Tls. 5.60 to 5.65 per picul. Coals remained as last advised, dull and in large supply; American Anthracite was quoted, Tls. 12.25 to 12.50, nominal, ex ship.

HONG KONG.—Markets generally had been very quiet since despatch of the last mail. The inquiry for Raw Cotton had lessened very materially, while some considerable additions had been made to stocks, and prices had declined 50 to 75 cents per picul. A few small sales of Nos. 16 to 24 Yarn had been made on slightly easier terms, importers still showing a desire to realise. Nos. 28 to 32 were firmly held. One parcel of best 38 to 42 had been sold at $155 per bale. Grey Shirtings were almost entirely neglected, and quotations were nominal, but a reduction from the last mail's quotations would have had to be made in order to effect sales. T-Cloths had been taken to a limited extent at a decline of a few cents per piece. Dutch and English Drills were wanted, but the former were entirely, and the latter nearly, out of stock. A small sale of 40 yard English was reported at $5.50 per piece. The market was still bare of American Cottons. Woollens generally were a shade firmer. Scarlet Long Ells had been sparingly taken at an advance of 10 cents. Assorted were unchanged. Spanish Stripes not inquired for. Blankets wanted. A few trifling sales of S.S. Assorted Camlets had been made at $16.50. Lastings and Crapes were neglected. Metals were dull of sale. Ordinary brands of Lead were selling at $6.80 to 6.90 per picul.

EXPORTS.

SHANGHAI.—Green Teas: A fair business had continued to be transacted at prices which were generally easier, but did not admit of any change in quotations. Settlements since October 14 amounted to 16,300 half-chests, but arrivals had been extensive, and the stock was nearly 90,000 half-chests, including 12,000 Ping-uey and local packed, but holders showed little disposition to give way materially, notwithstanding the accumulation and the hitherto conservative action of the generality of buyers. Black Teas: Transactions had been of very moderate extent, amounting to 4,400 chests, at some little decline in prices. Stock remained at about 24,000 chests. Raw Silk: There had been a steady business in Silk, and, in the face of unsatisfactory telegrams from home, prices had advanced about 10 taels on Tsatlees, and 10 to 15 on Taysaams. Settlements had been from 1,000 to 1,200 bales, leaving in stock from 2,000 to 2,500 bales. Prices in the country continued high, and the market was likely to maintain an upward tendency.

Foochow.—From the 10th to the 17th October the settlements of Tea amounted to about 10,200 chests Congou, at Tls. 8.8 to 20.8 o.b.; 155 ditto Souchong at Tls. 20.8 to 30.8 o.b.; 345 half-chests Oolong at Tls. 27.8 to 29.8 o.b.; and 2,000 boxes scented tea at Tls. 9.05 to 22.8 o.b. A portion of the Congou settlements were made prior to despatch of the mail, but had not then been reported. There was a fairly large supply of tonnage for Australia in port, and colonial buyers were the principal operators, nearly all buyers for the English market refraining from purchasing, owing to the very discouraging advices thence. Holders were less firm, and parcels had been settled here and there at a slight decline, but no general change could be noted. Teamen reported that offers for considerable parcels had been made at a reduction of a tael. The arrivals to the 17th October amounted to 663,273 chests. Stock, 55,200 chests. There was no change in the Oolong market, buyers evincing no anxiety to commence business, and owners none to effect sales. Arrivals to October 17th amounted to 170,221 half-chests. Stock, 89,200. The only departure had been the Mary for New Zealand with 209,729 lbs. tea.

Amoy.—A few trifling settlements of Congous had been made at unchanged figures, but in Oolongs nothing had been done. Holders, however, were willing to make some concessions, though not sufficient to induce buyers to operate, and should the latter remain firm, a material reduction would no doubt take place.

Canton.—There was little of interest to report, the markets having continued very quiet. Teas had remained without enquiry, but there was no change in prices, although teamen would more readily dispose of their stocks. Silk, for the moment, was neglected, the business last reported having been so very large. Re-reeled Cumchook was firm at $560. A sale of 400 piculs Cassia at $21.25 to 21.50 was reported, said to be destined for America.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

Tea.—The current quotations are as follows (duty 25 cents per lb. on all teas): Young Hyson cargo, 58c. to 65c.; superior 65c. to 75c.; fine and finest, 78c. to $1.10. Gunpowder and Imperial cargo, 67c. to 72c.; superior, 78c. to 85c.; fine and finest, 92c. to $1.20. Hyson cargo, 58c. to 65c.; inferior, 68c. to 70c.; fine and finest, 75c. to $1.00. Hyson Skin, and Twankay cargo, 52c. to 54c.; superior, 56c. to 58c.; fine, 60c. to 62c.; finest, (none). Ning Yong and Oolong, 45c. to 80c. Congou and Souchong, inferior, 48c. to 50c.; good common, 53c. to 56c.; superior, 60c. to 65c.; fine, 70c. to 78c.; finest 90c. to 95c. Japans fair, 62c. to 63c.; superior, 65c. to 66c.; fine and finest, 68c. to 75c. per lb. Messrs. Westray, Gibbes and Hardcastle offer the following remarks on the the condition of the market:—The latest mail advices from China received are dates from Shanghai to the 16th, Foochow, 13th, Hong Kong, 18th, and Yokohama 23rd September. Since the date of our last circular business has continued very dull for this season of the year, but the Presidential election, and afterwards the close money market have been the means, no doubt, of causing the inactivity. Black Teas: Oolongs have only been inquired for in small lots and of low quality. There is no disposition to take hold of large parcels, except at a concession of two or three cents gold per lb. Uncoloured Japans were dealt in rather extensively at the beginning of the month, two full cargos changing hands, but latterly they have been quite dull, the line demand being almost entirely for low priced teas, but not common. Sales are 27,000 packages. Inquiries exist for low broken leaf and good common Souchongs in bond, but transactions are very moderate for want of stock. Green Teas have continued in moderate request, and the arrivals from England have almost entirely supplied the demand, being disposed of at lower rates than holders of direct importations are willing to accept. Sales, 9,000 packages. The following is from Messrs. Babe and Co.'s Circular, dated Nov. 20:—During the past fortnight transactions in tea have been on a limited scale, 5,568 half-chests Green, and 2,850 half-chests Japan, covering the entire sales from first hand. The only feature of special interest at the moment is the opening of business in new crop greens by the sale this week of 3,508 half-chests, just to hand from San Francisco, being a part of the shipments per Costa Rica, from Shanghai. Prices realised for these goods show an advance upon the opening rates of last season of fully five (5) cents per pound gold. The market for Japans rules dull at a decline of two (2) to three (3) cents per pound on prices current a month since. For Oolongs of old crop there is little or no inquiry, and sales could not be made without a further concession in prices. We note continued receipts, to a moderate extent, of various kinds of Tea from the London markets, and these, with part of the shipments ex Costa Rica, constitute the additions to our supply since our last. The import from 1st January to 6th November was 35,592,500 lbs. against 35,086,300 lbs. during the corresponding period last year; the deliveries were 32,878,400 lbs. against 34,382,000 lbs.; the stock on the 6th November was 11,063,900 lbs. against 10,339,800 lbs.

Silk.—Messrs. Heywood and Co. report as follows:—The market is depressed and dull, after the auction sale of the 12th November. The manufacturers are now fairly stocked, and we anticipate a limited business for the remainder of the year. There is some little inquiry for fine Taysaams and good rereeled Tsatlee. Imports from 1st to 20th November, 170 packages.

The Juno, 6 guns, 1,462 tons, 400-horse power, Capt. William A. B. Pearse, is undergoing a thorough caulking alongside Portsmouth Dockyard, and preparing generally for another cruise to China and Japan, with a large number of naval supernumeraries for Her Majesty's ships on that station. The Juno just now appears to be the "dark horse" of the navy. Some people describe her as an armed transport, others as a screw corvette simply. In one of the official past navy lists she was described as an armed screw transport. She now stands on the list as a "screw corvette."

THE "ROB ROY" CANOE ON THE SUEZ CANAL.

The plucky owner of the now celebrated Rob Roy canoe, having, we suppose, explored all the waters of Europe, has turned his attention to those of Egypt, and in the following ably-written letter addressed to the Editor of The Times gives the result of his experiences as far as the Suez Canal is concerned, which will be found highly interesting:—

"The Suez Canal Company have been fourteen years at work upon their gigantic labour, and as they announce positively that the canal will be opened within a year from the present time, perhaps you will allow me to give a brief account of its present appearance, as seen during a very careful examination of the whole line from my canoe.

"The canal is to be 100 miles long, and 100 yards wide (at the water's edge). The depth throughout will be 25 feet in the middle. The direction is nearly north and south, with a few turnings, but no locks or bridges. There will be a slight tidal current along it, but no one can say at what intervals. Already about fifty miles of the cut is filled with salt water, and is traversed daily by numerous small vessels and some steam-launch mailboats, while the countless barges, dredges, and coalboats, all worked by screw propellers, which ply day and night, make a din and bustle in the sandy desert very unromantic indeed but exceedingly interesting to observe.

"Of this fifty miles many parts are not wide enough yet for large vessels, and only a small portion is excavated to the full depth. The remainder of the canal is more or less dug out. While some parts are quite dry, others are put under water to moisten the sand; others have great blastings of rocks, and one long section of twenty miles has to wait until the sea is admitted into the great dry basin of a future lake.

"The sensation of wonder at the prodigious scale of the operations in progress increases day by day as one moves along what seems to be a wide river with villages on the banks and smoky funnels and white sails on the surface. The hydraulic machines, which groan and snort and rattle their chains as they work, are of enormous size; and though each of them seems to be pouring forth a volume of mud, yet the mind finds it hard to believe that all of these together can lift up and throw over the banks enough to make any appreciable progress between yesterday and to-day. The sand dredged from below is either carried out to sea in barges or (further inland) is delivered in a stream from a lofty iron tube, 220 feet long, with its mouth over one bank, or it is hoisted up an iron inclined plane and cast upon the shore, until the heap on each side of the water is fifty feet high. The engines for this purpose are forty in number, and each of them cost £40,000. The expenses at present amount to £200,000 every month, and the work has already absorbed eight millions sterling.

"Port Said is the little town at the north entrance of the canal. It is built of wood, with wide, straight streets, and houses that look like brown paper, and that would burn from end to end in ten minutes. Hotels, cafés, shops, and bazaars are crowded by 6,000 people of every nation, but with the Greek and Levantine element largely preponderating.

"The two long piers of the harbour stretch their white arms into the sea, but the area enclosed seems very small and completely exposed to the northerly gales. These piers are made of blocks of sand, cemented with lime, each block being cast separately in a mould, and then carried out to its place in a barge. The magnitude of this part of the work may be faintly estimated when we know that each block weighs ten tons, and that there are 25,000 of them.

"Ismailia is the pretty town half-way along the canal, which here enters the lake Timsah ('crocodile lake'). Here the Arabs and their camels and the jackals of the desert are alongside the steamboats, the whirring lathes and sounding forge-hammers of the company's workshops, the tall poles of the electric telegraph, and the hot rails of the railway, while a cool and sweet draught of Nile water may be had from the fresh-water canal which comes hither all the way from Cairo, and then branches out north and south along the whole extent of the salt-water canal.

"The sweet-water canal is already a blessing to Egypt. It is from thirty to forty feet wide, and boats with all sorts of cargoes are towed through it by men on foot, or sail along gaily if there is a breeze to fill their snowy wings. My canoe excited the greatest delight among all this river population, both when she skimmed over the water with her blue sails, or rested by the bank with her cabin rigged up, and my dinner cooked, and my little reading lamp and mosquito curtains arranged for the night. I managed to sleep thus in the canoe very comfortably, though the nights are cold; and on Lake Timsah a jackal paid me a visit at a very unfashionable hour by moonlight. During one day a violent gale swept across the canal. To look at the Desert was to see a vast yellow picture of men and camels dimly floating in a sea of sand without any horizon. The quantity of sand whisked from the plain and cast into the canal water by a wind like this will be a serious matter to deal with. One ounce of sand per square yard amounts to five hundred tons on the whole canal, and the wind sometimes blows in this way for a month together.

"At Chaloof I found 14,000 men at work. They labour very hard indeed, running up the hill with baskets of sand on their heads. About 1,000 donkeys walk in long lines with neat mat baskets on their backs. In curious and close contrast to these simple carriers the mighty power of steam toils and puffs as it hurls up huge bulks of heavy clay, and it is, perhaps, only in Egypt one could see human and animal power exerted in such competition with steam power. The labourers are sent from all parts of Egypt. They must come, but they are highly paid—from 2f. to 3f. per day. Prices both of labour and of food have risen very much since the canal has been begun, but the supply of fish has rapidly increased. The salt water canal teems with fish—one of them leaped across my canoe a few minutes after I first set sail; and on the fresh-water canal I stopped once to receive a letter from a messenger, and while putting it into my breast-pocket as I sat in the canoe a beautiful little fish sprang from the water into the same pocket with the letter. The spectators were loud in their congratulations at this 'lucky omen,' and I had the fish broiled for dinner. The officers of the Malabar troopship were very kind to me; also the captain of the Feroze, which is waiting to take Lord Mayo to India. The expedition for the survey of Sinai left here a few days ago, and we expect Dr. Livingstone to arrive next week. The interest felt about this great man is intense. A special correspondent of a well-known American newspaper is waiting in readiness to telegraph all he can gather on the subject to New York.

"At this, the Red Sea end, the works of the canal seem very far behind. The entrance port has all the obstacles of a shallow mouth, soft and shifting sand for bottom, and an irregular tide eddying about in a most puzzling manner. When the passage from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea is opened to the world it is intended to tow vessels through it by a tug working along a chain which lies at the bottom of the canal. Steamers are not to be allowed to use their own paddles or engines for fear of damaging the soft sloping banks of the canal by the 'wash' thus created. The difficulty of towing a vessel of 2,000 tons in this manner when the wind presses her to one side is an objection to the whole scheme, which I have heard no feasible answer to, and as I have been towed in this way for hundreds of miles in my yawl, and was compelled to tow my canoe myself for a whole day on this canal, I cannot help urging this point distinctly, while carefully abstaining from expressing opinions as to the probable return which the outlay on the whole scheme may reasonably expect to receive in the future.

"During the fortnight I have passed on the salt-water canal, the fresh-water canal, and the two lakes, Menzaleh and Timsah, I have been most kindly treated by all the officers of the company and by hundreds of Arabs, Nubians, Greeks, and even Chinese, who always cluster round my little canoe. Sometimes, it is true, I found it advisable to show, among other things, my pistol capped and cocked, but all of us were good-humoured in our intercourse, and the friendship commenced by a pleasant laugh together is, I always find, the best in the end among barbarians of that sort. I have now brought my former dragoman from Syria, and intend to paddle down the Damietta branch of the Nile while he takes my heavy luggage in a boat. Then, having crossed Lake Menzaleh, I shall take the canoe to Damascus, and launch her upon the rivers Abana and Pharpar, which have never had such a thing as a boat on them, and then to the sources of the Jordan and Lake Huleh, where there must be something to discover, before I descend the Jordan into the Lake of Gennesareth.
—Yours, &c.,
"ROB ROY.
"Suez, Nov. 16."

NEW CHARTS.—From the Hydrographic Office of the Admiralty there has just been issued a large thin book entitled "Pilot Charts for the Atlantic Ocean." Four of the charts represent a year, one for each quarter; and in each one the prevalent winds and weather over the North and South Atlantic Oceans are indicated, so that any pilot or captain may ascertain what wind and weather he is likely to fall in with wherever he may happen to be. As the whole surface of the charts is divided into sections like a chess-board, reference to any one is easy, while ample explanation is given in the marginal notes. The engraving is well executed, and presents the subject clearly to the eye. Capt. Richards, the hydrographer under whose care these charts have been published, explains that they are not founded on data so rigorous as those required in charts involving the safety of navigation, and are to be regarded simply as aids to the navigator—but most valuable aids, for they will assist him in carrying his ship across those parts of the ocean concerning which there is at present much diversity of opinion and practice. The fifth chart represents the currents of the whole of the Atlantic, and we are glad to see that this publication is to be followed by a similar series for the Pacific and Indian Oceans. They will be highly interesting to others as well as mariners.

THE YANGCHOW DIFFICULTY.

(THE TIMES.)

The missionary zeal of our country, coming into collision, as it does, with every religion, every opinion, and every institution in the world, is becoming a fertile source of political embarrassment. Any day we may hear that Her Majesty's representatives at foreign cities or ports, as well as her forces by land or by sea, have been engaged with more or less activity in backing up persons hitherto unknown in undertakings upon which the State has never been consulted, and upon which it must still remain ignorant. A company of missionaries assuming the title of the "Chinese Inland Mission" proposes to plant and establish some denomination of the Christian faith in the interior of China. The attempt has the sanction of all ages and countries in the civilised world, inasmuch as we should never have been what we are but for similar operations many centuries ago. To the principle there can be no objection whatever, nor will any be alleged. But it is quite as easy to disturb and annoy a foreign people, and even to give it just offence, in a good cause as in a bad one; nay, perhaps somewhat easier, as it is notorious that people are less disposed to recognise what may be called the laws of the game and trifling punctilios when they stand, as they think, on the impregnable ground of absolute justice and truth. If persons whose ambition is confined to smuggling prohibited cargoes or cheating the foreign custom-houses have sometimes brought us all into trouble, and engaged us in wars we take no pleasure to think about, much more may these consequences be apprehended when the design is to demolish the ancient faith and overthrow the peculiar institutions of an empire. It stands to reason that the Gospel of peace ought not to be made an occasion of universal war; and when we revert to the early precedents bearing on the question we find that the Apostles and early missionaries certainly did not propagate their faith under the protection of armies and fleets. They did not bring war in their train, and avenge themselves upon unbelieving hearers or ribald persecutors by invoking fire from heaven and destroying their place and their nation. The argument of fire and sword was first imported into polemics by an Arabian fanatic in the seventh century, and in British eyes is now utterly abominable. We all dread the least approach to it, and are carefully searching our laws and customs in order to eradicate every trace of the evil. When, therefore, we read that imposing displays of force are made, heavy guns pointed against quiet inland cities, and severe "ultimatums" addressed to municipal authorities, all on behalf of men whose mission is to preach and pray, we may be excused if we feel rather shocked, and if we venture to say there must be something wrong about it.

These Missionaries, after trying to force their way first in one city, then in another, and finding the people as well as the authorities dead against them, thought they had found an opening in Yangchow, on the Grand Canal, fifteen miles from the great river Yang-tze, and the cluster of popular cities at its mouth. Here they made themselves comfortable with their families, adopted the Chinese dress, and set about the work of conversion. What doctrines they preached, and what they denounced, we are not told, and all that actually appears in the intelligence is the antagonism between the two systems, the native and the foreign. As every man in China is educated upon the ancient system of his country, and every man's place and expectations depend on his proficiency in it, the proficients must feel they have the greatest possible stake in the question. This, in fact, they do feel. They see the overwhelming power of the foreigner in the appeal to arms, in policy, and other matters; and they see nothing but a social catastrophe in the success of his inroads upon the national belief. The foreigner is formidable enough in arts, arms, and trade. What will become of them all if he succeeds in undermining and demolishing, as he must do, that fabric of thought, sentiment, and etiquette upon which, as on the branches of a tree, every man in China has his perch? It was to prevent this consummation that for ages the Chinese have excluded the foreigner. He has done his best to force his way in. Jesuits have tried in vain, or with only a brief success, and with terrible consequences to their converts, as well as to themselves. What we see to-day is only the ancient war. It is stated that the missionaries were followed and beset by a conspiracy of the Literati, or educated men, with the connivance of the authorities, and with the aid of the Tartar soldiers, brought over by the usual means. Curiously horrible calumnies are circulated against the missionaries and their creed. A mob—a mercenary mob, not of the populace—is assembled; and the missionaries are forcibly expelled, with the loss of their house and all their property, and with severe personal injuries. Up to this point the narrative reads not very unlike one of the chapters in the life of the first "Apostle to the Gentiles." What follows is a chapter in the history of the British Empire. It presents us with the intervention of Her Majesty's Consul-General at Shanghai; his abortive visit to the offending Prefect; his progress in Her Majesty's ship Rinaldo to the Viceroy at Nankin; the trickery of the Prefect defeated by the promptitude of the British Consul-General; and the negotiation with the Viceroy under the guns of the Rinaldo. All this reads as if it were stereotyped. Nor will the rest be very strange to English ears. The guns of the Rinaldo obtain the usual full amends in the shape of dismissals, punishments, compensations, humiliations, and a public inscription on stone for all readers for all time. All is settled, and the Church is triumphant. Suddenly the Captain of the Rinaldo falls sick, and, instead of taking his passage in one of the steamers plying regularly down the river, chooses to go back in his own ship. The guns once out of sight, everything is changed, and the negotiation is fruitless. Thus far it is evident that at the city first introduced to European notice by Marco Polo the Gospel can only be preached under the guns of the Rinaldo.

Besides the fact that both in China and in Japan the Missionaries of our faith have always contributed largely to their own failure by their imprudent conduct and extravagant pretensions, it ought not to be forgotten already, before the close of this present year, that the quarrel of Europe with the Abyssinian Emperor arose out of the political indiscretions of some missionaries. It is idle to proclaim the doctrine of non-intervention, and the right of every nation to manage its own affairs, if we are to be liable to be called in every year to avenge the quarrels of missionaries upon whose character, selection, operations, and discipline the British Government has no check whatever. It can oblige its own servants to observe the rules of common sense and international civility. It can impress upon them that nobody can expect to do with public sanction, or even impunity, in a foreign land what he would not be permitted to do at home. If a Confucian Propagandist presented himself in this metropolis, and began to assail publicly our faith, the Book that contains it, and the men who preach it, he would certainly fare ill, and would not be protected, or even compensated for injuries and losses. Mr. Murphy has had to hold his hand, and we cannot think he would be allowed more license if he chose to carry his operations into France, Germany, or even New York. The substitution of one faith for another is a most delicate operation and the work of time. It is not to be done with hard words, often worse than hard blows. In the great examples that should be always in the mind of every missionary there was a careful adaptation, and even accommodation, to the opinions, the traditions, the religion, and the philosophy of the people addressed. If our correspondent be correctly informed, the English missionaries neglect this rule by needlessly outraging the sentiment which reigns supreme in every soul in China, and is the foundation of their religious and moral system. They worship their ancestors. Is that so shocking? Can it be even proved to be unreasonable? Is it so utterly repugnant to British feelings? Has it no countenance in that mass of endless genealogies so often found lying on an Englishman's Bible? Can any missionary pretend to prove that a Chinaman's remotest ancestor is not now existing, taking part in present affairs, and hearing the prayers of his progeny in the flesh? And, after all, is not such a belief a very fair foundation to proceed upon in paving the way for the Gospel? At all events, it is very hard that the British people are to be forced into a quarrel, as disgraceful as it may prove costly, because persons never heard of before are hoping to convert the Chinese by telling them their ancestors, if they exist at all, are not worth worshipping, and had best be forgotten. This cannot be the way to begin with, and even if the missionaries succeed in rationalising their Chinese disciples up to this sublime conclusion, they will have to turn their attention to their fellow-countrymen at home, who still worship their ancestors, as substantially, perhaps, as the Chinese do.

(DAILY TELEGRAPH.)

It is a thousand pities that our missionaries cannot add the "wisdom of serpents" to the "harmlessness of doves." For want of the double qualification, recommended by Scripture itself, we are as likely as not to have serious trouble in the Shanghai districts of China, and perhaps even another costly war. A set of worthy gentlemen, accredited by pious societies in this country, take advantage of our "treaty rights" to preach the Gospel in the cities of the Celestial Empire. Nothing more excellent or praiseworthy could be imagined, and it ill becomes "finified" critics to jest at such men, who, with their lives in their hands, expound what they hold to be infallible truth to the Oriental peoples. Some of these emissaries, who belong to the "Chinese Inland Mission," had established themselves during the last year or two at Yangchow, a town of importance near Nanking. Yangchow was a very good starting place; for it was there that Marco Polo governed under Kublai Khan six centuries ago, and therefore the spot is somewhat Europeanised by its traditions. But the mission was quickly assailed by those whom its members would very justly describe as "sons of Belial." The Literati, or educated caste, of the Chinese hate and dread the Christian propagandists, who preach against Confucius, and denounce the most cherished doctrines of the established faith of China. Accordingly, with placards in flaming vermilion and green characters, these Celestial graduates and undergraduates have been stirring up the populace against the mission. They have given out that the missionaries are a most destable class of persons. To propitiate public opinion the Christian teachers dress in the costume of the country, and do everything else consistent with their own objects; but they have been accused of kidnapping little children to boil them down for medicine; of feeding habitually on the hearts and livers of human beings; and of turning Chinamen into "foreign devils" by means of magical drugs. Their religion was abused in words which are horrible and impossible to repeat; and, after several menacing demonstrations, the Yangchow mob rose on the 22nd of August last, and fairly stormed the mission-house. The ladies had to throw their children from the back windows and jump out after them. Mr. Reid, the head of the party, lost an eye by the savage violence of the assailants, and was rescued from death, along with his companions, only by the intervention of the official guard. The Chinese authorities shipped the mission off at once to Chinkiang, and the mob proceeded to gut the residence of the members. Having got hold of the Yangchow citizen who let the house to the missionaries, they first imprisoned him and then tortured him in a horrible manner.

Of course, such conduct could not be tolerated, and Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai, Mr. Medhurst, very properly sent up the Rinaldo frigate to Chinkiang, and ran her guns out, while he went on shore under their protection to demand satisfaction. But for the presence of the ship-of-war there would have been another dangerous riot; for the Literati were busily stirring up the Tartars, in order that the Viceroy of the province might be made to think that the people were really uncontrollable in their hatred of the Christian. Mr. Medhurst stopped this move by landing with his marines and blue jackets, and then went on to Yangchow to demand the punishment of the placarders and the release of the unlucky owner of the mission-house. The Yangchow mandarin was terrified, but impracticable; so our Consul resolved to appeal to the Viceroy at Nanking, and hastened thither without waiting for the mandarin. All was going perfectly well; the Governor at Nanking was quite willing to concede the demands of the British Consul, that the instigators of the riot should be punished; that a fine of 2,000 taels should be paid by the town of Yangchow; that the lessee of the house should be at once re leased; that the proclamation declaring foreigners to have the right of residing unmolested in the inland towns should be engraved upon stone—the emphatic Chinese way of proclaiming laws—and placed in a conspicuous position. At this promising juncture of affairs, Captain Bush, commanding the Rinaldo, was guilty of what seems the most astonishing forgetfulness of duty, by withdrawing his vessel. The excuse is that he was unwell; but it appears that he could have gone back to Shanghai in a steamer; and the British community are therefore not unnaturally incensed at the conduct of the Rinaldo's commander. No sooner were the guns of the frigate out of sight than the Viceroy changed his tone; he withdrew his concessions, became insolent instead of polite, and would agree to give no more than Tls. 1,000 as a fine instead of Tls. 2,000; while, although he still consented to issue the notification requested, he refused to have it engraven upon stone. Mr. Medhurst could only withdraw in indignation to Shanghai, to place the matter in the hands of Her Majesty's principal Representative, Sir Rutherford Alcock, who will have trouble enough to restore our damaged prestige. The effect upon the excited populace has already been bad—the paper proclamations of the Viceroy, repeating that the foreigners have the right to live at peace in Yangchow and similar places, have been contemptuously torn down, and a counter notification has been issued by the victorious placarders at that spot and Chinkiang. This document, which is signed by "The Chinese People," protests that any house let to the Christian missionaries will be burned, along with its occupants, and that the lessor will be tortured or roasted to death. So here is a "very pretty quarrel as it stands," and a dismal additional proof that, somehow, the "Gospel of Peace" is constantly made in the hands of its exponents a perfect firebrand of trouble and war.

"But wherein," it will be asked, "are the missionaries to blame for thus unpleasantly disturbing our rapidly extending relations with the Chinese?' We will explain why we think they are very much to blame, and we do so in the interest of their own noble and courageous efforts to enlighten the four hundred millions who follow the precepts of Confucius. The missionaries go utterly wrong in their methods. Of course if they believe that the Gospel must be crammed down the throat of Buddhist or Foh-ite, there is no hope of wiser counsel. But the example of the Great Apostle at Athens is surely the right one to follow. He stood upon Mars-hill, and, taking up the dedication to the "Unknown God" from one of the Greek altars, he met the nameless desire, and wrote the new knowledge in the blank space of their belief. Look at what China is! There are, as we have said, four hundred millions of men, including Coreans, Cochin-Chinese and others who follow the body of morals and doctrines instituted by the immortal Chinese teacher. Are these base morals? Assuredly not. Confucius taught emphatically the deathless life of the spiritual part; he perceived and declared the imperishability alike of matter, force, and individual existence; he proclaimed, under the symbol of Tien, the infinite blue vault of Heaven, a one and only God, omnipotence, omnipresent, and divine. He has saturated China with the most spiritual beliefs, mingled, doubtless, with many corruptions and absurdities. No nation is better convinced that man is immortal than the Chinese. The word "death" never enters into their great master's philosophy. To this day they repeat his beautiful formula, and say that such a one has "returned to his family." Confucius made filial duty and affection a religion for a wonderful swarm of human beings; and in the graceful and elevated custom of the "worship of ancestors," he anticipates one of Comte's few profound verities, and has established, upon the basis of a true philosophical doctrine, the unity of past with present and future, the oneness of humanity under the Common Father. In morals Confucius urged unceasingly the golden law of "doing as we would be done by;" and if his "Ly-King," or "system of conduct" is stiff in its organisation of society, and intensely repressive of national expansion in thought, it is full of admirable rules which have made the Seric population what they are—no barbarians, but a capable and most remarkable portion of our race. Consequently Confucius is a great fact in China, and although emperor and peasant alike burn gilt paper to idols, and offer up superstitious prayers to the "invisible mother of Heaven" and other deities never named by their teacher, all alike recur to him with a pure reverence, and the worship of his name is universal. Now, wise men, introducing the larger and more advanced truths of Christianity into such a country, should build upon the firm foundations which they find. They should boldly and gladly recognise the lofty Koong-foo-tze as one of the many inspired instructors of mankind whom Providence has sent. "To each nation," the Koran says, "Allah has given a prophet in its own tongue;" and the servants of Christ ought to have enough of His spirit to grasp eagerly at the help which is afforded by such truth as a heathen population already possesses. The worthy missionaries have gone about denouncing Confucius, and driving Chinese orthodoxy mad by inveighing against the reverent rites paid to ancestors, and other things which have in them a germ of the most beautiful Christian verity. The Christian teachers might have made, and should have made, friends with the Literati, by praising what was noble in the national creed, and pointing out how the fuller moral doctrines and the brighter faith of Galilee explain and enlarge the best tenets of the sage of Shantung. Not compromising with the really false and evil part of Chinese religious customs, they ought to have done what St. Paul did before the Areopagites, and have begun by saying, "Him, therefore, whom ye ignorantly worship, that God preach I unto you." But the ardour and zeal of these excellent men leave them no room for judgment, and not much for the requisite large learning of such an enterprise. They try for ever to drive the wedge of enlightened belief in by the thick end. What they did in India, where they have for a century fought Brahmanism in vain with the Brahmanical side of Christianity, they repeat in China, where they contend hopelessly against Confucianism with such dogmatism as characterises the least successful methods of Confucius. The result of those well-meaning but helpless efforts will always be failure, and sometimes, as here, serious and annoying Imperial troubles; nor can the sublime faith which the missionaries heroically serve extend its conquests into Asia, until religious truth shall be regarded as no monopoly of any one continent or people, but as a light which shines everywhere, and which needs to be fostered, not rekindled, by those who have the "eyes to see" and the "larger day."

The following letter, signed "M. A.," also appeared in the Daily Telegraph:—

To the Editor of the Daily Telegraph.

SIR,—In your leading article of to-day on the Yangchow mission disturbance you omit to state the fact that Mr. Reid belongs to the communion of Plymouth Brethren. This appears to be the only mission the members of which have openly assumed the Chinese dress. But for an Englishwoman to assume the Chinese dress, without at the same time assuming the Chinese ladies' habits of seclusion, is specially imprudent, because it exposes her to insult whenever she appears in public. If, then, these missionaries of the Plymouth Brethren, by their singular mode of proceeding, have failed to combine the wisdom of the serpent with the harmlessness of the dove, they alone ought to be blamed. It is unjust to involve in a common condemnation with them the missionaries of other communions, who neither follow nor approve of such a mode of action.—Yours truly, M. A.

MR. H. N. LAY ON OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Times having sent home a circumstantial account of the Yang-chow affair, Mr. Lay has addressed to the Editor of the leading journal the following letter on the subject:—

Sir,—The letter of your Correspondent from Shanghai, in your issue of yesterday, upon the posture of affairs in China, is of ominous import, and well calculated to arrest public attention. It reveals a state of things more serious than may appear to the casual reader. It shows that we are drifting into another war, into the causes of which, let us hope, we shall not, as heretofore, begin to make inquiry when we are embarked beyond remedy. "A stitch in time saves nine." This timely warning I would venture to sound. The events which are transpiring strikingly verify the prognostications of an article on the subject of foreign relations with China which appeared in The Times of the 11th of September last. The apprehensions there indicated are being confirmed, and unless our course of action at Peking is speedily remodelled, we shall, I apprehend, find ourselves involved in a fresh war.

From the able letter of your correspondent it seems plain that the Chinese Government has set its old Canton policy in motion. Relieved of the Taepings through our aid, it is industriously, though secretly, at work, sowing the seeds of enmity between the foreigner and the people, with the set purpose of rendering the peaceful extension of our intercourse, otherwise certain, hopeless. Precisely what happened at Canton is happening now. Instead of Lin and Yeh, we have Tsang Kwohfon. The literati are put forward as a blind, the presumed ignorance of the foreigner of the constitution of the Chinese Government being counted on as enabling it to disavow their acts unchallenged, if and when convenient. But in truth it would be as possible for the half-pay officers of our navy to commission one of Her Majesty's ships for a warlike cruise, without the orders of the Board of Admiralty, as it would be for the literati to take action against foreigners without the express authority of their superiors. And in China no person, whether belonging to the official or non-official class, would dare to do aught that would implicate his Government without first seeking its sanction and approval. If he did it would certainly be at the risk of his head. Lying proclamations are now put forth as before. The "boiling of babies" by our missionaries is the cry; the ignorant masses are easily excited; and the savagery which belief in such a report is sure to arouse may be readily understood, and the mischief is that the demon of passion once loosed is not to be laid without bloodshed. The Canton populace, under the misguidance of Governor Yeh, burnt our settlement to the ground, and sowed the ground with salt, and the war of 1856 was protracted till 1860. If we would not see our settlements at the other ports treated after the same fashion, it behoves us to pay some heed to Chinese affairs while there is yet time.

The China Mail says:—

"The result of our present policy in China is that on every side we hear of hostility against foreigners at Wu-chang, Kiu-kiang, Formosa, Chefoo, Chin-kiang, and Yang-chow. From every part of China we hear complaints of the Chinese authorities resisting the clearest and most unquestionable claims."

The North China Herald of the 14th of October reports that a detachment of Chinese troops had been sent down from Peking to drive away the foreigners from the recently-discovered gold mines at Chefoo—a proof—the treaty violation which the act carries aside—of the real spirit by which the Chinese mandarins are animated. Are we to cast to the winds all past experience, and suffer an ignorant and ill-advised Government, to which we have rendered such substantial service, and which is dependent for its existence upon the assistance we are at this very moment rendering in the collection of its Customs revenue, to involve us in a disastrous conflict with its people? This is the question we have now to meet.

That the movement we see in progress in the different parts of China emanates from the Court of Peking, without whose bidding no provincial governor can move hand or foot, I unhesitatingly aver as my solemn conviction. The present disturbances are fomented under the mistaken idea that they will further its endeavours to render nugatory the important clauses of the Treaty of Tienstin, in virtue of which we are entitled, after ten years' patient waiting, to access to the interior of the empire. The slightest recession from the terms of that compact at this juncture would be the most fatal mistake in the real interest of the Chinese Government, and of the Chinese people, and of the commercial and manufacturing interests of Great Britain.—Yours faithfully,

Dec. 2. H. N. LAY.

THE CHINA MISSION.

WE have nothing more to report at present as to the doings of the China Mission. The expectation that its work here would be completed in time for a migration to Paris before the close of the year can of course be no longer entertained, the sudden collapse of Mr. DISRAELI'S Ministry having necessarily postponed the resumption of negotiations until Mr. GLADSTONE'S Cabinet is formed, and a new Foreign Secretary fairly installed in office. Whatever may be said against the out-going Government, it will be difficult to find among the ranks of the Liberal party a Foreign Secretary who possesses the admirable qualifications of Lord STANLEY—especially that frank, manly, straightforward honesty which, coupled with his undoubted determination of character, has completely routed many of our old-fashioned ideas as to the value of that shifty, dodging, deceitful science called diplomacy. Lord STANLEY would have promptly distinguished the wheat from the chaff in any propositions made to him on behalf of China, and would—as promptly—have rejected the latter. But we still hear to our sorrow rumours that Lord RUSSELL—that "meddle and muddle" official who has dragged England through so much diplomatic dirt—is to have a seat in the new Cabinet, although without office; and if the new Foreign Secretary—Lord CLARENDON seems to be fixed on for the post—is to be prompted by his lordship, we may expect a wretched exhibition of weakness; an alternation, probably, of bluster and timidity that will land us at last in another disastrous China war. If at any period of our intercourse with China the greatest degree of firmness was requisite to hold our own, and make good our position against planned and premeditated encroachments, it is requisite now. To the already numerous points arising out of the question of treaty revision that has been so long pending, there are the comparatively new ones of mining enterprise, roads and railways to facilitate it, telegraphs, and now what is becoming known as "the Yangchow complication," which revives in a dangerous form what has always been one of the most serious elements of trouble in the relations between China and Christian countries. To us it appears that by far the most satisfactory course would be to decline treating with the Chinese Government on these matters, except on the spot where our treaty was signed, and whence the present difficulties have emanated; and, since it is generally understood that Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK'S term is drawing to a close, to terminate it at once, and replace him by Sir HARRY PARKES, whose mission to Japan has been by no means a brilliant success, but who would be much more at home at Peking, where the firmness of character he formerly exhibited has gained him no little respect among the Chinese. There is too much reason to fear that any new treaty or convention hastily concluded with Mr. BURLINGHAME in London by a Foreign Minister new to his office, and inspired by Earl RUSSELL'S old-world notions, would be a lamentable failure.

THE Correspondance Italienne (a well-informed journal) announces that the Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs has received satisfactory communications relating to certain projected arrangements between Italy and the other Powers for guaranteeing the most rapid transmission possible for the English mails for the East via Brindisi.

THE Republican movement in Spain has very nearly resulted in a Spanish Minister of no very reputable antecedents being accredited to the Court of Peking. One Senor EDUARDO CHAO, a Democratic patriot, was by the Revolutionary Junta appointed to the general direction of the telegraphs of the kingdom, and the appointment was confirmed by the Provisional Government. But soon after some private official telegrams, exclusively intended for the Government, found their way into the Republican journal La Diffusion. As guilty of a glaring breach of trust, the director might have considered himself as very leniently punished by an instant dismissal, but the Government, however, offered to break his fall by sending him out as Minister to China! Senor CHAO, however, had no fancy for so distant a mission. "He might have to resign his post," he said, "but he would accept no compensation." On reflection he seems to have reconsidered this highly patriotic resolve, for he has since been gazetted to a lucrative sinecure in the Foreign-office. The most curious feature in the affair is the quiet way in which the Provisional Government assumed that dishonesty practised in a position of trust at home was the best qualification for one of even greater importance abroad! Perhaps the gentleman's name—which certainly has something of a Chinese sound with it—suggested the idea.

WITH reference to the hundred and fifty gold medals awarded by the Imperial Government to the officers of the Ever-Victorious Army, we understand that only thirty-five of them have been received by Colonel GORDON, a large number having been distributed by Mr. HART in China. Official application for permission to wear the decoration has already been made on behalf of those recipients who are British subjects, but has been refused by Her Majesty's Government, in accordance with the precedent already established in the case of the Spanish Legion. We regret to hear that Colonel GORDON experiences difficulty in ascertaining the whereabouts of several of the gentlemen entitled to the medal. The following have not yet received it:—Colonels MURANT and CHAPMAN, Captain DAVIDSON(Hyson), and Captains MANSFIELD, DUNN, REARDON, MACGUINNESS, GANGHAM, ESCOTT, SEARLE, MANSON, BUTTLE, MARTIN, and WILLIAMS.

THE directors of the P. and O. Company have issued their annual report, an abstract of which will be found in another place. Its most noteworthy feature is the complete justification it affords of the attitude assumed by the company in its late negotiations regarding the new mail contract; according to which, when the profits of the company are insufficient for a dividend of six per cent., the Government is liable for a contribution thereto not exceeding the sum of £100,000, in addition to the contract sum. The dividend for the present year is six per cent., but the directors have had to claim the Government contribution to make it up. The prospects of the company, however, are clearly improving, and a better result may be expected in the ensuing year.

IT will be remembered that in the early part of this year the Committee of the Social Science Association addressed to the SECRETARY of STATE for the COLONIES a remonstrance against the recognition of public gaming by the Governments of Hong Kong and Heligoland. That part of the remonstrance having reference to Hong Kong is fully answered, and most of its assumptions clearly refuted, in a despatch received by the Committee from Mr. GARDINER AUSTIN by last mail. As this does not appear to have been published in China up to the date of our last advices, we reproduce it entire, having been favoured with a copy of it.

WE regret that in our last issue, although a brief notice was given of the opening of the Tanjong Pagar Dock at Singapore, we were compelled by want of space to postpone any detailed account of the ceremonial with which that important event was celebrated. This omission we are now able to rectify, and in another part of our paper will be found a full account of the proceedings. Home readers need not wonder at the enthusiasm displayed, for the importance of the work, not only to the company that has successfully carried it out, but to the port whose prosperity it must largely increase, can hardly be over-rated. To wish the company success is almost superfluous—an earthquake is almost the only thing now that could deprive them of it.

SIR RICHARD MACDONNELL'S REPLY TO THE SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION'S MEMORIAL ON THE GAMBLING QUESTION.

The following is the text of the despatch of the Colonial Secretary to the Secretary of the Social Science Association, to which we refer in another column :—

COLONIAL SECRETARY'S OFFICE, HONG KONG, Oct. 20, 1868.

SIR,—1. The attention of his Excellency Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell has been recently called to a memorial addressed by the Standing Committee of the Social Science Association to his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies praying that an immediate stop should be put to the system adopted here of permitting gambling in certain houses licensed by Government and subject to police surveillance.

2. In paragraph 5 of that memorial the following passage occurs :—"Since the summer of 1866, when the first Ordinance was passed, the farm had been created by the local authorities, put up by them to sale, and granted to the highest bidder."

3. That assertion is not merely incorrect, but is even totally opposed to all the details fully given in a series of despatches which must have been at the time before the committee, because they allude to and quote from them. The Governor, therefore, is persuaded that the committee will at once ensure to this contradiction as wide a publicity as to the original misstatement.

4. It is true that the mischief caused by circulating an incorrect version of actual facts, especially when so framed as to support the argument of those who use such a weapon, seldom admits of any adequate reparation. No acknowledgment of such wrongful proceeding, particularly, as must be the case here, when not extracted till months subsequently, and, perhaps after close of the discussion affected thereby, can undo the mischief which it may have caused. Nevertheless, the right of the party misrepresented to require even that inadequate reparation is indisputable.

5. In the present case it must be conceded that this Government has been most completely misrepresented on the very point as to which it was easiest and most unfair to excite popular prejudice. To speak of this Government as selling the licences in question to the "highest bidder," is to imply that it was animated by a sordid motive of greed.

6. Such a statement is a very extraordinary misrepresentation of facts recorded in documents to which the committee refer and had access. All Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell's despatches in connection with the subject to the end of last April were before the committee, having been presented to the House of Lords last June.

7. It would be idle to repeat here the various details given in those despatches as to the anxiety of this Government to deal with a great public evil without reference to the question of revenue. The committee can refer to them, if they wish, but I am instructed to beg their special attention to paragraph 6 in Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell's despatch (No. 439) of the 30th of last January as follows :—

"Your Grace, however, is sufficiently aware that this Government has not been swayed by any desire of gain. On the contrary, I have never written a despatch in which I have not regretted that a policy justified by necessity should be encumbered with any pecuniary gain, because the latter affords to opponents of that policy an opportunity to impute to myself and my council motives the reverse of those by which we are animated. If mere addition of revenue had been our object, I should not have accepted 252,000 dols. as the annual licence fee instead of upwards of 360,000 dols., which was actually offered, nor would I have gradually reduced the original 260,000 dols. to 204,000 dols., at which it stands during the present month."

8. The above plain statement completely disproves the assertion of the committee that, since 1866, the licences "had been put up to sale and granted to the highest bidder;" and I am now further instructed to add that not merely had 360,000 dols. been declined, but that by consecutive reductions the licence fees had been lowered till a few weeks back they reached only 156,000 dols.

9. Even that reduction was less than his Excellency had hoped to effect, for as more fully explained in his recent financial statement to the Legislative Council, an extract from which is appended hereto, he was prepared (Par. 19) to make any reduction necessary to compensate the licensees for excluding all but Chinese from the play houses—a reform now most effectually carried out.

10. Reasons alluded to in the accompanying appendix,* and more fully explained in the Governor's communications to the Secretary of State, have produced for the moment the unexpected result of an increase of licence fees just as the frequenters of the licensed houses were diminished.

11. It is perhaps superfluous now to accumulate further evidence of the inaccuracy into which the Social Science Committee have fallen as to a matter of fact, when they represented this Government as selling the licence monopoly to "the highest bidder." The Governor, however, wishes to record at the same time his conviction of the excellent objects of the committee and of the general body which they represent. He attributes to them nothing more than an inadvertent although an indefensible mistake. It is, however, unfortunate that it occurred in reference to the very point on which it was most important that there should be no misrepresentation; and it cannot be doubted that this will be a source of regret to the committee, especially when they learn that at the very last meeting of the Legislative Council (vide Appendix, page 8) his Excellency distinctly refused to accept the suggestion of a leading unofficial member of that body and use the licence fees for the purpose of diminishing the local taxation of the colony.

12. The personal feelings and sympathies of his Excellency are entirely with the committee, and had he never visited China, nor been compelled by his duty to this community to deal on the spot with the unquestioned and real evils arising from the inordinate love of gambling of the native population here, and the absolute necessity for permitting, under regulated and comparatively safe conditions, a vent for a vice whose existence under worst conditions would have been the only result of Government inaction, it is very probable that, as a member of the Social Science Association, he might have subscribed, and applauded himself for subscribing a remonstrance of the kind addressed by the committee to the Secretary of State.

13. It is also quite possible under such circumstances that, like the committee, he might have regarded the policy pursued at Heligoland, Baden, and here, as identical. Gambling, he might have reflected, is permitted at all those places, a revenue results therefrom in each. Such a policy is indispensable at Baden and Heligoland, where unnecessarily and for the sake of money it encourages a vice which might otherwise die out or at least decline. Therefore he might perhaps have argued it is equally indefensible at Hong Kong. Nevertheless, no one here would pretend that there is the remotest chance of the vice of gambling being diminished by the suppression of the licensed houses, as would be the case at Baden. It would simply become indefinitely more extended than now. If it were not legalised so completely as to require no police interference, however little, there would inevitably be police corruption and consequent insecurity to the community. Unless, therefore, it be contended that similar consequences would follow the abolition of the monopoly at Heligoland there is no parallel between the two cases.

14. Again, only natives, who are practically beyond the reach of Government in such a matter, are here allowed to enter the licensed houses, and unless it be shown that Europeans are similarly excluded at Heligoland, and that gaming is only permitted there to an overwhelming majority of Orientals, or strangers coming and going in numbers exceeding 600,000 every year, and that is only allowed because they cannot otherwise be efficiently reached by the police no parallel is established between that place and Hong Kong.

15. Finally, to complete such parallel, it would be further necessary to show that the authorities at Heligoland had been exerting themselves as here from the first to keep down any revenue accruing from the licences beyond the amount necessary to work the system as a strictly police measure, a motive which it is not pretended to adduce in favour of licensing gaming in Europe.

16. It may therefore be as well to speak frankly, and declare at once that the only argument in the memorial of the committee which seems to his Excellency deserving notice is their suggestion (par. 9) that the authorities here have not as yet so exhausted the direct means at their disposal for the suppression of gambling as to justify a departure from the general principles of penal jurisprudence elsewhere. In illustration of this the committee state that the Chinese laws and the local ordinances against gambling had never been fairly put in execution, and especially that the Ordinance for improving the Chinese law of the tithings, hundreds, and frank pledges, which in China had always been found quite sufficient for the entire suppression of the practice, had never been put in force at all.

17. It is difficult to imagine where the committee got their information as to the entire suppression of gambling in Chinese cities by laws establishing tithings and hundreds, &c. Gambling has been now and then stopped in a particular place for a short time by high officials, who were guided sometimes by upright and sometimes by corrupt motives, such as that of raising the toll on an illegal luxury. This, however, has been done by extreme severity, such as razing houses to the ground, and torturing the landlords, measures to which, it is true, this Government has never yet restored. It is, however, totally without foundation to assert that gaming does not prevail most extensively and publicly in every city of the Empire, although nominally the law forbids it. This subject, however, has been sufficiently alluded to in the Governor's despatch of the 30th January last (paragraphs 3, 4 and 5), which the committee had before them when advancing the above extraordinary assertion.

18. At this moment the police system inaugurated by his Excellency amongst the Chinese—an institution quite apart from that of the colony—is working admirably, but the last thing which a resident here could dream of would be the handing over to any Chinese, whether in tithings, hundreds, or otherwise than as parties directly and openly interested therein like the licensees, the slightest control over their gambling brethren. The committee little know what a door they proposed to open to the vilest corruption and chicanery when they suggested the controlling of gambling at Hong Kong by Chinese tithings and Frank pledges.

19. His Excellency is unable to follow the reasoning of the committee in the other portions of par. 9 of their Memorial, because he can only state as the general result of the most determined efforts on the part of himself and all his subordinates that, whatever might have been the varying nature of his expectations from time to time, he has long been convinced of the impossibility of putting down gambling by any police which it is possible to procure here, or even with the best police in the world, if they could be procured, and were stationed six months here.

20. Sooner than recur to the infamous past his Excellency would prefer legalising gambling of all descriptions in the colony, which is the only alternative that he thinks practicable, but he has steadily declined to bear a part voluntarily in continuing the sham which the committee unwillingly recommend.

21. It is easy for the latter to say that the honest policy now followed detracts from "the free and noble institutions of the colony, which were one day to stand as a model to work the regeneration of the Chinese Empire." Do the committee seriously think that the shrewd natives of China respected this Government a whit more, either for its intelligence or its efficiency, when the laws of the colony merely rendered an irrepressible vice more dangerous and odious, whilst it brought to light the venality of the paid guardians of the law? Or do the committee recommend that public men, instead of seeking to effect the greatest amount of good and shape their policy by what is itself right and practically most beneficial, should rather aim at a style of ad captandum legislation, tinselled and varnished to catch the applause of vapid declaimers, but ill fitted to win the approval of earnest men, thoroughly understanding the question, and filled with a conscientious sense of their responsibility?

22. His Excellency has not the slightest doubt that this Government is really more respected now, especially since none but Chinese have been permitted to enter the licensed houses. The natives knew long ago that the Government was unable to suppress illegal gaming haunts. They know now that the Government is honest enough to confess it. They also know that crime in the colony is reduced more than a third, whilst larceny amongst servants, a crime generally traceable to gaming losses, is seventy-five per cent. less than it had been before the licences were issued.

23. The Governor further denies the existence of that "great scandal and discontent" at the Government policy, which the committee assert to prevail "here and on the coast of China." That policy was inaugurated with the unanimous approval of the Executive and Legislative Councils. It has been for a series of years a measure favoured by the local experience of each governor and his advisers. It has now been removed from the region of mere speculation and experiment, and proves that it is possible by its agency to suppress the gross evils inseparable from illegal gambling dens of iniquity. Moreover, the "scandal and discontent" are each comparatively limited, as well in duration as extent, for here they are chiefly but recently generated by the reaction of an agitation maintained in England by well meaning persons, ignorant of the circumstances which have produced and which justify that policy. Such ignorance is perhaps natural, but the comparisons of Hong Kong with Heligoland and Baden most forcibly and aptly illustrate the unfounded inferences to which it leads.

24. Therefore unless by direct command of Her Majesty's Government, with which the responsibility of the change would then rest, his Excellency is not prepared to abandon the important results already obtained for any mere sentimental objection, or because a revenue still irrepressibly arises from the policy, by which on the whole the greatest good can be effected. He would personally be delighted to get rid of that revenue if the committee would only make some practicable suggestion enabling him to do so without sacrificing the power which he now has over the licensees, and which as yet he sees no safe means of dispensing with.

25. In conclusion, I have to state that his Excellency is well aware he had no actual claim on the committee's attention, except to request their correction of a misstatement of a fact. Nevertheless, as a member of their association, he craves indulgence for the additional remarks which he has instructed me to make on a subject of some interest to a body established to discuss the most important social questions.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

J. Gardiner Austin, Colonial Secretary.

NORTH GERMANY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT).

Hamburg, December 1.

Now that the Prussian Consulates in China have been transformed into German Federal ones, and the salary of the Consul-General in China is transferred to the budget of the Confederation, it has become needful to place on the special Prussian estimates the sums required for the salary of the Envoy at Peking (who has hitherto received the salary of the Consul-General), and those of the other officials of the Embassy. These will now figure among the expenses of the Foreign Department, and of course are subject to the approbation and consent of the House of Representatives; but when the question is brought forward it will no doubt be a matter for the consideration of the members whether it is expedient to have in future a specifically Prussian Legation at Peking, in addition to the Federal German Consulates already existing in other parts of the Chinese dominions. The subject will probably give rise to an interesting debate, and meet with some opposition, as in the face of the serious deficit in the revenue, great economy is required to make things straight again, and there will be but little inclination to increase the burdens of the taxpayers in Prussia by the creation of new and superfluous appointments, the salaries of which might easily be shifted to the Federal Budget, and be borne by all the twenty-two States composing the North German Confederation in proportion to their population, the more so as the subjects of all of them are placed under the protection of the Ambassador, be he called Prussian or Federal. When the subject was discussed in the last session of the German Parliament, on the occasion of voting the estimates for the Federal budget, it appeared as if the Prussian Government wished to retain the Embassy in China as a Prussian establishment, and of course the members of the Federal Parliament made no opposition, being only too glad to escape being saddled with the payment of the salaries, whilst their fellow-subjects in China enjoyed the same protection as the Prussians. It is now a subject between the Prussian Government and their own Parliament, and simply a money question; for the appointment of the Ambassador and the patronage of the inferior offices is placed in both cases in the hands of the King of Prussia, either in his capacity of sovereign or as President of the North German Confederation.

The "Germanic Lloyd's," established last year for the classification of German shipping, have just published the first number of their International Register, with an explanation in German and English of the abbreviations and signs used, as well as the tables for the measurement of shipping and the tariff of charges. It contains a list of the 273 merchant vessels that have hitherto been classified.

A strange story is related in a Bremen local journal, announcing the return to that city of Captain Oldejan, of the Bremen ship Amalia, who had not been heard of for several years, and was supposed to be dead. It appears, however, that he lost his vessel in the China Seas, but managed with his crew to reach an island where they were kindly received and well treated; but the inhabitants would not allow them to leave, and it was only by means of a well-planned and cleverly executed stratagem that the captain was enabled to make his escape. What adds to the romance of the story is the domestic complication of affairs that ensues from his wife having mourned his loss and then married again; and the husband now finds her surrounded by a numerous progeny in addition to those he left behind.

Rear-Admiral Petz, with the ships forming the Austrian expedition to the Far East, has arrived safely at Gibraltar, and left that port on the 21st of November for Tangiers. What his object is in wasting precious time by a visit to Morocco is not stated.

By Royal Decree dated Stockholm, November 11, the King of Sweden and Norway has appointed Mr. William Robertson, of Ningpo, to be Vice-Consul at that port, under the Consulate-General at Shanghai.

COMMERCIAL.

Rice dull, and no sales reported except for consumption. Cassia Lignea in great request and stocks again nearly exhausted. A cargo (2,540 chests) has just arrived from China, but is not yet in the market. Flores again rising. Pepper and Cardamoms also higher. In teas there is no alteration. A sudden demand has sprung up for refined camphor, which has created a rise, and none is now to be had under 20 sch. bco. per lb. Nothing has been done in Spelter; the nominal quotations are 13.10 loco. and 13.7 for spring delivery.

SHIPPING.

Arrived.—Falcke, from Macao (Cassia Lignea).

Sailed.—Papa, to Shanghai; Edward, to Hong Kong; Tellus, to Akyab; Alice, to Macassar and Hong Kong; Wilhelm, to Bangkok; Honolulu, to Bangkok; J. H. Jessen, to Singapore and Penang; Maria Miles, to Hong Kong.

N.B. The Maria Miles came into collision with the Swedish brig Veranda, off the mouth of the Elbe, lost bowsprit and cutwater, and has returned to Hamburg to repair damages.

SHIPPING AT BREMERHAVEN.

Arrived.—Tordenskiold, for Rangoon (6,590 bags rice); E. Von Beaulieu, for Rangoon (4,016 bags rice, 500 chests cutch); Devonshire, for Bassein (11,425 bags rice); Sarah Newman, for Bassein (13,300 bags rice); Senator Iken, for Rangoon (18,000 bags rice); Moonbeam, for Rangoon (10,000 bags rice).

HOLLAND.

Rotterdam, December 1.

The discussions upon the Budget have progressed most rapidly; those of the departments of Foreign Affairs and Justice having already been approved of by a very large majority, and the remainder are expected to pass without delay. From the debates I gather some matters of interest for your readers in the Far East. In a former letter I wrote you that the Finance Minister had rejected the claims put forward by Dutch merchants in Japan for compensation for losses arising out of the late hostilities, in which the Allied Powers were engaged with Japan. They, however, were not content with this decision, and a second endeavour has been made, of course by their influence, in the Second Chamber of the States General to obtain a grant of compensation. The members dealing with the third chapter (Foreign Affairs), Messrs. Heydenryck, Pynappel, and Viruly Verbrugge, proposed as an amendment to grant a sum of fl.44,757.84 to the applicants. This amount was just half the sum proposed by the State Commission appointed to examine the claims. The merchants supported this amendment by an address, in which they again endeavoured to prove the justice of their claims. The motion gave rise to a very lengthened debate. Mr. Heydenryck, in order to elucidate the grounds of the proposal, referred to the large number of documents relative to the matter, and said that the State ought not to absorb the entire profit of the indemnification paid by the Japanese Government. Mr. de Casembroot gave his opinion that since the King had approved the rejection of these claims, the question was at an end. He was astonished at the proposal being made again, but now that it was done he also had an amendment to make, which was to grant a sum of 25,000fl. on behalf of the Royal Navy, especially for the division which took part in the said expedition, and which is now invalided. Mr. Gratana demonstrated that the traders ought to claim compensation of the Japanese Government. He opposed the grant, and preferred to support the amendment of Mr. de Casembroot. Mr. Godefroi also declared himself against the motion of Mr. Heydenryck. He said that there was no lawful ground upon which the State could be called upon to indemnify these traders. Mr. Van Voorthuyzen disapproved of the proposal, on the grounds that our traders had no more right than the English, French, and Americans, who had not put forward any claim of a similar nature. Mr. V. A. Linden said that the traders had acted against the advice of the English admiral, by transporting their merchandise to China, which involved costs, for which they now sought compensation. Several other members also took part in the discussion, and the result was the rejection of Mr. de Casembroot's motion by 46 against 18 votes, and that of Mr. Pynappel, C.S., by 58 against 11 votes, which I think will set the affair finally at rest.

Another question with regard to Japan was brought forward during the discussion of the budget. Mr. Van Delden said that Holland ought not to be represented there by an ambassador but by a consul-general. He finished his speech with a philippic against Mr. Polsbroek, which was replied to by Mr. de Casembroot, who demonstrated the necessity that a diplomatic mission should remain in Japan, and that the chef ought to bear the title of minister. After this reply the matter dropped. From the further discussions I only find that the Minister of Foreign Affairs again denied the existence of any foundation for the rumours which were set in circulation, respecting negotiations between Holland and France to establish a commercial and military convention. Such negotiations the Minister declared had never taken place, and he stated further that we were on the most friendly terms with all the Powers.

You will remember that the Finance Minister recently proposed to augment the import duty on tea, as a partial equivalent for the abolition of the stamp duty now levied on newspapers. Some Amsterdam and Rotterdam houses have addressed the Second Chamber of the States General, petitioning them to reject this proposal, because an increased duty would greatly prejudice the interests of the tea trade. correspondent of the Meddell Courant, who, I believe, is well informed, says that the Bill meets with much opposition in the sections where it is under examination. Indeed it seems, on the whole, not at all certain that we are to be relieved of this tax upon knowledge. The papers await the decision silently, no article having been published, except by the Handelsblad, in which the necessity is urged for a more liberal press law in India.

According to the request of the Java Committee, sub-committees have been formed here in order to promote the plan of erecting at Batavia a memorial to Jan Pieterszoon Koen, the founder of our government in India. I regret to state that this plan meets with more opposition than sympathy. The contributions—amongst them some from Dresden—amount to only a few, say two hundred guilders, whilst the opposition newspaper articles number certainly a dozen, and amongst them is one of Dr. Bosch, the friend of the Javanese, who thinks that the best memorial would be improved instruction.

Our legislation is certainly not quick, which is proved by the debates upon the Budget of Justice. Again we have to content ourselves with mere promises for the improvement of our laws, and even the abolition of capital punishment will not become a fait accompli in the immediate future. The Minister agrees with abolition, but there must be a punishment applied in lieu of the capital one, say imprisonment for life, or deportation. And the Minister inclines to the belief that for certain crimes capital punishment must be enforced.

The members of the First Chamber of the States General met some days ago. They are now occupied with the examination of the India budget for 1869. The section reporters are Messrs. De Lek de Clercq, Duymaer van Twist, Hengst, and Hartsen.

Some sensation has been caused by a pamphlet entitled "The Reform of the India Rule." The author, who seems to be an advanced Liberal, seeks to demonstrate that it is necessary for India to provide itself with the means to cover its own expenditure, and should be free to contract loans for eventual unfavourable balances. He hopes that in future India will be self-governed, with a fixed contribution to the treasury of the mother-country. Our Liberal papers are quite silent about this brochure. This is as inexplicable as the Liberal M.P. Mr. Van Eck declaring in the Second Chamber that we have a prescriptive right upon the batig slot, as a profit of the industrial undertaking by the State in India.

I regret to report the death of Mr. D. P. G. van Diggelen, ex-member of the Second Chamber, of Professor Millies, and of Dr. Simons, member of Parliament for Gorinchem. The Conservatives hope to fill the vacant seat by the ex-Premier, Mr. Heemskerk. Undoubtedly he has a great chance of being elected.

H.M. the Queen returned some days ago from her trip to England. The King has since departed for his seat het Loo, where he will pass a good part of the winter. Before his Majesty started he conferred the knighthood of the Netherlands Lion upon the Sultan of Goenong Tabor (Borneo).

On Dec. 5 there will be despatched, per Mary and Hillegonda, 175 soldiers, to reinforce the E.I. army. The supplementary troop, fixed for this year at 2,000 soldiers, will then be completed.

The loan on behalf of the company to construct a canal from Amsterdam to the North Sea, has been all subscribed. With the 6,500,000f. thus obtained the future of this company has been secured. Amsterdam will have at last its waterway, as well as Rotterdam; the last canal being nearly completed. This makes it doubly to be regretted that our town council has approved the proposal to levy an additional tax (50 per cent.) on the shipping, in order to raise the interest of the funds for making quays and docks on the bank of the Maas, opposite our town, and some other public works. I sincerely believe that results very disastrous to our trade will ensue, and perhaps it is already too late to avert them.

In your issue of the 18th Nov. you made some remarks upon my communication about the establishment of a regular line of steamers between Batavia and Australia. The following is a translation of the reply of the Colonial Minister:—"According to the last information there is at present no chance of a regular communication by steamers being established between Java and Australia. Therefore, endeavours are made to form a junction by a local steam line, to start from Batavia, corresponding with the P. and O. steamers running between Galle and Australia. Such a junction should be favoured if a station could be established on behalf of this service. We are endeavouring to obtain information thereabout, in view of a contract with the P. and O. Company respecting the line between Galle and Australia."

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

The demand for money at the Bank is fair, but the rate of discount remains unaltered. In the open market the demand is not active. Dutch Two-and-a-Half, 55¼; Three per Cents., 64; Four per Cents., 86; Netherlands Bank, 235; Trading Company, 126½; Netherlands Indian Trading Bank, 68; Java Bank, 161.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The Trading Company offered on the 25th ult. 77,811 b. Java, which were all sold. The fine yellow to brown Preanger were bought slightly under the valuation; but for the ordinary Java 1 to 1½c. was paid above the valuation, for Malang ½ to 1c., and for the white yellowish Preanger, Tjilatjap, and Java, ½ to 1½c. Since the auction good ordinary Java realises 36 to 36½c. The market closes very firm. The transactions include 4,500 b. Java, ex Louis Meyer, at 37½ to 39c.; 600 b. Java, ex Louis de Geer, and 505 b. ditto, ex Princes Amalia.

SUGAR (raw).—Before the Trading Company's auction the market was very animated, and all parcels offered found buyers. The transactions comprised 956 mats Bezoekie, ex Staatsraad van Ewyk, No. 13½, at 33¾f.; 817 mats Sourabaya, floating per Neckar, No. 14, at 32¼f.; 535 mats Bezoekie, ex Naqigator, No. 12¾, at 33f.; 791 mats Passaroeang, No 19½, at 35f.; 369 mats ditto, ex City of Perth, No. 14, at 33¼f.; 285 mats Pamansekan, ex Nederland and Oranje, No. 11¼; 423 mats Sourabaya, floating, ex City of Perth, No. 11½; 1424 mats Java, ex Finella, No. 12¾, at 13¼, at 34f. to 34¼f. The Trading Company's auction, at which 30,879 mats were offered, went off very favourably. The whole quantity was sold on average at 1¾f. above the September value. For export about 8,000 mats were sold. Since the auction the market has remained firm, but no transactions of importance have taken place, importers declining to operate without a further advance. The only parcel sold since the auction was 459 mats Sourabaya, floating, per Sourabaya Packet, No. 13¾, at 34¾f.

RICE.—The market is inanimate; 740 bales Java, ex Anna, were sold at 8¼f.; 1,623 b. do., ex Schoonderloo, at 8¾f.; 1,552 b. Indramajoe table, ex Hollandstrouw, at 10½f.; 10,600 b. Java, ex Argo, at 8½f. On the 2nd of November, there were floating for Europe from all the India harbours, 125,229 tons, against 71,289 tons in 1867.

TEA.—The market is very firm but dull, 450/16 ch. Souchon (China) were recently sold at secret prices. The 1,150/4 ch. Java offered in public auction on the 20th ult. were sold as follows:—328/4 Java Souchon 86c. to 88c.; 75 ch. Congo at 84c. to 85c.; 36 ch. do at 85c. to 86c.; 661 ch. Souchon at 86c. to 88c.; 50 ch. Pecco at 325c. to 327c.

TOBACCO.—In waiting for the forthcoming auctions, the market is rather inanimate. The transactions only include 569 b. Java DFS; 385 b. VR; 2,014 b. Java Havanna at 29½c.; 375 b. Java T 1867 at 24c. in average; 184 b. Kotta, ex Herald of the Morning, and 19 b. FT, ex Geertruida Maria. The stock of Java in Amsterdam is 15,125 b. Java. For Manila there is a good speculative demand.

DRUGS.—The Trading Company has sold in auction 4,047 chests Japan Wax; 600 chests A realised 57¾f. to 58½f.; 1,199 chests B 57¼f. to 57¾f.; 290 chests C 57f. to 60f.; 1,894 chests D 46½f. to 55½f.; 120 tubs Japan camphor sold at 90c. to 91c.; 64,000 ks. Gutta Percha: Borneo at 102c. to 190c.; 1,580 ks. Sumatra, at 133c. to 143c.; 164 mats Gummi Elasticum at 93½f.; 88 chests Gummi Damar, at 16f. to 50f. The market is for most articles very firm; camphor has been sold very regularly at advancing prices. Cassia Lignea is held for 82c. for E, but buyers decline to operate at that price. Gum Copal: in large demand for all descriptions. Gutta Percha: 42 pic., ex Anthony van Hoboken, were sold at secret prices. At the closing of the market from 2f. to 2½f. was paid above the auction price for Japan wax. Preserved ginger nominal, at 75c.

INDIGO.—There is a lively demand; about 300 ch. Java were sold at full prices, but at the closing of the market there is a slight decline.

KAPOK.—On the 25th November several parcels were offered in auction. A lot uncleaned was sold at 18c., and another cleaned at 60c., but the rest was bought in, the importers demanding too high prices.

RATTANS.—The market is very dull. The following parcels sold at prices that did not transpire:—100 pic., ex General Birch; 100 pic., per Schoonderloo; 120 pic., ex Fop Smit; and 120 pic., ex Nederland and Oranje.

HIDES.—The market is very dull. Only the following parcels have changed hands:—520 Passaroeang Rinder, ex General Birch; 876 Sourabaya do., ex Ida Elizabeth.

TIN (BANCA).—The market is in a somewhat better position. For the first few days after the departure of the last mail some transactions took place at 59¼f. for Banca, and 58½f. for Billiton; but since then 1,200 slabs Banca were sold at 59f. During the last day or two, however, 2,100 slabs Banca were sold at 59¼f., 700 slabs Billiton at 58½f., and 900 slabs do. floating at 58½f.

GALLS.—The Trading Company has offered at auction 644 ch. Japan Galls, of which 621 ch. were sold at 29½f. to 29¾f., and 23 ch. inferior quality at 26¼f. There is still a good demand at these prices.

SAPANWOOD.—A large parcel was sold at secret but very firm prices.

POSTSCRIPT.—Rice: 1,885 b. Java, ex Louis de Geer, sold at 8¾f. Tobacco: 374 b. Java PK/ Blitar, ex Navigator, changed hands. Hides: The several parcels imported ex Hollandstrouw sold at firm prices. Stocks: Coffee, total 443,700 b., against 370,900 b. on 1 Dec., 1867. Unsold Stock of the Trading Co. 194,700 b.; on warrants 200,700 b. Monetary and Commercial.

The report of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company, to be presented on the 8th instant, recommends a dividend of 3 per cent. for the half-year ending the 30th of September, making, with the distribution in June, 6 per cent. per annum. Last year there was a loss of £177,000, but this year there has been an available profit of £172,000. There has scarcely been time for the full development that may be expected from the extended mail services under the new contract, and the absence of specie freight operates for the present unfavourably; but the number of passengers was never larger than during the past twelve months, and the shipments of silk from Japan and China compare well with those of former years.

At the meeting of the London Chartered Bank of Australia on the 11th of December a dividend of 4 per cent. for the half-year (£40,000) is to be recommended, together with the appropriation of £5,000 to the reserve fund, leaving £11,885 to be carried forward.

On the 1st of next month the old and large firm of Bradbury, Greatorex, and Co. will be constituted as a limited joint-stock company, in 250 shares of £1,000 each, one-half of which will be taken by the existing partners, while the other half has been already subscribed. The house was founded fifty-three years ago, and the present change is in consequence of the recent decease of one of the firm and the desire of the senior partner to be relieved from the management of the business. Nothing is to be paid for goodwill, and, in addition to holding one half of the capital, the old partners will leave the sum of £50,000 for a given period as loan on debentures, at 5 per cent. per annum. The stock is to be taken by the company at a valuation approved by Mr. Humphrys, of the firm of Honey and Humphrys, and the open book debts, subject to an agreed deduction, while the debts covered by acceptances and otherwise will be guaranteed to the company at the prices at which they appear in the firm's balance-sheet.

The biddings for £200,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The whole amount was allotted to Calcutta, and the minimum price was fixed at 1s. 11d. on both Presidencies, a rise of 2 per cent. Tenders at 1s. 11⅛d. will receive about 80 per cent. The rate thus paid is about 1 per cent. higher than on the last occasion, and indicates a proportionate further increase in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

In consequence of the higher rate obtained for the India Government draughts bar silver has become more firm, and the limited amount in the market has been sold at 60⅝d. per ounce, an advance of ¼d. Mexican dollars have advanced ⅛d., to 59¼d., and are also very scarce.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S REPORT.

The twenty-eighth annual report of this company has been issued, in anticipation of the general meeting to be held on the 8th inst., and contains many features of interest:—

The report states that the company stood possessed on the 30th of September last of stock in ships, less the amounts deducted for depreciation, £2,975,466; also of freehold and leasehold property in England, and docks and premises at Calcutta, Bombay, Hong Kong, Singapore, and other stations, £309,005; stock of coals, naval and victualling stores, amounting to £636,677; also cash at bankers, bills, balances in agents' hands, and debts due to the company, £567,312; making the total assets £4,488,461. The total capital received to that date amounted to £3,500,000, and the liability in bills, &c., amounted to £654,144, making the total capital and liabilities £4,154,144, leaving a surplus of £334,317, being the balance at the credit of the reserve fund. The revenue account showed that the gross revenue of the company for the year ending the 30th of September last amounted to £2,485,966, and the expenditure, including interest on debentures, reserves, &c., to £2,313,817, leaving a net profit of £172,149. From this was deducted 6 per cent. dividend for the two past half-years, £159,000, leaving a balance of £13,149. The proprietors' underwriting account amounted for the year to £120,000, from which was deducted £72,000 for the wreck and loss of two ships, and £16,531 for contributions to general average—viz., of three ships, leaving a balance of £30,969. The general reserve fund amounted at present to £334,317. The company's fleet consisted of 67 ships, being in the aggregate 98,878 tons Customs' measurement, and 18,904-horse power. The six ships which, at the date of last report, were under charter to Government in connection with the Abyssinian Expedition, had all been paid off. The directors much regretted the loss of the Benares, on the night of the 23rd of May, on one of the islands known as the Fisherman's Group, while on her passage from Shanghai to Hong Kong. This disaster was happily unattended by any loss of life, and the mails and treasure, together with a large portion of the cargo, were saved. With regard to the postal service, the duty of delivering mails every week from Bombay, every two weeks from Calcutta, China, and Japan, and every four weeks from Australia, had been accomplished with remarkable punctuality. On two occasions only had there been a failure in the arrival of the combined mails in London on or before the appointed day; the delay in one case being the result of a trifling accident to the machinery of one of the steamers in the Red Sea, and in the other of a slight detention of the mails in France. The outward services had been carried out with corresponding regularity. The directors were not able to refer with equal satisfaction to the pecuniary side of the matter, inasmuch as the working of the contract for eight months left them in the position of having to claim from Government the full proportion of the £100,000 to which they were entitled when the fund accruing for dividend fell below the amount required for the payment of 6 per cent. on the capital employed. The directors were unable to recommend any payment to the proprietors from the underwriting account for the past year. The number of passengers by the company's steamers was never larger than during the last twelve months, and the shipment of silks from Japan and China compared favourably with those of former years. The directors recommended a dividend of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, for the six months ending the 30th of September last, making, with that declared in June, 6 per cent. per annum.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for the month and ten months ended the 31st October have been issued. The following shows the total declared value of the exports of British and Irish produce and manufactures exported during October in the last three years:—October, 1866, £16,895,894; October, 1867, £15,849,142; October, 1868, £16,876,898. This comparison tends to show that the general volume of the export trade is steady, the month's total being almost exactly the same as in October, 1866, and more, by upwards of a million, than the low total of October last year. The grounds for congratulation, however, are at best of only a qualified character, inasmuch as the comparison lies with years of panic and depression. It will be seen from the following statement of the exports for the first ten months of the last three years that we have not yet reached the totals of 1866 and 1867:—Ten months, 1866, £158,832,792; ten months, 1867, £153,051,639; ten months, 1868, £150,681,161. Compared with last year, the falling off is £2,370,478, and compared with 1866 it is as much as £8,151,631. A glance at the exports for the month of October shows, as the principal movements, a considerable increase in cotton piece goods (which figure for £4,810,501 in October last, against £4,373,261 last year, and £4,737,249 in 1866, while the increase in the quantities shipped is still more marked than in the value); an increase in the yarns of linens and woollens, but a falling off in manufactured goods of both those classes; a rather decided increase in iron and copper and a slight falling off in hardwares.

The present tables give the "computed real value" of the principal articles imported for September as under:—September, 1866, £19,571,761; September, 1867, £21,515,623; September, 1868, £23,386,646. It is somewhat singular to remark that this increased outlay in foreign and colonial produce arose through the simultaneous arrival of a large number of vessels laden with silk, sugar, tea, and wool. As regards these four articles the month's imports reached an aggregate beyond all precedent. It is reassuring, however, to observe that the aggregate value of our imports for the first three-quarters of the present year has not been excessive; the statement is annexed:—Nine months, 1866, £185,596,529; nine months, 1867, £171,199,569; nine months, 1868, £175,948,532.

For the month of October the present returns give only the quantities of imports, not the values. There was an increase in cotton, coffee, and sugar. After the previous month's heavy imports of wool, however, October showed a falling off, while as regards the two other important articles of silk and tea, our liabilities to the foreigner were of an average character.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

BULLION AND SPECIE.

The following is from Messrs. Pixley, Abell and Langley's report :—

GOLD.—Since our last circular the arrivals have been small. The demand for abroad still exists, but not to an extent to cause withdrawals of bars from the Bank; but sovereigns to the value of £137,000 have been taken for Nova Scotia, the Brazils, &c. The Massilia has taken £39,900 to India; and £14,100, in gold, was shipped to Alexandria, per P. and O. steamer of 29th Nov., from Marseilles.

SILVER.—The Massilia has taken £11,000 to Bombay. The price, which for the small amount brought by the Neva was fixed at 60⅞d. per oz. standard, has, owing to Indian purchases, improved to 60¾d. per oz. standard, and we consider the market as firm at that quotation.

MEXICAN DOLLARS.—The Dollars ex West India steamer were sold at 59½d. per oz.; the price has since improved to 59¼d. and 59⅜d., owing to purchases made for the China market. The Massilia has taken £25,000 to Hong Kong on Government account.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

During the interval the market has been quite as dull and depressed as previously. The quantity arrived has been large, and, although in many instances importers refuse to place their teas on the market, yet the quantity offering has been more than the buyers can absorb, and in many cases, especially in fair to good average red-leaf teas, it is impossible to get offers. Black-leaf kinds have been more saleable, but even in these prices have given way, and it is only the more desirable parcels which find a ready sale. The public sales of the 1st instant comprised 12,581 packages, of which 11,300 packages were sold, nearly the whole being without reserve.

CONGOUS.—Siftings have been in steady demand, at fully former prices. Broken-leaf kinds have also been firm. Fair to good common have sold at former prices. For the great bulk of the fair to good flavoury and Kaisow kinds quotations are quite nominal; it is only those with more than average quality which are taken in small parcels at irregular prices. Good quality Saryune kinds have sold at former prices. Fine to finest Kaisows show no material change. Pak Lin kinds have been very difficult of sale at lower prices. Common to fair black-leaf kinds have continued to sell at full prices; some of new import have sold from 1s. 1⅞d. to 1s. 3½d. per lb. Medium fair to good, from 1s. 5d. to 1s. 8d.; fine, from 1s. 9d. to 2s., showing fully 1d. per lb. decline. Fine to finest Oonfahs show no change. Moning and Wopak kinds remain neglected. There has been rather more done in New-made Cantons at the late advance. In Oolongs there is no new feature. Common to fair Souchongs show no alteration. Sales of good to fine have been pressed, and the result has been a further decline of 1d. to 2d. per lb. Flowery Pekoes have shown no change. Scented Teas: Capers have been taken to a fair extent at about previous prices. Orange Pekoes: Canton kinds show no material change. Foochow kinds: The medium qualities remain dull of sale, but the finer are in fair request at full prices. In Uncoloured Japans there is nothing new to report.

GREEN TEAS.—The amount of business has been moderate, the export demand having been less than for some time past, but there is not much alteration to notice in prices generally. Canton-made Teas remain much as before.

Messrs. Shepard, Harrison, and Rehden's Circular is as follows:—

The market has again been freely supplied from the heavy arrivals, 13,500,000 lbs. having come to hand since our last report of 18th ultimo. The elections unsettled business for a few days, but during the past week considerable transactions have taken place, chiefly in medium to good medium black leaf, at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8½d. per lb., the sales made during the last day or two showing 1d. per lb. reduction. The export trade to the Continent keeps very steady; to Canada and New York the transactions have been smaller than for some time past, advices from Canada being unfavourable. Telegraphic news to 28th October, from Hong Kong, gives the export from 1st June to date at 112,000,000 lbs., with estimates for the season of 130,000,000 lbs. to 135,000,000 lbs., which, with 10,000,000 lbs. from India, will amply meet our requirements. The deliveries, though most satisfactory, are not up to the total of last year, and stand as follows.—

	1868.	1867.
Home consumption for London from 1st Jan. to 30th Nov. ...	67,094,000	69,111,000
Export do. do. ...	29,000,000	29,870,000
Sent coastwise do. ...	32,000,000	32,540,000
	128,094,000	131,521,000

BLACK.—The dusty and broken leaf kinds sell readily at 8½d. to 10d per lb. as supplies have not been large; good leafy kinds have sold at 10½d. to 1s. per lb., in inferior to good flavoury at 1s. 1d. per lb. there has been less doing; for good flavoury to Kaisow kinds, and Kaisows up to finest, the value is more or less nominal, importers refusing bids, owing to the ruinous loss on cost. Imitation Kaisow made from Tayshan leaf: There has been more doing in good to medium at 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3½d. per lb., fine quality, strong malty burnt, would sell at full prices. Black leaf: Of good common little has been done till the last day or two, when several chops, ex late ships, of common flavoury Hohow kind have been offered, and business to a fair extent has been done at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 1½d. per lb., the good useful kinds of old season, once fine quality, have sold at 1s. 2d. per lb., new at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4½d. per lb., medium to good medium in large quantity at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8½d. per lb.; of fine and finest, dealers and shippers are well stocked, and though real good value is obtainable at 1s. 11d. to 2s. per lb., it has failed to bring buyers forward. Souchong: Sales have continued at a satisfactory range of prices, with a fair business to report, at 1s. 10d. per lb. for good medium quality, fine at 1s. 11d. to 2s. per lb., finest at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 3d. per lb., and extra fine up to 2s. 8d. per lb. Oolong: The low prices at which old seasons were obtainable has led to more inquiry, resulting in a recovery of 1d. to 1½d. per lb. with very little at the moment offering; for fine, a fair trade inquiry exists at 1s. 10d. to 2s. 1d. per lb. Scented Teas: Canton Orange Pekoe, of the long leaf kind, has been more saleable at the low range ruling. Capers: A large quantity of common is offering ex Dunmail, but so far few sales have transpired; clean quality and medium grades sell as offered at full rates, but for fine and finest the demand has been limited. Foochow Orange Pekoe, with the large quantity on offer, has been difficult of sale, even though easier rates have been accepted. Caper sells at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d. per lb.

GREEN.—The early part of the fortnight there was a good trade doing in medium to fine bright leaf Young Hyson and Gunpowder, at 1s. 6d. to 2s. 4d. per lb., mostly for shipment to New York; dealers have bought freely of Ping Sueys, of which some very desirable chops have come to hand; the prices paid average 3d. per lb. below last season for Gunpowder; but Young Hyson, with the competition by shippers for the grades to fine, rule rather higher, say ½d. to 1d. per lb., while finest Young Hyson is 1d. to 2d. per lb. lower, 2s. 5d. being an extreme quotation. Hyson, of all grades except the finest, is scarce, the kind most wanted being good to medium quality at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 11d. per lb. For Japan kinds, coloured or uncoloured, nothing worthy of note has transpired.

SILK.

Messrs. Kilburn, Kershaw and Co. report as follows:—There has been a general abstention from business throughout the month of November; all classes of silk have been neglected, both dealers and manufacturers being unwilling to add to their stocks at the present season of the year. Importers have kept quotations nominally the same by firmly holding their silk, and not listening to offers for any desirable parcels under the full prices current in October. In China silk the quantity of fine and good Tsatlees is becoming small, while the inferior descriptions are plentiful and uninquired for. Hainins are accumulating, and do not find buyers, owing to the difficulty there still exists in getting these silks thrown; the low descriptions especially are all but unsaleable; Kahing Taysaams, except for the very best, are out of favour, and are comparatively cheap. Canton silk has been arriving freely, and as the Tsatlee reels are now better than at the early period of the season, buyers have looked after them; and importers having shown a disposition to be current, business has been done at 20s. for ordinary good No. 1; Loongeongs are generally too coarse in size and not mellow in quality, the few good parcels which arrive sell, the bulk of medium and common is neglected. In Japan silk some few parcels of fine Maibash have been sold at full rates; but mixed and inferior parcels are neglected. In Bengal silk there is demand, at a price, for second class filatures and good clean native silk, which are very scarce; the low natives are quite neglected. The deliveries in November show a falling off, viz.: China, 2,653; Japan, 388; and Bengal, 597. Total, 3,638 bales.

COTTON.—During the interval which elapsed between the departure of last mail and the 30th ult., there was an extremely active demand in the Liverpool market both from the trade and from speculators, and prices gradually advanced until quotations exhibited a rise of ⅛d. to ¼d. above those given in our last issue. On the 1st inst., however, the strong speculative feeling which pervaded the market was greatly modified, and the demand from the trade being less active there was not so much buoyancy exhibited by holders, and sales were more freely made, without, however, materially affecting prices. Since the 1st inst. there has been a less active demand, and the speculative element has almost entirely disappeared. The supplies are larger, and on the part of holders there is certainly more anxiety to realise. The quotations "on the spot" are about ¼ lower. For arrival the more recent transactions have been at the following rates:—Dhollerah, fair new merchants, due, 8¼d.; Oomrawuttee, fair new merchants, due, 8¾d.; and Comta, fair new merchants, September sailing, 8d. The London market has, on the whole, followed the course of that at Liverpool, and has assumed a much quieter tone than had previously obtained.

COFFEE.—The market has been well supplied with all descriptions of Coffee, and prices have, on the whole, been fully maintained. Several parcels of Native East Indian and Native Ceylon were held back until the result of the Dutch sale of Java Coffee was known, and have all been sold at an advance of 1s. to 2s. At the Dutch sale 77,000 bags Java were sold, at an average advance of 1 cent; this result has added to the stability of the position of Native Ceylon in our market, and real good ordinary may now be quoted at 51s. to 52s., and bold at 60s. to 61s. The better qualities of Plantation Ceylon are more inquired for, the home trade not being well supplied, and a few parcels of superior quality have sold at higher prices; common Plantation remains steady. At the auctions of the 3rd inst. there appeared less disposition to buy except the medium and finer qualities of Plantation Ceylon, which realised former prices. The Native Ceylon and the commoner descriptions of Plantation were for the most part withdrawn no offers being made at current rates, and holders firmly refusing any concession.

COIR GOODS.—The supply of Yarn brought forward has been rather small, but, nevertheless, the demand was not active, and the greater part sold at rather lower prices. Rope and Fibre sold slowly at steady prices. Of 72 tons Ceylon Yarn about 54 tons sold, common to good common at £28 to £30, middling to good midddlig £33 10s. to £36 15s. Of 19 tons Ceylon Fibre 4 tons good mattress sold at £26.

CUTCH.—There has been a steady market since our last report, and of 1,425 packages Pegue at the auctions about half was sold at 28s. to 29s. 6d. per cwt. for fair and fine qualities.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—The market has remained extremely dull throughout the interval. Prices are 20s. per ton lower, but the decline has not been attended with any improvement in the demand. About 68 casks Ceylon have been sold since our last report.

CAMPHOR.—The improvement noticed in our last remained without check, and a large business was done in both China and Japan, until within the past few days, at £7 10s. to £7 15s. per cwt. The market has, however, again become dull, and the trade limited at the lower quotations.

GALLS.—The market for China is dull, and rates have declined. There is a great scarcity of Japan descriptions, and 50s. per cwt. has been offered, but there is none on the market. At the public sales 850 cases China have been offered, of which about two-thirds sold at 48s. to 49s. per cwt. for good qualities.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Generally rather cheaper; 42 cases Sumatra at auction mostly sold at £9 10s. per cwt. for good second quality; and £4 12s. 6d. to £4 15s. middling third. Copal: Of 160 cases Manila at auction half sold at 31s. per cwt. for fair, being cheaper. Damar flat; 128 boxes at auction, all retired. Gamboge: A small recent arrival, 7 boxes, sold firmly at auction, at £20 5s. to £21 per cwt.

GAMBIER.—The market since our last report has been steady, but quiet. Of 2,243 baskets at auction half sold at 16s. 9d. to 17s. per cwt. for middling; of 447 baskets Cubes a few only were placed at 21s. for ordinary blocky.

HIDES.—The sales during the past month comprise 4,448 buffalo hides at about last month's rates. Best selling at 5⅜d. to 6½d. per lb., a small parcel of exceptionally heavy average bringing 7¼d. per lb.; seconds, 4¾d. to 6d. per lb.; light, 6d. to 6¾d. per lb.

JAPAN WAX.—The rates have slightly declined, the offers at public sales having been 112 boxes, of which 56 boxes fine saucers realised £5 7s. 6d. per cwt.

MANILA HEMP.—The demand has considerably improved, and a large business has been done at a slight advance on the rates current at the date of our last report. By private contract about 1,200 bales have changed hands at steady prices, fair to good fair roping at £47 10s. to £48 10s.; at auction of 791 bales offered 270 bales sold at £49, fourth to first-class damaged £41 10s. to £48 15s., the remainder of the sound bought in at £48 10s. to £49 10s. The stock on the 1st inst. was 1,277 tons, against 281 tons at the corresponding date last year.

PLUMBAGO.—The business in Ceylon has been of fair extent, and a further advance has, in some instances, been effected. The public sales have comprised 484 barrels at 35s. to 43s. 6d. per cwt. for fair and fine lump, and 20s. to 21s. 6d. for dust.

PEPPER.—Black: The market has again had an upward tendency, a further advance of ⅛d. to ¼d. per lb. having been established. Of 2,941 bags Singapore at auction a few only quitted at 3⅜d. per lb.; and of 1,931 bags Penang three fourths sold at 3⅜d. for good, with Trang at 3¼d. to 3⅜d.; a corresponding advance also obtained privately, but at the close the demand is not animated. White: Again ¼d. per lb. higher, with much inquiry; 844 bags Singapore at auction mostly sold at 5⅞d. per lb. for good bold, and 5⅛d. to 5⅜d. middling to fair; 74 bags Penang retired; large transactions privately at 5¼d. to 5⅜d.

RICE.—A telegram to the effect that the cyclone at Akyab has greatly damaged the rice crop has had no influence on this market, which has been quiet throughout the interval. The quantity offered at auction has not been large, and the portion sold went at about previous quotations. A cargo of 720 tons Necranzie is reported to have been sold for arrival, and about 1,500 tons of new rice, spring shipment, have been taken at 10s. 3d., 10s. 6d., or 10s. 9d. for Necranzie, Bassein, or Rangoon. The demand for cleaned from the home trade has not been active, but a fair amount of business has been done at late rates for exportation.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: A further advance of 3d. to 4d. per lb. has been established, and 827 bales Ceylon sold at auction, first quality at 3s. 2d. to 4s., second 3s. to 3s. 6d., third 2s. 6d. to 3s. 3d., and fourth 1s. 10d. to 2s. 9d. Cinnamon Chips: 189 bags Ceylon chiefly sold, low thick bark at 7d., ordinary 8d. to 8½d., fair 10½d. Mace: The only sales have been 1 case middling Penang at 2s. 3d., and 1 case ordinary Singapore at 1s. 9d. per lb. Nutmegs: The market is quieter; but prices are maintained. At public sales 52 cases Penang, chiefly import 1861, sold at previous rates, 66 nuts to the lb. at 3s. 8d., 75's at 2s. 4d., 82 to 80's at 2s., 84 and 85's at 1s. 10d., 90's at 1s. 8d., 95's at 1s. 6d., 116 to 108's at 1s. 4d. to 1s. 5d., 175 to 133's at 1s. to 1s. 2d. Two cases limed Singapore sold at 1s. 1d., 12 barrels, 95's, indirect import, bought in at 1s. 8d.

SUGAR.—At one time during the interval there was a slight improvement in the demand, but it proved to be merely temporary, and the market is again extremely dull, prices, however, remaining steady. At the public sales 800 bags brown Penang (duty 8s.) have been bought in at 31s.; 6,478 bags Muscovado Manila, Iloilo, sold—common 26s. 9d., good 27s. 9d. to 28s., superior (duty 9s. 7d.) 30s. 6d. to 32s. 6d., and 597 bags brown Java (duty 8s.) withdrawn at 31s. By private contract 8,500 bags unclayed Manila (Zebu) have been sold at 27s. to 27s. 6d.

TIN.—There has been a fairly active business doing in Straits during the interval, quotations being steadily maintained throughout at £100 10s. to £101 10s. per ton cash, and £102 10s. three months' prompt, which are still the current rates. At the corresponding date last year the quotation for Straits was £90, and in 1866 £81 10s. The stock of Straits Tin in London is estimated at 1,595 tons, against 2,280 tons in 1867, and the quantity afloat for Europe is 559 tons, against 1,304 tons in 1867.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

—o—

METALS.

The following is from Messrs. French and Smith's Circular:—

Since our last monthly price current transactions in metals have not been of an important character. Prices are generally firm, and in some instances show signs of advancing.

IRON of all descriptions maintains its value, and makers are generall well supplied with orders.

COPPER is fairly in demand for home consumption and export, but prices do not improve. Chili Bars have fluctuated between £68 and £70. Australian sorts have not been much inquired for. Burra and Wallaroo, £79 10s.; Bremer, £77; English Tough, £73 to £74; India Sheets £78 to £79.

TIN PLATES are more in demand, and higher quotations made. It is probable some still further advance may be obtained. The shipments in November, London and Liverpool, were 112,000 boxes, against 97,000 in 1867.

LEAD.—The early part of the month was quiet; the past week it has however, been more active, and prices stiffening. By the Board of Trade returns, January to October, it will be seen that the exports this year are in excess of the imports, which is a new feature in the trade.

SPELTER unchanged. The stock here, 30th Nov., 1,663 tons, against 2,739 tons at the same time last year.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

In shipping yarns the amount of business effected has not been large, in consequence of the higher prices spinners have been obliged to demand as a protection against a rising cotton market. The market closes strong, but there is a good deal of indisposition on the part of shippers to purchase. For home trade yarns the market has been steady, with about an average business. Sellers are asking an advance of about ¼d. per lb., but are not very successful in obtaining it. The advance, where pressed, checks business. We have still an inactive market to report for cloth. There was a slight increase of inquiry on the 2nd inst., but it led to little actual business. The quotations of cotton and yarn having advanced, manufacturers have had to ask higher rates for cloth, but there seems to be very little disposition to do business, even at previous rates. In the neighbourhood of Preston and Blackburn manufacturers are at length taking the only means likely to improve the present position of the trade, by lessening production.

Mr. Sam Mendel's Monthly Circular contains the following:—

The past month has been characterised by a great want of animation, and transactions have been unimportant in themselves, but collectively sufficient to prevent an accumulation of stocks. There is, however, but little actual fluctuation in values to report, though, were it not for the stronger and more active demand for cotton at Liverpool, it is likely that depression would have shown itself to a more marked extent. Producers find themselves quite unable to follow the upward movements in the raw material, and are influenced by them so far only that they show more or less readiness to do business at the current rates offered. Short-time working has been attempted in isolated instances, but the system has not been sufficiently organised to show beneficial results, and there is, generally speaking, a return to full time. Consumption has, however, no doubt, been considerably curtailed, and the firm attitude of holders of the raw material fails to meet with response from spinners and manufacturers. The expected relief from an active home trade demand is wanting, and we continue to have discouraging news from India, as might be looked for in face of the still excessive exports—the evil effects of which have been aggravated by a serious and widespread drought. Shippers to China are beginning to view with mistrust the large exportations to that quarter of superabundant stocks from the Indian markets, and are consequently restricting operations. Intelligence from America as to supplies of cotton is still vague and unreliable, and our market may be described, at the present moment, as being more supported by the position of the Liverpool market than by that of our actual local trade. A fair number of orders have, however, been given out over the past week or so. The month concludes with a greater readiness to accept current offers, and we have just a barely steady, but far from active market, with a tendency to increased stocks.

YARN.—Business to a fair extent has been transacted during the month, but the higher rates demanded by spinners, in view of the stronger position of the raw material, have to some extent served to keep operation in check. The principal business has been in Water Twist, 16-24s, 28-32s, for China and Japan. For the markets of India the inquiry has been unimportant. For home consumption manufactures buyers continue to operate with caution. The uncertainty of the future in cotton has tended to produce a quieter tone during the past few days, and at the close we have a far from active, but steady market.

GREY SHIRTINGS.—Transactions have not been individually large, though sufficient to prevent stocks increasing on manufacturers' hands. The descriptions in most favour have been 39 in. of good and approved qualities, which are held with considerable firmness. 45 in. have met with attention.

MADDAPOLLAMS.—A fair inquiry for these goods has been sustained throughout the month. This has been readily met by manufacturers, and stocks have in consequence been kept down to a moderate level.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth freights to the Eastern Ports are dull, arrivals having been numerous; there is but little doing in coal freights from the Northern out ports.

Current rates of freight for vessels on the berth:—To Yokohama: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Nagasaki: 45s. weight, 50s. meast. To Shanghai: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Hong Kong: 40s. weight, 30s. meast. To Singapore: 30s. weight or meast. To Penang: 30s. weight of meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 35s. meast. At New York to China: $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear on Tyne per keel.—For Yokohama, £45. For Shanghai: £45. For Hong Kong: £36. For Singapore: £27. For Galle: £24. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton.—For Yokohama, £2 5s. For Shanghai: £2 8s. For Hong Kong: £1 17s. 6d. For Manila: £1 15s. For Singapore: £1 7s. For Galle: £1 2s. 6d.

CASUALTIES.

The Corin, Gray, from Cardiff to Hong Kong, put into Falmouth, Dec. 1, to stop a leak.

Advices from Amsterdam, dated Nov. 30, state that the Margarita (Spanish), de Olano, from Penarth to Manila, with coals, had been abandoned in a sinking state, in lat. 43 S., lon. 41 E.; 19 persons lost, remainder of crew saved, and landed at Batavia by the Jannetjee.

According to intelligence received from Rotterdam, dated Dec. 1, the Dordrecht (Dutch ship), Verhoeven, from Batavia, got on shore on the Banjaard, Nov. 30, and would probably become a total wreck; she had 12 feet of water in her hold, and had thrown overboard 800 bags coffee; part of the cargo would be transhipped into craft; crew and passengers saved.

The Continental, Hall, which sailed from Cardiff, Nov. 14, for Singapore, and arrived off Queenstown, leaky, sailed, after repairing, but has again put back to Queenstown, reported leaky. Advices from Lisbon, dated Nov. 28, state that the Australian, Sprague, from Newport to Singapore, which put in there, leaky, Nov. 23, was discharging.

The Dordrecht, Verhoeven, from Batavia, reported ashore, Nov. 30, on the Banjaard, has become a total wreck; 700 bags of coffee and some rigging have been landed at Brouwershaven, and 300 bags of coffee at Zierikzee.

MISCELLANEOUS.

At TABLE BAY, Oct. 27, Sarthe (H.T.F.M.), from Saigon, for Cherbourg; at Port Elizabeth, Oct. 24, Rorsfare, sailed for Batavia.

LAUNCHES.

On the 2nd inst. Messrs. Laurence Hill and Co., Inch Works, Port Glasgow-road, launced an iron clipper vessel of about 300 tons register, named the Jerfalcon. She has been built under special survey of Lloyd's, to class A A1, for Messrs J. M. Crawford and Fox, Greenock, for the East India trade, is rigged as a three-masted schooner, and has been fitted with all the most recent improvements. She will be commanded by Captain Alexander Fox, one of the owners. She was towed direct to Glasgow to load to load for Penang.

There was launched from the west shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Connell and Co., at Overnewton, Glasgow, also on the 2nd inst., a finely-modelled composite ship of 1,100 tons, built to class A A 16 years at Lloyd's. She has been built for James Findlay, Esq., of Langlands, Kilbirnie, especially for the tea trade, and was named the Windhover, when moving off, by Mrs. Findlay. The Windhover is a similarly modelled ship to the Spindrift, and will be despatched with the first ships from Foochow next season.

Messrs. Randolph, Elder, and Co. have launched from their shipbuilding yard at Fairfield, Glasgow, the Columbus, a composite sailing ship of 825 tons builders' measurement, and of the following dimensions:—Length over all, 199 feet; breadth, 31 feet; and depth (moulded), 19 feet 7 inches. The Columbus has been built to the order of Messrs. John Lidgett and Sons, of London, and is intended to trade to the East.

A new Inman liner, the City of Brooklyn, has been launched on the Clyde, from the building yard of Messrs. Todd and M'Gregor, at Partick. Her dimensions are:—Length over all, 370 feet; breadth, 42 feet; depth, 28½ feet; and she is 3,000 tons builders' measurement. She is to be propelled by horizontal direct-acting surface condensing engines, of 450 nominal horse power, but working up to 2,000. She will have very extensive passenger accommodation, and her internal arrangements for that purpose, and generally, will resemble those of the other first-class ships of the company she belongs to. The launch, which was witnessed by crowds of spectators on both sides of the river, and also by a select company within the building-yard, was completely successful.

LOSS OF THE "BENARES."

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The loss of the Benares is now an old affair, and might with advantage be consigned to oblivion but for the inaccurate statements which are now and again made in referenes to it; such are those which appear in your issue of the 16th inst., under the authority of Captain McCulloch, and called forth, it would appear, by a letter signed "A Passenger," in your issue of the 5th of October, which I have only just seen for the first time.

I am sorry to be obliged to deny the accuracy of Captain McCulloch's defence, and to sustain "A Passenger's" assertions in every particular. There was no officer sent away in the gig, and of its crew only three Chinamen were found there when the boat was shoved off from the steamer; some of the passengers, accordingly, had to do the duty of the absentees, and did it effectively and cheerfully. The passengers did not take the matter into their own hands, but were, myself included, ordered into the gig by Captain McCulloch, and the gig was by no means the first boat to leave the steamer's side, as the captain would imply, for one of the cutters had been previously filled, also by the captain's orders, with the Chinese passengers. I do not wish to go into the question of whether the gig, the smallest boat but one of the ship, and manned as described, was or was not a proper conveyance to put the European passengers into, but most assuredly "there was no compass, not an atom of biscuit nor a drop of water in her." Captain McCulloch states, in explanation, that she was not provisioned, because intended to remain alongside, and that the passengers were only put into her as a precaution in case she should heel over.

It is, nevertheless, a fact that every man and officer were sent out of the steamer as soon after the passengers as they possibly could be, for the simple reason that she was expected every moment to capsize, and what then, let me ask, would have become of the provisions so carefully reserved for and from us? Moreover, not only the gig, but all the boats, were undoubtedly intended to keep on and off close to the wreck, but we well know that in the darkness of night, and in a strong current, three were carried out to sea, and had they not, in God's mercy, been picked up by the steamer China, about eight hours afterwards, I shudder to think of the sufferings their crews would have been subjected to from the same neglect to provision the boats which "A Passenger" has so justly commented on in the gig's case.

The boat stations on board the P. and O. steamers are well organised, no doubt, and on occasions, as in the Singapore's case, have, even with a native crew, worked remarkably well; but at any time, and more especially at night, and in a critical position, they require to be directed with energy and decision. Suffice it to say that on board the Benares, on the night of the 23rd of May, 1868, they proved anything but a success.

The injudicious and incorrect denial by Captain McCulloch of the statements of "A Passenger" alone prompts me thus to address you.—I remain, Sir, your obedient servant, ANOTHER PASSENGER.

November 28, 1868.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Hereditary predisposition, exposure to cold, and errors of diet subject thousands to sickness who fear to seek medical aid, because their means are too narrow to discharge its heavy cost. Rheumatic and gouty affections soon yield to the soothing influence of Holloway's medicaments. After fomentation the Ointment only requires to be well rubbed on the part affected to lessen the inflammation, and to subdue the throbbing pain. It leaves behind neither swelling, stiffness, nor lameness. By carefully attending to the instructions folded round Holloway's remedies, recent pains in muscles, joints, and sinews may be radically overcome, and mobility be restored in chronic cases where rigidity had resulted.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WM. CLOUGHTON, Managing Director.

New Harbour, Singapore, June, 1868.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE MAILS, &c.

The next inward mail will be that which left Hong Kong Nov. 17, and passed Galle Dec. 1; it will be due here on the 28th inst.

The outward English and French mails leave this month almost simultaneously, on the 17th and 18th; a similar collision will not, however, occur again, as the new system under which the French mails will be made up on a fixed day of the week will positively come into operation next month, the first departure from London being Thursday, Jan. 21.

No later telegrams have been received since the date of our last issue; those in advance of the mail of Hong Kong, Dec. 1, may be looked for about the 19th.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

From this port our advices by the present mail extend to the 22nd of October. The outward mails of the 18th and 28th of August were received on the 12th and 19th of October respectively. According to the Japan Times, the Dupleix, French mail steamer, on her homeward voyage took over 3,000 boxes of silkworms' eggs, while the Sunda, the special P. and O. steamer, got somewhat less, the weather being unfavourable for the shipment of such delicate cargo at the time of her departure.

The following summary of news is from the Japan Times:—

We announced the departure of H.M.S. Rattler on the 9th September on a mysterious mission to the North, whose object was supposed to be a scrutiny of the Russian stations in certain islands north of Japan. We have now to discharge the painful duty of recording the total loss of this fine ship. She struck early in the morning of the 24th September on an unknown reef in a bay, of which one of the points is Cape Nosseyab, the N.W. point of Yesso. The weather was quite calm, and the water was perfectly smooth; had there been any breeze, in fact, the accident would not have occurred, as breakers would have been visible. The ship was under slow steam, with leads going in both chains, and giving nine or ten fathoms, when suddenly she passed into sharp, wall-like ridges of rock, and remained fast. Every effort was made to get her off, without avail, and the guns, crew and passengers, Messrs. Adams and Satow, of the British Legation, were accordingly landed, with a large portion of the stores. The Japanese behaved extremely well, and did all they could for sixteen days to assist the shipwrecked crew. News having reached Hakodate, H.I.M.S. Dupleix immediately started to the rescue, and on the afternoon of the 17th Oct. came into port here, with all safe on board. Nothing could possibly exceed the kindness and attention of Captain Du Petit Thouars, his officers and crew, the Dupleix for the time being placed so entirely at the disposal of his guests as to be almost virtually a British ship. The Ocean went out on the 15th, unfortunately, to look for the Rattler's people; of course her errand is a bootless one, but the cruise will do the ship no harm, and it is to be hoped that it will be of service to her popular commander, Captain Stanhope, who has lately been seriously ill.

We are beginning to hope, with some show of reason, for a change for the better in politics here. The Mikado attained the period of his majority on the 13th, so that one excuse for discord—the presence of a minor on the throne and consequent government by a regency—is removed. Foreign Powers, at all events, may have the Sovereign of Japan for their ally, if they seek alliance with this country, and longer delay in recognising a potentate whose authority is universally acknowledged by all classes of Japanese becomes inexcusable, and harmful alike to the interests of this country and to those of foreign trade. The men who are resisting his authority have always been rebels, but they have attempted to justify their rebellion by alleging his youth, and that his edicts have been given his own but those of the Southern chiefs who surround h[illegible] this excuse is not fairly admissible, even in the case of a minor, [illegible] it has been occasionally admitted; but the faintest show of right is taken away from the Northern party now that the period of minority is terminated, and the Mikado may justly claim from all the Western nations trading with Japan full recognition, and full observance, too, of the Treaties under which that trade is carried on. The clause (Article XIV. in the British Treaty) which forbids the sale of munitions of war to any customer but the Government, ought at once to be strictly put in force. Success in war has become now so much a question of superiority of weapons, that if the Mikado could keep ironclad ships and quick-loading rifles out of the rebels' hands, and preserve the monopoly in them for his own troops, he might put down the rebellion in a few months, unaided by foreign material force, and commence the work which his advisers want him to do, but which can only be done during peace. The question is daily drawing nearer and nearer to an open statement, "Is it not England's duty to her trade to give the Mikado the same assistance she gave to the Emperor of China?"—but before we send for Colonel Gordon it would be well, perhaps, to see whether the development of this country's resources and our own trade, both impossible in the present state of war, may not be placed within the reach of the legal authorities of the country, by simply compelling our traders to conform to the treaties and trade regulations. So long as foreign merchants are encouraged and supported by the vacillating and contradictory policy of the foreign representative as a body, who seem prepared to acknowledge the Mikado in one port and any rebel Daimio in another who may chance to be in temporary possession of it, so long will foreign merchants sell ships, arms, powder, and shot to all parties with true tradal impartiality.

Fortunately, time is working on the right side, and every day strengthens, consolidates, and extends the Mikado's power and the moral influence of his government, while the Northern party, such as it is, is breaking up. The news of the fall of Nee-e-gata, which we gave a month or five weeks ago, is confirmed, while on the other hand details which have reached us respecting the move of the Tokugawa admiral, reported in our last, show us that it is less menacing to the Imperial power than was at first supposed. The house of Tokugawa is divided against itself. The circular addressed to the Foreign Ministers did not come from any competent representative of the clan, but from the Admiral himself, and his leaving Yedo with the Kai-yo-mar and the rest of the fleet was an independent, unauthorised step of his own. The chief of the house is Yoshihisa, as our readers are aware, and the legal head of the party left in Yedo was Kame-no-ski, a relative of his. Yoshihisa, true to the line he wisely and loyally took last February, has remained quietly in Tsurunga, in complete submission to the Mikado's orders, and now Kame-no-ski, with the most influential men of the clan, have joined him there. They left in the New York, on the 8th inst., and we have heard of their having landed there in safety. Tsurunga is the ancient seat of the house whence Iyeyas came in 1568, a baron in the train of the Daimio Imagawa. How Iyeyas deserted after Imagawa's defeat by Hideyoshi (the great Taiko-sama) and attached himself to that chief, how his long and valuable service to Hideyoshi was afterwards requited by the gift of the eight provinces, with Yedo for a capital, and how he ultimately usurped supreme power in self—these are all matters of history. His descendant, Yoshihisa, is now ordered back to the original seat of the family, but with a large revenue and the position of a great Prince, instead of that of an inferior baron, and he has wisely accepted the change of fortune. What the admiral can do in his career as a sea-king remains to be seen; there is little to prevent Yoshihisa from rising to power in the councils of a Mikado ruling as chief of a constitutional monarchy of the European type.

Nee-e-gata having been taken, the northern rebels have fallen back from all parts of the west coast. A long list of powerful Daimios is named as under orders to take the field against them, but it is doubtful whether much will be done until the spring. Meanwhile, the advantage decidedly remains with the Mikado's troops. A great disaster has happened to his navy, however, for we have to record, we are sorry to say, the loss of four of his ships, which have all been wrecked somewhere on the West Coast. The Fusiyama, too, the American corvette sold to the Japanese by General Pruyn, suffered greatly during the same gale. This news comes to us from a thoroughly reliable source. It proves conclusively the wisdom of the Mikado taking competent foreign officers into his pay, and conversely the extreme folly of the recent neglect of the English naval mission, which has compelled its resignation. Still, on the whole, the summer campaign has resulted favourably for the Imperial arms. We yet persist in advising a compromise as the best and quickest solution of the difficulties now existing. Though we have no doubt of the ultimate victory of the Mikako's Government, still it may be long deferred, and may cost so much blood and treasure as to make it too costly. To procure such a compromise should be the aim of all friends to Japan and foreign trade.

We have nothing of much moment to record respecting commercial matters. A Chamber of Commerce has been established at Hiogo, which will, we trust, be affiliated with our own, and, under the able presidency of Mr. A. O. Gay, and with the strong committee which has been appointed to hold office until January 1st, 1870, will, we have no doubt, prove of great usefulness to the growing tradal interests there. The following gentlemen compose the ruling body:—Messrs. Gay (chairman), Kenneth, McKenzie, St. John, Browne, Korthals, and Blydenburgh. Trade is decidedly improving at these new ports, and a powerful dredging machine having been procured, an attempt will probably be soon made to clear the bar, when the value of Osaka as a port of entry will appear. From the North we hear of Mr. Erasmus Gower's successful work at the coal mines of Iwanai. He has nearly two miles of road already constructed to carry the coal down to the sea, and has just taken up from Hakodadi his rails and rolling stock; he has found coal of good quality in thick seams, and there is no doubt of the speedy development of this part, at least, of the resources of Japan.

Every one is complaining that our new municipal director is as incapable as the old one. So much for universal suffrage; it produces results as bad as despotism, and so extremes ever meet. We want, of course, self-government by representatives of land-renters and householders, and until we get such a system, Yokohama will be always deteriorating in every particular in which a town ought to improve. We have no pavement, no drains, no police, no light, no order, decency or comfort of any sort; yet we pay the Japanese Government many thousand pounds a-year on the express condition that we are to have all these in exchange. But the subject is one of which we are utterly weary, and in which no one outside of Yokohama can have any interest, so we need not pursue it.

THE WRECK OF THE "RATTLER."

The Rattler, sloop, seventeen guns, 952 tons, left Yokohama on the 9th September last, having on board Messrs. Adams and Satow, of the British Legation. For some years Russia has been making gradual encroachments on the Island of Saghalien, north of the Japanese Islands proper, to which we have more than once drawn attention in these columns. Lately, rumours reached Yokohama that an attempt was making to encroach still further, into the Island of Yesso, in fact, and to establish or dissipate these reports was the object of the Rattler's cruise. They turn out to have been without foundation, but a heavy price has been paid for the information.

The Rattler touched at Hakodadi, took in coal and wood and passed up along the west coast of Yesso. The first point at which she looked in was Iwanai, a small port within a couple of miles of which is a coal mine, worked for the Japanese Government by an English engineer, Mr. Erasmus Gower. Passing Strogonoff Bay, into which falls a considerable river, navigable for several miles, the Rattler proceeded into the Straits of La Perouse, between Saghalien and Yesso, and entered Romanzoff Bay, in which is situated the village of Soya, a point particularly requiring examination. Soya is the extreme Japanese station on the Island of Yesso, whence travellers pass across to Saghalien, a distance of forty to fifty miles. Romanzoff Bay has for its north-west point Cape Nosseyab, the extreme north-west point of Japan, the other horn being Cape Soya. On entering this bay in the early dawn of the 24th September everything lay fair and calm before the ship, not a breath of wind ruffled the surface of the sea, and the lead gave nine to ten fathoms in both chains as she slowly and cautiously felt her way in. Suddenly, a few minutes before six—when the leadsman had just given eight fathoms, and was swinging for another cast, she struck. It was soon seen that she was in an almost hopeless guet a pens. Under the deceptive calm water lay a series of reefs, stretching in long succession right in front of the port, and about a mile-and-a half from shore. They lay like a comb in the ship's path, and between two of the teeth her bows passed, and she lay imprisoned and helpless. Everything was immediatly done that was likely to draw her off; four of the sternmost guns were hove overboard and buoyed, anchors taken out and laid, but all was of no avail. About 3 P.M. it came on to blow, and then was seen how hopeless was the condition of the ship. All round her were reefs, awash at low water, and as the swell began to lift her she crashed down upon the rocks and commenced to roll in a manner that threatened soon to break her up. It was clearly time to think of providing for the safety of the one hundred and forty-nine people on board, and preparations for landing men and provisions were accordingly begun. The wind was from the S.W., so that there was no imminent danger; but the night of the 24th was an unpleasant and anxious one indeed, communication with the shore being impossible, owing to the dangerous reefs between it and the ship. At 3 A.M., on the 25th, the whole of the engine-room being stove in, and the rudder knocked off, the vessel began to fill, which steadied her. On the morning of the 25th the officers' and men's bedding clothes, with the greater part of the provisions, were landed. In the afternoon, the barometer falling and the wind shifting to the N.W., every body was landed, and at sunset a gale came on from the same quarter, which lasted for two days, rendering all communication impossible, the seas making a clean breach over her. Houses were then prepared on shore for the crews and officers, sentries set, watches kept, and all went on in good order. The men behaved very well. Perfect discipline prevailed, there were no attempts to break into spirit-room or stores, and all worked hard with a will to save guns, stores, small arms, sails, chains, anchors, and rigging. The engine-room having been stove in, the machinery could not be got out, but almost everything else, to the masts, which were cut out of her, was taken on shore, properly stored, and left in charge of Japanese officials.

We need not dwell upon the small events of the sixteen weary days which elapsed before relief arrived. The country is very thinly populated, bare of wood and apparently holding little game. Quantities of duck and plover were got along the edge of the bay, and salmon was in absolute profusion. Nine miles across from Soya, near cape Nosseyab, is a small river, and there, at a village called Koitoi, is a salmon fishing station. Fishing and drying seaweed constitute the trade of the place, and as many as two thousand salmon are taken in a day. The trade is farmed by a guild in Hakodadi, and their agent at Soya was the chief man in the place, and rendered good service to the shipwrecked wrew.

Meanwhile a message had reached Hakodadi overland, and Captain Du Petit Thouars, who was there with H.I.M. Dupleix, lost not a moment in starting to the relief of the Rattler. His machinery was undergoing repair and his ship was without coal, but by working double tides all through the night he managed to get away the morning after the news reached Hakodadi, and, steaming her best, the Dupleix reached the scene of the disaster on the 9th, forty-six hours after leaving Hakodadi, and embarked the shipwrecked crew.

Nothing could exceed his courtesy and attention, or the kindness and consideration of his officers and crew. He insisted on giving up his own cabin to his guests, creeping himself into the cockpit, and the whole starboard side of the lower deck was given up to the Rattler's crew. All arrived in safety here on the 17th inst. There is generally some redeeming point, some cause for cheerfulness in most misfortunes, and in this one, we may certainly greet this thorough illustration of the entente cordiale. Altogether, to use a common phrase, the very best was made of a bad job, and though England has lost a ship, the intelligence of her officers, the good discipline of the men, and the exertions of a truly friendly ally, have saved a fine crew without a single casualty, and we have every reason to congratulate ourselves that so little harm has been done.

SHANGHAI.

From Shanghai our advices extend to the 28th October. No later mail advices from home had been received, but the outward mail of September 11 was due and hourly expected. The fortnight's news is well summarised in the letter of our own correspondent, but we preface it with a few items from the local journals:—

The N. C. Herald says:—"We are glad to hear that Sir Rutherford Alcock has determined to act with energy in the Yangchow affair. It is rumoured that Mr. Medhurst will renew negotiations at the point where they were broken off by the Rinaldo's withdrawal, from a still better position than he then enjoyed. He is to go to Nanking, we hear, in a few days, escorted by the Rodney, Rinaldo, and Slaney. One principal point—the degradation of the Yangchow magistrates—has been conceded since his departure, but others—the punishment of the literati, for instance—remain to be settled.

"Sir R. Alcock has issued a notification ordering Chinese claiming British protection to discard Chinese costume in China, in order to mark their nationality. This suggests a question as to the propriety of missionaries dressing in Chinese costume. If foreign clothes are to be held a distinguishing feature of one British subject, they should be so of another. Legislation must be consistent to command respect.

"The Quarterly Returns of Trade at Shanghai for April, May and June last show the import of Grey Shirtings to be 822,000 pieces, against 409,000 during the same period last year; of T-Cloths, 291,000, against 75,000; of lustres, 43,000 only, against 112,000; of iron, 36,000 piculs, against 14,000. As the quarter represents the dull period of the year for tea and silk, the figures representing these articles of produce do not possess much interest. Tls. 416,730 were collected in Shanghai during the quarter for import, export and opium duties; and Tls. 21,444 in tonnage dues.

"Much surprise and dissatisfaction has been expressed at the sudden dismissal by the directors of Mr. Maccall, manager of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China. A letter expressive of regret at his departure has been addressed to him by the mercantile community.

"The report just presented by the directors of the North China Insurance Company, showing the business for the half-year ending 30th June last, and bringing up the results of the two-and-a-half years' operations of the present company, must be amply gratifying to the fortunate shareholders. Since its formation, nearly six years ago, the company has been one continued and brilliant success. There has never been a time in its history when its position was in the least degree doubtful, or when the public confidence in its perfect soundness had the slightest reason to be shaken. Yet its path cannot be said to have been altogether unattended with dangers. For a Company taking individual risks up to such a high limit, experience has shown the wisdom of extending its operations over three years, as in such case its reputation is in less danger of suffering during a year of unusual disaster. The North China has undoubtedly been ably and cautiously conducted; the late Secretary having inspired general confidence by his eminently satisfactory management, while the directors have discharged their duties with praiseworthy efficiency."

The Friend of China says:—"The enterprising proprietors of the London and China Telegraph and Express are about to send one of their body to China shortly we learn, his passage having been taken, via America, for the steamer of the P.M.S. Co., to arrive in Japan about the end of next month. This looks like a determination to make themselves au fait in the politics of the Far East, and will be duly appreciated by subscribers. On dit, Mr. Murrow, erst of the Hong Kong Daily Press, and now of the London and China Herald, is also about to leave for China again, the breezes around the Monte Forte, Macao, having far greater attractions for Mr. Murrow and his family than the sweetest airs of Araby, as obtained in a diluted measure on the swards of Blackheath. The proprietrix of the North China Daily News and North China Herald, with her two daughters, will also be in China, we see by the list of passengers to leave England this month, shortly before Christmas—quite a climax in journalistic movements."

Shanghai, Oct. 27, 1868.

The North China Insurance Company have held their fifth half-yearly meeting (1866-1868). Without entering into the minutiæ of the report, it will suffice to say that the following resolution was carried:—"That in consideration of the large accumulation of funds in the hands of the company, and in view of the formation of the new company, the directors be empowered to declare a dividend of Tls. 1,000 per share, to be paid to the shareholders as soon as practicable." The net premia for the five half-years have amounted to Tls. 2,080,132.59, the losses paid to Tls. 1,238,281.48; and the estimated loss for the current half-year being put at Tls. 37,463.82, the balance of profit may be set down at Tls. 750,499.46. From this working expenses have to be deducted; but these figures indicate sufficiently the strength and prosperity of the company during the present term. Less important, but still worthy of note, is the report of the Shanghai Cargo Boat Company, which announces a profit for the year of 30 per cent., 10 per cent. of which is declared, 5 per cent. returned to contributors, and 15 per cent. carried to the reserve fund.

The Local Opium Guild has brought itself into notice by seizing a chest of opium in the house of a foreigner, who had landed ten chests, after paying the legal duty, but who had refused to submit to the squeeze levied by the Guild. On application being made to the Taoutai for restoration, he coolly requested information as to what had become of the remaining nine chests, upon receipt of which he promised to order the return of the chest which was seized. The matter is still under discussion.

You have already heard of the successful raising of the Ajax. We have now in port the Nestor, which arrived on the 16th inst., and which has since been visited by several of the residents, with whom the long sea line is likely to become popular. But Shanghai has not only become the rendezvous for steamers of large tonnage, it also claims importance as a dockyard. Mr. Batchelder, who raised the Ajax, has just completed a large steamer for the Japanese Government. The new vessel, which is called the Yangtsze, was launched in April last, and has since then taken on board her engines and fittings. She made her trial trip the other day, running 77 miles in six hours and forty minutes, under a maximum pressure of 24 lb.

The old days of Shanghai rowdyism seem to be about to return, if we judge by the police reports. Within the last few days three serious assaults have been made upon foreigners by (it is believed) Cantonese. A European constable, the captain of a Hamburg barque, and a Mr. Bibens were the victims. The constable still lies in a precarious state, the captain was severely cut and bruised, and Mr. Bibens was not only stunned and badly cut about the head, but was also robbed. Four men have been arrested on suspicion, but no evidence sufficient to convict them has yet been adduced. Indeed, not only politically but socially the Chinese are showing their contempt of foreigners, and the opprobrious "Yang kuei tsze," which seemed to have sunk into oblivion, is now oftener than ever heard in the mouths of coolies and shopkeepers. There has been one conviction for this offence, the culprit being sentenced to fifty blows by the Mixed Court. The administration of this Court is daily becoming more and more unpopular; and it is universally allowed to have utterly failed in attaining the ends for which it was established. The Municipal Council has had serious work on its hands during the past week. A panic occurred in consequence of reports, duly confirmed by observation, of a disease amongst the cattle brought into the shambles. Some of the residents went so far as to leave off ordering meat from any but foreign butchers, and the papers, not content with stating the facts, entered into discussions as to the connection between this plague among the cattle and cholera among human beings. The Council immediately took the matter up, and purchased three bullocks that were said to be affected. One has since died; but there seems to have been little ground for the alarm. The butchers' shops are now regularly inspected, and suspicious joints confiscated. If foreign life was thus endangered, foreign property has been no less threatened by the occurrence of several large fires. At these much confusion arose, and both native and foreign thieves reaped a rich harvest. The Commissioner of Customs, Mr. Dick, in concert with the Council, has organised a fire-police, consisting of the tidewaiters, who are now for this purpose under the orders of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department.

It is seldom that suicide takes place among the practical residents at Shanghai; but a sad case of it has just occurred. Captain Richard Large, of the ship Sea Queen, cut his throat on the 23rd inst., during a fit of temporary insanity.

The need for an efficient system of water-police to watch the river and its approaches has been recently brought forcibly before us by several piratical attacks made upon junks in the neighbourhood of the Saddle Islands. The piratical craft are said to clear regularly at the local Custom-house, nominally with cargo for some coast port; but as soon as they get outside they throw off their disguise and remorselessly plunder the vessels in whose company they have left.

A lengthy correspondence has taken place between Mr. Hart and the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, in relation to the system of clearing vessels under guarantee. The inspector-general points out that the existing arrangements involve too serious a risk of loss to the Government in the event, for example, of the failure of a firm whose guarantees the Customs held. Such a case actually happened a short time ago at Takow, and hence the present correspondence. He suggests that the Chamber of Commerce should "secure" its members; but this the Chamber distinctly refuses to do, suggesting on the other hand the establishment of bonded warehouses, and, as a temporary measure, the acceptance by the Customs of a receipt for goods stored in private warehouses granted by the managers of such warehouses. This would apply to imports. On exports they recommend that in all cases the duties be paid before a clearance is granted. Apropos of the question at issue, the Shanghai Evening Courier, which is supposed to represent most fully the mercantile interests of the port, makes the following remarks:—

Perhaps no subject likely to engage the joint attention of the Customs and of the merchants is more important than that of clearance under guarantee, which has this day been brought prominently before the public. Article 41 of the Treaty provides that "when all dues and duties shall have been paid the superintendent of Customs shall give a port clearance, and the Consul shall then return the ship's papers, so that she may depart on her voyage." But while it is of couse understood that there shall be no unnecessary time lost, there are certain delays inseparable from the transaction of any business wherein the Chinese bear a part. Hence arose the system of guarantees under which the mischievous working of the treaty provision was quite obviated. The Customs resigned its lien on ship and cargo, and the responsibility was, in fact, shifted to the commissioners who accepted the guarantee, and the inspector-general who authorised that acceptance. But in the case of the failure of a firm whose guarantee for a large amount is held, the commissioner may find himself in a very ugly predicament. This risk very few commissioners would care to run, and, in consequence, some new regulations become absolutely necessary. In the "good old times" these regulations would have been concocted in secret, and would have burst in the full blaze of completeness upon the mercantile community; but now, under the "co-operative policy," the merchants have been invited through the Chamber of Commerce to suggest a plan, which on the one hand would avoid injury to their interests, while on the other it would protect the Commissioners of Customs. The question is a serious one, yet one not easily settled, for obviously the Customs must treat the best established houses and those whose financial condition is most doubtful on precisely identical terms. Our contemporary of the Recorder laughs at the plan suggested by the Inspector-General, but, we think, not altogether reasonably; for, while it is easy to find fault with any expedient proposed, it is not by any means easy to contrive one to which no exception can be taken. No doubt the Chamber of Commerce has met the difficulty by suggesting the establishment of bonded warehouses, but this, before it could be carried out, would involve a considerable expenditure of time, and in the interim either the guarantee system must be retained at the risk of the Commissioners, or the article of the Treaty must be adhered to, to the manifest injury and inconvenience of the merchants. The plan proposed by the Chamber as a temporary measure in the case of imports is merely the bonded warehouse system under another name, the wharfinger being made a servant of the Customs for the time being. But as access should be had by consignees to their goods while lying in any warehouse pending release, and as the goods should for this purpose be carefully classified, and ample accommodation provided for the bales and cases consigned to each several consignee, we doubt that any wharfinger or manager of a private warehouse would undertake the responsibility involved.

During the past fortnight, in spite of meat panic, mixed court deficiencies, piracies, and every other event likely to trouble our equanimity, we have not been without amusement. The Rifle Club has commenced operations, and announces a meeting for the 29th inst. The members of the Rowing Club are day by day becoming more active, and a yacht club is in course of formation. The cricket match which I announced in my last as about to come off between the officers of the Rodney and the Shanghai Eleven was played on the 14th, and resulted in a victory for the Shanghai players. On the following day the Shanghai innings of a return match was concluded with a score of 214, but from some cause the match could not be concluded. The conduct of the Rodney's men while on leave ashore has been the theme of universal admiration, not one serious case calling for police interference having occurred.

News from Yangchow announces that the Viceroy has degraded the magistrates implicated in the recent outrages on foreigners. As, however, he refuses to do more, it is intended to send the Rodney, Rinaldo, and Slaney up the river. I cannot but think it is unwise to take the Rodney up. She draws twenty-seven feet of water, and if she gets ashore, now that the river is falling, she will remain for some months a standing joke to the disaffected Chinese. Meanwhile, perhaps emboldened by the delay which has taken place, the Chinkiang mandarins are running into the wildest eccentricities. The latest has been the arrest and imprisonment of a messenger sent by Consul Medhurst with a despatch to the Hoppo, remonstrating against the illegal detention of certain foreign-owned goods, upon which payment of the barrier squeeze was refused. A demonstration of some kind is clearly necessary, but the risk of carrying up the Rodney is, as I have said, too great to be encountered.

From Cheefoo the accounts continue to be most encouraging. Indeed, there seems some reason to fear that before spring very few foreigners in the lower ranks of life will be left in Shanghai. A nugget weighing nearly an ounce has been exhibited here, and has not tended to diminish the excitement. A report is current that the North German brig Frederick Wilhelmina, which has been chartered at Tientsin to carry down a number of braves to expel foreigners from the gold-fields, was wrecked about ten miles from Cheefoo, without, however, any loss of life. The report has not been confirmed and comes I imagine from a native source. The troops sent to Chefoo would seem to be more wanted at Tientsin, for we still hear of rebels congregating in the vicinity of that port. It is said that the Chinese Government are about to establish a powder manufactory at or near Tientsin, and that machinery of the newest patterns has been ordered from Europe.

From Japan our news is meagre in quantity, but important in quality. H.M.S. Rattler has been wrecked on a sunken reef, about four hundred miles to the north of Hakodadi, to which place she had been sent to investigate certain rumours of Russian aggression in the island of Yesso. These rumours were discovered to be unfounded, but the satisfaction thus obtained has been dearly bought by the loss of the Rattler. The Mikado attained his majority on the 13th inst., and has already taken an active part in deciding the political position. His Government has formally taken charge of Hakodadi, the taking of Nee-e-gata is confirmed, and disaster after disaster appears to follow the rebel arms.

From Hiogo and Osaka the only news is that Mr. Russell Brooke Robertson, late Acting-Consul at the latter port, has been entertained at a farewell dinner by the community, who also presented him with a valuable gold watch. A Chamber of Commerce has been established at Hiogo, under the chairmanship of Mr. Gay; and, finally, the North German barque Iris, the first vessel direct from Europe to the new ports, arrived at Kobe, from Hamburg, on the 10th inst.

HONG KONG.

Advices from this port are to the 3rd November; the outward mails of September 11 and 18 were received on the 13th and 27th of October respectively. The latest London telegrams reached only to the 3rd October.

There is again an entire absence of local news of general interest; the principal topic is the departure of his Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Lady MacDonnell, and the Hon. Mr. Rennie, Auditor-General, who had left in H.M.S. Adventure for a trip to Shanghai and Japan. They were to be absent about six weeks, during which time, Mr. Austin Colonial Secretary, was Acting-Governor.

The only other item of importance is the delivery of judgment in the Supreme Court in the case of C. P. Henderson v. the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, another of the numerous cases arising out of the bankruptcy of Lyall, Still, and Co., so often alluded to in these columns. It will be remembered that the case, which was heard in the beginning of August last, was a suit in Chancery, brought on a bill in equity filed by plaintiffs, praying that certain goods or their proceeds, say 100 bales grey shirtings, valued at £3,524, now in the hands of defendants, be turned over to plaintiffs, or if the Court decides that plaintiffs have a right to such goods, that an account may be stated, and the balance remaining, after satisfying defendants' claim, may be handed over to plaintiffs. In some respects this case resembles that of the Min and Pakwan, already heard in this Court, and familiar to all who were in the colony at the time. It appears that in September, 1866, Messrs. G. F. Lyall and C. F. Still, of London, purchased among other goods from the plaintiffs, 100 bales grey shirtings, and shipped the same per Min to Hong Kong. The bills of lading were sent out to Lyall, Still and Co., who immediately hypothecated them to the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank. Plaintiffs sent out instructions after the news of the failure of Lyall, Still and Co., to their agent here to stop the goods in transitu; but they were delivered to the bank. One peculiar feature in the case is that the bill of lading, under which the goods were shipped, is without the usual words, "or order, or assigns."

After referring to the facts of the case as found in the correspondence put in and the evidence taken, his Lordship said: The peculiar wording of the bill of lading does not appear to have been discovered by anybody until pointed out by Mr. Logan Russell, who acted as agent for the plaintiffs. Under these circumstances the Min arrives with the goods on board, and both plaintiffs and defendants claim them; plaintiffs under the general right to stop in transitu, and defendants under the endorsement of the bill of lading. Defendants obtained possession from the captain, and the question which I have to decide is whether the bank is entitled to hold them against the plaintiffs. His Lordship next referred to the very able arguments of the learned counsel on both sides, and after saying that he did not propose to comment on the authorities then quoted in support of these arrangements, he goes on to remark:—I decide the question against the bank on a very simple principle. It is this: Mr. Kresser, the chief manager of the bank, allows the firm of Lyall,

Digitized by Google

Still, and Co. to substitute the Min's documents for those of the Shunlee, which he candidly says he would not have done had he known the words "or assigns" were omitted. The omission of the words was, I hold, notice to every person into whose hands it came that the goods mentioned in it were shipped under a special arrangement—an arrangement by which I am of opinion that the bank was bound. If Mr. Kresser had noticed the omission he would not have allowed the documents to have been substituted, or he would have inquired for the correspondence and invoice, which would have explained the whole matter. This, however, he did not do, and I must therefore hold that the bank can stand in no better position regarding these goods than Lyall, Still and Co., a point which I have already determined. Let an account be taken, and the plaintiffs be placed in the same position as that in which they would have stood had they stopped the goods on the arrival of the Min. Let interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum be allowed and defendants pay the costs of this suit.

Application has been made for leave to appeal to the Privy Council.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Dates henco are to November 10. The outward mail of Sept. 24 was received on the 28th of October, with London telegrams to October 17. The Straits Times gives the following summary of news:—

The Messageries Imperiales steamer Donnai arrived from Hong Kong via Saigon on the 3rd of November, and left again on the 4th with her homeward mails. She brought no news of any interest from Saigon. Tranquillity prevailed throughout the French territory, and his Excellency Admiral Ohier had been on a tour of inspection through several of the provinces, and had visited some of the native semi-independent princes under French protectorate. A formidable French ironclad war-steamer, the Belliqueuse, carrying the flag of Admiral Penhoet, paid this port a visit on the 28th ult. and after remaining a day or two left en route for Bourbon.

Locally the interval of thirteen days has not been marked by any event of an unusual or exciting character. The volunteers have had two or three marches out; the Supreme Court has been sitting for the disposal of civil cases; and the Legislative Council have held two meetings, at the last of which the Supply Bill for 1869 was passed with ease and with such a lack of discussion or question of any one item, as must have been eminently pleasant and satisfactory to his Excellency the Governor and his faithful official councillors.

In the Supreme Court several civil cases of considerable public interest have been disposed of. Several more cases against the owners of the late powder-hulk Princess Royal were decided in favour of the plaintiffs and execution obtained. The case so long pending against Captain Ord, late Acting Commissioner of the Court of Requests here (when the circumstances originating the action took place), but now police magistrate at Malacca, for false imprisonment of Mr. Davidson, one of the brethren of the long robe, has been decided against him, and damages of $100, with costs, awarded.

The first meeting of the Legislative Council, during the fortnight, was held on the 31st Oct, when an ordinance containing certain amendments of a merely formal character in the Supreme Court Ordinance, was read a third time and passed. Some progress was made with an Excise Amendment Act, as also with the Bills for the Registration of Births and Deaths, and of Compulsory Vaccination.

The second meeting of the Council was held on the 6th Nov., when the Excise Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed. The Supply Bill for 1869 was introduced, read a first, second, and third time, and passed. Only two unofficial members were present, who essayed an amendment on one item—that for Transport, which is treble for 1869 what it was estimated at for 1868. It allots to officials of the higher ranks allowances for travelling expenses, not including hack hire, however, and of course the four official members present, the Acting Colonid uecretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, and the Auditor General were not going to allow themselves to be deprived of any handy perquisites of office like this by two unofficials, so they voted like one man against the amendment, and it was lost. His Excellency the Governor did not vote. The total amount voted for the public service for 1869 is 1,318,217.27 dols., but of course a supplementary estimate will be necessary in due time, and it was for 1868.

The Singapore Free Press newspaper, after an existence o! over thirty-three years, ceased to be published on the 31st Oct.

Admiral Keppel is expected to arrive here from Bangkok about the 20th inst., in H.M.S. Salamis.

PENANG.

Our latest files from Penang contain several items of news of considerable interest which are worth noticing.

The Gazette of the 17th October publishes a long and exhaustive letter concerning fees on processions, licences, &c. The writer criticises very severely all the Legislative enactments and orders in council which have been promulgated by the Colonial Government, and indeed roundly asserts them to be in many respects illegal, and savouring of extortion. The letter deserves perusal, but is too long for insertion here. The Gazette has also in the same issue two letters from Colonel Man, dated February last, relating to the Chinese riots in August last year, and giving the facts as to the money levied from the two societies concerned in the riots. It appears that the chiefs of the Ghee Hins and Toh Peh Kongs signed bonds for 35,250 dols. for each society, and gave security for their payment by grants of land or houses. The Toh Peh Kongs paid 6,250 dols., cash down, and delivered up the grant for their Kongsi house, valued at 8,000 dols., and signed bonds for the balance. The Ghee Hins gave bonds for a corresponding amount. Thus Government got possession of property to the value of over 70,000 dols. What has been done with this property? From Colonel Man's letter we gather that only 1,250 dols. have been distributed, a sum of 5?0 dols. finding its way to the hands of the sufferers from the riots, and the rest having been given to the sepoys and the police. Colonel Man states that, most of the property being trust, it cannot be sold without a short Act of Council giving a valid title to the purchaser. Has, we ask again, anything been done in the matter since Colonel Man addressed the Government on the subject? Colonel Man gives the expenses of the Riot Commission at 392.02 dols. and 133 dols. for legal expenses.

A public meeting was held in the Exchange on Wednesday, the 21st Oct., to consider and protest against the proposed increase of the military contribution charged upon the colony. The Hon. F. S. Brown, M.L.C., took the chair, and the following resolutions were passed:—

Proposed by Mr. Nairne, and seconded by Mr. Walter Scott: "The projected changes in the military arrangements, as recently announced by his Excellency the Governor, have caused great alarm and dissatisfaction among the community, and this meeting considers such changes would be a breach of faith on the part of the Supreme Government, and would entail a heavy additional burden on the resources of the country."

Proposed by Mr. Allan and seconded by Mr. Hasche: "The meeting would bring to the notice of his Excellency the Governor that the portion of the military force allotted to this station is deemed too small for its requirements."

Proposed by Mr. M. F. Davidson and seconded by Mr. Gentle: "The claim advanced by the War Department for the cost of barrack accommodation for the troops, the meeting are of opinion, may be safely left in the hands of his Excellency the Governor for arrangement with the Home Government."

Proposed by Mr. Buttery, and seconded by Mr. M. A. Anthony: "That the Chairman be requested to forward a copy of these three resolutions to his Excellency the Governor."

Some enterprising Chinamen are taking example from their fellow-colonists of Singapore, and contemplate running a steamer, like the Fair Malacca, up and down the coast and between Penang and Sumatra. This evincef a laudable spirit of enterprise, which deserves every encouragement.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Cotton Yarn: During the earlier part of the interval some business was done in 16-24s. and 28-32s. chiefly, 38-42s. Deliveries had been satisfactory and prices were firm. Grey Shirtings: Transactions commenced at $2.95 to 3.05 for 8 lbs. 4 oz., but have since advanced, and the market closed firm. Deliveries had been fair, but stocks were quite full enough. White Shirtings out of demand. T-Cloths again wanted, and business had been done at our quotations. Spots and Brocades: Quiet, nominal, and unsaleable. Velvets: Small inquiry for Black; quotations unchanged. Taffachelass: There was some inquiry, but at unremunerative prices. Other Cotton Goods not inquired for. Camlets: Little inquiry for anything but Black, which had been freely saleable at $20. Scarlet were worth $18 nominally, but these and assortments were difficult of sale. Cloth was in demand, but stocks were not large. Blankets much wanted, but no stocks; prices were firm. Metals very depressed. The following were the current quotations:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16 to 24, $48 to 49 per picul; 28 to 32, $52 to 53.50; 38 to 42, $49 to 50. Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.35 to 2.43 per piece; 8.4 to 8.8 lbs., $3 to 3.10. White Shirtings, $2.80 to 3.60; T-Cloths, $1.90 to 2.40; Camlets, S., $16 to 17 per piece; S.S., $15 to 15.50; Cloth, Broad, $1.50 to 2 per yard; Medium, $1 to 1.75; Blankets, $0.75 to $0.80 per lb.; Iron, Nail Rod, $3 to 3.50 per picul; Hoop, $4.25 to 4.50; Bars, $2.75 to 3.50; Pig, $1.30 to 1.50; Lead, $7 to 7.75.

TIENTSIN.—At the date of the latest advices the market was quiet, but a fair business had been done at rates favourable to the native dealers.

SHANGHAI.—A large business had been done in Grey Shirtings at rates steadily favouring buyers. The fall in value had been mainly caused by forced re-sales on the part of speculators, whilst first hand holders had only met the market to a limited extent. A decline of one mace per piece had to be noted on 8.4 lbs. Cloth, the closing rates being Tls. 2.15 to 2.18 per piece; 7 lbs. had not given way so much, and were quoted Tls. 1.95 to 1.98 per piece. For heavy goods the demand was very slack. Stocks had again been increased by arrivals from England, but the re-exports were on a larger scale. T-Cloths: A decline in the value of these goo ls has also to be noted. Sales of common 6 lbs. having been effected at as low as Tls. 1.30 per piece—while the very finest 2 lbs. were not quoted over Tls. 1.85 per piece. Supplies of all weights were heavy—and there was every appearance of these goods being "overdone" for the time at least. 8 lbs. to 8.4 lbs. 36 in. were in very small inquiry at last prices. White Shirtings.—Rather more inquiry had existed, but it was very difficult to obtain higher rates, though these goods, as compared with 8.4 lbs Grey Shirtings, were absurdly low. Sales of 64 reed were reported at Tls. 2.25 per piece, and of 56 reed, at Tls. 1.92 to 1.95. Drills.—English and Dutch Goods were 7 to 10 cents lower, and the last given quotations for American could not be repeated. Holders of the latter were very firm, while buyers seemed equally opposed to pay high prices. Jeans still in small supply, and asked for on the spot. Sheetings lower, and difficult to place. Fancy Goods.—Fair sales of Dyed Brocades and Chintzes had been effected, the prices paid being a shade lower than those current last mail. In Velveteens a fair business had been done at slightly higher rates. Velvets quiet. Woollens.—The demand for Black Camlets had not been quite so active, and assorted colours went off only in small quantities and at irregular prices. Long Ells, both scarlet and assorted, were lower in value, and sales not easy to effect. Figured Orleans had changed hands freely at in some instances a slight advance in price, but the bulk of the sales had been at low figures. The demand for Fancy Woollens had been of a retail description. Metals.—Nailrod Iron of suitable sizes had been sold in small lots. Lead: Sales had been made at Tls. 5.4.5 to 5.5.0, and there was a fair inquiry. The market for other kinds of Metals was dull. Coals—The only important arrivals were from Australia. Prices were without material alteration, and the market generally was quiet. The arrivals had been—from Australia, 5,361 tons; from Japan, 370 tons; from Formosa, 471 tons; in all, 6,202 tons, of which 1,319 tons were to order. The current quotations at the departure of the mail were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, Tls. 1.9.5 to 1.9.8; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., Tls. 2.1.5 to 2.1.8. White Shirtings (nominal), Tls. 1.9.0 to 2.9.0. T-Cloths, 6 lbs., Tls. 1.3.0 to 1.5.0; 7 lbs., Tls. 1.5.5 to 1.8.5; 8 to 8¼ lbs., Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.4.0. Velvets—Black, 22 in., per yd., Tls. 0.2.0 to 0.2.1; Blue, 22 in., Tls. 0.2.1 to 0.2.2. Camlets, English, per piece, Tls. 12.2.5 to 13.2.5. Medium Broad and Habit Cloth, Tls. 1.0.0 to 1.2.5. Iron—Nail Rod, per picul, Tls. 1.9.5 to 2.5.0; Hoop, Tls. 2.1.0 to 2.2.5; Flat and Round, Tls. 2.5.0 to 2.6.0. Lead, per picul, Tls. 5.4.0 to 5.6.0. Coals—Cargo quotations afloat: Cardiff, per ton, Tls. 10.7.5; North Wales, Tls. 9.0.0; English, Tls. 9.5.0 to 10.0.0; Anthracite, Tls. 12.0.0 to 12.2.5.

HANKOW.—At the early part of the interval the market for Piece Goods was extremely dull, but subsequently the dealers had shown rather more disposition to do business, though only on a moderate scale, the flooded state of the country interfering with trade. Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs. and 9 10-12 lbs. were again lower, being quoted Tls. 2.2.4 to 2.2.9, and Tls. 2.2.0 to 3.0.0; 7 lbs. were in fair inquiry at previous rates, Tls. 2.0.0 to 2.0.3. Drills less in request, and rather lower in price. Woollens and Worsteds: Camlets continued in demand, but all other descriptions of these goods were neglected, and rates had declined. Lead was in trifling request at about last mail's quotations.

FOOCHOW.—The following were the sales reported during the interval: T-Cloths, 7 lbs., 1,200 pieces, at $2.55 to 2.65 per piece; Long Ells, 100 pieces, at $10 per piece; Turkey Red Cloths, 250 pieces, at $3.20 per piece.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s report:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 38 to 42 are in limited supply, and firmly held, but lower numbers have further declined, importers being willing sellers and readily meeting the market. The sales of Nos. 16 to 24 include 105 bales Bombay kinds, and 133 bales Singapore. Piece Goods: No improvement in demand can be noted, but we have no marked decline in prices to advise. Grey Shirtings have been quitted at a reduction of a few cents per piece, and there are still sellers at our quotations; though stocks are light, further supplies are overdue, and may arrive at any moment. White Shirtings are unchanged. Best qualities of 6 lb. T-Cloths have commanded better prices, being in very limited supply, and common 7 lb. have also been taken at an advance, but sales of best have been made "to arrive" on former terms. Turkey Reds are very firmly held. 40-yard Drills are still enquired for, and one small parcel of English has been sold at $5.50, but the sale could not be repeated. We quote an advance of fully 20 cents however. 30-yards are unchanged. Dutch are out of stock. Quotations for American cottons are still entirely nominal, no arrival having taken place. Woollens: There has been more nquiry for almost all descriptions, and a general improvement in values, which, however, is more marked in Long Ells than in any other kinds. Spanish Stripes are firm, but the best qualities only attract any attention. Blankets are out of stock. Lastings are wanted, and best makes sell at an advance of 50 cents per piece, but others are moved with difficulty at last quotations. Crapes are in small supply, and about 50 cents dearer. Camlets are only sparingly taken, dealers generally carrying a fair amount of stock, and purchasing only for actual requirements. Metals: Prices for Nailrod Iron have been suddenly and materially advanced by the native holders of the fairly large quantities which have been quitted at moderate prices during the past few months. Soft Bar Iron is dearer. Hoop 10 cents lower, Wire declining. Steel weak. Common brands of Lead are selling at $6.50, at which figure L.B. can be had, in quantity, though commanding somewhat more in small parcels. W.B. is out of stock, and some 1,500 piculs have been sold, "to arrive," at $8.20 to 8.25. Quicksilver has declined 50 conts per picul. Coal: Arrivals have been—1,140 tons English (690 tons to consumers) and 4,062 tons Australian. Sales have been—250 tons English (at auction), at $8.50; 664 tons Welsh, "to arrive," at $11.25; a cargo of Sydney, deliverable in Yokohama, at $13; and 400 tons Sydney at $7.50. There is a better feeling in the market, and we slightly advance our quotations. The quotations at departure of mail were as follows:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16-24, per bale, $115 to 122.50; Nos. 28-32, $137.50 to 142.50. Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., per piece, $2.42 to 2.47; 8¼ lbs., $2.72 to 2.80; 9 lbs., $3.20 to 3.30; White Shirtings, $2.10 to 3.65; T-Cloths, 7 lbs., $2.20 to 2.55; 8 lbs., $2.80 to 2.90; Long Ells, $8.70 to 9; Blankets, 10lb., per pair, $5.60 to $6.25; 7lb., $4 to 4.25; Iron, Nail Rod, $2.40 to 2.70 per picul; Hoop, $2.70 to 2.80; Wire, $7.50 to 8.75; Steel, $4.10 to 5.10 per tub; Lead, $6.50 to 6.65 per picul; WB., $8 to 8.25.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—There is no new feature to note in this market, a fair business had been done entirely for America, and settlements did not exceed 2,200 piculs. Arrivals had come to hand very freely, and stocks had thereby been increased; this, combined with a further fall in the value of boos, tended to keep prices easier, without any actual change in quotations. Fine teas were scarce, and held firmly for prices, as quoted. The Grenadier had sailed for New York with 523,787 lbs.; the Queen of the Age and Havilah, for the same port, were to follow. The quotations were:—Common, $22 to 23 per picul; good common, $24 to 25; medium, $25 to 26; good medium, $28 to 30; fine, $30 to 35; finest, $36 to 40; choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Our last report advised this market quiet and drooping. Later telegraphic news still further checked business, but on teamen accepting a slight decline, in many instances about half a tael, buying was resumed again, and over 8,000 chests had changed hands. Both the purchases of the fortnight and the stock on offer were of undesirable quality. Settlements for the fortnight, 8,101 chests; reshipments on owners' account, 2,239 chests; stock, 82 chops, or 27,079 chests. Quotations (duty paid, exchange for credits, at 5s. 11¾d. per tael, and freights at £2. 10s. per ton):—Hohow, common, 11½d. to 1s.; Oonam, common, 1s. 0¼d. to 1s. 0¾d.; Ningchow, common to fair, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d.; Oopack, common, 1s. 0¾d. per lb. Green: Arrivals had been heavy, and teamen, therefore, anxious sellers, but continued daily buying had prevented any material fall in prices. Moyune and Fychow kinds were one tael lower, though some of the late settlements hardly show this. Pingsuey kinds, on the other hand, were unchanged. Purchases were almost entirely for America, and consisted of 22,165 half-chests Moyune, at Tls. 37 to 45; 4,111 half-chests Fychow, at Tls. 28½ to 38; 2,593 half-chests Pingsuey, at Tls. 34, and 969 half-chests Shanghai-packed, at Tls. 28. Settlements for the fortnight, 25,697 half-chests; reshipments on owners' account, 4,143 half-chests; stock, 128 chops, or 84,110 half-chests. Quotations (exchange, &c., as above), for Fychow and Moyune teas, were as follows:—Gunpowder, 1s. 7d. to 3s. 7d.; Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 10d.; Young Hyson, 1s. 1½d. to 2s. 11d.; Hyson, 1s. 1½d. to 3s. 5d.; Twankay, 9½d. to 1s. 6d. per lb.

HANKOW.—Business in Tea was reported as on the most limited scale, and shipments to this port on native account were rapidly falling off; the season, in fact, was almost over. Settlements for the fortnight were only 492 chests; reshipments, 5,545 chests. Quotations were:—Oopacks, common, Tls. 13.6.0 to 14.7.5. Oonams, no settlements. Export of Tea from 1st January to 22nd October, 1868, 43,721,192 lbs.; from 1st January to 22nd October, 1867, 33,150,279 lbs. Stock, 500 chests.

KIUKIANG.—Black Teas: Here also the business done had been very small, settlements for the fortnight being only 680 half-chests at about former rates. Arrivals were small, and most of them had been sent forward to Shanghai. Quotations were—Ningchows, Tls. 14½ to 15½; Hohows, no settlements. Export from 1st January to 23rd October, 1868, 147,367 chests; from 1st January to 23rd October, 1867, 106,637 chests. Green Teas: Prices were reported rather easier, but little business had been transacted, as teamen preferred sending their produce to the Shanghai market to accepting a decline on the spot. Arrivals had continued on a fair scale, and for the season they were expected to be about the same as last year. Export from 1st January to 23rd October, 1868, 93,183 half-chests; from 1st January to 23rd October, 1867, 93,110 half-chests.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Rusden, Phipps, and Co.'s Circular, dated Oct. 24, contains the following:—Congou: During the fortnight a steady business has been done at gradually stiffening rates, and the market closes firm at an advance of fully one tael. It is reported that old leaf is being kept back as usual for mixing with next new season's Teas, but that the better leaf is being kept instead of the inferior, which fully accounts for the poorness of the present stock and late arrivals. Oolongs: The few parcels settled are at former rates. Settlements reported are: Exchange, 4s. 6½d; freight, £2 10s.; Congou, 11,576 chests 22,266 ½-chests 4,170 boxes, at Tls. 6 to 24. Souchong: Common to fair, 634 ½-chests, at Tls. 15 to 20.3.; good, 204 boxes, at Tls. 28. Oolong: Inferior, 200 ½-chests, at Tls. 17; fair to good, 1,577 ½-chests 894 boxes, at Tls. 21 to 25. Scented: Dust, 454 ½-chests, at Tls. 6½; fair, 1,165 boxes, at Tls. 19 to 21.

AMOY.—A few trifling settlements of Congous had been made at about former rates, but in Oolongs nothing had been done, beyond the settlement of about 500 boxes fine to finest, on terms reserved. The stock was about 92,000 half-chests, and though teamen were somewhat less firm their asking rates were still considerably above the views of buyers, who showed no anxiety to recommence operations. A continuance of this conservative policy would no doubt enable foreigners to purchase at their own figures ere long, as holders would soon be obliged to provide funds to meet their engagements.

CANTON.—There had not been a single transaction in Teas, the advices from home markets reporting extremely heavy losses on early shipments, putting a stop to purchases. Holders of Scented Orange Pekoes were willing to make some concessions, but Capers were firmly held, and nominal quotations for both were much above the figures at which sales have been made on the London market.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had been well supplied, and with a fair proportion of good silk. Prices had been irregular, extra sorts had still commanded extreme rates; but in current qualities some dealers finding demand less active had been disposed to make concessions of $10 to 40, while others again had held firmly to old prices. Settlements 1,200 bales, leaving a stock of 800 bales. Silkworms' eggs: Bivoltini still arrived, also a few annuals; the former were pressed for sale at very low prices. Total settlements for season, including shipments from the other ports of Japan, were estimated at 1,800,000 cards. The quotations for Silk (all charges paid to London at exchange 4s. 7d.) were as follows:—Mybash, extra, 38s. 9d. to 40s. 9d.; Sinchu, best, 36s. 1d. to 38s.; medium, 33s. to 34s. 11d.; inferior, 30s. 7d. to 32s. 2d.; Oshu, extra, nominal, 38s. 9d.; medium, 29s. 5d. to 31s. 4d.; inferior, 25s. 6d. to 27s. 11d.; Coshu, best, 33s. 4d. to 34s. 11d.; medium, 29s. 1d. to 31s.; inferior, 27s. 1d. to 28s. 3d.; Sodai, best, nominal, 33s. 8d.; medium, 31s.

SHANGHAI.—Messrs. Skeggs and Co.'s report, dated 27th Oct., contains the following:—The export of Chinas includes 67 bales by the Costa Rica, 338 bales by the Pakwan, and 73 bales by the Tamerlane; and the P. and O. steamer Sunda, from Yokohama to Suez, took 435 bales Japans. Notwithstanding the continued adverse nature of the home news, buying has been pretty general, induced by a further drop in exchange, as also for remittances in the place of sterling bills. The settlements are about 2,000 bales, including 886 by the French steamer on the 28rd inst., and prices close showing an advance ranging from Tls. 10 to 20 on the various descriptions. Few chop Silks have been settled, but a small lot of "Dragons" have been taken at Tls. 570 and Tls. 550 for No. 3's and 3½ respectively; "Blue Flags" at Tls. 450, "Quisute-fees" Tls. 530, and Red Peacocks at Tls. 485. Ordinary, good, and best No. 4's have advanced Tls. 10 to 15, whilst common silks are almost too irregular to quote. No. 2 Fatmow Hainins are Tls. 10 higher, being held for Tls.490. Tie-kie and Chincum Taysaams opened at a slight advance, but as the market has been almost cleared of these descriptions the later purchases have been at prices Tls. 15 to 20 taels in excess of last mail's. Kahings have followed in the same proportion, and Long Reels are fully 20 taels up, one good parcel having fetched as much as Tls. 405, equal to 21s. 2d. per lb., whilst the market is entirely bare of Skeins. Re-reeled Hainins and Tsatlees maintain their former position, and Throwns are rather dearer. The high prices do not bring Silk from the country, as might have been expected, and the fact that many of the dealers are buying on this market shows that we can hardly expect lower prices this year, besides which, it is confidently asserted by many, that the available crop will not exceed 47,000 or 48,000 bales. The export from Japan, as well as from here, is considerably in excess of last year's at the same period, but advices affirm that the crop is not better, and warn us against forming erroneous deductions from the figures as they stand at present. The stock here is reduced to 2,000 to 2,500 bales.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At YOKOHAMA.—To New York, £3 10s. to £3 17s. 6d. per ton of 40 cubic feet; per steamer, $45. To London there is no vessel loading.

At SHANGHAI.—The rate for London remains at £2 10s. per ton of 50 feet. The steamer Nestor has taken the berth at £3 10s. To New York the rate is £3.

At FOOCHOW.—To London: £2 10s. per ton.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—To London: £3 per ton of 50 feet. To New York: £3 per ton of 40 feet.

At MANILA.—The Lord of the Isles and Serafin have been chartered to load sugar to Channel for orders to a port in the United Kingdom at £3 2s. 6d. per ton, the latter vessel getting £3 5s. if ordered to London. The River Eden loads for London on charterer's account principally.

At SINGAPORE.—To London, £2 15s. dead weight and light freight; to Liverpool, £2 12s. 6d.

At PENANG.—The Albuera, 774 tons register, has engaged a full cargo hence to London at the following rates:—Tin, pepper, and tapioca, £3 per ton; india-rubber and hides, £3 5s. per ton; measurement goods, £3 10s. per ton.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

TEA.—The following is from the Produce Markets Review:—The arrivals have again been numerous, and although the average deliveries continue at the rate of some three cargoes per week, the stock of tea sensibly increases, and will continue to do so for at least another month, by which time it is probable that the import and delivery will be more nearly equalised than for some time past. The later arrivals from Foochow only confirm the general badness of the crop, and the constant accumulation of this class of Congou (much of it costing a high price) must be a source of the greatest anxiety to holders. The vexatious and unreasonable delay in obtaining delivery of newly arrived teas is now being felt in an intense degree. It is evident either that the resources of the Dock Companies are wholly inadequate to deal with the large arrivals which regularly take place at this season, and which should be provided for as a matter of course, or that a great lack of skill or disposition to facilitate business exists on the part of the Dock Companies' officers. At all the tea warehouses the greatest confusion exists, and the dealer has constantly to experience a delay of two or three weeks from the date of purchase before getting the delivery or the weight of a single package. Usually a delivery order has been obtainable in cases where a few packages were specially wanted, but the dock companies now appear incapable of affording even this slight accommodation, as applications for delivery orders appear to receive no attention whatever. The whole matter wants thorough investigation, but so long as the trade quietly submit to the losses which these delays occasion there does not appear to be the slightest chance of any improvement. A general impression exists, too, that brokers accept this state of things too much as a matter of course, and make no special exertion to alter it; there can, however, be no doubt that if the dealer dealt directly with the merchant, an amount of pressure would soon be brought to bear on the Dock Companies which they could not resist. All that is wanted is that extra assistants should be engaged when wanted, and not that the ordinary staff should be expected to do ten times the ordinary amount of work. A small sale of Indian Teas was held this week. As usual, the superior sorts were in demand at full prices, while common sorts again sold rather cheaper. There has been, and is likely to continue, an increased demand for Indian Teas. Sales of China Tea have been made by private contract to a fair extent, occasionally at slightly lower prices, and until the turn of the year a good deal of irregularity in value will exist. Green Teas and Scented Capers and Pekoes are unchanged in value. The market for common Congou is flat at the prices we last quoted. Broken Leaf is in better supply, and slightly cheaper. A telegram from Hong Kong, dated 17th November, gives the exports of Tea from China and Japan up to that time as 118,500,000 lbs.; this is an increase of 31,000,000 lbs. on the exports to about the same date last year, which amounted to 87,500,000 lbs., against 84,500,000 lbs. in 1866.

SILK.

The market continues without animation, and quotations remain nominally the same as when we last reported. Italian Silk has experienced rather a sharp decline from the high range prices it had attained, and will yet become more moderate before it comes into current demand. Manufacturers seem to be of opinion that should peace in Europe be undisturbed we shall have fair trade after the turn of the year. So few transactions of any note have taken place during the last fortnight that there is little to mention particularly. A parcel of Cantons has been placed at 19s. 6d, and some 4½ Tsatlees at 23s. Rereeled Silks are rather more pressed for sale, owing to the large quantity now here, which is increased, too, by every mail.

The Salut Public of Lyons gives the following report on the state of the silk trade there:—

Prices for good qualities are well maintained, and buyers have been disappointed when they expected to supply their deficiencies at reduced rates. In manufactures the sale is dull. Hopes were entertained of a rise in prices, to compensate for the increased cost of the raw material and of hand labour. This latter statement may appear curious when trade is slack, but it applies to country workmen for ordinary goods. An excess of prudence is to be noticed in the purchasers at first hand, who constantly hope that their stocks will last until a fall takes place. This expectation induces them to put off every kind of purchase. Speculators, in a word, are unwilling to run any hazard. The manufacturers, on the other hand, will not lower their prices, and thus no transactions are carried out. We have the Customs' receipts for the first ten months of the year. The export of plain woven silks amounted to 280,855,120 f., against 259,803,840 f. for the corresponding period of 1867, showing an augmentation of 21,051,280 f. The importation of the same class of goods is 12,567,750 f., the share of which falling to England is 3,025,950 f. We have already remarked that this introduction, which has almost doubled in two years, deserves the attention of the millowners; but it gives rise to no anxiety, and the fact is very strange to see some persons cherish the idea of a protective duty on silk goods, when these exhibit an export of two hundred and eighty millions in ten months. A trade which has created for itself this sovereign place in foreign markets would seem strong enough to protect itself at home. The quantity of flowered goods sent out is still null, or, at least, insignificant. The light silks maintain their position. The riband trade of St. Etienne shows returns identical with those of last year. The import of raw and floss silk has attained an unprecedented figure—321 millions, against 273 in 1867, and 253 in 1866. The export in these same goods is also in a considerable increase—115 millions to 96. These facts prove the augmentation of the transit in France. Some idea of this progress may be formed by comparing the amounts for 1868 and 1861, the latter only reaching 33 millions. The sales by auction will still further aid the development of this traffic.

LONDON, MONDAY, DEC. 14, 1868.

THE MAIL SERVICES FOR THE COMING YEAR.

THE two companies on whom we depend for communication with the Far East, by the "Overland" route, have issued their programmes for the ensuing year. That of the P. and O. Company may be described as being simply a continuation of last year's time table, the inward and outward mails being each twenty-six in number, leaving London every alternate Friday, and arriving every alternate Monday, the first departure for 1869 being on New Year's-day. For convenience of reference we reproduce at foot an abstract of the card issued by the company, showing these arrangements in detail, from which it will be seen that there will be three departures in July and December, and three arrivals in May and November. At last the Messageries Imperiales time-table is, to some extent, assimilated to that of the English company, and we are able to announce on reliable authority that after the present month the French mails will be despatched from Marseilles every fourth Saturday, the first departure under the new arrangement being fixed for the 23rd of January. Thus, until arrangements for a fortnightly service have been perfected, there will be thirteen instead of twelve French mails annually, and at least six days will always intervene between the departure of the English and French packets. Sunday would doubtless have been a still more convenient day, as the despatch from London would then have been brought into exact accord with the other service. We learn from the agents here that corresponding alterations will be made in the branch lines to Calcutta, Shanghai, and Japan; but instead of the existing service between Shanghai and Yokohama, which has always worked badly, and proved a fruitful source of delay in the despatch of the homeward steamers from Hong Kong, a direct service will be established between the latter port and Yokohama, thus rendering the Shanghai line independent, and affording much more rapid communication with Japan. A similar arrangement to this would be a great improvement if introduced into the P. and O. Company's service also, as we doubt not it will be at an early date, for the growing importance of the Japan trade, and the energetic competition of the Pacific Mail Company will render an independent P. and O. service to Yokohama almost a necessity. The first departure by the Messageries' vessels from Hong Kong for that port will be on the 8th of March, in connection with the mail leaving London on the 21st of January.

The outward P. and O. mails will be made up in London on the evenings of the following Fridays :—

January	15, 29	July	2, 16, 30
February...	12, 26	August	13, 27
March	12, 26	September	10, 24
April	9, 23	October	8, 22
May	7, 21	November	5, 19
June	4, 18	December ..	3, 17, 31

The homeward mails are timed for delivery in London on the Monday mornings affixed; but it should be noted that of the eight days allowed for the monsoon from June to November, only five are taken in the table :—

January	11, 25	July	12, 26
February...	8, 22	August	9, 23
March	8, 22	September	6, 20
April	5, 19	October	4, 18
May	3, 17, 31	November ..	1, 15, 29
June	14, 28	December ...	13, 27

THE publication of a telegram, stating that the French war vessel Levrette has passed through the Suez Canal from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea, has attracted renewed attention to the progress made with that gigantic work, which, the projectors now assert, will be open throughout its entire length by next year. Less partial observers extend the time to two or three years; but on all hands it is accepted as a moral certainty that by 1872 we shall see the waters of the two seas mingling through M. de LESSEPP's big ditch. Even then, however, it will be only excavated in some portions to the full depth of twenty-six feet. But even five or six feet of water will be sufficient to carry small craft, and to bear the dredging machines by which the bulk of the excavation is to be done; and then it will become a matter of easy and certain calculation when the portions of the bed composed of sand or clay can be further removed to the full depth intended. The Times last week published a most interesting letter written by the owner—who is also in himself the captain and crew—of the famous Rob Roy canoe, who has thoroughly explored the canal in that tiny craft, and communicates his impressions with great force and clearness

THE news from Japan is as confused and contradictory as usual, but there is one item that is more reassuring than any we have received for a long time; we allude to the statement that the Japanese Government has borrowed from an English bank a sum of half a million of dollars, or more, on the security of the Customs' revenue. This is tangible evidence that they begin to perceive the real value of their foreign commerce, and we may take it for granted that the party now in power will, if it maintains its position, protect and foster the trade that supports an institution capable of affording them such substantial aid in a pecuniary emergency.

THE Japanese Government will probably not be long behind that of China in establishing duly recognised missions in Europe and America. We hear that already a beginning has been made by the appointment of a Japanese Consul (a native) at Hawaii, to watch over the interests of the now numerous body of Japanese subjects in that kingdom.

DIRECT TRADE WITH THE WEST OF CHINA FROM RANGOON.

The various Chambers of Commerce and the press of the manufacturing districts continue their exertions to keep this matter before the public, and we learn that further memorials from influential quarters will be forwarded to the new Government. The efforts of individuals in such uphill work as this are necessarily feeble, however persistent and well-directed; it is to the organised bodies that represent the commercial interests of the country—to the Chambers of Commerce, in fact—that we must look for that pressure that alone can succeed in carrying conviction to the minds of officials as to the merits of a project against which they are prejudiced by the misrepresentations of interested persons. We are glad to see that our recent observations on the evil result of the exclusive composition of the Indian Council, and the urgent necessity of some reform therein, have been quoted, with comments of approval, by several of the leading journals in the North, and one contemporary, the Leeds Mercury, prefaces its reprint of our article with the following very just remarks :—

Those of our readers who take interest in the peaceful extension of the nation's foreign trade, and who have noticed the protracted struggle our Chambers of Commerce have had with the Government of India on the question of opening a commercial way to the Shan States and West of China, will read with satisfaction the article appended from the London and China Telegraph of Monday last. We cordially agree with our contemporary's observations on the present too exclusive formation of the India-office Council, and on the necessity of Parliament providing, and promptly too, after meeting, for a due introduction of English mind and information into that Council, by enacting that a fair proportion of it shall consist of men who have not passed their lives in India, and exclusively in its military, civil, or judicial services. Even for the good government of India, the Council requires, not merely to be so reformed in its constitution, but to be divested of its controlling power over Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India; so that this Minister of the Crown may himself be, and may be held by the public to be, responsible, as are the other Ministers, for the right conduct of his department. His Council should be limited to advising only, his power of action being left supreme in questions involving expenditure as in others, he being individually responsible to Parliament.

Notwithstanding Sir Stafford Northcote's high eulogy of his Council towards the close of the late Parliament, and his statement that each of the fifteen worked more closely than did any of the clerks under them, the results of their labour show that the Council is far more numerous than good working can require. The number well admits of being reduced from fifteen to ten, and of this number at least four should be men who have not acquired by long residence and departmental service in India the mere Anglo-Indian mind and views for the rule of that portion of our Empire; but men who have grown up in the more free governing atmosphere of England, and whose minds have been formed in her more general and larger society and greater material progress. Such men, having the full knowledge of the true interests of the United Kingdom in the East, would cause those interests to be fairly considered and properly protected by the Indian Government; and at the same time promote a more equitable government of Her Majesty's Indian subjects, with a less arrogant and offensive treatment of the few independent Native powers still existing in and around British India.

Seeing how extensive and generally able all the separate subordinate departments of the India-office are, and how extensive must be their acquired knowledge of our Indian rule in all its branches, we cannot but believe that six members of the Indian services, if rightly selected, would be found ample to sit at that Council—say, two military, two civilian, one legal, and one medical—with their tenure of office limited to five years. This is amply long if their service in India has been of sufficient length to give them a general knowledge justifying their nomination to the Council. The number of the body being then reduced to ten, the four other seats should have men appointed to them who have not acquired, by residence and service in India, the narrow Anglo-Indian mind and views of ruling; men imbued with right English ideas of governing, possessing a general knowledge of the industries and commerce of the home country, and who, in watching over their interests in India, will at the same time promote the best interests and the progressive improvement of the people of India; by impressing on the Indian Government the advantages of a policy of peace, improvement of the intercommunications of the country, extension at all points of profitable cultivation of every kind, and a resulting increase of internal and external trade.

But whether the new Parliament may see fit thus to improve the home branch of our Indian rule, and to make the India-office, like all the other departments of State, a part of the Imperial Government and subject to its control, we would recommend the Chambers of Commerce to take the subject into their now early consideration, and to organise themselves for effective action in the matter by preparing petitions expressive of their views for presentation to the House of Commons immediately on its meeting. The subject is undeniably an appropriate one for the Commercial Associations of the kingdom now to take earnest and active action in.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

The following additional correspondence has appeared in reference to the conduct and position of English missionaries in the interior of China:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY NEWS."

SIR,—May I, as one acquainted both with the mode of working in the China Inland Mission, and the personal character of its members, be allowed to correct a misapprehension which appears to have obtained currency as to the original cause of the outrage on the Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, M.R.C.S. and F.G.S.? Neither he nor any of his party had promulgated Christian doctrine in the City of Yarich, where they had only just arrived, where, if any report had preceded them, it should have been favourable, he having for many months in Hang-chow opened a gratuitous dispensary, which had proved so great a benefit to the inhabitants that they have at all times welcomed Mr. Taylor or any of his coadjutors—at first from gratitude, afterwards from a desire to know what motive could induce "foreigners," generally regarded as hostile, to settle among them for such a purpose. As to coercive measures for abolishing local customs, Mr. Taylor is the last man to attempt such a measure, unless a Chinese man or woman should voluntarily relinquish them on conviction of their futility. One of these missionaries writes:—"With the Chinese there is no such thing as progress. To them all that is good lies behind. The most genuine part of their religion is the worship of their ancestors, and this continual looking back has turned their manhood into a pillar of salt. They read 'Excelsior' backwards. Where are the men able and willing to come and spell it rightly to them?" It appears to me only justice that men and women who have left every attraction in England to accomplish this, and who are consequently unable to defend themselves in this difficult question, agitated by no fault of theirs, should be vindicated by those who remain here. Trusting the wide circulation of your paper among those whose interest in missions might be lessened by a wrong impression may be sufficient apology for my intrusion on your time,—I am, &c., E. HERITAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE TIMES."

SIR,—As the article on the "Chinese Inland Mission," which appeared in The Times of yesterday, is based on a misapprehension of the facts, I respectfully beg space for a few words of correction.

The Rev. J. H. Taylor, M.R.C.S., who is at the head of that mission, is well known to all who take an interest in the evangelisation of China. After labouring in China with great success during eight years, he returned to this country about eight years ago, where he occupied his time in studying medicine and revising the previous translation in the Ningpo dialect of the greater part of the New Testament, and in delivering addresses on the claims of China in many towns of the United Kingdom. About two-and-a-half years ago he returned to China, accompanied by sixteen helpers; since then others have joined him, making the present staff of missionaries twenty-nine in all. These devoted labourers have no guaranteed salary from any source. They have no committee at home to plead their cause with the British public. A Christian gentleman receives what is sent to him on their behalf, and transmits it to them.

So far from "finding the people as well as the authorities dead against them," "first in one city, then in another," in which they have tried to "force their way," they have succeeded in opening mission stations in various cities of the interior, such as Hang-chow, Siao-shan, Tai-tchou, Wun-chau, Su-chew, and Ning-hia, where they are labouring amid difficulties, no doubt, but also amid very much which is fitted to encourage. Hang-chow has been the head-quarters of the mission until Mr. Taylor's removal to the scene of the late outrage. A young lady who went out from my church is now in that city. According to a letter of hers, recently received, she is known in every part of the city, and has never had a rude word addressed to her. The people invite her to their houses, and press their hospitality on her to an extent which proves often embarrassing, although very gratifying as an expression of their affection and gratitude. At Yang-tchou, the scene of the outrage, they have not had time by their teaching to produce any impression on the people, whether good or bad. They were but settling in their newly-obtained residence when the attack on it was made, so that that in no way indicates the feelings of the people in reference to what the missionaries teach; nor is there any reason for supposing that, were the preliminary difficulties connected with opening new ground in China once overcome, the impression produced there would be less favourable than in other cities where Mr. Taylor and his devoted band have been able to make a fair trial.

Mr. Taylor is the last man to seek to involve his country in hostilities with the Chinese on any ground whatsoever. It was not his wish that a "gunboat should appear on the scene."

As to the "worship of ancestors," I fear Scripture teaching cannot be made to appear otherwise than hostile to that; but to object to missions on that ground is to object to missions in toto. Trusting to your candour for insertion,—I am, your obedient servant,

EQUITY COURTS.—DEC. 8.

(Before Vice-Chancellor Sir JOHN STUART)

IN RE THE ASIATIC BANKING CORPORATION (LIMITED)—EX PARTE THE ROYAL BANK OF INDIA.

This was an application on behalf of the manager of the Royal Bank of India to have that company taken off the list of contributories to the Asiatic Banking Corporation, which was being wound up by the court. In 1865 the Royal Bank of India became transferers from the Financial Association of India and China and others, who were customers of the bank, of 605 shares in the Asiatic Banking Corporation. The shares were transferred as security for money advanced on loan by the Royal Bank to its customers. The deeds of transfer were expressed to be made to the "Royal Bank of India, its executors, administrators, and assigns," subject to the charter and deed of settlement of the Asiatic Corporation. All such transfers ought to have been made by hand, duly stamped, and sealed. But it appeared that that had not in these instances been done. The Royal Bank of India, notwithstanding, took their transfers, which had been duly executed by the attornies of the transferers, to the Asiatic Company. That company then registered them; and it having been subsequently found that the transferees had received some dividends on some of the shares, and had sold others of them, the official liquidator of the Asiatic Company placed the Royal Bank of India on the list of contributories to that bank. From that the Royal Bank of India now applied to the court by way of appeal. The grounds on which the appeal was rested were these:—That, as a general rule, no one banking corporation could be a shareholder in another, and in particular, the articles of association and deeds of settlement of these companies did not sanction the transaction in question. It was also contended that from the form of the transfers it was never intended that the transferred shares should be transferable to any body corporate; and that the transfers, even if so far valid, were inoperative, as not having been duly sealed.

Mr. E. K. Karslake, Q.C., and Mr. Fry appeared for the Royal Bank of India; Mr. Dickenson, Q.C., and Mr. Kekewich, for the Asiatic Banking Corporation, were not called upon.

The Vice-Chancellor said the motion must be refused with costs. The shares in question were transferred to the Royal Bank of India as a security for debts due to them from the original holders of the shares. It was said that the articles of association of these companies did not allow of the transaction. But what was done was this: The Bank of India first got the shares transferred to themselves; they then procured themselves to be registered by the Asiatic Banking Corporation as shareholders in that company. It was also said that because the transfers of the shares had not been duly sealed the registration was invalid. But, whatever might be the effect of that infirmity in the title—though it did not amount to a defect of title—the Royal Bank of India had not only allowed themselves to be registered as shareholders in the Asiatic Corporation, but they had received dividends on, and had, indeed, subsequently sold some of the shares; had, in fact, dealt with them as if they were complete owners of them. They now sought by a technical objection to get rid of their liability. That could not be allowed; and, upon the whole of the case, the Royal Bank of India was properly placed on the list of contributories to the Asiatic Banking Corporation, and must be retained on it

IN RE AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK.—IN RE SHIPMAN.

This was a summons adjourned from Chambers, the object being to determine the amount of remuneration to which Mr. Shipman was entitled as creditors' representative in the matter of the winding up of the Agra and Masterman's Bank. Mr. Shipman was formerly manager of the bank at a salary of £1,500 a-year. He had received £750 by way of salary for six months after the winding up. On the 23rd of June he was appointed creditors' representative, which office he had continued to hold to the end of January, 1867. For this he claimed to be paid £2,500. Since the winding up he had become a billbroker. His duties as creditors' representative had not required the services of more than one clerk, and he had been put to no outlay beyond a small sum of £23 or thereabouts.

Mr. Druce, Q.C., and Mr. A. G. Marten appeared in support of the application.

Mr. Kay, Q.C., and Mr. Westlake, for the committee of shareholders, objected to the claim as being exorbitant and unreasonable. They also appeared in support of a cross-summons charging Mr. Shipman, whilst manager, with having made advances on a loan account to a Mr. Robert M'Kim, with which sums Mr. M'Kim, who was a broker, speculated; there being an arrangement between the two that Shipman should take a share in the profits, if any, but should not participate in the losses. The advances were to the extent of £93,000, of which only about £21,000 was now covered by the present depreciated value of the securities. Mr. M'Kim was insolvent.

Mr. Druce and Mr. Marten, for Shipman, on the cross-summons, said that Shipman's advances were all in conformity with the regular practice of the bank, and denied the jurisdiction of the court to try the question.

The Vice-Chancellor, without hearing a reply on the cross-summons, said that upon the facts as had been stated by Mr. Shipman his claim was clearly an extravagant one. His Honour should allow him £100 a month for the period during which he had acted a creditors' representative, and he was of course entitled to his outlay and to costs, in respect of which he might be allowed £100. As regards the second summons, it was equally plain that the arrangement whereby Mr. Shipman, being a confidential manager of the bank, was to receive part of the profits of a speculation in the advances made to M'Kim, was a gross misfeazance and a gross dereliction of duty. There could be no doubt as to the jurisdiction of the court: and as it appeared that of the sums advanced, £32,822 were placed to the joint account of himself and M'Kim, Mr. Shipman must be ordered to pay £32,822 within a month from the service of the order, less the sum due to him for his remuneration, and costs.

BANKRUPTCY COURT.

IN RE WILLIAM ANDERSON.

The bankrupt was a merchant, formerly carrying on business at Calcutta, in partnership with D. C. Gordon and A. Stuart, under the style of Gordon, Stuart and Co. He has been before the Court since August, 1867, various adjournments having taken place with a view to an arrangement of the bankrupt's affairs, and in order that information might be received from India respecting the position of the firm of Gordon, Stuart and Co. It was now stated that the necessary information had not yet been received, and the accountants (Messrs. Johnstone) had consequently been unable to file the bankrupt's accounts.

A further adjournment for two months of the sitting for examination and discharge was accordingiy ordered.

The Elk and Hornet, new twin-screw composite built gun-vessels, each of two guns, 464 tons, and 120-horse power, have been commissioned at Portsmouth for China, the former by Commander Algernon G. Wootton, and the latter by Commander Duncan G. Davidson. The latter officer, like Captain Brooker, has made for himself by his past services a reputation in China. He was attached to the Naval Brigade at the storming of Canton in December, 1857, at which affair he assisted Captain Sherard Osborn in burning the houses in the vicinity of the North Gate, a service of considerable difficulty, and executed under a sharp fire from the enemy. He also assisted at the destruction of the Pehio forts. Commander Wootton has also served in China and Japan as first lieutenant of the Leopard, then commanded by Captain Leckie.

Etiquette in the French Navy.—Among the civilian passengers by the French Government vessel the Var, which left Toulon recently for Cochin China, was M. Dupré, a trader of Paris. When off Messina he demanded permission of the officer on duty to have a certain trunk delivered to him that he might get a change of linen; but having kept his hat on when speaking, he received from the other a tap on the side of the head which knocked off that covering, and to which he replied by a slap in the face. He was at once put in a boat and put on shore, whence the French Consul at Messina sent him back to Marseilles to be placed at the disposal of the maritime authorities. These in turn gave him up to the Prefect of Toulon, who placed him in detention at the hospital while waiting for instructions from Paris. At last M. Dupré was liberated and returned to Paris. His release, the order for which came by telegraph, was due to the interference of a young advocate who has gained considerable celebrity in the recent press trials. Directions were given to reimburse the passage money, but M. Dupré is not satisfied with that course, and proposes to bring an action for damages against the Administration of the Marine.

Monetary and Commercial.

The committee of the creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East have issued a circular stating that after much troublesome negotiation the heads of an agreement as between the liquidator of the corporation, the liquidator of the old bank, and themselves have been arranged, which must be submitted to formal meetings of shareholders here and abroad, to be called under the direction of the Court of Chancery. If adopted by such meetings, the Court will then be asked to direct the liquidator to carry such agreement into effect, its substance being to stop all litigation and to pay the creditors 17s. 6d. in the pound. The committee add that the litigating contributories are resisting the calling of the proposed meetings, and also a £5 call now applied for by the official liquidator for the purpose of enabling him to make his arrangements for obtaining the funds necessary for the payment of the proposed compromise, if finally agreed to, and that both matters will be argued in Court shortly. The committee are advised that the meetings will, in all probability, be directed to be held by the Master of the Rolls, and that the £5 call will also be ordered. If the meetings do not adopt the agreement for compromise, the committee will then take the necessary steps to urge on the Court the necessity for calling up the remaining capital, and dividing the assets as quickly as possible among the creditors. They trust, however, to be able to report by the end of January that the compromise arrangements are perfected, and that a dividend of at least 4s. in the pound will be then shortly paid to the creditors on account, and the dates named when the remaining 3s. 6d. may be expected.

At the annual meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Mr. P. D. Hadow in the chair, the report, a summary of which we have already given, was adopted, and a dividend declared of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, for the six months ending 30th September last, making, with the distribution in June, 6 per cent. per annum.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Ripon, from Southampton on the 12th inst., was in gold to Bombay, £45,514; to Galle, £6,557; to Madras, £1,007; to Calcutta, £3,000; in silver to Bombay, £33,000; to Calcutta, £24,800; to Singapore, £19,500; to Hong Kong, £25,755; to Shanghai, £2,000; total in gold, £65,141; in silver, £105,055.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM COMPANY.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting was held on the 8th instant, at the offices of the company in Leadenhall-street; Mr. P. D. Hadow in the chair.

The report of the directors (which has been published) was taken as read.

The Chairman, in moving its adoption, observed that it was of more than ordinary interest, it being the first report presented since the commencement of the extended contract. They must not, however, take it as any criterion of what would be the future results, seeing that the accounts, which were made up to the 30th September, embraced only eight months out of the portion of the financial year as regarded the Government contract. Although the report might not be so encouraging as they could wish, they must bear in mind that they had been passing through a period of unexampled depression, as great almost, in fact, as during the previous year. As they knew, trade had been very weak, almost stagnant, during the present year, particularly in regard to the East and China, and so great had been the falling off that even the outward freights had in the latter portion of the financial year almost ceased. They had consequently had nothing like the usual traffic; but despite this, and in the absence of specie freights, they were enabled to show an increase upon the freight account. He mentioned this as proving that there had been no want of vigilance on the part of the management in their endeavours to get all they could. (Hear, hear.) They had been unfortunate in the failure of specie freights, and he was sorry to say that he saw but very little signs of their return. They had been also unfortunate in the loss of two fine ships. Both of these vessels were under the command of experienced and talented commanders, who had spent the greater part of their lives in the service of the company, and whom a naval court of inquiry, specially appointed to investigate the matter, had acquitted from all blame. (Hear, hear.) But although on the one side there was something to depress, there was on the other something to encourage hope. In the first place, there was the Abyssinian expedition, which had been very glorious to the nation, and in the advantages of which they had participated in a portion of the receipts which were now to be divided. The freights of late, too, had been improving, although the receipts did not come into the half-year's report. Since the 30th of September there had been a manifest improvement in the homeward freights, especially of silk. There was also an accession of revenue from a new species of freight, viz., silkworms' eggs, which had recently been largely imported into Italy and rance from China and Japan. That trade, however, was yet in its infancy, but the results were already important and satisfactory. Within the last ten days they had delivered at Genoa 2,500 cases of silkworms' eggs, for distribution in Italy, and the consignees had thanked the company for the careful manner in which they had been conveyed. (Hear, hear.) It was somewhat curious that in the fifth century the first import of silkworms' eggs took place into Europe, to Constantinople, through two Persian missionaries, and from Constantinople they spread through Italy and France; and it was strange to find that now in the nineteenth century they should be largely imported into France and Italy from China and Japan. The traffic was one calculated to increase, and he hoped that next year a valuable revenue would arise from this branch of traffic. Another satisfactory point was the satisfactory condition of the fleet. The management was bestowing upon their fleet every pains and attention to make it efficient, and to maintain and adapt the ships to the ever-changing traffic that was now arising. Long ago ships of from 400 to 500 tons for cargo were sufficient for all purposes. Now they required ships of 1,500 tons cargo to make them pay. This, of course, added to the expenditure. The increased annual subsidy had also tended to swell their receipts. They had not, as he had said, gone through the whole of the financial year, and they had therefore to deal with £66,000 odd as the proportionate part, for the eight months, of the £100,000 of the increased amount above the £400,000. They assumed that as an asset, for the Post-office said that the period had not arrived for the examination of the accounts; but the Post-office had undertaken in future to arrange the period of the examination so as to coincide with that of making up the company's accounts. In order to show how satisfactorily the arrangements with the Post-office had been carried out, he referred to a return of the arrival of the several steamers at the connecting points of postal communication, as compared with the time tables, the result being,—ship Cadiz, from Yokohama to Shanghai, 26h. 55m. before time; Norna, Shanghai to Hong Kong, 22h. 35m. before time; Malacca, Hong Kong to Ceylon, 1h. 30m. behind time; Avoca, Sydney to Ceylon, 27h. 2m. before time; Candia, Calcutta to Suez, 11h. 12m. before time; Bengal, Bombay to Suez, 15h. 23m. before time; Poonah, Alexandria to Marseilles, 1h. behind time. This return was dated 30th November, 1868. They had every reason to be satisfied with their officers and agents, and especially with the skill of those commanders whose valuable scientific aid in connexion with the recent solar eclipse had been warmly acknowledged by the Royal Society. Before sitting down he might be allowed to observe that dividends in this company could not be earned as they used to be. The silver age had passed, and they had now come to the age of iron, and it required the utmost energy and prudence to keep up their dividends, considering the competition to which they were subjected. They had every reason to hope that things having come to the worst would grow better, and they might depend that the best energies of the board would be devoted to the application of such improvements to the benefit of the shareholders.

Mr. Weguelin seconded the motion.

Mr. Gliddon gave credit to the board for doing all in their power to make the company prosperous, and believed the proprietors were well content to leave the management of their affairs in their hands. But he thought it desirable that they should be informed when the system of increasing capital in an inverse ratio to the profits would cease. In 1858 the capital was £2,300,000, since when it had gone on increasing by £200,000 a year, and now stood at £4,100,000. The Government guarantee of 6 per cent. was only upon £2,700,000, the difference being entirely at their own risk. Again, while the capital had increased to almost double, the stock of ships had increased only one-third, and the tonnage but 20 per cent. They were not likely ever to carry the same amount of specie they formerly did, it having gone another way. They were told that the number of passengers was never larger, but the returns did not show it, nor the amount paid for provisions. There had been an increase of returns arising from the Abyssinian expedition, but apart from that extraordinary receipt they had not earned 3 per cent. The receipts from that source and the Government subsidy in excess of the contract amounted to 3¼ per cent., so that the ordinary receipts were equal only to 2½ per cent. The Government subsidy was insufficient, being only at the rate of 6s. 1d. a mile, against 18s. 6d. which the French Government allowed. He contended that it was unworthy of a nation like ours to repay such valuable services as were rendered by the company with dishonest parsimony.

A shareholder asked if the directors were still receiving the large remuneration paid to them when the company paid high dividends?

Mr. Godfrey remarked that in bad times, when dividends were low, the responsibility and labour of the directors were highly increased.

Mr. Jones referred to the large portion of the postal trade of the country which passed the Peninsular and Oriental Company, contending that in return for such valuable services they had an equitable claim to 5 per cent. at least on the whole of their capital, and not only France by the Messageries Imperiales, but Italy was also competing with us for the Eastern trade, and the question really was not as between this company and the Messageries, but between this country and the Continent, who should have the whole of the trade between Europe and India and China. He held that the per centage set aside for insurance was insufficient, the difference being appropriated to the dividend; the depreciation fund was also inadequately provided for out of the profits of the half-year, consequently the dividend could hardly be regarded as a fairly earned one. The only chance of improvement that he saw was in economy of management. They spent £300,000 a year in repairs, and £600,000 in coals. Now, he thought it might be advantageous if they had the practical knowledge of a stoker at the board. (A laugh.) Such a man would be able to state what the proper amount of fuel was for ships of different tonnage. In this item of repairs and coals there was ample room for economy. He asked whether any recent negotiations had taken place with the Government touching the conveyance of Government troops by the company exclusively, the improvement of the port of Galle, and whether any public recognition had been taken of the company's services in connection with the Abyssinian expedition.

Mr. F. E. Murray suggested that a saving might be effected by using Indian instead of British coal for the service in the Eastern seas. Indian coal of good quality might be had at Calcutta for £1 per ton, while the price of British coal there was, he understood, 55s. per ton. The experience of the Indian railways proved the economy arising from using Indian coals. He condemned the practice of supplying passengers with wines and spirits ad lib. on board ships as likely to encourage waste.

Mr. Wray asked for some explanation as to the provident good-service fund, which he urged should be invested separately in trustees, instead of appearing as a general credit in the assets. He recommended that the debentures should be converted into a debenture stock, which might be issued at 4 per cent., and, as the amount was £800,000, the difference of interest would be about £4,000, a sum equal to the directors' remuneration.

The Chairman could not undertake to go into the capital, which had been increased by the operations of the company having extended; and as to when the capital would come to a state of rest must depend on whether their operations remained as they were. On the main lines the passengers were as numerous as formerly, but the reason that the receipts were not greater was, that since the weekly service to Bombay had been established, there were more passengers on the shorter line, and few on the longer or Calcutta line. With regard to the "miserable dividend," as Mr. Glidden termed it, he was not prepared to hold out hopes of a greater dividend than six per cent. At all events he would forbear prophesying on the subject. The directors' remuneration was regulated according to their attendances, upon a scale which the company had sanctioned. The consumption of coals Mr. Murray himself had admitted the other day at the office had been brought down to a point which he himself could never have dreamt of. They could not get a supply of suitable coal at Calcutta from the Indian collieries, but a gentleman had been deputed to make inquiries as to whether any means could be devised of making the Indian coal economically available. Wines and spirits were not supplied ad libitum to the passengers. A certain quantity was placed on the table, and no more. The directors were using the utmost efforts to carry out economy in every department. The good-service fund, £50,000, for allowances to old servants, insurances, &c., was charged five per cent., as though it was a separate account, and although it was not separately invested it was perfectly safe. The converting the debentures into a stock had been discussed, and legal opinions taken upon it, but the result was that the suggestion could not be acted upon. They had never found any difficulty in renewing debentures at 5 per cent., and occasionally they had renewed them at 4, and even 3½ per cent. Communications had passed between the board and Lord Carnarvon on the subject of improving Galle harbour, but nothing had been done. Whether the company would be more successful with the new Government remained to be seen. The subject would not be lost sight of.

The report was then unanimously adopted, and the dividend, at the rate of three per cent., free of income-tax, for the half-year, was declared.

The Chairman, having drawn attention to the increased responsibility and enhanced duties of the managing directors, said it was proposed that their remuneration should be £4,000 a-year, instead of a fixed payment for each attendance.

Mr. Mackinnon moved a resolution to that effect, which Mr. Jackson who said that the labours and responsibilities of the directors had almost doubled since the time when they used to pay such high dividends, seconded.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

The Chairman, after a brief acknowledgment of this renewed mark of the shareholders' confidence proposed the ratification of thes election made by the board of Mr. Cowie as a director, in the room of the late Mr. Anderson.

This also was carried unanimously.

Mr. Cowie expressed his thanks.

The Chairman then explained that the appointment of Mr. Cowie left the number of directors at the minimum, and it would shortly be still further reduced by the retirement of Mr. Weguelin, whose other pressing avocations had for some time made him desirous of resigning. It was proposed to elect two new directors, making up the total number to eleven.

Mr. Thurburn proposed, and Mr. Ogden seconded, the election of Captain Engledue, of Southampton, and Mr. Jones and several other proprietors having spoken in support of the proposition, it was carried nem. con.

Captain Engledue returned thanks, and made some practical remarks, as an old commander in the Peninsular and Oriental and other companies, on the subject of economising fuel, mentioning instances where, by using sails and reducing steam (while keeping up the contract speed), very great saving in the consumption of coal had been realised, and suggested that if only a ton of coals a day per ship could be thus saved, it would amount to £109,000 a-year.

Mr. Godfrey nominated the Hon. R. L. Melville; and Mr. M'Cleond having seconded the nomination, it was carried unanimously.

Mr. Davis moved a special vote to Mr. Weguelin, M.P., for his long and valuable services, together with an expression of regret at his retirement from the board. This having been seconded by the chairman, and carried, was appropriately acknowledged by Mr. Weguelin.

Thanks to the chairman and his colleagues terminated the proceedings.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth freights to the Eastern Ports are dull; there is also but little doing in coal freights from the Northern out ports.

Current rates of freight for vessels on the berth:—To Yokohama: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Nagasaki: 45s. weight, 50s. meast. To Shanghai: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Hong Kong: 40s. weight, 30s. meast. To Singapore: 30s. weight or meast. To Penang: 30s. weight or meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 35s. meast. At New York to China: $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear on Tyne per keel.—For Yokohama, £43. For Shanghai: £48. For Hong Kong: £36. For Singapore: £28. For Galle: £24. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton. — For Yokohama, £2 4s. For Shanghai: £2 8s. For Hong Kong: £1 17s. 6d. For Manila: £1 15s. For Singapore: £1 7s. For Galle: £1 4s.

CASUALTIES.

The Dordrecht, Verhoeven, from Batavia, reported ashore Nov. 30, on the Banjaard, has become a total wreck; 700 bags of coffee and some rigging have been landed at Brouwershaven, and 300 bags coffee at Zierikzee.

Advices from Lisbon, dated Nov. 28, state that the Australian, Sprague, from Newport to Singp., which put in there leaky, Nov. 23, was discharging.

The Continental, Hall, which sailed from Cardiff, Nov. 14, for Singapore, arrived off Queenstown, leaky, and afterwards sailed again, has since put back a second time to Queenstown, reported leaky.

A telegram received from Galle, dated Dec. 1, states that the Coromandel, of Glasgow, Stinson, from Shields and Galle to Hong Kong, with coals, was burnt at sea near Batavia, Nov. 14-15, total loss; crew saved.

Advices from Boulogne, dated Dec. 6, state that the Diana, Teengs, from Batavia to Rotterdam, with sugar and coffee, was stranded on the rocks at Andresells, near that place, Dec. 6, and would probably break up; cargo very much damaged; crew saved.

Advices from the Cape of Good Hope, dated Oct. 31, state that the Borderer (ship), Leback, of and for London, from Penang, with sugar, rum, pepper, tapioca, &c., struck upon a sunken rock off Struyspoint, Agulhas, Oct. 27, and foundered; the master and seven hands were landed in one boat to the west of Struys Bay; another boat, which had contained the remainder of the crew, was found bottom upwards.

The Coral Nymph, Winchester, from Shanghai to London, went on shore on the morning of Dec. 6, near No. 1 Battery, at Dungeness, but was got off by the assistance of a tug, and reached the East India Docks on Dec. 9.

The Corin, Gray, from Cardiff to Hong Kong, which put into Falmouth, leaky, Dec. 1, will have to discharge part of her cargo to stop the leak.

Advices from Mauritius, dated Nov. 17, state that the United Service (s.s.), from London to Singapore, China, &c., had put in there with damage, but the necessary repairs having been completed, had left again.

The Hanover, Burgess, from London to Singapore, put into Fowey Dec. 8, having experienced very heavy weather; her decks were much strained, and water had penetrated to her cargo.

Advices from Amsterdam, dated Dec. 8, state that the Celebes, Seppema, from Java to that port, had been in collision in the North Holland Canal, and had received considerable damage.

The Martha Bowker, Goodburn, from Batavia to Amsterdam, which put into Portland Dec. 3, was leaky, but would probably proceed to her destination with the assistance of a tug and pumpers.

The Alfred, from Liverpool for Singapore, arrived at Milford Dec. 10, with loss of sails, bulwarks, &c.

The Johanna and Willem, v. Straaten, bound to Batavia, has been in collision in the North Holland Canal.

REPORT presented to the Fifth Ordinary Meeting of the Shareholders, held at the Offices of the Company, on Friday, the 16th October, 1868, at 2.30 o'clock P.M. precisely.

The Directors have much pleasure in laying before the Shareholders the annexed Balance-sheet and Statement of Accounts of the Company for the half-year ending 30th June, 1868, which show, in addition to the paid up Capital of Tls. 250,000, a balance in hand on that date of Tls. 750,499.46.

The Net Amount of Premia received during the six months contrasts favourably with the corresponding period of 1867, showing an increase of Tls. 16,855, and it is also satisfactory to remark that the losses and claims paid are considerably less, although necessarily embracing a much longer period.

Since the last Report Agencies have been established for the purpose of taking risks at Takao, Tamsui and Keelung, and it is hoped that a satisfactory business may result therefrom; and for the protection of the Company's interests in the settlement of claims, &c., at Sydney, Mr. W. H. Mackenzie, junr., has been appointed Agent at that port.

A vacancy having occurred at the Board of Directors by the resignation of Mr. W. J. Bryans, Mr. E. C. Smith has been temporarily appointed in his place, and is proposed as a Member of the Court.

It is proposed at the ensuing meeting to obtain the sanction of the Shareholders to the declaration of an interim dividend, payable before the end of the present year.

By order of the Court of Directors, HERBERT S. MORRIS, Secretary.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz, engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WM. CLOUGHTON, Managing Director.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE BORNEO COMPANY (LIMITED).

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

FEAR NOT!—Though surrounded by circumstances disadvantageous to health, these remedies, if properly applied, will cut short fevers, influenza, inflammation, diphtheria, and a host of other complaints always lurking about to seize on the weak, forlorn, and unwary. The superiority of Holloway's medicines for subduing disease has been so fully and widely proved that it is only necessary to ask the afflicted to give them a trial, and if the instructions folded around them be followed, no disappointment will ever ensue, or dangerous consequences result. In hoarseness and ulcerated sore throat the Ointment should frequently be rubbed upon the neck and top of the chest. It will arrest the increasing inflammation, allay disquietude, and gradually cure.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The obstacles placed in the way of the transit of produce from Osaka to Hiogo by the imposition of heavy transit dues has almost annihilated the trade of the latter place, and a correspondence on the subject has accordingly taken place between the committee of merchants and the Consular body. The Japanese of course deny the charge of having imposed restrictive regulations, and attribute the paucity of trade to the fact that "the place has not long been open, and the people do not yet know its trading capacities, and therefore it is that only a small quantity of produce is as yet sent to Kobe. By degrees, when the advantages of trade shall have become apparent to meaner capacities, it will necessarily follow that produce from all parts of the country will accumulate at that port." That this explanation is merely to throw dust in foreign official eyes scarcely requires to be said. It is proved, however, by the fact that up to the end of the last Japanese half-year a constantly increasing trade had been carried on in native produce, and especially in tea. We thus see the same difficulties springing up in Japan that we have not yet overcome in China. The tax levied on goods sold to or purchased from foreigners at Hiogo now varies between one-half and seven-tenths per cent. Although not as yet a very serious amount, it is manifest that if once we admit the right of the Japanese to levy any tax, however small, which is not provided for in the treaty, there is no guarantee that it will not be much abused. Moreover, this tax is not collected upon all goods, native and foreign, but is made to apply especially to purchases and sales effected with foreigners by the Japanese.

Three medals, struck by order of the Emperor of the French for the Prince of Satsuma, and Iwashita Sajiyemon, the Prince's Ambassador at the Paris Exhibition of 1867, have arrived at Hiogo. That for the Prince of Satsuma is of gold, measures 2¾ inches in diameter, and ⅛ inch in thickness, and bears the profile of the Emperor on the obverse. On the reverse are two figures, emblematic of art and industry, sustaining a scroll, on which is inscribed "S. A. Prince de Satsouma," and surmounted by a crown. Beneath is the Imperial eagle, with the words "Pour Services Rendus" at its feet; and in a circle round the medal is engraved "Exposition Universelle de 1867 à Paris." The second medal is of silver; but the design is identical with that just described. It bears, however, the name Iwashita instead of Satsuma. The third, which is also intended for the Ambassador, is 1¼ inch in diameter and about the same thickness as the others. It bears the head of the Emperor on the obverse, and on the reverse an allegorical figure of industry, holding in her hands the plan of the Exhibition.

At the election of municipal councillors for the Settlement of Hiogo the following gentlemen were chosen:—Messrs. K. R. Mackenzie (29 votes), J. S. Blydenburgh (27), and Paul Heineman (24). The steamer Inagawa, which was purchased with money belonging to the late Shiogoon, and the merchant Dairoku, has been confiscated by the Mikado's Government. She will, for the future, be run between the ports, thus driving merchants out of the market for transporting passengers and freight.

The proverbial ill luck of the Japanese whenever they touch steamers has been again illustrated by the total loss of one of the Prince of Hizen's gunboats, and the wreck of the Japan and Taiwan.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from this port are to Nov. 5—a fortnight later. The English mail of Sept. 11 arrived out on the preceding day. The Japan Times gives the following summary of news:—

We have nothing decisive to report of Japanese politics. The Imperial troops, from all accounts, are making steady, but exceedingly slow progress in the North, but the malcontents still fight with sullen determination when attacked, though unable to assume the offensive. Wakamatz, the chief town of Aidzu, is said to be taken, and though the friends of the North deny the report, they admit that it is beleaguered by the Southerners and in a great strait. Our own information inclines us to the belief that the place has fallen, and if such be the fact, it is doubtless a heavy blow to the rebels; but we cannot be certain of it, correct intelligence of such an event being naturally difficult to get.

Our contemporaries here and in Hiogo have been lately announcing a visit of the Mikado to Yedo as imminent, and we observe this statement to have been copied into many papers abroad. We are able to state, on good authority, that this move, certainly highly desirable, is by no means likely to be made at present. A plot to waylay and carry him off was discovered just in time to prevent his departure from Kioto. The circumstances, as stated to us, are as follow:—One of the Mias, who had been of considerable service to the revolutionists in their late successful attack upon the Shiogoonate, considered himself insufficiently rewarded by lands given to him in the domains of Tosa and Geyshiu, and opened negotiations with the northern chiefs and the Tokugawa Admiral, whose sudden departure from Yedo with the Kai-yo-mar and other ships we reported the mail before last. The Mikado was to have come to Yedo by sea, and the date of his departure and the vessel in which he was to have sailed being known, arrangements were made accordingly. Once in the hands of this set of conspirators, his name and influence would have been used for the destruction of the party which surrounds him at present, precisely as that party uses them now for the furtherance of its own ends. The plot was, however, betrayed in time, and we cannot but think the circumstance a fortunate one, for however little may be our respect for either one side or the other, the Mikado's is the only power we can acknowledge, and continual changes in his cabinet cannot but be detrimental to our trade. We long ago suggested a remedy applicable to this evil, and shall take an early opportunity of recalling it to public notice.

The information we gave in our last respecting the settlement of the Tokugawa clan at its ancient seat of Tsurunga has been within the last two or three days fully confirmed to us by a gentleman of the family, an officer of high rank under the late Shiogoonate. General opinion severely reprobates the conduct of Yoshihisa in declining to fight for his position, which the clan believe themselves fully able to have secured to a more resolute and less politic chief. But without a capable head, they were disorganised, and could do nothing, and have therefore philosophically accepted their altered position, and are setting about making the best of it. Tsurunga has a convenient port, Shimidzu, and the country being rich and capable of great improvement, many of the Tokugawa men are turning their attention to agriculture and commerce, debarred as they are at present from any share in the conduct of affairs. They are now in negotiation with the Government for permission to open their port to foreign trade, and though certain serious physical difficulties have to be overcome, these are far from insuperable, and the West Coast trade might with advantage be divided between Shimidzu and Nee-e-gata. The success of the Tokugawa clan in this application is, we think, highly desirable, for many obvious reasons.

H.M.S. Ocean has returned from her cruise to Hakodadi after the lost Rattler, and the Satellite is up from the South. The Admiral is expected shortly and also the Rodney, for the court martial will be held here. Meanwhile, the crew of the Rattler occupies the Naval Hospital, and greatly relieves the 10th Regiment by taking the guard which, for some inscrutable reason, is still kept up near the Governor's official residence.

Our autumn race meeting will commence to-morrow (Nov. 5), and every one is anticipating three days' good sport. The Yokohama Rifle Association, a branch of the National, will shoot for the medal and other prizes on the 10th inst. Parties are continually going out now in search of the sport so popular at this season; but birds are wild and scarce, and beyond the fresh air and exercise little is to be got. The weather appears to have settled at last, and we look forward to a hard, dry winter.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

From Shanghai we have advices and files of local papers to the 11th November. The mail of the 11th September arrived out on the 29th October, and the French mail of September 18 on November 2. The outward mail of September 25 was due when the present homeward one left. The latest London telegrams were to October 13, received (via Kiachta) on the 7th November. As usual, we preface our correspondent's letter with a few extracts from the local papers.

A Peking correspondent writes to the North China Herald:—"The Chinese Government have again closed the walls of Peking against the Legation, and their walks are thus cut off. I hear that the Americans want to arrange to supply California and the West Coast with coal from China, and this is one of Mr. Ross Brown's objects."

The Chinese have arrested the Prussian schooner Toza at Chusan, for smuggling salt. She is now lying at Ningpo. The captain, Gibson, an Englishman, is at liberty; but the crew are in the Hsien's jail and may look forward to a pleasant time. So far as we can learn the seizure was justifiable.

H.B.M. Consul at Cheefoo issues a notification, under instruction from Sir Rutherford Alcock, warning British subjects that mining is an infraction of the laws of China.

We hear that disputes between Chinese and foreigners are assuming a very serious aspect in Formosa; and that Lord Scott will take the Rinaldo and Slaney back to Takao as soon as the Nanking affair is settled. For the moment, the Chinese seem to have fairly got the upper hand. We cannot but think that all these difficulties might have been avoided by a little timely display of energy on the part of H.B.M.'s Minister; for it is to him of course that everyone looks for action; and we are tempted to repeat a wish we expressed some weeks ago—for three months of Sir Harry Parkes, to bring the mandarins to their senses.

At the last moment, as we (N.C. Herald) are going to press, we hear that the Viceroy of Nanking has unconditionally yielded to all the demands made on him by Mr. Medhurst in connection with the Yangchow affair. His new steamer is to be held as guarantee for the fulfilment of his promises. A Grain commissioner and the Taotai of Shanghai are to go to Yangchow with the Consul, to investigate and punish the rioters.

The steamer Ajax has been safely placed in the Pootung Dock. The statement that her hull was damaged proved to be altogether unfounded. She is expected to be ready to start on her homeward voyage in a month or six weeks' time.

The French Naval Commander-in-Chief in these North China and Japan seas has resolved on giving up that depot which, since the war, has been maintained at Woosung at no inconsiderable expense; the Dutch brig Aquarius, being under charter to transport the stores at present on the premises to Yokohama—henceforth to be the French naval as well as military head-quarters in the Far East.

We learn that H.M.S. Adventure, which arrived on the 9th from Hong Kong, via Swatow and Foochow, brings Sir Richard and Lady MacDonnell on a private visit to Shanghai, and forty officers for the various ships of the North China and Japan squadron. The P. and O. steamer Azof is said to have been ashore in Haitan Straits, but has got off, and was met steaming into Foochow apparently uninjured. The Adventure is detained at Woosung from want of water to cross the bar.

The Chefoo gold diggings are apparently attracting very little attention in China as yet, no rush to the scene of action has been witnessed, and with the exception of a miscellaneous crowd of unemployed persons, mostly sailors, few are heard of as going to the diggings. With the exception of a single nugget of fair size sent to Shanghai some weeks since, nothing has been seen of the results of the miners, and it would seem that nothing very rich has as yet been struck. Mandarins have issued proclamations warning Foreigners not to indulge in the little speculation, and Consuls have likewise told their countrymen to beware, but there the warning seems to end, and no one is hurt.

SHANGHAI, November 10.

The entire mercantile community of Shanghai, and, I believe, of China, is to a man congratulating itself upon the speedy removal of Sir Rutherford Alcock from Peking. The most popular of Shanghai Consuls has been transformed into the most unpopular of Ministers; and while in old consular days Mr. Alcock's name was one of the great safeguards against official encroachment, Sir Rutherford Alcock has identified himself with the retrogressive policy which the Chinese have of late appeared determined to adopt. The weakness which has become his chief attribute dates from the very day upon which he found himself safely installed at Peking. Providence in its inscrutable wisdom has deprived him of the lights he once possessed, and now peace at any price is the key to his policy. Perhaps that policy, if regarded from a purely selfish point of view, is not a very injudicious one. A large income, without any opportunity of spending more than a sixth of it, is more likely to prove permanent if he keeps things quiet than if he asserts the rights he represents; but with such a nation as the Chinese any such principle of action is certain to lead to disastrous results. Inland trade has been completely muzzled; the merchants are delivered bound hand and foot into the hands of native traders, and whoever may succeed to the Peking Legation will find it a very difficult task to regain the ground that has been lost. The Minister's last public performance has been a proclamation against British subjects working in the Chefoo gold fields. The right to explore the mines has not been specially guaranteed by treaty, and hence Sir Rutherford Alcock has deduced the conclusion, obvious to no one but himself and his native instigators, that to search for gold is an infraction of the treaty. There is a rumour that Sir Harry Parkes will be appointed to the post vacated by Sir Rutherford Alcock. No nomination could be more welcome to foreigners of all nationalities resident in China; but as yet the news seems too good to be true. No mistake more grave could be made by the English Government than the appointment of Mr. Wade, who is also mentioned as a possible successor to Sir Rutherford Alcock. However great that gentleman's attainments undoubtedly are as a Chinese scholar, his training has totally unfitted him for the incumbency of a post wherein sound practical sense and ready decision are the chief desiderata. There is no one in China who would not welcome Sir Harry Parkes' appointment as the greatest boon that could be conferred upon the nationals of Western Powers; but failing him, some one fresh from home—some member of the English aristocracy—is earnestly called for.

The Yangchow and Huei-quan difficulties, which I mentioned in my last letter, have not yet been cleared up. The new Viceroy of the two Kiang has arrived at Nanking; but he very judiciously refuses to assume office until Tseng-kuo-fan shall have settled with the foreign authorities. On the 2nd inst. H.M.S.S. Rodney, Rinaldo, and Slaney left Wusung to ascend the Yangtzse and make a demonstration before Nanking. Up to our last advices they had not arrived opposite the Southern capital; but it was believed that negotiations would be reopened to-day. The American men-of-war Ashuelot and Piscataqua are about to join the English squadron, and it is even said that the ironclad Ocean will come over from Japan, and swell the number of the allied fleet. With such a display it would be strange indeed if Tseng-kuo-fan were to hold out. It is more probable that he will at once eat humble-pie, and get the ships away at any cost. Indeed it is said that he has already offered much more favourable terms than he would before listen to; but it is to be presumed that the demands of the English authorities will now be increased in consequence of the bringing up of the fleet. It is said that the Viceroy has proposed to submit the question at issue to Mr. Seward's arbitration: but this report needs confirmation.

Within the last fortnight there has been much discussion in the Shanghai papers regarding the buoying and lighting of the approaches to the Yangtsze. Serious charges of incompetence and neglect were brought against the Customs' authorities, but a semi-official communication having been made to the morning papers, in which the true state of the case was set forth, the question has again sunk into oblivion. It would appear that it is the scientific authorities on marine subjects, and not the Customs' officials, that stand in the way. The money is forthcoming, the apparatus is ready, the necessary working staff is available at any moment, but the French and English naval officers consulted disagree about the most eligible site for a lighthouse, some advocating Gutzlaff, others the North Saddle. The Customs are waiting patiently for an unanimous verdict, and so soon as that shall be obtained they will proceed with the necessary operations.

The Shanghai experiences of many of your readers will justify my assertion that during the past fortnight little has been done or talked about but the race meeting. It is true that racing has here declined in importance and in respectability; but still the race week is Shanghai's great vacation time, wherein those who care nothing for horseflesh run away for a few days' shooting or simply upon excursions. This year the races were both literally and metaphorically "slow," but the effect on incident in the settlement was the same as it ever has been. Nothing happened, the papers contained nothing but a brief account of the events, and even crime seemed to come to a standstill. The only topic which has awakened public interest is the existence of a "cattle disease," very fatal in its effects, and approaching in its post mortem appearances to the characters of typhoid fever. The Municipal Council have bought several suspected bullocks and sheep for the purpose of examination, and have invited the resident medical men to watch the progress of the disease. Several have already died on the Municipal premises, and the evidence of blood poisoning has been so strong that the danger of eating affected meat appears very great. Accordingly the Council have appointed an inspector of meat, who examines all the joints offered for sale in the native shops, and confiscates those which appear doubtful.

(FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.)

The expedition to Nanking is causing much excitement here, especially as other Powers have been consulted by the Chinese; and the question of international law begins to be raised when we show an armed force in the river. Our temporising policy is showing its fruit, and unless we are firm the Chinese will have the advantage, and we shall drift into another war within the next four or five years. Except just around the centres of foreign trade the condition of the people is not satisfactory, for they are cruelly oppressed by the mandarins, and well-informed persons say that there is much trouble looming in the distance.

Our tea exports bid fair to be very large next year, for already, it is said, that all the hongs in the tea districts are engaged, and others are building. I think it likely we shall send you 150 to 160 millions next season. Silk will increase steadily but slowly, say 5,000 to 6,000 bales a-year, according to prices paid: China and Japan will send you about 65,000 bales this season.

The new church is roofed and slated and looks very well—it will be opened at Easter. A new bridge over Soochow Creek is talked of—the old one belongs to Hogg and two or three others, and pays a very good dividend. The Royal Naval Yard, transferred from the Consulate ground to the Shanghai Wharf Company's property, which the Government bought, is said to be a failure. The steamer Orissa, of Glasgow, sent here from Calcutta for sale, has been sold for Tls. 40,000, to a Chinaman. Steamers are in good demand again both for this coast and Japan, and find ready buyers. Gas is being laid on the Bubbling Well-road, reaching two miles from the Bund directly west. There is a demand for Gas Company's shares at 80, which looks like a dividend, as the buyers know all about it. Heavy losses are being made by Chinese and others who shipped cotton to Japan. Mexican dollars are worth Tls. 78 per 100 dols., and are fast becoming current in silk, green tea and cotton trades—taking the place of the old carolus—now seldom seen.

HONG KONG.

Hong Kong dates by the present mail are to the 17th November. The outward mail of Sept. 25 was received there on the 6th Nov. and the latest London telegrams were to Oct. 17 (a month old), received via Calcutta.

The China Overland Trade Report says:—"From Hong Kong the news is not of a very striking nature. On the 7th instant, at a special meeting of the Legislative Council, Major-General J. R. Brunker, commanding H.M.'s forces in China and Japan, was sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of the Colony. His commission as such is under the Royal seal and dated March 2nd of the present year. After having taken the oaths of office, his Excellency took his seat as president of the Legislative Council, and after the transaction of some unimportant business the Council was adjourned sine die.

"The event of the fortnight has been the occurrence of the annual regatta. During the two days of its continuance the weather was most delightful, which drew out as large, if not larger attendance than on any previous occasion. The whole meeting has been pronounced one nf the most successful held in Hong Kong, and everyone appears well satisfiod with the two days pic-nic across the bay. A ball at the club concluded the festivities."

THE LAST COOLIE TRAGEDY.

The Overland Trade Report says:—"There seems to be some hope at last of solving the Providenza mystery. The Japan Herald contains an account of a visit paid by Mr. E. Loureiro, Portuguese Consul at Yokohama, to Hakodadi, for the purpose of examining the strange craft, and ascertaining if any clue was to be found to her name, &c. The following articles were found on board the vessel, and some were taken from the coolies:—A coolie ticket drawn at Macao for the ship Providenza in the name of one Punkuai, and dated May 20th, 1867; the captain's copy of a bill of lading for some tobacco shipped on board the Peruvian barque Cayalti, at Pacasmayo, Dec. 19, 1867; a fragment of a ship's register, endorsed—Lush.—Deputy Clerk for the United States, Eastern District—; a few leaves of a memorandum book containing entries of cargo; some children's shoes; several photographs, one of which is supposed to be that of Captain De Nicolini, of the Cayalti, and this latter supposition is strengthened by the fact that a lot similar to the one represented in the picture was found in the possession of one of the coolies! a bucket was also found on deck marked Cayalti. There would therefore seem to be little doubt but that a clue has been found to the solution of this mystery. Mr. Loureira was to forward the above articles to Macao, where they could be easily identified. The intelligence which is regarding the barque Cayalti is, that she left Callao in January of this year, with fifty or sixty coolies on board, who had been shipped from Macao to that port in the Esperanza (which will account for the appearance of the coolie ticket to whice we have already alluded), and were then transshipped on board the Cayalti for one of the northern ports on the coast, distance about three days' sail—some merchandise, and about 15.000 dols. of treasure. Several ether vessels left port at the same date, and notwithstanding that the weather had been fine, and the other ships duly reached their different destinations, yet nothing has since been heard of the Cayalti.

THE CANTON INSURANCE OFFICE.

The annual general meeting of shareholders in this company was held on the 12th Nov., at the office of the company. The Hon. Wm. Keswick occupied the chair, and laid before the meeting the following report:—

"The general agents have much pleasure in laying before the shareholders accounts and statements as follows:—

"1st.—Balance-sheet of the office, 1866, exhibiting a nett profit of 223,800, dols. the whole of which has already been distributed as follows:—

	Dols.
1st dividend, 500 dols. per share, ...	100,000
2nd do., 246 dols. per share, ...	49,200
Reserve, third of profits on contributions, ...	76,600
	223,800

being a profit of upwards of 251 per cent. on the paid-up capital.

"2nd.—Open statement of accounts for the year 1867, showing a net premium for the year of 948,931 dols. 49c., and a profit to date of 304,353 dols. 06c., out of which the general agents recommend that a dividend of 750 dols. per share be at once declared. On a comparison of the year 1867 with the previous one, it is gratifying to find that the business of the office in China exhibits a satisfactory increase. The business at most of the branches is also larger, but in India there has been a falling off, owing to the decline which has taken place in the value of cotton, and to the general unsatisfactory state of trade in Bombay.

"3rd.—Open statement of account for the present year, which compares most favourably with 1867, showing a continued and steady increase of receipts in China and at most of the agencies, except India, where the adverse influences before alluded to are still at work.

"The Capital of the Office remains as heretofore, invested in the English Three per Cent. Consols."

On motion of Mr. G. F. Heard, seconded by Mr. Sassoon, the report and accounts were passed.

Mr. Wm. Forbes next proposed that the dividend of 750 dols., as proposed in the report, should at once be divided, and that the affairs for 1867 should be wound up without calling another meeting.

Mr. Sassoon seconded the motion, which was accordingly unanimously agreed to.

Mr. H. B. Gibb proposed that the pension to Captain Ricketts should be continued for another year.

Mr. G. F. Heard seconded the proposal, and it was unanimously carried.

There being no further business, the meeting then separated.

BORNEO.

LABUAN.

By the last advices from Labuan we learn that Governor Hennessy was at Brunei, whither he had gone in H.M.'s steamer Starling, in consequence of representations made to him by some Chinese traders in Labuan that a serious disturbance was imminent between the Brunei Rajahs and their fellow-countrymen, most of whom are British subjects, in that place. We have not been informed of the cause of the quarrel, but it appears that bloodshed would have certainly been the result were it not for the prompt and active interference of Governor Hennessy, who held frequent interviews with the leaders on both sides. Owing to his friendly exertions as a mediator, the excitement has been happily allayed and tranquillity restored. We cannot too highly commend the Governor's prompt action whenever any emergency arises. His Excellency was still at Brunei when the mail left Labuan.

With reference to the piratical outrage in the Sooloo Sea, mentioned some time since by a correspondent at Labuan, we hear that Governor Hennessy, having obtained authority from the Sultan of Sooloo to punish the pirates, proceeded to the island of Ubean, their chief abode in the Sooloo Sea, and where a notorious leader of these miscreants, Ati Bunding, resides.

Negotiations for his capture having failed, a force of forty sailors and marines were landed from the Dwarf, and, accompanied by his Excellency, marched inland towards the village of the pirates. Although the men were protected by a steady fire from the Dwarf, and were armed with Snider rifles, it was very hazardous for such a small force to land in a place which swarmed with desperadoes armed to the teeth. Nevertheless, they marched steadily to the village, which was abandoned, and succeeded in setting fire to the houses of Ati Bunding and his followers, in all about a hundred huts, which were utterly destroyed. The force was accompanied by an envoy from the Sultan of Sooloo, who pointed out the houses of the perpetrators of the late act of piracy, who were thus punished; but, in accordance with the wishes of the Sultan, the huts and property of those who were known not to have had a share in the outrage, were unmolested.

The force then returned safely to the ship, leaving the Sultan's envoy to obtain full compensation for the owner of the captured prahu. The prompt punishment which has followed on the lawless act will have a salutary effect upon the natives of Ubean and the neighbouring islets, and make them very careful of meddling with British subjects in future. H.M.S. Gnat, Commander Theobald, was at Labuan by latest advices, and it was thought his Excellency would send her to Ubean, to complete the work begun by the Dwarf, and bring back compensation to the owner of the prahu.

We also learn that the batch of fifty convicts sent by the Rainbow have been landed and safely imprisoned at Labuan, where no doubt their services will be found very valuable. Owing to their arrival the Starling, instead of going to Sarawak, will be stationed at Labuan. All the absent officials—viz., Dr. Treacher, Mr. Slade, and Mr. Clark—have arrived in the colony, where the arrival of two companies of the Ceylon Rifles was daily expected to relieve the detatchment of Madras troops now serving there. We understand that seven officers accompany the Ceylon Rifles to Labuan, and doubtless the stay of these gentlemen in the colony will considerably enliven its small European community.

Of late we hear favourable accounts of the quality of the Labuan coal now produced from the colliery by Mr. Lumsden, the manager of the new company.

A rumour prevailed at Labuan that a force of 2,000 Tawi Tawi pirates were preparing to attack the island in revenge for the damage done at Ubean by the Dwarf. It is most probably a groundless canard; but, in order to reassure the inhabitants, who were much alarmed, and also lest the report might possibly turn out to be well-founded, we understand that the Governor has ordered the gunboats Gnat and Starling to remain at that station for some time.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

From Singapore our advices are to the 24th November. The outward mail of Oct. 9 was received Nov. 11, and that of Oct. 18 (French) on the 19th Nov. We take the following summary of news from the Straits Times:—

Locally, the events of the fortnight have not been of an unusual character, but still they deserve a word or two of notice. The Legislative Council has had two meetings and has been adjourned to Penang, where, it is understood, the session will be closed with the usual gubernatorial speech. The financial condition of the colony has furnished to the general public a subject for considerable discussion, unfavourable to the view officially put forward. His Excellency the Governor proceeded to Penang in the colonial steamer Peiho, on the morning of the 14th instant. The Honourable Colonel Macpherson, the Colonial Secretary, arrived by the mail of the 11th inst., and assumed charge of his office. Several Orders in Council have been passed. Three more cases against the owners of the late powder hulk Princess Royal have been decided against them The cost, for its size, of the new steamer ordered for the colony has attracted notice; so also have the elections for municipal commissioners, which take place on the 3rd of next month. A reply in the negative has been received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the petition of the community against the Supreme Court Bill. These form the chief items of news for the fortnight, and we proceed to remark upon them seriatim.

The first meetlng of the Legislative Council was held on the 10th Nov. Nothing particular was done at this meeting. The next meeting was held on the 12th, when two Bills were read a third time and passed, viz., the Bill for Registration of Births and Deaths, and the Bill for Compulsory Vaccin ation. It is generally agreed that both are good and necessary measures. At this meeting the question of the introduction of the Indian penal code was discussed. There were laid before the Council the opinions of nearly all the legal practitioners in the place, all unanimously against the code. Their great objection to the Indian code is its lack of prestige or authority as compared with English law. In its favour, again, it may be alleged that it is simpler, more intelligible, and hence, and above all, so much cheaper. We are not in a position to argue for one side or the other, but we are inclined to think that, so far as cheapness is concerned, it is six of one and half-a-dozen of the other.

The estimate of the Auditor-General that the colony will, on the 31st December, 1869, have saved over 190,000 dols., is very much questioned and even discredited. All the Colonial Estimates are generally considered to be very much more favourable than actual facts warrant, and much misgiving exists in consequence, that the local Executive, assisted by the Colonial-office, is rapidly running the colony into debt. Great exception has been taken to the very heavy expenditure on steamers, which has been gone into with head-strong obstinacy against all advice or remonstrance. There can be no doubt that the charge of extravagance on this head is substantially borne out by figures. Faith has been broken by the Executive with the community not only on this point, but also on Government house, which, it is now calculated, will cost not the 100,000 dols. originally voted for it, but more nearly double the amount, 200,000 dols. Then again, the official members of the Council have exposed themselves to well-merited censure for voting for their own entire benefit, the sum of 18,000 dols. odd for transport, against the decided, outspoken opinion of the unofficials who have the hearty support of the whole community on the subject. It is considered to be neither more nor less than each official voting himself an addition to his salary. The thing is preposterous and a burlesque on British institutions. It only aggravates the matter to be told that it is all for the good of the public service. Why was such expense not found necessary under the old Indian regime? We cannot help thinking it a great pity and very unwise policy to afford such a handle to those among us who were against the transfer, and who unceasingly denounce the policy of the colonial regime as pre-eminently selfish and disregardful of the general good of the colony wherever it clashes with personal interests.

Whilst on the finances of the colony it is to be noticed that the Government Estimates take no account of three items of probable expenditure with which they may be actually saddled before the end of next year. Government proposes to do away with the municipalities. Now, without taking into account either Penang or Malacca, the debt of the Singapore Municipality amounts to about 98,000 dols.; it will cost some 200,000 dols. to make any use of the waterworks for the town; it will cost some 200,000 dols. more to complete thoroughly the drainage which is at present in progress. Is Government prepared to take those items over, and, if so, where is the money to come from? It is non est, unless additional taxation is imposed.

The new steamer for the Colony is reported to be building in a private shipbuilding yard at a cost of £45 per ton measurement, or within 10s. of the cost per ton measurement of the Iron-clad, Hotspur, which has been contracted for by Messrs Napier of Glasgow for the Admiralty. Probably iron is cheaper at home at present than wood.

Two Orders in Council were passed on the 7th Nov.; one ordained that the Pilot Ordinance is to come into operation on the 1st Jan., 1869, and the other particularises the special purposes for which the different jails in the place are to be used. Three more Orders in Council were passed on the 12th Nov.. One rules the manner in which the Quarantine Ordinance is to be brought into practical operation; another modifies the Order in Council of December, 1867, regarding fees leviable in the Courts of Law and Government offices; the third directs that the fees in Courts of Law are to be paid by stamps marked "Judicial."

The reply of the Duke of Buckingham to the petition of the whole community against the Supreme Court Bill has been in the negative. This might have been expected. Of course a bureaucrat could not possibly answer anything else to any request to do anything out of the usual routine. But, as an appeal is to be made to another quarter, we shall here only remark further on the reply, that it might have been more grammatical, a little more logical, and it need not have been gratuitously insulting to colonial judges generally. Evidently they are very small beer in the Duke's opinion.

Two municipal commissioners are to be appointed next month —not official members—and some interest is attached to the fact by two or three members of the community having hinted or publicly expressed their wish or ambition to represent their fellow-citizens at the municipal board.

From the neighbouring countries there is little to note. In Saigon everything is quiet. A Chamber of Commerce has been established under Government supervision, and Government has also appointed and gazetted a race committee. In Bangkok the new King has not quite recovered from fever, but he is in a fair way, having been induced to take quinine, and his rule seems to be firmly established under the experienced tuition of the Prime Minister, the Kalahome. From Java we learn that the Dutch Government has had some troubles to contend with lately in the Celebes and Bali. Some disturbances have been raised by two native princes in these places, and some sharp fighting has taken place between the Dutch troops and the rebels. The Europeans have had, on the whole, the best of it, and, according to the latest accounts, tranquililty had been nearly restored.

The Ocean Steam Company's steamer Nestor arrived from Hong Kong on the 14th of November, and sailed again on the morning of the 19th en route homewards, via the Cape, with a considerable quantity of Singapore cargo at a moderate freight.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Cotton Yarn: A few sales only to report; of 38/42s. prices (nominal) of all counts had fluctuated considerably and closed at quotations. Grey Shirtings: The tone of the market had continued to improve, and an active demand existed. White Shirtings: Out of demand. T-Cloths: Quiet, nothing doing. Spots and Brocades: Quiet, nominal and unsaleable. Velvets: Black a little higher and in fair demand, but good qualities scarce; assorted not wanted. Taffachelass: Large sales had been reported of single warp, at very unremunerative quotations. Other Cotton Goods not inquired for. Camlets: Considerable sales of SS. at quotations. Black were worth $20 to $21, and in demand. Scarlet, $18. Cloth was still in demand, but stocks were not large. Blankets: Still much wanted, but no stocks; prices were firm. Metals: Some Nail Rod Iron had been sold, but all other metals were dull. The current quotations were as follows:—Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16 to 24, $48 to 49 per picul; 28 to 32, $52 to 53.50; Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.70 to 2.80 per piece; 8.4 to 8.8 lbs., $3.10 to 3.20. White Shirtings, $2.80 to 3.60; T-Cloths, $1.90 to 2.40; Camlets, S., $16 to 17 per piece; S.S., $15 to 15.50; Cloth, Broad, $1.50 to 2 per yard; Medium, $1 to 1.75; Blankets, $0.75 to $0.80 per lb.; Iron, Nail Rod, $3 to 3.50 per picul; Hoop, $4.25 to 4.50; Pig, $1.30 to 1.50; Lead, $7 to 7.75.

TIENTSIN.—The business during the fortnight had been to a large amount, and the deliveries up country were satisfactory.

SHANGHAI.—A steady business has to be reported in all kinds of Grey Goods during the fortnight, and quotations were generally rather higher than those last noted. Sales of Grey Shirtings from first and second hands were estimated at 135,000 to 140,000 pieces, of which nearly half had been of 7 lbs. weight. The demand for this class had been very active, and holders had responded to the inquiry. 7 lbs. Cloth was worth Tls. 1.97 to 2.03, and 8.4. lbs. Tls. 2.19 to 2.23 per piece, though the latter figure was not easily obtainable for even best goods. The market was quiet at the close, the dealers' wants having been temporarily supplied. T-Cloths: Large sales were quoted at slightly better prices, the dealers having been able to select from the heavy stocks cheap lots at moderate figures. 6lbs. Cloth was quoted Tls. 1.40 to 1.55, and 7 lbs. Tls. 1.6.0 to 1.9.0 per piece. White Shirtings: On some counts a slight advance was noted, and fair sales were reported. Quotations were, 56 reed, Tls. 1.95 to 2.01; 60 reed, Tls. 2.05 to 2.10; 64 reed, Tls. 2.18 to 2.28; 66 reed, Tls. 2,38 to 2.38. Prices for the higher counts varied with quality. Drills: Several shipments on foreign account had been made of American goods to the north, and the moderate stock held by former purchasers had to a great extent passed into the hands of Chinese; there was no change in quotations; sales of English had transpired at Tls. 4.20 to 4.25 per piece. Dutch in fair inquiry, and prices improved. Jeans: English had been placed to arrive at Tls. 3.65 per piece, but no transactions in American were reported. Sheetings: Americans were neglected during the early part of the fortnight, but subsequently had been more asked for, and small sales were quoted at Tls. 4.05 to 4.10; English goods had changed hands at Tls. 3.80 to 3.85 for 14 to 14½ lbs. Fancy Goods: Dyed Brocades and Dyed Spots had commanded more attention at last quoted rates, while a fair business was reported in Chintzes and Velveteens; Dyed Damasks had also been more sought after, and in the absence of stocks of Gentian shirtings a rise in value has to be noted. Woollens: Black Camlets had advanced to Tls. 13.20 for C.P.H, owing to a Japan demand, but scarlet were rather lower in value. Assorted colours continued in but limited request. In Spanish stripes a fair business had been done at prices showing little change in value for average assortments. Scarlet and Purple Long Ells had declined. Assorted colours were dull of sale; Figured Orleans had changed hands at last rates. Nail Rod Iron: Only one arrival had taken place, and as all the iron per Lammermuir had been previously disposed of, her cargo caused no change in the market. Hoop iron continued dull of sale, but there was a brisk demand for all other descriptions. Quotations unaltered. Lead firm, and 2,800 piculs exported to Japan. About 3,792 arrived per Lammermuir. Coals: This market had continued dull, a little more demand for Cardiff ex ship; of English no sales. American: Sales from godown at Tls. 14. The arrivals for the fortnight had been from Great Britain 2,213 tons; Australia 6,305.

HANKOW.—A moderate trade in Piece Goods at in many instances lower prices had taken place during the fortnight. Grey Shirtings: Only few sales had been made at declining prices; 8¼ lbs. were quoted about one mace lower, Tls. 2.1.2 to 2.1.5; 7 lbs. were firmer and in fair request at Tls. 1.9.7 to 2. White Shirtings, dull. T-Cloths, 7 lbs., had continued in inquiry. Drills had suffered a further decline, but were asked for at the lower prices current. Woollens and Worsteds: Camlets had changed hands at slightly easier rates; Lastings had been in request, but sales were on a limited scale; Long Ells, Spanish Stripes, and Medium Cloths were neglected; Figured Orleans of good assortments had lately been in rather better inquiry. Lead: The stock was much reduced, and an advance in quotations was probable.

FOOCHOW.—The only sale reported during the fortnight was of 200 pieces Long Ells, at $9 per piece.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated Nov. 16. Cotton Yarn: There was more inquiry during the early part of the interval, and one parcel of 550 bales Nos. 16 to 24 was taken by one buyer at $120 per bale, smaller quantities of equally good quality being subsequently quitted at an advance on this figure. The market closes quiet but firm. Of the sales reported, only 48 bales were of Bombay and Singapore kinds, indicating a returning preference for direct importations. Piece Goods: The market continues very dull, no speculative inquiry existing, and dealers buying only for current wants, refusing to carry any but the most limited stocks. Grey Shirtings are not in excessive supply, and importers generally are fairly firm in refusing to submit to any further reduction; holders of "Small Eagle," 8.4 lbs., and of 8.8 lbs. goods are demanding an advance of five cents per piece, which has been paid for some small parcels. Best 8 lb. T-Cloths command a slight advance, but all other descriptions are weaker. White Shirtings are taken to a moderate extent, and 54 to 60 reed are five cents. dearer. Turkey Reds are very firm. Assorted Brocades and Spotted Shirtings are ten cents lower. English Drills are unchanged, and Dutch are still out of stock. Small parcels of American Drills and Jeans have arrived, and been placed on offer, but, the Tientsin trade being over, owing to the lateness of the season, there are no buyers except at figures under holders' views. Woollens: Fairish sales of Long Ells have been made, but at lower prices for all descriptions except H Sarlet, which command former prices. The values of other kinds have been depreciated by receipts from Shanghai, shipments hither having been induced by the advance last noted. Spanish Stripes are unchanged, but the inquiry is only for assorted, and mainly for best qualities. Blankets are inquired for, but out of stock. Lastings are a trifle better. Crapes and Camlets are unchanged, but there is a rather better feeling in the market, and we hope for some improvement both in demand and prices. Metals: Nail Rod, Bar, and Hoop Iron are all dearer. Wire is steady. Steel held for higher figures. Lead is again lower. W.B. is out of stock and quotations are nominal, but holders of other brands will have to make further concessions to induce purchases. Tin Plates easier. Quicksilver is without change. Coal: Arrivals have again been large, amounting to 950 tons English, 3,400 tons of Sydney (1,100 to consumers), and 700 tons Anthracite. Sales have been—950 tons English (by auction) at $9.25, and 700 tons Sydney at $7.0. Holders, as a rule, would willingly sell at quotations. Ginseng: Dealers report the native trade in the root very dull, and have been endeavouring to establish a lower range of prices, but holders remain firm, and refuse to submit to any reduction. Sales have been 13 casks Crude at $115, 12 casks at $120, and 28 casks at $131 per picul. The current quotations were as follows:—Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16-24, per picul, $127.50 to 122.5; Nos. 28-32, $130 to 145. Grey Shirtings, per piece, $2.47 to 4.50; White Shirtings, $2.45 to 3.20; T-Cloths, $2.50 to 2.65; Long Ells, $9 to 8.65; Camlets, SSS, $15.50 to 16.50; SS, $16.75 to 16; Iron, Nail Rod, per picul, $2.40 to 2.70; Hoop, $2.95 to 2.80; Bar, $1.80 to 2.20; Lead, $6.40 to 7; Steel, English, per tub, $4.30 to 4.40.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—A small business only had been done since the despatch of the last mail, and settlements consisting of all grades were estimated to be short of 1,500 piculs. Stocks had again been increased, supplies having come in plentifully, prices were again easier, and a reduction in quotations for the common grades may be noticed. Exports include large quantities of Tea from Hiogo. The Alexandra had been laid on the berth for New York; neither the Queen of the Age nor Havilah had sailed. The quotations were:—Common, $19 to 22 per picul; good common, $23 to 24; medium, $25 to 26; good medium, $28 to 30; fine, $30 to 35; finest, $36 to 40; choice, nominal.

SHANGHAI.—Black: For some days after the departure of the previous mail very little business was transacted, but later on, teamen getting anxious to quit their remaining parcels, submitted to a further decline of fully half a tael on common grades, which had for some time been relatively the dearest, and found buyers for over 10,000 chests. The export of Congou was nearly 18,000,000 lbs. in excess of last season. Settlements for the fortnight, 10,432 chests; reshipments on owners' account, 1,802 chests; stock, 69 chops, or 21,856 chests. The quotations (duty paid at exchange 5s. 11d., freight £2. 10s.), were as follows:—Shanghai, packed, common, 10d.; Oonam, common, 1s. 0d. to 1s. 0½d.; Ningchow, common, 1s. 1d.; Oopack, fair, 1s. 2d. Green: Green Teas had been eagerly taken during the fortnight, almost entirely for the American market, and though teamen had been willing sellers, the extent of the business had prevented any decline in prices except in fair to medium kinds, which were about half a tael lower. Buyers had a little advantage in a lower exchange. The settlements and re-shipments consisted of 42,218 half-chests Teenkai and Moyune, at Tls. 36 to 46; 3,496 half-chests Fychow, at Tls. 32½ to 35; 1,668 half-chests Pingsuey, at Tls.

Digitized by Google

30 to 35; and 1,455 half-chests Shanghai-packed, at Tls. 25 to 29. Settlements for the fortnight, 46,282 half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 2,323 half-chests; stock, 133 chops, or 73,831 half-chests.

HANKOW.—The purchases reported were only 420 half-chests on Russian account, at Tls. 14.5.0 per picul, or 1s. 0½d. per lb. laid down in London. Shipments on native account amounted to 4,372 chests. Export of Tea from 1st January to 5th November, 1868, 44,197,616 lbs.; from 1st January to 5th November, 1867, 33,055,868 lbs.

KIUKIANG.—Black Teas: Arrivals were reported as extremely small, and of very undesirable character, and settlements as only about 600 chests. Shipments to Shanghai, 2,424 chests since last mail. Quotations were—Ningchows, Tls. 14 to 14½; Hohows, Tls. 12.8.5. Export from 1st January to 5th November, 1868, 150,368 chests; export from 1st January to 5th November, 1867, 107,637. Stock, 102 chests. Green Teas: Arrivals of these were, on the other hand, reported as on a large scale, but very few had changed hands on the spot, the bulk having been at once sent on to Shanghai. Prices unchanged and firm. Export from 1st January to 5th November, 1868, 121,517 half-chests.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Rusden, Phipps, and Co. report that: Owing to the bad news, received on the 28th October both by letter and telegrams, of the outturn of the new teas in England, buyers have abstained from purchasing; the few settlements since then being for Australia, and the market closes weak. If this continues, a considerable drop may be looked for. Settlements reported are: Congou, 4,814 chests 8,849 ½-chests 672 boxes, at Tls. 6 to 20. Souchong: Common to fair, 325 chests 225 ½-chests 114 boxes, at Tls. 15.5 to 22.5.; Pekoe, common, 80 chests, at Tls. 18.5; Oolong, fair, 266 ½-chests, at Tls. 21; Scented, fair, 358 boxes, at Tls. 18.5 to 21.

SHANGHAI.—The following is from Messrs. Skeggs and Co.'s report, dated 10th November:—In the early part of the fortnight business was interrupted by our race holidays and the absence of many buyers from Shanghai; but during the last few days, notwithstanding the still unfavourable advices from home, activity with renewed vigour has brought the settlements up to about 1,600 bales, at prices generally showing a considerable advance on Tsatlees, Taysaams, and Hainins, other descriptions being firmly held for previous rates. Again, very few Chop Silks have been taken, owing to the excessive prices asked, but a small lot of Dragons and Koo-fong-sings thirds are reported to have been placed at Tls. 575, and Tls. 580 respectively, the Incense "Chinling" at Tls. 557½, whilst Red Peacocks are held for Tls. 490. Hainins are Tls. 15 to 20 higher, Tls. 505 having been paid for No. 2 Fat-mows. Kahing Taysaams are Tls. 5 to 10 up, and Chin-cums, being in small supply, show an advance of Tls. 15 to 20. All the best re-reeled Hainins and Tsatlees fully maintain their value, as they are difficult to obtain, but the commoner grades being much mixed, cased, and loaded with sugar, &c., can be purchased at lower figures. Trams and Organzines are dearer, as few are being made in proportion to re-reels. Supplies have been coming more freely from the country, and there are now from 3,000 to 4,000 bales in Shanghai, but no signs of lower prices.

CANTON.—A fair amount of business had been transacted during the fortnight, notwithstanding the continued unfavourable advices received from the London market. The finer grades of Scented Orange Pekoes had been settled at about 2 taels under last noted prices, and Scented Capers about 1 tael, but we can quote no reduction in the prices of the commoner descriptions of either. No inquiry existed for the stock of country Congou, which remained at 2,220 chests. The following settlements were reported:—Scented Orange Pekoe, 5,800 boxes at Tls. 20 to 31; Scented Caper, 10,000 boxes at Tls. 16 to 25; Canton Gunpowder, 2,500 boxes at Tls. 21 to 30.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The business of the fortnight had reached a fair figure, and including 200 bales shipped per last steamer, and by Pacific mail, amounted to 1,400 bales. Prices, especially during the early part of the interval, ruled very firm; indeed, superfine Hanks had been sold at $1,010 to 1,025. Some transactions in current qualities had been made at a reduction of $10 to 20 on last quotations, but, on the whole, the rates of last report fairly represented the market. Supplies had somewhat increased the stocks, but best qualities were not so plentiful. Oshus and other sorts had at length appeared in fair quantities. Silkworms' Eggs: Still came down in small quantities, but scarcely found buyers even at nominal values. The quotations for Silk (laid down in London at exchange 4s. 6d.) were as follows:—Hanks—Mybash, Sinchu, &c., extra, 38s. 1d. to 41s. 0d.; best, 35s. 4d. to 37s. 3d.; medium, 32s. 4d. to 34s. 3d.; inferior, 30s. 0d. to 31s. 7d.; Oshu, extra, nominal, 38s. 1d.; medium, 28s. 11d. to 30s. 9d.; inferior, 25s. 1d. to 27s. 4d.; Coshu, best, 32s. 8d. to 34s. 3d.; medium, 28s. 6d. to 30s. 5d.; inferior, 26s. 7d. to 27s. 9d.; Sodai, best, nominal, 32s. 4d.; medium, 28s. 6d. to 29s. 3d.

Exchange.—Sterling exchange for the past fortnight has ruled lower than it did prior to the departure of last mail. At the opening of business on the 4th instant a few sales of credit bills were made at 4s. 5¾d., but on the arrival of the Great Republic on the 6th instant 4s. 5½d. became obtainable for first-class bills, and some considerable amount of business was done. Rates, however, again slightly advanced, and remained steady at 4s. 5⅝d. for credits until the arrival of the mail steamer from Shanghai with advices of still lower rates ruling there. The market now closes with a small demand for credits at 4s. 5¼d. The market for bank bills has been very small, and has only varied from 4s. 5d. to 4s. 5⅛d. Tenders for H.M. Treasury bills at 30 days' sight were invited on the 13th instant, and sales were made to the extent of about £70,000 to £80,000, the highest rate accepted being 4s. 4⅞d. The demand for rupees has been very small on the part of opium importers. The estimated amount of business by the present opportunity, exclusive of Treasury bills, is about £330,000, say £60,000 bank bills, and £270,000 private paper, and seven lakhs rupees.

Bullion.—No transactions are reported in bar silver. The P.M.S.S. Great Republic arrived on the 6th inst., bringing treasure for this port to the extent of about $400,000, a portion of which consisted of bar silver. For this 8½ premium has been offered. In Sycee considerable sales have been made at 6½ premium.

Shares.—There has been scarcely any business doing in shares during the fortnight, and quotations remain much as they were at close of last mail. There are buyers of small lots of old bank at 21 premium, but no seller under 22 and 23. There are buyers of New in large parcels at 3 premium; but none are at present offering at this rate. A small lot was closed at 3½, and there are further sellers at this rate. In Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock there are sellers of old at 4 discount, and of new at 30 discount, but no buyers. Steamboat have been rather steady at 6 discount, at which rate several parcels have changed hands. China Traders' are in strong demand, at $400 premium cum dividend, but there are none to be had at this rate. Union Dock are nominal at quotations, as also China Gas. There are sellers of Hotel at 55 discount, but no buyers.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At YOKOHAMA.—To London, nothing loading; to New York, £3 10s. to £3 15s. per ton.

At SHANGHAI.—Rates for home remain unchanged, but little inquiry exists for tonnage either for Europe or the coasting ports.

At FOOCHOW.—To London: £2 10s. per ton.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—To London direct: No fresh charter has been made; via Manila, the Exonian has been chartered at £4 per ton; from the three ports rice settlements are reported at £3 10s. via Saigon, and £3 to £3 12s. 6d. via Bangkok.

At MANILA.—There is no disengaged tonnage in port; the demand for vessels is, however, not very active, as there is only a moderate quantity of produce available for shipment. There are still charters in the market for handy vessels to load dry sugar for a port in the Channel for orders, to discharge at a safe port in the United Kingdom, at £3 2s. 6d. per ton.

At SINGAPORE.—The Malacca is laid on for Liverpool at £2 12s. 6d. for dead weight and light freight, the Khimjee Oodowjee is a full ship for the same port; the steamer Nestor took about 600 tons of cargo for London at £2 15s. to £3 per ton for dead weight and £2 15s. to £3 10s. for light freight.

LORD CLARENDON AND THE CHINESE.—The New York Herald says:—Lord Clarendon, the new British Minister for Foreigh Affairs, according to a late telegram, favourably regards Mr. Burlinghame's mission. Negotiations with the Chinese Embassy are to be opened immediately, with a view to concluding a treaty of commerce. This bodes well. The new Ministry will not go back on the old. A treaty concluded with Great Britain will be an example which Europe will be certain to follow. Mr. Burlinghame's real difficulty is in London.

LONDON, MONDAY, DEC. 28, 1868.

OURSELVES.

THE present issue of the London and China Telegraph being the closing one of the present volume, we may be pardoned if we take the opportunity of greeting our subscribers with the compliments of the season, and of expressing an earnest hope that the coming year may be not only a happy one, but far more prosperous than its two predecessors have been to most of those engaged in commerce with the Far East.

The fact that its fulfilment would imply increased prosperity to ourselves is the best guarantee that our wish is sincere, if not altogether disinterested. On our own part, efforts shall not be wanting to merit the large increase of support we have lately received, and the still greater increase for which we look in the future; already we can point with pardonable pride to some progress effected during the past year, such as the introduction of new type, a better quality of paper, and various improvements in the general "get-up" of our journal; and to these we intend to add others in the course of the next twelve months. One of the proprietors is at the present time in China, actively engaged in making fresh arrangements for a regular and accurate supply of news, and his tour will also include Japan, the Straits Settlements, and all other places of importance in the Far East in which our subscribers are interested, commercially or otherwise. This step will necessarily tend to still further increase the value of our journal as a vehicle of reliable information from those parts; and the impending alteration in the French mail service will also add to its utility, by enabling the publication to take place at more regular intervals, and doing away with the inconvenience so often caused of late by two mails arriving almost or quite simultaneously. Under the old arrangement, when there were two English and one French mail per calendar month, subscribers received of course thirty-six issues of the Telegraph for their annual subscription. During the last year, when the new P. and O. contract came into force, and the Messageries time-table remained unchanged, the two services clashed so frequently that the publication became quite haphazard, and no specific number of issues could possibly be guaranteed. As soon however as the new system of the French company is in working order, we shall have an inward mail in three weeks out of every four, which will give thirty-nine issues in the twelve months.

AT last the Post-office authorities in this country have discovered the fact that the Pacific Mail Company's vessels run regularly once a month between San Francisco, China, and Japan; and the Postmaster-General has issued a notification to the effect that correspondence between England and those countries may in future be forwarded by the new route. Letters, &c., from this side must be addressed "Via San Francisco," and must be posted in time to reach New York before the 9th of each month, the day on which the mails thence to San Francisco are made up. The rates of postage are the same as those by the English mail via Southampton, viz., on letters, 1s. per half-ounce; on newspapers not exceeding four ounces, 2d.; and on packets of books or patterns, 4d. for every four ounces; in all cases payable in advance. The notification quite ignores the fact that letters may be sent by the more expeditious land route across the American continent, while newspapers and parcels must go via Panama.

REPRESSION OF DISORDERS IN EASTERN SIBERIA.

THE Russian journals bring us accounts of proceedings in Southern Oussouri. The Governor-General of Eastern Siberia learnt on arriving at Khabaroonka that disorders had taken place amongst the Tartar population, placed by the Treaty of Peking under the dominion of Russia, and military operations were undertaken against the insurgents in arms. At the end of last year it was found that Chinese were carrying on illicit gold diggings in the Isle of Askold, and in this they were aided by the Tartars of the valley of the Poutchane. In the spring the Russian galliot, having visited the Isle of Ascold, was attacked by the natives, several sailors killed and two officers wounded; and in April the port of Strelok was attacked by the Tartars of Tsimouka, who also burned the Russian village of Schkotova, situated at the end of the gulf of Oussouri. After this the Tartars joined the Chinese of the island of Askold, marched towards the frontier of Mantchouria, and burnt the village of Nikolskaïa.

The military governor of the province then sent a half battalion of troops by steamer from Khabaroonka to the lower part of the Oussouri, while other forces, as well as ammunition, were concentrated at Bousse by means of steamboats on the Amoor and the Oussouri. Colonel TIKHMENEW having been informed that a band of about a thousand Kounkhoures threatened the populations of the Daoubi and even of Upper Oussouri, and that other bands had shown themselves on the River Ouloaé, 150 Cossacks were despatched to Kamène Rybolow, and then, together with a small detachment of the third battalion, proceeded by forced marches on the Souïfoune road to the village of Nikolskaïa. At the same time two companies of tirailleurs were sent up the Oussouri and the Daoubi to clear the valley of the latter river, and, after securing the tranquillity of the colony of Oussouri, to make for the Léfou, and, in concert with Colonel MARKOW, to drive the bandits from the Léfou and the Souïfoune towards the already devastated valleys of the Maikhé and the Tsimoukha. A detachment of the first battalion, with two pieces of artillery, also occupied Lorentsow.

A band of Tartars and Khounkhaizes was attacked by a party of 175 Russians, and completely vanquished, although numbering more than 400 men. The Russians had one man killed and two wounded, while the rebels left more than fifty of their number on the field, together with a colour, a part of their baggage, and their bullocks. The Russians were allowed to repose two days after this small Waterloo, and then they set out in pursuit of the flying Tartars, and in eight days succeeded in exterminating them. Reconnoitring parties were sent in all directions, and it was ascertained that tranquillity has been restored all along the Chinese frontier. After these events the Russian Government divided Southern Oussouri into five districts, and took various military measures to prevent the peace being again disturbed. We have no doubt that the Tartars give the Russians sometrouble, but if their risings are not generally of more importance than that above related, they will not give rise to much uneasiness at St. Petersburg or anywhere else.

AN arrangement is said to have been concluded between the Indian, Turkish, Russian, and Persian telegraph administrations for the transmission of Indo-European despatches indifferently by the Russo-Persian and Turkish route at one rate of f.36.50c. for single messages from London to Bushire. The new arrangement will come into operation on the 1st of January next, and will annul the existing convention between the Porte and the SHAH'S Government, which stipulates for the equal division of all despatches to and from India between the Khanakin-Bushire (Persian) and Fao-Bushire (Turkish) lines.

A SPANISH MINISTER to China is appointed at last, and it is not the Senor CHAO to whom we referred in a recent issue. The Madrid Gazette of the 20th announces that the choice of the Provisional Government has fallen on Senor PATSCOT as its representative at Peking.

MR. STEPHEN SMITH, of Covent-garden, has had the honour of submitting for Her Majesty's inspection a racing plate for Hong Kong, designed by Mr. W. Armstead.

OUT of the almost interminable series of paragraphs forming the PRESIDENT'S message—the very prolixity of which, apart from its tone, must have been a sore trial to the patience of Congress—two very little ones are devoted to China and Japan. The first states, in a single sentence, that no advices have been received as to the action of the Chinese Government upon the "liberal and auspicious" treaty just concluded; and the second runs as follows:—"Japan remains "a theatre of civil war, marked by religious incidents and "political severities peculiar to that long-isolated empire. "The Executive has hitherto maintained strict neutrality "among the belligerents, and acknowledges with pleasure "that it has been frankly and fully sustained in that course "by the enlightened concurrence and co-operation of the "other treaty Powers—namely, Great Britain, France, the "Netherlands, North Germany, and Italy."

THE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA AND CHINA.

The Daily News of the 18th contained the following:—

It is satisfactory to learn that the agitation is likely to be continued for the establishment of a really trustworthy telegraphic communication between England, India, and Australia. Last session Mr. Crawford, M.P., presented a petition to Parliament, signed by all the principal bankers and merchants of London, praying for increased facilities, which, indeed, are imperatively demanded by our vast trade with those regions. It is universally admitted that the present route, via the Continent of Europe, is altogether unsatisfactory, the messages being too often subjected to long delays in transmission, besides being occasionally very imperfectly rendered. Without dwelling upon the serious drawbacks to which the telegraphic communications with our Eastern Empire would be exposed in the event of war, it may be pointed out that the mercantile community consider they have a right to call upon Government for all the assistance they can render in the matter. Our merchants ought to be able to send a message to their correspondents in India and Australia and receive a reply on the same day. This is, beyond doubt, capable of being done with the utmost certainty, provided we use the appliances which science has placed at our disposal. In many quarters it is justly urged that we ought to have an independent submarine cable from the British coast to Gibraltar and Malta, and thence, by way of Alexandria, to Aden, Ceylon and Australia. It is computed that the cost of this line—about 10,000 miles long—would not exceed £3,000,000, and its utility to the State would be so great that a large subsidy would be well bestowed in promoting it. Much interest is evinced to learn what steps will be taken towards carrying out these most important objects in the new session of Parliament.

LITERATURE.

With Christmas comes the usual plentiful crop of illustrated books specially adapted for the presents looked for by so many young folks, as the annual festivities draw near. Many of the so-called Christmas gift-books, such as magnificently illustrated and sumptuously bound editions of the poets, are suitable only to "children of a larger growth," and in these the present season appears to be less prolific than former ones; but of real children's books there is no lack. Perhaps the most enterprising contributors to the delectation of these little people are Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin. From them we have Mince Pie Island, a Christmas story by Mr. Corbet, full of quaint fancies and laughable incidents, very nicely illustrated; uniform with this is Cloudland and Shadowland, by J. Thackray Bunce, a pretty fairy tale, combining a fund of amusement with no slight intermixture of genuine pathos; Old Burchell's Pocket, a tale for still younger children, by Elihu Burritt, whose mere name is a sufficient guarantee for the nature of its contents. This, by the way, is one of a uniform series, which includes Peggy and other Tales, by the author of A Very Simple Story; Lily and Nannie at School; Æsop's Fables and Sandford and Merton, both in words of one syllable; The Queen of the Tournament, &c., all prettily bound in cloth gilt, and nicely illustrated. Besides these we have specimens of Messrs. Cassell's shilling toy books, with very clever illustrations printed in colours.

Next on our list are Messrs. T. Nelson and Sons, Paternoster-row. Perhaps the most attractive child's book issued by this firm is that entitled Tales of Heroes, which is an adaptation from history of anecdotes relating to Alfred the Great, Richard Cœur-de-Lion, the Black Prince, &c., all so well told that we regret the absence of the author's name from the title-page. Another charming book is called Cats and Dogs, in which the many interesting facts regarding these two great families of domestic animals are familiarly and instructively treated of by Mrs. Hugh Miller. Then we have The World at Home, which is intended, by attractive pictures and simply descriptive conversational chapters, to bring home to the childish understanding some of the marvels of the great world. These books, too, are all handsomely bound and illustrated.

NORTH GERMANY.

HAMBURG, December 15.

After four months passed at his new country seat, bought with the money voted by the Prussian Parliament as a reward for the success he achieved in 1866, Count Bismark has returned to Berlin and entered on the arduous duties of his office; and it is high time that he should be at his post, for there are black clouds gathering on several parts of the horizon. The late aggrandisement of Prussia is a thorn in the side of France, who would fain imitate the example if it is to be effected with safety, but as it cannot be done at present they show their envy and jealousy at Prussia's success by false insinuations of further conquest, and endeavouring to pit Austria against Prussia. Besides, there is the Eastern question beginning again to loom in the distance, and the King of Greece makes no secret of his intention of annexing to his dominions the Island of Candia—if he can; so that, all things considered, it is quite as well that Count Bismark should be again in harness. He has already given a proof that he is fully recovered from his accident last summer, for he has announced an impending alteration of some importance. The Prussian Ministry for Foreign Affairs is to be abolished and superseded by a similar department under the North German Confederation, and as a natural consequence, the Prussian embassies and legations in all foreign countries are to be transformed into Federal ones. It may be supposed by many that this measure involves only an alteration of name, as both the officials and the system will remain unchanged, and Berlin continue to be the centre as hitherto. But it is a step of the greatest practical importance, and cannot fail to give the Confederation more weight abroad and a greater consolidation at home; for it is by no means indifferent to the lesser States of Germany, whether they are looked upon as mere appendages, or satellites revolving round the central sun at Berlin, or become really component and integral parts of a great Confederation forming one of the five Great Powers of Europe. According to Count Bismark's declaration the Bundesrath, or Federal Council, have already agreed to the change; even the King of Saxony has consented to lose his individuality, and merge his identity into North Germany. None of the other States offer any opposition, as they can only reap advantages by the alteration; Mecklenburg may possibly pout and grumble a little, but that will soon blow over. The Hanseatic cities rejoice at the intelligence, as for a long time past they have been petitioning at Berlin for the change, and have everywhere abolished their embassies and consulates in favour of Federal establishments, and were thus placed in a false position; but now they will take their place in the world, not as industrious little trading communities, but, as regards the commerce of the world, as the active partners of the eminent firm of the North-German Confederation, with one sole flag, one army, one navy, and one set of diplomatic and consular representatives for their protection.

The King of Prussia has been pleased to distribute the following honours to officers and petty officers of the steam corvette Vineta, lately returned to Kiel from the China and Japan station:—to Captain Rodenacker, the decoration of Fourth Class of the Order of the Red Eagle; to Captain-Lieutenant Donner and Captain-Lieutenant Von Kall, the Fourth Class of the Order of the Crown of Prussia; to the chief boatswain Rux, the chief engineer Willatowsky, and the chief carpenter Eggebrecht, the Medal of Honour, to be worn on the left breast.

COMMERCIAL.

The approach of the festive season has tended to restrict business, as usual at this time of the year, but not to depreciate any articles of trade. Rice is calm, and prices rather firmer. A cargo of 5,100 chests of cassia lignea has arrived from China, but is not yet in the market. Pepper is in demand, and better prices are paid. The tea market is firm, though quiet; no alteration in souchong; good ordinary to middling Pecco is in fair demand and a shade higher. Of green, about 400 chests imperial and 200 chests of gunpowder found purchasers at former rates. Spelter is much neglected, the nominal quotations being 13.8 for loco. and 13.6 for spring delivery. Discount 2¼ per cent.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVED.—Amoy, from Hong Kong (3,281 chests cassia lignea); Solo, from Bassein; Maria Louise Antoinette, from Whampoa; Peter Rickmers, from Canton.

SAILED.—Nahotka (str.), to the Amoor.

SHIPPING AT BREMERHAVEN.

ARRIVED.—Trudel, from Rangoon (4,860 bags rice); Albert, from Canton (3,000 chests cassia lignea, 850 chests tea, and 100 chests preserved ginger); Thusnelde, from Bassein (9,800 bags rice), and Singapore (5,846 bundles rattans); James Pardew, from Bassein (6,000 bags rice); Aunt Lizzie, from Saigon (22,550 bags rice); Hero, from Rangoon (9,917 bags rice); Marmion, from Bassein (11,239 bags rice); Vigillate, from Rangoon (11,239 bags rice).

SAILED.—Bertha to Rangoon; Caroline, to Rangoon.

N.B. About 6,000 bags of rice, ex James R. Patten, from Akyab to Bremen, wrecked last month in the mouth of the Weser, have been recovered in a damaged state, and sold for account of the underwriters, partly at Hamburg and partly at Bremen.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, December 15.

The Parliamentary discussions have offered no special interest for residents in the Far East. A smart debate has taken place with reference to the desirability of a separation between the State and Church, and it was strongly argued such a separation was highly necessary in India. With regard to the Budget for the Department of Home Affairs, the House had a long list of questions to dispose of before it arrived at the great question, namely, the instruction law. Speeches without end were delivered day after day both by supporters and adversaries of sectarian instruction. At last, however, the Liberal cause has won, the vote of want of confidence against the Home Minister, which was moved because he had declared his intention of maintaining the Liberal law of 1857, was outvoted by forty-six against twenty-two votes, and the Budget was then carried by forty-six against twenty-two votes. It will probably be found impossible to finish the Budgets before the 1st of January, as is prescribed by the fundamental law.

The result of the election in the district of Gorcum is anxiously waited for. At this moment it is doubtful whether Mr. Heemskerk, the ex-Minister, or the Liberal candidate, General Knoop, will obtain the victory. The Conservatives have, in view of the elections of June, 1869, organised an enormous union, with branches throughout the whole country. Notwithstanding that a general meeting has already taken place at Utrecht, the statutes will not be known before February next.

Some of the Liberal papers express surprise that the First Chamber has made such haste in carrying the East India Budget, so that they did not deal at all with the principal questions it contained. It is true that the Minister wished to forward the Budget by the last mail, but this is no excuse for the Lords to abstain from debating the question, and indeed when the First Chamber does nothing but vote Budgets and check Liberal measures, it may justly be called, as it is, an effete institution, destitute of political character and political wisdom.

The Bill by which it is proposed to abolish the stamp duty meets with much opposition in the Sections. The majority, however, applaud the measure, but urge strong objections against the equivalents. Instead of an augmentation of the duty on tea and tobacco, an increased duty upon spirits is proposed. Should the Minister not agree with this proposal, I fear that the Bill will not be supported by the majority.

Very unfavourable rumours were current some days ago, regarding the state of the new canal from Rotterdam to the North Sea; it was said that when the dam was opened, the canal at once filled up with sand. Happily, the Minister has been able to officially contradict this report.

In the course of the coming year an International Exhibition is to be held at Utrecht, of objects necessary for household and mechanical use.

From a thoroughly authentic source I hear that the Government has granted a concession to the ex-Director of Public Works in India, Mr. de Bruyn, who resides here, and to Mr. S. Crawfurd, of Batavia, for the exploration of the copper mines on the island of Timor. The wealth of these mines is well known, and the undertaking promises good results. Indeed, its prospects are so favourable that a company in Australia has offered to supply the required capital of one million guilders, against half of the profits. Nevertheless, a prospectus will be issued here, and the papers urge Dutch capitalists to prevent this favourable undertaking being placed in the hands of foreigners.

At last it seems intended to introduce into our country the cultivation of the silkworm. I told you that some time ago endeavours had been made to establish a company for this purpose, and these efforts now seem to have been successful. The manager, Dr. Foek, has purchased a plot of ground near the town of Amersfoort, on which not less than 80,000 mulberry-trees will be planted as soon as possible.

According to a circular of the Rotterdam Bank, the branch at Amsterdam will cease to exist on the 1st January, 1869.

The Government has laid before the members of the Second Chamber a Bill to annul all patents, which, according to the ideas of the Minister of the Home Department, have not proved to be in favour of the development of our national industry.

With the new year the Catholic paper, the Tyd, will again open subscription lists on behalf of the Pope.

A most interesting novel, derived from the history of Java, has been published. It bears the title of "Madjapahit," its author being Mr. J. S. G. Gramberg.

A rumour says that Mr. Douwes Dekker, the author of "Multatuli," is on the point of being appointed Assistant-Resident in Java. It is added that he is indebted for the appointment to the influence of Mr. Fransen van de Putte. I need not say that I cannot answer for the truth of this report.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The market is very quiet, but prices are well maintained, no large quantities being offered.

SUGAR (RAW).—The market continues firm but very dull, there being nodemand. The unsold stock of Java Sugar was, on the 1st inst., 14,369 mats of the Trading Company, and 11,492 mats in private hands.

RICE.—The market continues steady; 1,885 b. Java, ex Louis de Geer, sold at 8⅜f.; 2,037 b. do., ex Leopold Graaf van Limburg Stirum, at 9¼f.; and 1,925 b. Sourabaya, ex Johan.

SPICES.—Fine qualities meet with a moderate demand, so that there is no downward tendency in prices. 50 ch. China Cinnamon, superior quality, sold at prices that did not transpire.

JAVA TOBACCO.—The auctions consisted of very large quantities, which went off steadily. The private transactions include 536 b. Java RS, ex Fop Smit; 369 b. do. Demangan, 333 b. BJDL, 453 b. MS; 1,090 b. Djambean, 1,453 b. Kawi, 94 do. BD H, 301 b. D, 280 b. Kotta /B, 117 b. Malang, 862 b. Java PC, ex Ida Elisabeth; 587 b. GP, ex Christina, at 35c.; 374 do. PK/ Blitar, ex Navigator, at 73c. The stock was, on the 1st inst., 46,882 b. Java.

MANILA CIGARS.—The stock is unimportant; the nominal quotation is 2a Habanos 24f. to 40f.; 2a Cortados, 40f. to 42f.

ARRACK meets with a good demand, 13 casks Sourabaya, ex Golden Dream; 471/1 and 110/2 do. Batavia, ex Emilie, having been sold.

INDIGO.—In consequence of the small stock, the transactions are of little importance. There is, however, a lively demand for superior quality.

RATTANS.—The following parcels sold at prices that did not transpire:—215 pic., ex Argo; 25 pic., ex Tonia; 25 pic., ex Anna; 199 pic., ex Louis de Geer; 150 pic., ex Ida Elisabeth; 120 pic., ex Princess Amalia; 240 pic., ex Gloriosa.

TIN.—The market is very animated, and there is a firm demand at advancing prices. Of Banca Tin about 20,000 slabs sold, at 59½f. to 61f. 1,000 slabs to be delivered out of the spring auction were paid with 60f. to 62f. 4,003 slabs Billiton (floating) changed hands at 59f. to 60f.

HIDES.—The following parcels were sold by subscription:—7,224 Padang Rinder and 3,000 Padang Buffalo, ex Schoonderloo; 2,696 Sourabaya Rinder, ex City of Perth; 1,662 Samarang Rinder and 308 do. Buffalo, ex Anna. The prices did not transpire.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Camphor dull, but firm. Cassia Vera, 1,346 b. were sold. Sagomeal, 409 b., ex Waalstroom, changed hands at secret prices. Japan Wax, market quiet.

MONEY AND STOCK MARKET.—The engagements in the markets for public securities have been on a rather restricted scale; still some fluctuation has occurred in prices. The quotation for Home Funds presented no important variation; but, nevertheless, there is steadiness, with a tendency slightly upwards. Foreign Stocks were at the closing of the market rather weak. The demand for money at the Bank is heavy. In the open market the inquiry was fairly supported, but, nevertheless, money continued in full supply. The rate of discount is not altered. Netherlands Bank, 236; Java Bank, f.162; Trading Company, 125¾ to 126¼; Netherlands India Trading Bank, 68; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents., 56; Three per Cents., 65¼; Four per Cents., 87⅛.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

ARRIVALS.—Nov. 30, at Texel, from Batavia, Twee Cornelissen; from Sourabaya, Baltimore; Dec. 1, from Batavia, Johann; from Samarang, Celebes; from Padang, Waalstroom; 4, at Brouwershaven, from Akyab, Eliphalet Grecley; 3, at Texel, from Sourabaya, Elizabeth; 4, from Batavia, Goede Verwachting, Nederland and Oranje; 6, at Brouwershaven, from Akyab, Alert; from Batavia, Kortenaer; at Texel, from Batavia, Indian; 8, at Brouwershaven, from Padang, Julie; at Texel, from Batavia, Iduna; from Samarang, Finella; 10, at Texel, from Batavia, Europa, Kaap Hoorn; from Patjitan, Mentor; 11, at Brouwershaven, from Batavia, Johanna Maria; 14, at Brouwershaven, from Batavia, Jorgen Lorentzen, L. J. Enthoven.

DEPARTURES.—Dec. 13, from Brouwershaven, for Batavia, Mary and Hillegonda.

FREIGHTS.—The Trading Company chartered the following ships to convey produce from India to the following harbours:—to Amsterdam, Electra (590 lasts), at f.79.97; to Rotterdam, Bastiaan Pot (304 lasts), at f.79.98; to Dordrecht, Nieuwland (398 lasts), at 80f.

PASSENGERS INWARD.—From Java, per Twee Cornelissen, Mr. G. Cramer; per Dordrecht (wrecked on the Banjaard), Messrs. Begeman and family, Bloemink and family, Helbach and family, Van der Poll and family, De Brigine, Reents, Obertop, Willie; per Goede Verwachting, Mr. G. D. Hoek; per Kortenaer, Mr. H. C. Steenbergen, Mrs. Hoewyk, three children, Over de Linden; per Iduna, Messrs. J. F. Vanck, F. Clement, C. D. Barghorn; per Julie, Messrs. J. F. Backer, G. C. Gehrung; per Kaap Hoorn, Mr. J. Platte; per Johanna Maria, Mr. Boelen and family, Mr. Bock Van Maas, Mrs. Dyreilles and family.

DEATH OF M. DE MONTIGNY.

M. de Montigny, whose death recently occurred in Paris, was born in 1805; he accompanied M. de Lagrenée on his mission to China in 1843, and in 1855 he negotiated a treaty of commerce with the King of Siam. After assisting in operations in Cochin China he became Consul-general for France, but was forced by illness to return home. M. de Montigny was Commander of the Legion of Honour, Grand Officer of the Order of the White Elephant of Siam, and of St. Gregory the Great; he had also received honorary distinctions from the Geographical, Agricultural, Horticultural, and Acclimatisation Societies of France.

THE SAN FRANCISCO DIRECTORY FOR 1869.—So many travellers to and from China and Japan now pass through San Francisco that it may be worth while to inform intending passengers by that route that a useful Directory for San Francisco can be obtained, which will greatly facilitate an inspection of that city. The tenth volumo of the San Francisco Directory for the year commencing October, 1868, has just been issued by Mr. Langley. It is prefaced by a new and well-arranged map of the city. A convenient chronological index gives the principal events of local interest. The General Review contains a synoptical account of the schools (public and private), benevolent associattons, companies, associations, banks, railroads, insurance companies, cemeteries, &c, and a valuable and exhaustive description of the enterprises in operation at the present time. There are also tables presenting an accurate census of the city and county for 1860, 1861, 1863, and 1868, a review of the improvements made during the year ending June 30, 1868, and a statement of the number of buildings within the city limits.

In view of the rapidly-increasing passenger traffic to and from China and Japan by way of San Francisco, it has been thought desirable to establish an agency for the sale of the London and China Express at that port. Subscribers and other passengers by this route are therefore informed that they will find copies on sale at Messrs. White and Bauer's, 413, Washington-street.

Monetary and Commercial.

The Christmas holidays have as usual caused a few days' entire cessation of business, most firms having adopted the praiseworthy plan of making Saturday an entire holiday. The office of the London and China Telegraph has been closed from Thursday afternoon until this morning.

It is understood that the litigation which has for many months past prevented a division of the assets of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East is practically at an end. It is stated that an arrangement has, after much negotiation, been made between some of the principal creditors and the various classes of shareholders, the effect of which will be that the creditors will accept 17s. in the pound (of which they have received 10s.) in discharge of their debts without interest—the balance of 7s. to be paid within one month after the arrangement has been finally confirmed by the Master of the Rolls. His lordship has already sanctioned the holding of meetings of the creditors and shareholders to obtain their formal assent to the arrangement. Under the arrangement all the creditors whose claims have been disputed on the ground that they were debts of the Commercial Bank of India will be entitled to receive the dividend of 17s. in the pound, which it is hoped the official liquidator, Mr. Holyland, will be able to pay without resorting to a further call.

The directors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China have declared a dividend of 3 per cent. for the half-year ending the 31st. inst.

When Mr. Cannan, the official liquidator of the Agra and Masterman's Bank, had completed his labours, he claimed £25,000 as being due to him for the duties which he had performed. The committee of shareholders, deeming the sum too high, offered £7,000. The offer was not accepted, and a suit in equity was brought to determine the amount of remuneration to which the official liquidator was entitled. Vice-Chancellor Giffard has fixed the sum at £9,000.

The Commission of Inquiry into the affairs of the Bombay Bank concluded its sittings last week, the last witness examined being Mr. Hannay, formerly president of the Bank. The inquiry is now completed, and the commissioners will prepare a report to the Government, which will contain references to the despatches of Lord Halifax to Sir Bartle Frere, the late Governor of Bombay. The losses of the bank are £1,890,000, and the question is whether any or what portion should be borne by the Government. The matter will probably come before Parliament.

A call of £8 per share, the whole of the remaining uncalled capital of the Oriental Commercial Bank (Limited), has been made payable, in two instalments of £4 each, on the 7th of January and 7th of April, 1869, at the offices of Messrs. Cooper Brothers and Co.

The Messageries Imperiales has declared a provisional dividend of 16s. per share for 1868.

The report of the Anglo-Mediterranean Telegraph Company (Limited) has been issued. It states that the new Malta and Alexandria cable has transmitted messages with great speed and regularity. The new land line through Italy has been completed and transferred to the company, and is now worked by an English staff throughout. The receipts enable the directors to declare an interim dividend of 4s. per share on account of the profits for the three months ending December 15th. The report concludes with the following statement:—"The shareholders will be glad to learn that there is a good prospect of the Red Sea line to India being shortly undertaken, and that meanwhile arrangements are in progress to secure to this company some portion of the Indian traffic for transmission via Malta, Egypt, Syria, and the Persian Gulf."

The report of the Ceylon Company, adopted on the 22nd inst., shows an available total of £13,278, and recommends an interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, which will leave £3,485 to be carried forward.

At the meeting of the Upper Assam Tea Company (Limited) he directors' report, which did not recommend the payment of any dividend, was adopted.

The prospectus has appeared of the "Liverpool Marine Insurance Company (Limited)." The application of the bonus system though long adopted with success in life insurance, has not yet been applied in this country to marine insurance; but the projectors of the "Liverpool," probably attracted by the immense success of the "North China" office, intend to follow the example set by the latter company, and give one-third of the profits to their constituents.

The biddings for £100,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held at the Bank of England. The amounts alloted were:—To Calcutta, £76,900; and to Madras, £23,100. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 11d. on both Presidencies, and tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 11¾d. will receive about 77 per cent. These terms are about ¼ per cent. higher than those obtained on the last occasion, and indicate a further increase of demand for means of remittance to the East.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Ripon, from Southampton on the 12th inst., was in gold to Bombay, £45,514; to Galle, £6,557; to Madras, £1,007; to Calcutta, £3,000; in silver to Bombay, £33,000; to Calcutta £24,800; to Singapore, £19,500; to Hong Kong, £25,755; to Shanghai, £2,000; total in gold, £65,141; in silver, £105,055.

ANGLO-MEDITERRANEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The report of the directors of this company states that the new Malta and Alexandria direct cable was successfully laid by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, and handed over to this company in good working order, on the 4th of October last, and that it had from that date continued to transmit messages with great speed and regularity. The new land line through Italy, referred to in the prospectus, had now been completed and transferred to this company, and was worked in connection with the Malta and Alexandria cables by an English staff throughout. In consequence of this arrangement the whole of the communication between Turin, Malta, Alexandria, and Suez was in the hands of English clerks. In accordance with the agreement sanctioned by the general meeting held on the 18th of August last, the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury had appointed Mr. Stronge, one of their principal officers, their official director of the company. The paid-upcapital of the company was £250,000, of which £190,000 had been already paid to the contractors, leaving £55,000 to be paid by quarterly instalments upon certificates of the company's engineer that the cable was in good working order. The remaining £5,000 would more than cover the entire preliminary charges to the 15th of September last, including engineering, travelling, and other incidental expenses. The receipts from the Government cable via Tripoli and Benghazi accrued to this company from the 16th of September last, and those, with the receipts from the new direct line from the date of its completion, enabled the directors to declare an interim dividend of 4s. per share, free of income-tax, on account of the profits for the three months ending the 15th of December last. The dividend warrants would be sent to the shareholders in January next. There was now a good prospect of the Red Sea line to India being shortly undertaken, and in the meantime arrangements were in progress to secure to this company some portion of the Indian traffic, for transmission via Malta, Egypt, Syria, and the Persian Gulf.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth freights to the Eastern Ports continue dull, and at present do not show any signs of improving; there is also very little business doing in coal freights from the Northern outports.

Current rates of freight for vessels on the berth:—To Yokohama: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Nagasaki: 45s. weight, 50s. meast. To Shanghai: 40s. weight, 45s. meast. To Hong Kong: 40s. weight, 30s. meast. To Singapore: 30s. weight or meast. To Penang: 30s. weight or meast. To Ceylon: 20s. to 25s. weight, 35s. meast. At New York to China: $12 to $15 per ton of 40 cubic feet

The current quotations for coal, &c., are as follows:—From Wear or Tyne per keel.—For Yokohama, £48. For Shanghai: £48. For Hong Kong: £36. For Singapore: £28. For Galle: £24. From Newport, Cardiff, or Swansea per ton.—For Yokohama, £2 4s. For Shanghai: £2 8s. For Hong Kong: £1 17s. 6d. For Manila: £1 15s. For Singapore: £1 7s. For Galle: £1 4s.

The Admiralty have invited tenders for the conveyance of the following stores, viz.:—

37 tons navy provisions and other articles, 3 tons (heavy) and 6 tons (light) naval common stores, 5 tons naval cordage, 3 tons naval sails, 1 ton naval masts, 20 to 36 feet by 3 to 7 inches, at Deptford; to be shipped from the Thames for Trincomalee direct. 163 tons navy provisions and other articles, at Deptford; to be shipped at Deptford for Victoria, Hong Kong. 1 ton (light) clothing, at Woolwich; 3 tons (light) tubs, at the Tower; 2 tons (light) necessaries, at Pimlico; for Singapore.

CASUALTIES.

Advices from Capetown, dated Nov. 4, state that the St. Charles, Jaffrain, from Saigon and Reunion, for Cadiz, put into Table Bay for repairs, and had been condemned; also that the Antoinette, Leefoy, had been chartered to take on the cargo.

The Alavesa (Spanish ship), bound for Manila, put back to Penarth Roads, Dec. 11, to stop a leak, and with pumps choked.

The Nancy Bryson, Thorn, from Macao, for London, arrived at Table Bay Nov. 9, with loss of bulwarks, stanchions, &c., having experienced a heavy gale.

The Neville, Sullivan, from Macao, for London, put into Table Bay Nov. 10 for repairs to sails, upperworks, &c., having experienced heavy gales from Oct. 28 to Nov. 3.

The Azia (Dut. barq.), Tapper, from Java to Amsterdam, put into Simon's Bay, Nov. 6, leaky, and with loss of boats, having experienced a succession of gales from N.W. to N.N.W. from Oct. 2 to Nov. 3.

The Hendrika (Dut. barq.), Van der Valk, from Batavia to Rotterdam, put into Simon's Bay, Nov. 9, very leaky, having experienced very heavy gales from N.N.W. from Oct. 28 to Nov. 3, during which she sustained damage to hull, lost sails, and had to throw overboard a quantity of cargo.

Advices from Capetown, dated Nov. 11, announce the sale of 3,000 pockets of rice, landed in a damaged state from the St. Charles, Jaffrain, from Saigon and Reunion, which vessel put into Table Bay, Oct. 7, for repairs, and was afterwards condemned there.

Advices from Boulogne, dated Dec. 18, state that the Diana, Teengs, from Batavia to Rotterdam, which was stranded to the eastward of that port Dec. 6, went to pieces during a gale on the night of the 17th, a quantity of coffee and about ten tons of nutmegs in casks had been saved; the coast for some distance round was covered with coffee.

The United Service (s.s.), Gaine, from London to Singapore, China, &c., which put into Mauritius, Oct. 31, had lost her propeller; she was docked and fitted with a new screw without discharging, and left Nov. 11 for Singapore, where she arrived previous to Dec. 3.

The Susan Pardew, Cuming, from London to Colombo, put into Plymouth, Dec. 19, with loss of foremast head, main topgallant-mast and other damage.

Advices from Rotterdam, dated Dec. 18, state that the Azia, Trappen, from Tjilatjap, to Amsterdam, which put into Simon's Bay Nov. 6, leaky, and with damage, was discharging her cargo (a great deal of which was damaged) for further examination.

The Eleano, from Cardiff to Hong Kong, has put into Penarth Dock, with damage.

The Wilhelmine, Tonjes, from Saigon, which vessel arrived at St. Helena Nov. 19, with loss of bulwarks (second officer washed overboard), had been on her beam ends, having experienced a succession of gales from N. and W. off the Cape of Good Hope, from Oct. 29 to Nov. 3.

The Maggie Leslie, Shoosmith, from Liverpool to Shanghai, with iron and bale goods, put into Plymouth, Dec. 20, with loss of longboat, hatches stove, and other damages; her cargo was supposed to be injured.

Advices from Capetown, dated Nov. 19, state that the Ilma, Lundahl, from Batavia to Amsterdam, was run into whilst at anchor in Table Bay, Nov. 17, but sustained only slight damage.

The Alfred, from Liverpool to Singapore, which put into Milford, Dec. 10, with loss of bulwarks, &c., had discharged part of her cargo (which appeared damaged by wet), in order to restow a portion which was adrift.

The Leonardo da Vinci, Zanella, from Liverpool to Galle, put into Table Bay, Nov. 17, with cargo (coals) on fire (she had thrown 120 tons overboard); the surveyors recommended that the remainder of the cargo should be discharged.

The Seamew, from Foochow and Batavia for London, which arrived at St. Helena Nov. 22, and sailed again Nov. 24, reported that her late master (Taylor) had fallen overboard.

Accounts from Batavia, dated Nov. 28, state that the Koffyboom (Dutch ship), Van Galen, which arrived there, Oct. 10, from Liverpool, had been burnt in Sourabaya roadstead. Subsequent advices announce the sale of the wreck.

Advices from Havre, dated Dec. 18, state that the Jeannie Alice, Moutier, from Port Townsend to Hong Kong, put into San Francisco, Nov. 7, leaky.

The Hendrika, Van der Valk, from Batavia to Rotterdam, which put into Simon's Bay, Nov. 9, very leaky, &c., had, according to advices from Capetown, dated Nov. 18, discharged about half of her cargo, and was repairing.

Report of ship Coral Nymph, from Shanghai to London.—Left Shanghai July 8, lost mate overboard in the river. On the 17th, east of Foochow, owing to a violent typhoon, had to cut away topmasts. On the 19th and 20th, after the gale, calms, with a hot searching sun, the master, while in the act of sending up other masts to pursue the voyage, received a sunstroke, and has been almost blind ever since. The second mate, (then the chief mate) was struck with a chain falling from aloft and nearly killed; the ship in consequence for many days knocking about, without a competent navigator. The said officer was restored to health and has brought the ship home, labouring under great disadvantages. Captain A. Winchester, the master, is much shattered in health, and has only partially recovered his sight.

LAUNCH.

Messrs. Robertson and Co. launched on the 16th inst. an iron sailing ship for John Kerr, Esq., built to class A A 1 at Lloyd's, and 20 years in red in the Liverpool Underwriters' Register. The following are her principal dimensions:—Extreme length, 241 feet; length of keel and forerake, 220 feet; breadth moulded, 36 feet; depth of hold, 22½ feet; tonnage nett register, 1,200 tons. Her lower masts, bowsprit, lower yards, and lower topsail yards are of iron. She is fitted with patent windlass, steam winch and boiler, and all the latest improvements as regards construction, and was named the Zanzibar. She is intended for the East India trade.

NEW P. AND O. STEAMER.—We learn from the Clyde that the Deccan, screw, the latest addition made to the fleet of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, has made a favourable trial trip. She was built by Messrs. W. Denny and Brothers. Mr. Reed, Chief Constructor to the Admiralty, was among those present at the trial trip of the Deccan.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of

STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an

fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz, engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

The Company keep on hand copper and metal sheathing, spars, timber, paints for iron vessels, and all material for dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. PATERSON, SIMONS and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WM. CLOUGHTON, Managing Director.

WHARVES.

SINGAPORE.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE BORNEO COMPANY (LIMITED).

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—Amongst the many bad effects resulting from climatic variations it is notable that the circulation of the blood becomes languid, and congestion of the capillaries much greater during winter. Hence the frequent appearance at this time of pimples, blotches, &c. Holloway's remedies cannot be too highly commended for the favourable influence they exert upon the skin. In all eruptions, cutaneous inflammations, and ulcerations the detergent qualities of this Ointment renders it so efficacious in first cleansing and purifying the diseased part, and afterwards inducing renewed and healthy action, that the skin not only grows sound, but soft and silky, and fully capable of efficiently performing its functions and releasing the circulation from oppression
